PREFACE

Living on into the later years in modern technological society is no cinch. The ancient Greeks' three fates had clearly understood functions for the people of an ordered society who knew who and what they were: when and where they were going. In the social systems of our electronic age in which the only certainty seemingly is the acceleration of change, one's identity and roles are often matters of perplexity. No Ms. Fate intervenes; instead a computer print out does "judge a man's worth by the date of his birth" — and retires him at 65 or earlier.

Asking repeatedly Who am I? What am I? Where am I going? has modern man down with a chronic case of old-fashioned "future shock". Not asking sets him back among the beasts: a sort of Fred Flintstone, surrounded with technological gadgetry, and of unquestioning primitive passions. Obviously an oversimplification; but without summarizing a vast literature which now ranges over anomie in present-day society to the rediscovery of self and the emergence of "the individual as an institution," it is a necessary condensation.

What is central to the theme and a raison d'être for this Bibliography, is that in a time of unprecedented change, our changing pattern of life expectancy frequently fails to match our expectations of life. From the basic sciences we may confidently anticipate additional advances affecting the prolongation of animal and human life. From the behavioural sciences, social philosophy and political science, we may anticipate complementary developments with somewhat less confidence. We are not, as a matter of public policy, taking sufficient stock of the social implications of increased longevity.

One of the more outstanding viewpoints to emerge from gerontological research findings, is that man can and does learn at all stages of the life cycle. Shifting from a tendency to overstress the problems of growing old, a new body of knowledge is gradually being assimilated into everyday culture through the mass media. It recognizes the potentials for continued personal growth; recognizes the maintenance of vibrant life styles into old age.

It had been assumed that the roleless role of the retiree in our urban industrial societies was and is a difficult one. Particularly when midwived by an abrupt shift from a work-oriented to an enforced leisure-based setting.

For some groups of persons this may remain true. However, as a generalized concept more definitive research such as the Cornell study of occupational retirement has suggested otherwise. Man, aging man, retains his innate ability to adapt and cope. "Role loss may be a liberation . . . except in the area of income, retirement may be more adaptive than disruptive."

It is to such an issue of the evolving work-life pattern with more and more years of retirement, and of too little preparation for retirement, that we address this Bibliography.

A few years ago we were involved in the development of a policy statement on this subject by the Section on Aging, Ontario Welfare Council. This still stands as a benchmark for such programs across the Province. Endorsement and encouragement of those same principles have come from the First Ontario and Canadian Conferences on Aging, and the Recommendations of both the Senate of Canada and the Ontario Legislative Assembly Committees on Aging. And, more currently, from the "Recommended for Action" reprints of the 1971 White House Conference on Aging.

Through our own Ontario Longitudinal Study of Aging (LSA), which is especially concerned with changes in the life situations of a representative sample of middle-aged men, we have taken a strong interest in anticipatory retirement, in the development of attitudes towards retirement.

Following similar studies and a related concern for the practical applications of social gerontology, Sister St. Michael Guinan, Jean Matlow, Sandra McCrindle and the writer, with the aid of summer students Gail Pickels and Elizabeth Hitchcox prepared this Bibliography. It is neither complete nor annotated. We can only trust it will be of some use to those planning programs of preparation for retirement, as well as to professionals wishing to review the literature in more detail.

We also hope that some of the books may become fun reading, opening gateways to novel and enriching experiences for planners and participants alike. For, as Robert Thomas Allen in his Today is the First Day of the Rest of Your Life, quotes Henry James:

"Wherever a process of life communicates an eagerness to him who lives it, there the life becomes genuinely significant. Sometimes the eagerness is more knit up with the motor activities, sometimes with the perceptions, sometimes with reflective thought. But, wherever it is found, there is the zest, the tingle, the excitement of reality."

For himself Allen says, "Every subject comes to life if you dig into it".

POLICY STATEMENT

Retirement is a fact of life which must be faced by anyone now employed. Technological sciences are advancing at such a rate it is conceivable that very soon one-quarter of one's life span will be lived after full time employment comes to an end.

Some find retirement rewarding. Many others face this period ill-equipped for the change and unable to cope with the problems it brings. How satisfying this period will be depends on many factors. Health, of course, is of utmost importance. Change or loss of status, reduced income, fewer social contacts and possibly a move to a new locality are only some of the factors which can affect the retired.

There are certain needs which are fundamental. Primary of course is the necessity for adequate income to meet necessary expense and ensure an acceptable standard of living. Second is the need for personal discipline and health routines to replace the work routine and maintain activity. Third is the need for social, emotional and intellectual fulfilment.

