ABSTRACT

Designed to supplement the day-to-day planning, teaching, and evaluation activities of reading teachers at all educational levels, this compilation contains 689 citations of documents that appeared in "Resources in Education" from 1966 to 1980. The classification scheme reflected in the table of contents, developed from staff recommendations and interviews with reading teachers, indicates the range of the ERIC database and the nature of the materials in the database. Section headings include adult literacy education, beginning reading, strategies for reading comprehension and critical reading, specific and general guidelines for content area reading instruction, curriculum guides, guidelines for teaching decoding skills, strategies for teaching exceptional children, instructional games, guidelines and activities for individualization, resources for parental involvement, reading program descriptions, materials for remedial and corrective instruction, and specific reading techniques, resources, and materials. An index using terms from the "Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors" provides another avenue of approach to the literature.

Introduction

Try as they might, classroom teachers often do not have enough information at their fingertips to revitalize their lesson plans. They feel the urge to stimulate student learning with fresh teaching approaches, but they wonder how and where they can find the information. They need ready references without having to buy all the "how-to" books on the market. The ERIC database has responded to these needs for many years, offering access to the shared secrets of teachers, administrators, and educational researchers. Now, as part of a systemwide effort to provide information analysis products of current interest to particular users, the ERIC Clearinghouse on Reading and Communication Skills offers this compilation of teaching materials for reading instruction.

Designed to supplement the day-to-day planning, teaching, and evaluation activities of reading teachers at all educational levels, this compilation contains 689 citations chosen after careful review of documents that appeared in Resources In Education from 1966 to 1980. Annotations of articles from the Current Index to Journals in Education were not included. Since a document's selection for this bibliography was made on the basis of timeliness, teacher orientation, and nonrepetitiveness in relation to the other 1,193 documents reviewed, the omission of a document is not to be taken as a judgment of its quality. For the purposes of this bibliography, the term "teacher" represents both parents as the teachers of their preschool children and instructors of adults, young adults, children, and adolescents.

The classification scheme reflected in the Table of Contents, developed from staff recommendations and interviews with reading teachers, indicates the range of the ERIC database and the nature of the materials in the database. An index using terms from the Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors provides another avenue of approach to the literature.

Knowing the diversity of teaching styles and teachers' wide-ranging interests and activities, we urge satisfied users of this compilation to return to the ERIC database for additional ideas.

Foreword

The Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) is a national information system developed by the U.S. Office of Education and now sponsored by the National Institute of Education (NIE). Through its network of specialized clearinghouses, each of which is responsible for a particular educational area, ERIC acquires, evaluates, abstracts, and indexes current significant information and lists this information in its publications, Resources in Education (RIE) and Current Index to Journals in Education (CIJE). It provides ready access to descriptions of exemplary programs, research and development efforts, and related information useful in developing more effective educational programs. The ERIC system makes available—through the ERIC Document Reproduction Service—much informative data.

However, if the findings of specific educational research are to be intelligible to teachers and applicable to teaching, considerable bodies of data must be reevaluated, focused, translated, and molded into an essentially different context. Realizing this need, NIE has directed the separate ERIC clearinghouses to develop information analysis papers in specific areas within the scope of the clearinghouses.

In a further refinement of efforts at information dissemination, ERIC has begun to develop tools especially designed for classroom teachers in specific content areas. The annotated bibliographies that comprise these tools reflect a unique way of partitioning the ERIC data base to provide teachers and their resource persons with direct and rapid aid for solving everyday problems.

We are pleased to announce, as part of the continuing series “Especially for Teachers,” this publication of “ERIC Documents on the Teaching of Reading.”

			This catalog of reading programs is a result of an intensive search by the American Institutes for Research of reading programs in operation across the nation, followed by computer evaluation of the findings. Although the principal objective of the research was to produce multimedia inservice packages for reading teachers which demonstrate twelve outstanding programs, the number of effective reading programs discovered was too significant to go unreported. Summaries are given for each of the 222 programs judged to have potential for improving reading ability. This monograph consists of selected International Reading Association convention and journal articles that describe reading programs for adult learners in the United States. The focus of the articles is on continuing adult education and developing advanced reading skills rather than on remedial or basic skills. Topics of selections include international lifelong learning; andragogy, or understanding the adult as a learner; reading and senior citizens; a reading and study skills course for law students; reading programs for employees; reading programs in jail; functional reading instruction based on the APL (Adult Performance Level) approach; commercial television and adult reading; a computer assisted literacy development program; the development of independent learners in the community college; the integration of reading skills with content in a two-year college; speed reading; and hearing impaired students in the college classroom. Three sections of information are provided in this guide designed for prospective and present adult basic education (ABE) teachers in Oklahoma. The first section provides basic information on ABE programs. Topics include the following: the ABE learning center concept, the origin of ABE, purpose of the ABE program, Oklahoma's adult student body, goals of ABE teachers, selection of ABE teachers, professional organizations of ABE teachers, adult education regulations; new General Education Development (G.E.D.) Test information, administration of the G.E.D. Test, suggested competencies for ABE teachers, and criteria for ABE materials. The second section discusses and provides suggestions on student recruitment, enrollment, and retention. The third and final section provides information on teaching tips and techniques. The following items are discussed: the psychology of learning, student observation, characteristics of adult learners, characteristics of good teaching, how to be a better leader, a teacher's self-appraisal, conversation topics, some teaching techniques in reading, and counseling ABE students. On the assumption that client-centered participatory education is pedagogically superior to other methods designed for adults of low reading ability, this manual outlines classroom-tested techniques for developing "fotonovelas"—printed media in which photos are arranged in the sequence of a dramatic story and the plot is conveyed through dialogue bubbles. After considering various rationales for learner-produced materials, the manual discusses the participatory process, focuses on the relationship between the facilitator and participants, and answers technical questions regarding the production of photoliterature. The final section provides norms for evaluating materials and suggests some options for varying the process. (MA1)

