ABSTRACT

The developmental teacher competency checklist is designed to facilitate planning of individualized pre- and inservice teacher training programs for teachers of integrated classes of normal and handicapped students. The checklist, which is suitable for self-evaluation and for supervision, applies a five level rating scale to the following competency areas: classroom management, assessment, program design and planning, teacher-child relationships and management, staff and coworker relations, professional work habits, parent relationships, and community relationships and resources. Examples of specific competencies evaluated are: checking safety of equipment and materials and notifying director of problems (classroom management); analyzing and revising learning opportunities based on child's responses and needs (program design and planning); and providing for and managing diversity in the psychomotor domain in normal, blind, deaf, orthopedically disabled, and other handicapped children (teacher-child relationships and management). DEVELOPMENTAL TEACHER COMPETENCY CHECKLIST

Molly C. Gorelick

California State University, Northridge

In September 1971 at California State University, Northridge Preschool Laboratory, a project titled "Careers in Integrated Early Childhood Programs" was initiated. A primary goal was the design of a training program which would lead to careers in early childhood settings integrating children with handicaps into existing nursery schools.

The terms Clinical Director, Developmental Head Teacher, Developmental Assistant Teacher and Developmental Student Aide were used in the project to designate a new breed of teachers who would possess (at different levels) the generic knowledge, skills and attitudes needed to transact with the varying abilities and disabilities found in all young children. These teachers would focus on the child's abilities regardless of the child's label.

It was postulated that trainees entering the early childhood field and those in the field would possess different competency levels. Thus an attempt was made to obtain a profile of these individual differences in basic generic abilities through the construction of a Developmental Teacher Competency Checklist. The resulting profile of competencies could then be employed to design individualized teacher pre and inservice training programs.

Additional purposes for which the Checklist can be employed are to:

- 1) inform young people who are contemplating careers in noncategorical (integrated) early childhood programs about the basic competencies they will have to acquire to become effective and capable teachers. This can assist them in making a decision about a career in the field.
- 2) use the Developmental Competency Checklist to obtain a trainee's or teacher's self evaluation of his/her competencies - thus a picture can be secured of the individual's perception of his own strengths and weaknesses.
- 3) provide the supervising teachers and/or administrators with an instrument for validating the trainee's or teacher's self evaluation report.
- 4) utilize the information gained from the checklist profile to design special interventions, video taping, classroom demonstrations, observations, university courses, pre-or inservice instructional training opportunities to improve competencies.
- 5) employ the Developmental Teacher Checklist profile to match children's characteristics with teacher competencies.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The Developmental Teacher Checklist is used as a self evaluation at the beginning of the school program and validated (independently) by a supervising teacher, a co-teacher or co-trainee at the end of two weeks. It is repeated and validated again at mid-semester and at the three-quarter point of the training period or school year. In addition to the intermittent checklist assessment, daily teaching team meetings are held to discuss progress.

The ongoing charting of the individual's progress assists the trainees, head teachers and directors in setting constructive training objectives. It provides guidelines for designing the learning opportunities needed to insure the acquisition of basic definable competencies.

The competencies purposely have not been formulated in specific behavioral objective terms. The reason for the use of broader descriptions, is to allow for adjustments of the competencies due to regional and ethnic differences in specific behaviors and to keep the length of the checklist reasonable.

No attempt is made in the Developmental Teacher Checklist to assess such competencies as a "natural charisma", a "Fied Piper" effect on children or similar personality characteristics grouped under the heading of a "natural art of teaching." It is hoped that young people who possess these "child reaching" and humanistic characteristics will enter the field and combine these talents with the knowledge and skills required to insure the highest levels of total teacher competency. Teachers who possess a combination of these competencies are urgently needed to guide the growth and development of our nation's greatest resource - all of our children.

It should be noted that the Developmental Teacher Competencies Checklist is only one tool of several being used in the "Careers Project" to describe, evaluate and validate teacher competencies.

Suggestions are invited from trainees, teachers, administrators and researchers for the purpose of extending, correcting or changing the components in the Checklist. Continued refinement should improve the capability of the instrument to individualize the training of highly competent Developmental Teachers.

Developmental Teacher Competency Checklist Profile and Progress Report

Directions for Summary of Ratings

Molly C. Gorelick

An analysis of the results of the Developmental Teacher Competency Checklist is obtained by totaling the ratings in each competency area and dividing by the number of items in that area. At different periods of the year, the columns, numbered I to IV, are used for self and other person's (e.g. supervisor, director, colleague) evaluations. The mean for each area is listed and then plotted on the corresponding column of the profile. The Grand Mean is obtained by totaling the means for each area and dividing by eight (8), the total number of areas.

The profile permits comparisons between the various evaluations. The results are then used as a guide to plan individualized pre or in service training programs.

The material was developed under the project "Careers in Integrated Early Childhood Programs", Grant No. 55-P-45144/9-03.