To meet these fundamentals calls for advance planning. The complexities of the retirement field inspired a study by a special committee of the Section on Aging of the Ontario Welfare Council. Extensive research was done on programs carried out not only in Canada, but also in the United States and in Great Britain. It was found that concern was as great about the retirement of the unskilled laborer and the store clerk as for the executive. Also, that certain forward thinking companies and unions had their own programs.

FURTHER ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This Bibliography is the first part of a compendium prepared in the Homes for the Aged — Office on Aging Branch, Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services. While "Retirement" is the first topic to be published, other areas are in process of being completed. In addition to the persons named in Mr. Lawrence Crawford's Preface, the Co-ordinating Editor, Sister St. Michael Guinan, has received assistance from Miss Jean Matlow; Mr. Hugh Ellis; Mr. R. Kreem; Rev. J. Elliott MacGuigan, S.J., Ph.D.; Dr. Angus McKillop; Rev. Michael Sheehan, C.S.B., Ph.D.; Mrs. Myra Smithies; Miss S. Weir; Dr. Robert C. Laird and Mr. M. Jarvis, et al.

In Ontario interest in pre-retirement counselling is not new. Among the early proponents from the 1950s on, have been:

*Mrs. Jean Good, formerly with the Division of University Extension, Toronto. Jean Good was a founder and executive director of the former Ontario Society on Aging (now Section on Aging, Ontario Welfare Council);

*Dr. Wilfred G. Scott, with the federal National Employment Service, and an early Canadian Fellow of the Gerontological Society;

*Dr. Elliott Dutton, who will be remembered by Senior Citizens' groups across the Province. "Dut!" provided stimulating leadership as a public servant after he had already retired from a dual career as a dental surgeon and civic politician. He has again "retired" to a new life on the West Coast, but his ideas and enthusiasm still motivate a number of us who were privileged to be his friends and co-workers;

*Morley Zurbrigg; Lincoln Bishop; Miss Hope Holmsted; Dr. Foster Vernon; Ian Campbell; Mrs. Frances McHale; Dr. Cope Schwenger, to name but a few others, have devoted much time and interest to this field.

To all of them and our many associates throughout Ontario and Canada, we dedicate this Bibliography. Some of us are just now beginning to see the fruits of previous labours. In 1972 the Youth and Recreation Branch, Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services, was also able to utilize the considerable talents and enthusiasm of special summer students for new efforts in retirement preparation. Several complementary publications, poster-displays, and community workshops resulted and are now available.

Even more significantly 1972 marked the inauguration of the Ministry of Community and Social Services' own preparation for retirement program, under Personnel Branch Director, John Hunter, with the active encouragement of Assistant Deputy Minister Dorothea Crittenden. The opening speaker on October 19th was Marshall McLuhan.

Community Colleges and Boards of Education too are actively entering the field and innumerable locally-initiated programs are springing up. A widespread interest in aging is apparent at many levels. In Ontario SENIOR CITIZENS' WEEK (about the third week in June each year) has over the past two years sparked considerable community activity. Librarians have begun specific book displays and discussion groups. We certainly wish to acknowledge their interest.

"RECOMMENDATION I

"Society — Through Government, private industry, labor, voluntary organizations, religious institutions, families and older individuals — must exercise its responsibility to create a public awareness of changing life styles and commitments in a continuous life cycle. Together they should discover and implement social innovations as vehicles for older persons to continue in, return to, or assume roles of their choice. These innovations should provide meaningful participation and leadership in Government, cultural activities, industry, labor, welfare, education, religious organizations, recreation and all aspects of volunteer services.

Implementation — Programs at Federal, State and local levels which provide opportunities for community service by older persons should be strengthened and expanded.

Mechanisms should be developed for continuing the work of successful demonstration programs, until such programs become unnecessary or self-sustaining.

Older people should not be further isolated. Attention must be paid to making opportunities for community service accessible as well as available to all older persons.

"RECOMMENDATION XV

"Employers should be required to supplement pension or retirement income plans with retirement counseling programs, such counseling programs to be submitted to the Internal Revenue Service at the time the pension program is submitted. Both program content and costs for counseling programs would be a part of the total pension package that requires the approval of the Internal Revenue Service."

"... due to automation, specialization, labour saving devices and longer life spans (on average), the individual in tomorrow's society will have more free or uncommitted time than at any other period in the history of mankind. Whether this uncommitted time is to be used in activities of little consequence or in dissonant or anti-social activities or in a meaningful and satisfying experience is the question of the day."

as Minister of Education to the Ontario Conference on Recreation, 1966.

OTHER BIBLIOGRAPHIES

There are a number of invaluable bibliographies of wider scope. These are included for added information.

General

233. A Classified Bibliography of Gerontology and Geriatrics, edited by Dr. Nathan W. Shack and published by Stanford University Press, Stanford, California, first appeared in 1951. Two supplements to this bibliography were issued in 1957 and 1963: Supplement 1, 1949-1955 and Supplement 2, 1956-1961. Since 1961 this material has been, and is currently being, updated in the quarterly issues of The Journal of Gerontology.