A comprehensive system of literacy instruction is outlined in this monograph. The system involves two stages—learning to read and reading to learn (reading to get information from printed materials)—which are integrated through two overlapping teaching spirals organized around a chosen subject matter theme. The nine chapters of the monograph provide an introduction to the system and discuss the following topics: the integration of subject matter with literacy training; the development of subject matter content for literacy courses; the teaching of reading, writing, and arithmetic in the first spiral; the role of the workbook and the instructor's guide in literacy instruction; literacy training in the second spiral, in which reading to learn is stressed; and the problems of evaluating instructional materials for a literacy program. This book of instructional materials for adult basic education teachers is a collection of exercises and activities which involve the use of resources found in the everyday environment of adults, relate to adult coping skills, and provide students with practice in language and computation. Following a brief introduction and discussion of adult learners and their teachers, the remainder of the content is in thirty sections varying in length (from one to nineteen pages), each one including a discussion of how a specific resource material can be used for student learning, several student exercises and activities involving the use of this resource, copies or illustrations of the resource material, and worksheets (when appropriate). The titles of these sections and some of their subdivisions are as follows: Applications (Job Application), Brochures (Driver's Manual), Calendars, Catalogs, Charts (Emergency Information), Containers, Directions (Patterns), Display Ads (Grocery Ads), Environment, Food (Cookbooks), Games, Labels (Food Labels), Letters, Magazines, Maps, Measures, Media, Menus, Money (Bank Statements), Music, Newspapers, Objects, Occupant Mail, Paper, People (Language Experience), Pictures (Comics and Cartoons), Signs, Tape Recorders and Typewriters, Telephone Book, and Words (Word Lists). Suggestions and forms for assessing the competency level and interests of students, resource sources, and a summary of adult performance level objectives are appended. (EM)

This book contains more than 200 one-page exercises designed to give adults practice in basic reading and handwriting skills. The exercises are arranged according to the areas with which they deal: visual discrimination; letter recognition; manuscript practice and sequence; script practice; numeral writing; initial consonants; final consonants; phonics definitions and rules; short vowels; long vowels; "y" as a vowel; regular double vowels; diphthongs and irregular double vowels; the sound of "s" as "z"; the sounds of "g," "k," and "c"; "r"-controlled vowels; blends; digraphs; silent consonants; and syllables. Other exercises provide practice for learning about days and months; punctuating the names of streets, cities, and states; dictionary skills; writing personal and business letters; reading recipes; reading instructions for home repair, home appliances, and automobiles, using general reference books and encyclopedias; and understanding traffic signs. Identifiers—Adult Performance Level

Written to provide the adult basic education teacher with practical low level reading materials based on the Adult Performance Level (APL) goals and objectives, these modules on consumer economics and community resources have the following goals for students: (1) To manage a family economy and to demonstrate an awareness of sound purchasing principles and (2) to understand that community resources, including transportation systems, are utilized by individuals in society in order to obtain a satisfactory mode of living. Both modules begin with a list of performance objectives for the goal. Then each objective is broken down into several tasks (enabling objectives) with directions for student activities and exercises that are correlated with a specific reading skill. A cross reference list of tasks and reading skills and a list of resource materials are provided for each module. Learning activities include diagrams, illustrated reading materials, written exercises, and projects on a zero to fifth grade reading level. (HD)

An adult basic education curriculum is presented, designed to raise the competencies of adults in the basic areas of oral and written communications, arithmetic, social sciences, occupational planning (including development of occupational concepts and attitudes) and development of self. Basic area skills and activities are presented in three levels: Level I (Grades 0-3), Level II (Grades 4-6), and Level III (Grades 7-9). Content is given in four sections. Section 1 discusses curriculum objectives, the philosophy of adult basic education, and describes learner characteristics of uneducated, "under-informed" and "under-achieving" adults, which are grouped as Level 1, Level 2, and Level 3, respectively. Section 1 also discusses qualities found in a good adult basic education teacher, principles of teaching, and a check-list of danger signs of the adult drop-out. Section 2 provides separate teaching outlines for each of the adult levels in the areas of reading, language arts, and arithmetic. Section 3 provides teaching outlines for the areas of social living, science and life, employment, the needs of everyday living, and tips for the consumer. Section 4 includes guidelines for preparation and a bibliography. (WL)

The document contains 48 Adult Basic Education (A.B.E.) instructional units, designed to help the A.B.E. learner read the newspaper with more facility and interest. The 48 units represent the newspaper's entire range of content. Specific reading skills, stressed in some units, are geared toward the student whose reading ability ranges from above the third grade through the sixth grade levels. Student progress sheets are included which list the title of each unit with a blank for the date completed. Each unit consists of a guidesheet which lists objectives for the student, the reading skill stressed, suggestions for the teacher, and activities; a worksheet with newspaper information or copy and accompanying questions to be completed by student; and (for some units) an additional worksheet with general questions applicable to the student's own newspaper. A glossary of 29 newspaper terms and answer keys for the first worksheet in each unit are included. (Author/MS)

