FOREWORD

On October 6, 1969, President Nixon issued a call for a White House Conference on Aging to be held in November 1971, to consider nine major areas of need of older people: income, health, nutrition, housing, transportation, employment and retirement, education, roles and activities, and spiritual well-being.

In his call for the Conference, the President pointed out that "The entire nation and its government have increasingly recognized their responsibility for helping older Americans to play active and constructive roles in our society. This Administration is fully committed to carrying out that responsibility . . . With careful advance planning and with broad representative participation, this Conference can help develop a more adequate national policy for Older Americans."

Much has been accomplished in recent months in providing services to older Americans and in opening opportunities to them to serve others, but much yet needs to be done. It is our intention that the 1971 White House Conference serve as a mechanism for social change, providing this national policy on aging which the President sees as so necessary.

It is our hope that this bibliography will be a useful guide for all who may be involved in the review and resolution of the problems that remain. A supplement, now in preparation, will make works of 1969 and 1970 available before the Conference is held.

PREFACE

This, the seventh edition of selected references on aging published since 1950 (the last, 1963, was entitled Aging in the Modern World), like its predecessors was prepared to assist practitioners, teachers, students, and laymen working in the field of aging. There was no aim to assemble a complete bibliography on the subject but rather to provide a tool complementary to the earlier editions by listing the relevant periodical articles published from 1963 through 1967 and selected books from 1900 through 1967 with a few 1968 titles which appeared before completion of the list and seemed of primary importance. No attempt has been made to cover legislation.

To assure that no pertinent items were omitted the catalogs of the Library of Congress, the National Library of Medicine, the National Agricultural Library, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare Library, the Department of Labor Library, the Department of Housing and Urban Development Library, and the National Institutes of Health Library, were examined.

Words on Aging was compiled at the request of the Administration on Aging by Miss Dorothy M. Jones under the direction of Mr. Charles F. Gately, Chief, Readers Services Branch. An advisory group headed by Dr. Clark Tibbitts, AoA, provided expert advice and guidance in the selection and format of the bibliography.