234. Current Literature on Aging has been published quarterly by the National Council on the Aging, Washington, D.C. since 1963 and is an annotated subject guide to selected publications in the field of aging and related areas.

235. A Basic Library of Books on Gerontology, by Professor A. E. David Schanfield, Mary Ancich and Rasalie Vilanyay of the Department of Psychology, The University of Calgary, Alberta, was completed in April, 1969. (35 pages.)

236. Words on Aging, a Bibliography containing selected annotated references, was prepared in 1970 by the Library of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare and may be purchased from the U.S. Govt. Printing Office, Washington, D.C. Included are relevant periodical articles published from 1963 through 1967 and selected books from 1900 through 1967, with a few 1968 titles. (169 pages.)

237. More Words on Aging, Supplement — 1971 to Words on Aging brings that work up to date by covering the books, periodical articles and pamphlets published in the years 1968-1970 inclusive.

Retirement

Among bibliographies on the subject of retirement are the following released by the National Council on the Aging, 1828 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.

238. Automation and the Older Worker, an annotated bibliography, completed by Juanita M. Kreps and Ralph Laws in 1963. (43 pages.)

239. Preparation for Retirement, an annotated bibliography by Juanita M. Kreps and Ralph Laws, in 1965. (16 pages.)

240. Industrial Gerontology, an annotated bibliography on industrial change and aging in the work force, prepared by the National Institute of Industrial Gerontology in 1968. (32 pages.)

LEISURE

As stated in the further acknowledgements, this is one of a series of bibliographies. However, before the remaining issues appear we consider it essential that we link "Retirement" with a few basic works on "Leisure". Obviously these are only a fraction of the vast literature to hand, but we trust readers will find them of value. Refer also Danahue et al, #63, and Kleemeier's Aging and Leisure, #119.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT AGING?

Attitudes towards aging can be determined with the OPINIONS ABOUT PEOPLE — Form A — Guidelines with Manual developed jointly by:

Section on Aging — Ontario Welfare Council
22 Davisville Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M4F 1E9

Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services,

Homes for the Aged — Office on Aging Branch,
5th Floor, Hepburn Block,
Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park,
Toronto, Ontario M7A 1G7.

Write either agency for more information. Free copies for use with any group planning a program on aging or pre-retirement counselling. The material is also a useful "opener" for in-depth discussion of this important social issue.

There is also a slide presentation on this topic, "Attitudes on Aging", prepared by the Ministry's Communications Branch for the Homes for the Aged — Office on Aging Branch and the Province.

From other coming bibliographies, we might cull additional areas of direct interest to those preparing for, or in, retirement:

"Many look upon the last half of life chiefly as a period for enjoyment of other sorts: for travel, for social relaxation in the company of their life-time friends; a time for cultivation of all manner of personal idiosyncracies and special tastes, and the pursuit of every imaginable form of recreation; in a word, a time for the leisurely and unperturbed appreciation of the good things of the world which they have helped to create."

PEOPLE COUNT

How many older persons are there in Ontario? What is their average age or life expectancy? How significant is the growth rate of the aged in our society? Where and how do they live?