Identifiers—*Tutor Support Library

The three sample mini-functional units are part of a system developed for tutor training and support for adult literacy programs. A key component of the system is the Tutor Support Library, consisting of Instructional Concept Guides (designed as training and reference aids for tutors) and Functional Content Units (intended to help tutors combine reading skill instruction and support in the area of life-coping skills). The purpose of the mini-functional units is to help the tutor isolate one small segment of a larger life-coping situation and to teach the student to manage that part so that he can apply the acquired skill to a more complex need. Three commonplace adult situations (filling out a job application form, writing personal checks, and using the telephone directory) have been selected and brief reading lessons for low ability students have been constructed around them. Incorporated in the units are suggestions for expanding the instruction for higher ability levels. The units outline: the topic, prerequisite skills, related vocabulary words, concepts and skills to be taught, a sample lesson, learning activities, and resource materials. The units on job application and check writing also contain sample forms. (Author/MS)

The functional content unit on health and medical care is part of a system developed for tutor training and support for adult literacy programs. A key component of the system is the Tutor Support Library, consisting of Instructional Concept Guides (designed as training and reference aids for tutors) and Functional Content Units (intended to help tutors combine reading skill instruction and support in the area of life-coping skills). The unit, which provides suggestions for studying health and medical care while improving reading ability contains: an introduction, a list of critical vocabulary terms, a detailed outline of information and suggestions to assist the tutor in organizing and keeping track of topics covered, and a description of materials related to the topic. A brief discussion describes the way reading skills can be developed through the functional content. A sample lesson combines reading skills and functional skills to demonstrate how tutoring might be approached. Other instructional ideas with references to teaching and resource materials appear at the end of the unit. The guide also includes a reference list (student materials and tutor references) and sample hospital record forms. (Author/MS)

Guide Eleven provides information for agencies and individual tutors in selection and use of materials. The first two sections discuss in detail procedures involved in choosing materials for the literacy program and using materials in the program. The final section (74 pages) lists materials in the following categories: essential, useful (but not basic), desirable as an adjunct to a basic program, and late reviews. Titles, ordering information, Regional Adult Literacy Service Unit (RALSU) evaluate coding (for content, interest level, and reading level), and annotations are presented for each item. Unevaluated materials, references for teachers, and State-related program reports and publications are also listed. (Author/MS)

It is an informal method of decoding words which involves attempting to break the word into familiar parts or elements. Many examples of the process are given utilizing words from several basic word lists. Topics presented for the tutor are: beginning reading methods for children, adult decoding approaches, preparing the student for the decoding process, developing decoding ability, and defining stages of decoding ability. A table delineates three stages in developing decoding competence. (Author/MS)

Designed primarily as a guide for teachers at the secondary level and in adult basic education, the book summarizes basic techniques for instructing students in how to read, emphasizing continuous informal diagnosis and adaptive teaching. Chapter titles include: Stages of Development, providing an overview of the basics of the reading process and how one moves from nonreader to reader status; Diagnosis, discussing proven techniques and instruments used to assess reading levels; Teaching Procedures, Stage 1, discussing teaching methods for each stage of the reading process; Stage 2 Reading to Learn, exploring a variety of ways students learn through their reading; Specialized Reading Skills, discussing reading experiences drawn from current study or related work materials through the systematic teaching of work study skills; and, Classroom Management, emphasizing individualized reading and instruction. A bibliography of 52 titles is presented and specimen copies of informal measures for assessing basic reading skills, including the Fry Readability Formula, and a reference list of instructional materials are appended. It is stated that teaching the untaught demands an ability to transform components of the developmental reading program into instructional methods and materials appropriate for learners of all ages and in a variety of situations. (LH)

More than 50 percent of the world's adult population is unable to read or write at all. Since many of the tutors of adult illiterates have not had training in the teaching of reading, this booklet was written to introduce these tutors to the practical aspects of an area which has a vast literature of its own. The eleven sections in the booklet focus on various aspects of reading and writing: introducing reading without books-method 1; summary of lesson model; introducing reading without books-method 2; making your own materials with your pupil; writing (with examples of writing patterns and the printed alphabet); word attack skills; using cassette or tape recorder; phonics; spelling; social sight vocabulary; diagnosis; and conclusions. Language experience in adult basic education serves a variety of purposes: emphasizing communication, providing an atmosphere of sharing and personal growth, and most importantly, allowing students to confront their own learning blocks rather than ignoring them. Case histories support the fulfillment of those purposes. There are basic methods to help the teacher use language experience and integrate it into an on-going adult reading program. The methods used at the Community Learning Center in Cambridge, Mass. are: dictation, transcription, directed writing, and free writing. Each method has certain advantages and disadvantages, and these are explained. The center places emphasis on student-created materials. They can be used to develop skill in sight vocabulary, phonic analysis, structural analysis, and comprehension. Specific steps a teacher can employ in the use of student-created materials are presented in a case-study format. The document's appendix, "Some Writing Ideas," presents several themes that were used to initiate writing exercises, explains the classroom context in which they were used, provides examples, and comments on some of the outcomes (AG)

