ABSTRACT

The National Association of Secondary School Principals surveyed school districts throughout the United States to determine the details of merit pay programs offered to secondary school administrators. The ERIC Clearinghouse on Education Management compiled and analyzed the results of the survey. Eight basic types of programs are identified and described. Most programs involve a fixed salary schedule to which increments can be added for merit. Data from the survey also indicate five evaluation procedures and three sources of recommendations for salary increases on the basis of merit. Data are also compiled system-by-system as reported by the responding school districts. The report and its accompanying tables detail the results of the survey and offer examples of the eight types of programs but make no recommendations of specific merit pay programs.

The Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) is a national information system operated by the National Institute of Education. ERIC serves educators by disseminating educational research results and other resource information that can be used in developing more effective educational programs.

The ERIC Clearinghouse on Educational Management, one of several clearinghouses in the system, was established at the University of Oregon in 1966. The Clearinghouse and its companion units process research reports and journal articles for announcement in ERIC's index and abstract bulletins.

Besides processing documents and journal articles, the Clearinghouse has another major function - information analysis and synthesis. The Clearinghouse prepares bibliographies, literature reviews, state-of-the-knowledge papers, and other interpretive research studies on topics in its educational area.

Prior to publication, the manuscript was submitted to the National Association of Secondary School Principals for critical review and determination of professional competence. This publication has met such standards. Points of view or opinions, however, do not necessarily represent the official view or opinions of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

FOREWORD

During the past several years this Clearinghouse has issued in a variety of formats numerous publications that review and analyze literature on topics in educational management. With the exception of the state-of-the-knowledge series, none of these publications has gone beyond the literature to describe and assess the current state of educational practice.

There are reasons for this emphasis on the analysis of knowledge in print. ERIC's medium is literature. As a component of that system, the Clearinghouse depends on ERIC's information file. Also, the Clearinghouse at this time has no means to collect data directly from educational practitioners. Thus, although the Clearinghouse has seen the need for descriptions of educational practice, for practical reasons it has been unable to meet that need.

Therefore, when an opportunity arose to cooperate with the National Association of Secondary School Principals in the compilation of this survey of practices on merit pay for administrators, the Clearinghouse eagerly responded.

During the 1971-72 school year NASSP received many inquiries concerning merit salary provisions offered to secondary school administrators. Three types of questions were frequently raised:

- (a) Where are administrative merit salary provisions being used?
- (b) How are these merit schedules being constructed?
- (c) Are there any significant trends that can be identified in the review of merit salary approaches?

To provide answers to these questions NASSP decided to collect available information on merit pay plans throughout the country. The Clearinghouse agreed to analyze the data and compile them into a report for publication.

NASSP designated a data collection person in each state during the summer of 1972. During the fall, these contacts sent to NASSP merit salary information they collected from institutions within their respective states. Responses were sparse. However, sixty replies were forwarded to the Clearinghouse for compilation and analysis. This special report contains the results.

The purpose of the report is informational. It provides an initial cross-section view of merit pay for administrators. By design, neither the Clearinghouse nor NASSP has taken a position on merit salary plans for administrators. That responsibility lies with each administrator.

NASSP would still like to receive data on other merit salary plans. If your district has developed a merit salary approach for administrators, please send a copy of the plan to NASSP. Correspondence should be directed to the Office of Professional Assistance, NASSP, Dulles International Airport, P.O. Box 17430, Washington, D.C. 20041.

MERIT PAY PROGRAMS FOR SECONDARY SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS, 1972-1973

For the purposes of this report, merit pay programs are generally defined as those programs in which an administrator is paid in whole or in part on the basis of his on-the-job performance. Eight basic types of programs were identified from responses to the survey. Five evaluation procedures for the determination of merit and three sources of merit increases were also identified from the responses.

There were 60 responses, as follows: 16 respondents indicated no merit pay provisions, 7 listed a salary schedule with no data on merit pay, 7 did not include enough data for analysis, and 30 indicated merit programs of some sort.