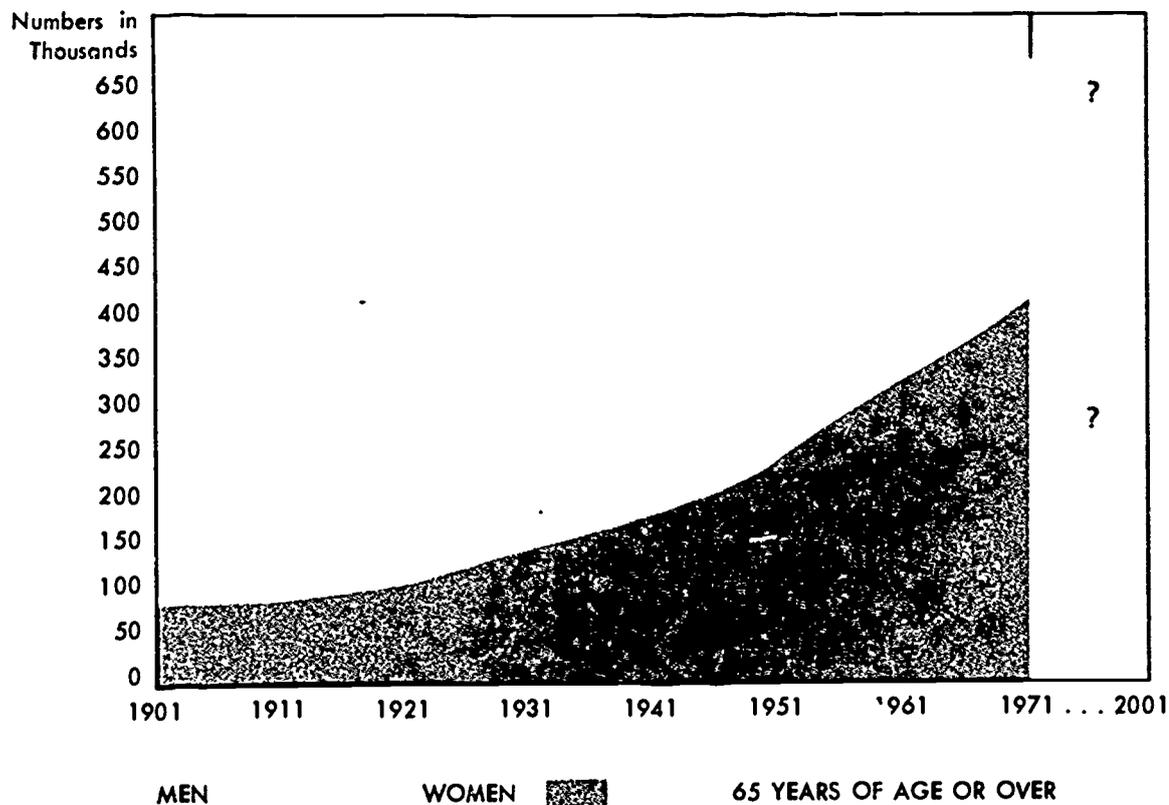

These are essential items of information for those planning programs on retirement. An excellent sourcebook and more detailed study of such demographic material is:

Golont, Stephen M. The Residential Location and Spatial Behaviour of the Elderly: A Canadian Example. University of Chicago, Dept. of Geography. Research Paper No. 143, 1972. (Based on Metropolitan Toronto area, Ontario.)

Additional information is obtainable from the Homes for the Aged — Office on Aging Branch, Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services. There are special tabulations on the percentages of elderly persons for every County and District across the Province. Is your area above or below the overall average of 8.4% for those aged 65 years or older?

Note: Significance of Table 3 for aging and retirement is that contemporary middle-aged parents have gained "time together" after their youngest or unmorried children have left home. This reflects not only changes in average or real life expectancy, but also that they first marry at a younger age, have children sooner and in fewer numbers, and because their children in turn leave or marry earlier. The 1950 mother and father were each 9.1 and 7.7 years younger than their great-grandparents' generation in 1890 at marriage of last child.

Spouses live longer together than before. An average married couple in 1890 might have had 31 years together, but with no time spent alone without at least one child at home. Widowhood was extremely probable for either on an average about 2 years before the marriage of the last child. 1950's couple could anticipate 40.3 years together, with nearly 14 of these years in the "empty nest" phase. Optimum and meaningful use of free time, leisure and a rethinking of one's work roles and activities thus become crucial. Other charts and statistics further emphasize the greater expectation a married woman has of becoming a widow in today's world.

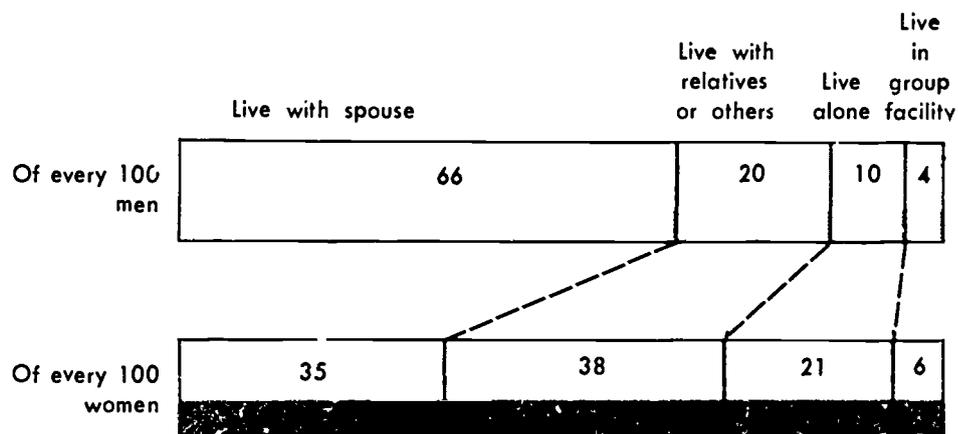

For other information on Family Life in Middle and Old Age, see Lillian E. Troll (Entry = 201).

"Retirement, supposed to be a chance to join the winner's circle, has turned out to be more dangerous than automobiles or LSD. Retirement for most people is literal consignment to no-man's land. It is (too often) the chance to do everything that leads to nothing."