In its treatment of the development of reading comprehension, the document considers the topics of general understanding, influence of vocabulary and word meaning, relationships to subject matter areas, and techniques for study and questioning. Unit one, entitled Analysis of Style, deals with grasping the main idea; directly stated facts and reading for details; making inferences; and steps in reading to follow directions. The teaching of vocabulary and a list outlining constructs are offered in unit two. Comprehension skills pertinent to content area with suggestions relating to mathematics and science are considered in unit three. Focusing on psychological set and teaching learning techniques, unit four briefly outlines the principles of the CLOZE procedure, SQ3R, and D-R-T-A methods. The final unit discusses questioning techniques, the taxonomy of questioning techniques, the kinds of classroom questions, and the taxonomy of reading comprehension. (MW)

This paper outlines a program designed to teach adults to read better. Manzo discriminates between illiterate and semi-literate. The reading program is intended for semi-literate, often culturally different, economically depressed, program enrolled Adult Basic Education (ABE) students. Four teaching strategies are proposed to add an instructional component to mere reading practice in basal type materials. First, the ABE student should frequently be required to articulate reasons for both his correct and his incorrect responses made while working in auto-instructional adult basal materials. Second, the ABE student should regularly experience a full fledged Directed Reading Lesson, complete with readiness activity, purpose setting, and post-reading skills instruction. Third, the ABE should be taught how to establish his own purposes for reading, and, finally, he must learn to accurately recall information without the aid of the teacher. Causes of illiteracy and the effect of illiteracy on adaptive behaviors are discussed. Ideally, an ABE reading program should have a humanistic component, designed to give counsel to adults with attitudinal problems. (LL)

This handbook is intended to give the working teacher some background and practical suggestions for helping adults become effective, independent readers. Chapters One and Two give a brief overview of adult literacy training and look at some of the basic human needs of adults who have returned to school. Chapters Three and Four define the basic reading skills and give examples of activities for learning these skills, examples for the teacher to build upon. Chapter Five, on measurement of reading performance, concerns ways to determine the skills a student has, the skills he needs to learn, and ways of implementing a diagnostic teaching-learning program. Chapter Six looks at students as individuals and as group members in order to help the teacher organize his students for most effective learning. Chapter Seven concerns evaluation of personal growth, materials, and the overall program. A list of supplementary reading is provided at the end of each chapter. A bibliography of materials and resources concludes the volume. (For related document, see AC 012630.) (Author/KM)

This book of readings accompanies the "Handbook for Teachers of Reading in Adult Basic Education"; each part is meant to supplement each chapter in the handbook. Articles are grouped into the following categories: (1) an overview of adult literacy training; (2) social and psychological bases of adult basic education; (3) basic reading skills; (4) comprehension; (5) measurement of reading performance; (6) organizing for individual differences: methods and materials; (7) evaluation; and (8) materials. (For related document, see AC 012859.) (Author/KM)

Right to Read

The services of the National Reading Center are discussed from the point of view of its efforts to encourage literacy campaigns in business, industry, in health, welfare and correctional institutions, and in a wide range of voluntary and community organizations. An introduction to the work of Literacy Volunteers, Inc. (LitVol), is presented; this introduction is the first in a series on major partners in the national Right to Read effort. LitVol organizes and trains volunteers to teach reading on a one-to-one tutoring basis to functionally illiterate adults (those with less than fifth grade skills). Among the methods developed by LitVol are: heavy use of voluntary staff; organized recruitment plans for trainers and learners, aided by TV spots and other publicity materials; tutor training, using handbooks on organizing and instructional techniques, including audio-visual components; and methods for "matching" tutors and learners by personality and components. Advantages of one-to-one tutoring include: (1) illiterate adults have often been frustrated in classrooms and generalize this experience to any group situation; (2) It is difficult to find a group, or even two adults at the same level, who, studying together, can learn at the same pace; (3) Personal tutoring can fit the instruction to the varying motives of the adult learner; and (4) Personal attention can often buck up the morale of the troubled learner. (CK)

Instructional models and correlated learning passages are supplied in this teacher's handbook for teaching reading skills necessary for the student who wishes to participate in a High School Equivalency program. The divisions of the guide are: General Vocabulary Development—Outline; Interpreting Reading Material in Social Studies; Interpreting Reading Material in Science; Interpreting Literature; and Interpreting Reading Materials in Math. For each skill, there is an instructional rationale that explains why the skill is considered critical, one or more instructional objectives that explain the intent of the lesson, an instructional model that suggests how the skill might be taught, and one or more means of evaluating the effectiveness of instruction. Aimed at adults reading on a junior high school level, this study developed a series of reading improvement lessons for use with instructional television. Special problems included identifying the desired skills, determining specific instructional methods, and choosing modes of presentation suitable for television. Pertinent data were gathered from research studies and other literature. A model lesson was written, videotaped and viewed by a panel of experts. Their suggestions were submitted to the investigator, who incorporated them in the lesson plans. Seventeen lessons were prepared on study skills, comprehension and interpretation, reading rate, and vocabulary; each lesson was then presented in identical format. Two presentations—a script outline and a television guide booklet—were made for each lesson. Designed for television directors, the script indicates the time devoted to each activity as well as audio and video presentations. The booklets include lesson numbers, topics, lesson plans and objectives, summaries of telecast content, important principles, and suggested followup activities, followed by references and visual aids. Adult basic education (ABE) teachers, supervisors, and administrators are furnished with guidelines on the use of linguistic techniques for basic reading instruction, (Levels 1 and 2), the formation of student skills in listening, speaking, reading, and writing (Levels 1, 2, 3), and mathematics teaching at all three levels plus the high school level. Suggestions on student placement, class activities, allocation of time, and instructional materials are offered. Aims of ABE are set forth in the context of typical reasons for participation, potential benefits, and tasks of everyday life. It is recommended that tasks in ABE classes be chosen and ABE students grouped according to needs and motivation as well as ability. (ly)