EIGHT BASIC TYPES OF MERIT PAY PROGRAMS

TABLE A: BREAKDOWN OF MERIT PAY PROGRAMS

	#	%
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH MERIT INCREMENT (PERCENTAGE BASIS)	8	26.7
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH MERIT INCREMENT	6	20.0
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH RATING FACTOR BASED ON MERIT	5	16.7
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH MERIT INCREMENT (POINT BASIS)	3	10.0
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH MERIT CONSIDERATION	3	10.0
POINT SYSTEM SALARY WITH POINTS FOR MERIT	2	6.7
SALARY SCHEDULE WITH MERIT MOVEMENT	1	3.3
MERIT INCREMENT (PERCENTAGE BASIS)	1	3.3
WORKING ON MERIT PLAN	1	3.3
TOTALS	30	100.0

The most common merit pay provisions consist of a fixed salary schedule to which increments can be added for merit. Increments, or additions to the scheduled salaries, are of three types: (1) a percentage of the base salary to be added to that base, (2) dollar amounts to be added to the base salary, or (3) dollar amounts assigned to point values determined by performance evaluation, such dollar amounts to be added to the base salary.

PROGRAM 1: The most common merit pay program, reported by 26.7 percent of the school systems with merit pay provisions, is a salary schedule with a merit increment calculated as a percentage of the base salary.

PROGRAM 2: The next most common program (20.0 percent) is a salary schedule with a merit increment most usually expressed as a dollar amount.

PROGRAM 3: Another form of merit pay provision is a salary determined by multiplying a base salary by a rating factor based on merit (16.7 percent).

PROGRAM 4: Salary schedules with merit increments calculated on a point basis account for 10.0 percent of the reported merit pay programs.

PROGRAM 5: Several school systems (10.0 percent) indicate that merit is a consideration in the determination of salary, but espouse no concrete program of merit pay.

PROGRAM 6: Point system salaries with points for merit are reported by 6.7 percent of the systems with merit pay provisions. In a point system salary, points are assigned an administrator on the basis of such considerations as experience, tenure, training, responsibility, and performance. These points are either assigned dollar values or provide the basis for placement of the administrator on a salary scale.

PROGRAM 7: Movement through a salary schedule on the basis of merit is reported by 3.3 percent of the systems with merit pay provisions.

PROGRAM 8: Merit increments on a percentage basis, with no indication of salary schedule, are reported by 3.3 percent of the sample.

EVALUATION PROCEDURES

One of the most important considerations in using merit pay programs is evaluation. Who evaluates the administrator to determine his merit? Twenty-five descriptions of evaluation procedures were provided with the data submitted on merit pay programs.

TABLE B: BREAKDOWN OF EVALUATION PROCEDURES

	#	%
EVALUATION INSTRUMENT USED	13	52.0
EVALUATION BY IMMEDIATE SUPERVISOR	7	28.0
EVALUATION BY SUPERINTENDENT	2	8.0
SELF-EVALUATION	2	8.0
EVALUATION BY SUPERINTENDENT OR ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT	1	4.0
TOTALS	25	100.0

The most common procedure identified (52.0 percent) involves the use of evaluation devices, usually in the form of rating sheets. The administrator's immediate supervisor evaluates performance in 28.0 percent of the sample. The superintendent evaluates performance in 8.0 percent of the systems reporting evaluation procedures. Self-evaluation accounts for 8.0 percent of the sample. Either the superintendent or the assistant superintendent evaluates the administrator in another 4.0 percent of the sample.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR MERIT INCREASES

Twenty-two school systems reported data on the sources of recommendations for pay increases on the basis of merit:

TABLE C: RESPONSIBILITY FOR MERIT INCREASES

MERIT INCREASES RECOMMENDED BY SUPERINTENDENT	13	59.1
MERIT INCREASES APPROVED BY SCHOOL BOARD	7	31.8
MERIT INCREASES RECOMMENDED BY IMMEDIATE SUPERVISOR	2	9.1
TOTALS	22	100.0

In 59.1 percent of the sample, merit increases are recommended by the superintendent. School board approval of such increases is required by 31.8 percent of the systems. An additional 9.1 percent of the sample require recommendation by the administrator's immediate supervisor for merit increases.

SYSTEM-BY-SYSTEM REPORT

Table D lists the data system-by-system and includes individual data when provided (in parentheses). Descriptions of merit pay programs and evaluation procedures attempt to use terminology as reported by each school system.