The papers composing this document were presented during the Workshop for Teachers on Adult Basic Education, which sought to provide participants with an understanding of the adult learner, insights regarding program planning, and techniques and procedures for effective teaching. They were intended to provide experienced adult educators with a current view of significant issues and resources, and students in preservice or inservice training with a basic reference and overview regarding adult basic education. Among subjects discussed were: classroom climate, cultural values, developmental tasks, recruitment and retention, program individualizations, testing, counseling, relating to the adult learner, understanding group interaction and behavior, experience in concept building, selection of instructional materials, evaluation, social studies and citizenship, practical mathematics and basic reading instruction. The appendix includes legislation which affects the adult educator. (pt)

Methods, Vocabulary

This manual describes a comprehensive reading program for adults and provides specific, practical help for teachers. Four stages in adult reading ability are identified: introductory; elementary; intermediate; and developmental, with various levels of each stage. Included are suggestions for procedures to determine reading levels of individual adults, teaching methods, and instructional materials (teaching machines, reading tests, and vocabulary exercises). Appendixes provide the addresses of publishers, film companies, suppliers of special reading devices, and a bibliography of books for reading teachers. (se)

TEACHING READING IN ADULT BASIC EDUCATION IS DESIGNED TO GIVE PRACTICAL AID TO THOSE PREPARING FOR OR ENGAGED IN ADULT BASIC EDUCATION. WHILE MANY OF THE SUGGESTIONS ARE DIRECTED TO THOSE TEACHING READING CLASSES, READING SKILLS SHOULD BE TAUGHT AND DEVELOPED WHEN TEACHING IN THE OTHER AREAS SUCH AS MATHEMATICS AND GENERAL KNOWLEDGE. THE SECTION ON READING IN SPECIAL SUBJECT MATTER AREAS SHOULD PROVE OF VALUE TO THE TEACHER WHO HAS NOT HAD STRONG TRAINING IN THE TEACHING OF READING. CHAPTERS INCLUDE TEACHING ADULTS, STAGES OF ADULT READING, ASSESSING FOR INSTRUCTION (INCLUDING AN INFORMAL READING INVENTORY CHECK SHEET), GENERAL INSTRUCTIONAL METHODS, TECHNIQUES FOR SPECIFIC LEARNING DISABILITY CASES, TECHNIQUES AND MATERIALS FOR THE INTRODUCTORY, ELEMENTARY, AND INTERMEDIATE STAGES (INCLUDING DEVELOPING RECOGNITION VOCABULARY AND COMPREHENSION, SELECTING INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS, AND WRITING MATERIALS), READING IN THE SUBJECT AREAS OF MATHEMATICS, SOCIAL STUDIES, AND SCIENCE, THE DEVELOPMENTAL STAGE, AND AN ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF MATERIALS FOR THE INTRODUCTORY, ELEMENTARY, AND INTERMEDIATE READING STAGES. THE WASHINGTON STATE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION PREPARED THESE GUIDELINES FOR TEACHERS OF UNDEREDUCATED ADULTS ILLITERATE, FUNCTIONALLY ILLITERATE, AND NON-ENGLISH-SPEAKING. THE RATE OF ILLITERACY HAS BEEN DECLINING, STANDING IN 1960 AT 18.059. FUNCTIONAL ILLITERACY IS HARDER TO DEFINE SINCE CRITERIA ARE CONSTANTLY CHANGING, BUT IT IS FOUND MOSTLY AMONG RURAL POPULATIONS AND MIGRANTS. IN 1960, THERE WERE 178,658 FOREIGN-BORN PERSONS IN THE STATE. STUDENT-TEACHER RELATIONSHIPS ARE DISCUSSED FIRST. THE PROBLEMS OF THE SCHOOL SITUATION FOR ADULTS, DEVELOPING STRONG MOTIVATION, A MINIMAL TESTING PROGRAM, VARIED METHODS OF TEACHING DEPENDING ON THE TYPE OF STUDENT, AND DESIRABLE TEACHER QUALIFICATIONS, COMMUNICATION SKILLS ARE PRESENTED IN A SEQUENTIAL MANNER TO SHOW THE STUDENTS THE EVERYDAY APPLICATIONS OF SUCH SKILLS FOR THEIR ADVANTAGE. ENGLISH LANGUAGE (GRADES 0-3, 4-6, AND 7-8), SPELLING, READING, HANDWRITING, AND ARITHMETIC, INCLUDED IN THE APPENDIX ARE TIPS FOR TEACHERS. THE PROGRAMING USED PRESENTS MATERIAL IN SMALL STEPS WHICH CALL FOR AN ACTIVE RESPONSE FOLLOWED BY AN IMMEDIATE CONFIRMATION. THE THREE-STEP CYCLE IS REPEATED FOR EACH PIECE OF MATERIAL. THIS TYPE OF PROGRAM ALLOWS SELF-PACING, LOW-ERROR RATE, HIGH MOTIVATION AND EASY DEVELOPMENT TESTING. THE PROJECT USED THIS TECHNIQUE TO TEACH READING TO ILLITERATE ADULTS. THE PROGRAM CONSISTS OF A SERIES OF BOOKLETS IN ADDITION TO SUPPLEMENTARY REVIEW EXERCISES. THESE BOOKLETS ARE DESIGNED TO USE ANOTHER PERSON, ANY LITERATE ADULT, TO READ DIRECTIONS TO THE STUDENTS. DURING THE DEVELOPMENTAL STAGES OBSERVERS SOUGHT TROUBLE SPOTS AND AREAS OF DIFFICULTY FROM PREVIOUS TESTING IT WAS FOUND THAT THE HELPER SHOULD EMPHASIZE NEW WORDS, ARRANGE ADEQUATE BREAK PERIODS, INSURE THAT THE STUDENT UNDERSTANDS BASIC DIRECTIONS, AND PREVENT STUDENTS FROM SPELLING OUT WORDS. HELPERS SHOULD EXPLAIN THE FORMAT OF THE BOOKLETS. INFORMATION PAGES CONTAIN DIRECTIONS AND WORDS FOR THE STUDENT. OFTEN THERE WILL BE A PICTURE TO HELP THE STUDENT TELL WHAT THE WORDS ARE ABOUT. A CONFIRMATION PAGE INDICATES THE CORRECT ACTION TO BE TAKEN ON THE INFORMATION PAGE. PROGRESS CARDS ARE KEPT BY ALL STUDENTS TO INDICATE LESSON TIMES AND PROGRESS TO DATE. A DESCRIPTION OF THE FIRST TWELVE LESSONS IS GIVEN. LESSONS INTRODUCE WORDS, COMPARE THEM WITH OTHERS, AND FINALLY, CALL FOR AN ISOLATED RECOGNITION OF THE WORD.

THEN THE STUDENT IS ASKED TO READ A QUESTION AND CHOOSE FROM TWO ANSWERS. QUESTIONS BECOME MORE COMPLEX WITH THE INTRODUCTION OF "OR." "THIN" IS INTRODUCED WITHOUT A PICTURE CUE. IT IS DISCOVERED FROM THE ASSOCIATION WITH ITS OPPOSITE. DISCOVERY OF INDIVIDUAL LETTERS IS BEGUN AND THE STUDENT REALIZES THAT THE SAME LETTER IS USED IN DIFFERENT WORDS

ADULT ILLITERACY RESULTS FROM POVERTY, AND, MANY TIMES, SUPPRESSION. ILLITERACY IS SELF-MAINTAINING BECAUSE ILLITERATES CANNOT GAIN NEW KNOWLEDGE OR FULLY PARTICIPATE IN ECONOMIC, CULTURAL OR POLITICAL LIFE OF THEIR SOCIETY. THE PROJECT WAS AN ATTEMPT TO APPLY THE PRINCIPLES OF PROGRAMED INSTRUCTION TO THE TEACHING OF READING TO ADULT ILLITERATES. THE TARGET POPULATION AREA WAS A NEGRO RURAL REGION OF MISSISSIPPI IN WHICH 91 PERCENT OF THE ADULTS WERE ILLITERATE. OBJECTIVES OF THE PROGRAMED MATERIALS WERE TO ENABLE THE SUBJECT TO RECOGNIZE A WORD BY SIGHT AND TO READ ALOUD A NUMBER OF WORDS WITHOUT PICTORIAL OR CONTEXTUAL SUPPORT, AND TO DEVELOP OTHER BEGINNING READING SKILLS SUCH AS PHONETICS AND ABILITY TO RECOGNIZE UN FAMILIAR WORDS FROM CONTEXT. THE MATERIALS DEVELOPED THUS FAR SEEK TO PROVIDE A MINIMUM NUMBER OF WORDS—WORDS ALREADY IN THE LEARNER'S SPOKEN VOCABULARY—AS RECOGNITION VOCABULARY TO BE USED, IN TURN, AS MODELS FOR EXERCISES IN STRUCTURAL AND PHONETIC ANALYSIS. THE MATERIAL IS PRESENTED IN A DOUBLE TRACK PROGRAM. ONE TRACK PROVIDES THE BASIC FORMAT OF THE BOOKS. TO PROVIDE AUDITORY STIMULI, SUPPLY DIRECTIONS, ASSESS ORAL RESPONSES AND PROVIDE ORAL REINFORCEMENT, A SECOND TRACK RUNS PARALLEL TO THE FIRST. IT UTILIZES A HELPER WHO MUST BE A LITERATE ADULT. INITIAL WORDS WERE ALL COMMON NOUNS, CHOSEN FOR THEIR CONFIGURATION AND PHONETIC EASE, THEIR INCIDENCE IN THE VOCABULARY OF THE TARGET POPULATION, AND THEIR RELEVANCE AS MODELS FOR LATER LESSONS. THE WORDS WERE SUPPORTED BY PICTURES AND THE NAME SPOKEN BY THE HELPER. THROUGH A SERIES OF DISCRIMINATIONS, THESE CUES WERE FADED, AND THE TERMINAL FRAME FOR THE SEQUENCE ASKED THE STUDENT HIMSELF TO READ THE ISOLATED WORD ALOUD.

THE GREATEST PROBLEM FACING EDUCATION TODAY IS THE ERADICATION OF ILLITERACY IN OUR OWN AND OTHER COUNTRIES. TEACHING READING TO ILLITERATE ADULTS IS PRIMARILY A MATTER OF ESTABLISHING THE PROPER CORRELATION BETWEEN THE ELEMENTS OF THE WRITTEN LANGUAGE, WHICH ARE UNKNOWN TO THEM, AND ELEMENTS OF THE SPOKEN LANGUAGE ALREADY IN THEIR REPERTOIRE. THE IMMEDIATE OBJECTIVES OF THE PRESENT PROJECT ARE LIMITED TO THE READING AND COMPRE-HENSION OF SENTENCES WITH RELATIVELY SIMPLE STRUCTURES. RECOGNITION READING OF A SPECIFIED NUMBER OF WORDS, AND THE ABILITY TO USE STRUCTURE AND CONTEXT CUES TO READ NEW WORDS THAT ARE ALREADY PART OF THE SPOKEN VOCABULARY. THE PRINCIPAL TECHNIQUES TAUGHT ARE WORD RECOGNITION, PICTURE AND VERBAL CONTEXT, PHONETIC ANALYSIS, AND STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS. THE PROGRAM CONSISTS OF A "DOUBLE TRACK." ONE TRACK CONSISTS OF READING EXERCISES, PICTURES, AND RESPONSES FOR THE LEARNER. A PARALLEL TRACK IS FOR A LITERATE HELPER FROM THE SAME LANGUAGE GROUP AS THE LEARNER. IT IS HOPED THAT ONCE A FORMAT IS PERFECTED IN ONE LANGUAGE IT CAN BE GENERALIZED WITH ONLY SLIGHT MODIFICATIONS TO OTHER LANGUAGES AS WELL. AN INITIAL PROGRAM IS BEING PLANNED WITH ADULT ILLITERATE NEGROES IN THE DELTA REGION OF MISSISSIPPI.

THE INTRODUCTION OF PRONOUNS IS CONTINUED. "HIM" AND "HER" ALONG WITH THE POSSESSIVE "S" ARE INTRODUCED. THROUGH THE INTRODUCTION OF THE POSSESSIVE CASE, THE LESSON ALSO CONTRIBUTES TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CHARACTERS WHO APPEAR IN THIS AND EARLIER LESSONS. INFORMATION ABOUT THE CHARACTERS IS PRESENTED. FOR EXAMPLE, PICTURE ASSOCIATION SHOWS THE HOUSE TO BE THE MAN'S. THIS FACT THEN BECOMES PART OF THE VOCABULARY. "HIS," "HER," AND "HE" ARE ASSOCIATED PHONETICALLY.

THE PRONOUNS INTRODUCED IN LESSON 8 ARE REVIEWED THROUGH QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. A DOUBLE QUESTION IS USED AND EXTENDED IN TWO SEPARATE FRAMES. THE FIRST QUESTION CONTAINS THE NEW WORD "WHO" AND IS SPOKEN BY A HELPER. AN EXAMPLE OF PRONOUN REVIEW IS "WHO IS THIS." THE PICTURE DISPLAYS A THIN MAN IN A ROOM. "THIS IS THE THIN MAN. WHERE IS HE." THE PICTURE REMAINS THE SAME. "HE IS IN THE ROOM." "WHAT" IS INTRODUCED. PHONETIC ASSOCIATION IS DRAWN BETWEEN "WHAT," "WHERE," AND "WHITE."

- This booklet along with six others comprises a curriculum guide developed for adult education supervisors and teachers of undereducated workers or job seekers whose inability to develop the skills and obtain the knowledge necessary to meet the requirements of the working world are primarily due to a lack of competence in reading and math skills. This first booklet is a summary of the reading and math skills and an explanation of the development of diagnostic and instructional instruments utilized in each of the instructional packets. (Booklets 4-7 are the instructional packets developed in each of the following areas: Manufacturing, municipal government, health services, and construction.) Section 1 of the booklet contains a list of reading skills; discusses the development of diagnostic instruments for assessing reading level, including testing instructions and the test; and explains the development of instructional instruments, including a summary of the following method for preparing career-related materials: Collect print from career sites, analyze the print for suitability in content and vocabulary, locate a sample skills lesson, substitute career-oriented vocabulary and content in the sample exercises, and follow-up with practice. Section 2 contains a list of basic mathematical skills and adult performance level objectives; and, like the section on reading, explains the development of the diagnostic and instructional instruments utilized in each of the instructional packets. The functional content unit on getting and keeping a job is part of a system developed for tutor training and support for adult literacy programs. A key component of the system is the Tutor Support Library, consisting of Instructional Concept Guides (designed as training and reference aids for tutors) and Functional Content Units (intended to help tutors combine reading skill instruction and support in the area of life-coping skills). The unit, which provides information and teaching ideas to help the tutor prepare students for successful job hunting contains: an introduction, a list of critical vocabulary terms, a detailed outline of information and suggestions to assist the tutor in organizing and keeping track of topics covered, and a description of materials related to the topic. A brief discussion describes the way reading skills can be developed through the functional content. A sample lesson combines reading skills and functional skills to demonstrate how tutoring might be approached. Other instructional ideas with references to teaching and resource materials appear at the end of the unit. The guide also includes a reference list (student materials and tutor references). This catalog of reading programs is a result of an intensive search by the American Institutes for Research of reading programs in operation across the nation, followed by computer evaluation of the findings. Although the principal objective of the research was to produce multimedia inservice packages for reading teachers which demonstrate twelve outstanding programs, the number of effective reading programs discovered was too significant to go unreported. Summaries are given for each of the 222 programs judged to have potential for improving reading ability. The size of each program and its target population are described; its starting date, staff, and major features are given; its facilities, materials, and equipment are listed; and its cost is detailed. Sources of further information on each program are also included. The programs outline elementary, secondary, adult, and special education areas and cover a wide range of reading skills, organizational plans, and geographical areas. The twelve programs to be depicted in multimedia packages are also briefly described. More complete descriptions of most of the programs can be found in the ERIC system. (MKM)

Identifiers—Adult Career Education Resources Survey

The Adult Career Education Resources Survey was designed to (a) compile career information resources for adults and (b) provide materials that will encourage adult educators to integrate career education activities into ongoing curricula. The document was developed and revised by the Survey staff to meet the second objective; it provides a group of field-tested exercises for use by adult educators which serve to help adult students become familiar with a spectrum of careers and which permit introduction of career materials into other learning contexts. From two to six exercises are provided in each of four curriculum areas: reading, writing, oral communication, and critical thinking. To assist the teacher in integrating career activities into ongoing curricula, every activity includes these characterizations: (1) skills reinforced by the activity, (2) performance objective, (3) materials required, (4) time required, (5) a summary of the activity, which describes briefly the suggested tasks from initiation to completion, (6) potential results, and (7) potential populations for utilization. Information on the field-testing of these activities is provided in the document. (Author/AJ)

Identifiers—*BLADE Program, Canada

The nature and rationale of the BLADE (Basic Literacy for Adult Development) Program are explained in this instructor's manual, which also provides an analysis and index of the content. The BLADE Program raises adults to a measured Grade 5.0 level in reading, other communication skills, and mathematics. The program is completely individualized; it tells the student what he is to learn, provides the materials and dynamics for learning it, tells him how to use the instructional sequence, tells him how well he should learn the content, and gives him the means to determine if he has met these criteria before he is tested on his progress. The program is constructed to meet expressed behavioral objectives, and is sequenced on the spiral curriculum plan. The instructional materials are original and designed specifically for the BLADE Program. They are adult in context. The 115 instructional books vary in size. The media include audiotapes, texts, study sheets, study cards, exercises, and some manipulative items. The two most unique features of the program are the tape-text combination and the cueing system. This manual discusses the units of Communication, Levels 1-4, non-Blade materials concerned with communication; Mathematics, Levels 1-4; non-Blade optional materials on mathematics; Facts for Effectual Living; Learning How to Learn; Timed Practice Sessions; Skill and Knowledge Required for Enrollment; Tests to Establish Suitability for Enrollment; The Entrance Levels; Tests for Placement in the BLADE Program; Special Skill and Activities Required of the Instructor; The Classroom Kits of BLADE Material; Equipment Needed; Time Required to Complete the Program; and Implementing the Program in the BLADE classroom. Identifiers—California, California (San Diego), *Project Step-Up

A proposal for Project Step-Up, an endeavor to facilitate upward economic mobility, was submitted, based on the results of a feasibility study. These results indicated that 10 employers of the San Diego Area were prepared to participate in a program to provide adult basic education skills to educationally disadvantaged employees. Participating companies provided classroom facilities on-site at the place of the student's employment. The hypothesis tested was that if the deficiencies in reading and mathematical skills were eliminated, the participants in the program would be able to acquire the necessary vocational skills for a better job through normal public school channels. It was found that employers were willing to grant entry level employees released time to attend classes. Teachers for the project underwent four pre-service training cycles in addition to continuous in-service training on a weekly basis. Teachers used a systems approach. First a diagnostic procedure was utilized to determine student needs and then a course of action was prescribed. Eventually, a Community Learning Center was established in Southeast San Diego. Project Step-Up is the first program funded by OEO that has been completely assimilated in the ongoing program of the contracting agency. Both student and community reaction to the project was positive. Both unemployed and underemployed adults have experienced educational and economic success as a result of the project. It is recommended that adult schools consider duplicating the efforts of any of the parts of Project Step-Up. (CK)

The University of Missouri adult basic education (ABE) system, developed from the ABE laboratory with the help of Title III funds, consists of a series of subsystems designed to effect behavioral change in undereducated adults through an individualized flexible approach to learning. The subsystems of diagnostic testing; individual counseling, teaching-learning, achievement testing, and group counseling workshops are structured around the psychological and curricula principles of: individualized learning; meaningful and practical adult curriculum; a variety of instructional media; a threat-free learning environment; immediate feedback; active learning situations; and sensitized teachers, aides, counselors, and researchers. Specific curriculums for reading, language, mathematics, and social studies are presented with suggested published materials. The counseling workshop curriculum consists of group activities which are entirely learner centered. A counselor guides learners through units they have devised, utilizing role playing, class talks, panel discussion, guest speakers, films and teacher made materials. (pt)

The purpose of this publication is to provide kindergarten teachers with the rationale, ideas, and activities necessary for implementing an experience-based language/pre-reading program in their classrooms. The various sections contain a rationale for using language experience activities; suggestions for classroom management of such activities; and descriptions of language experience activities for the classroom involving active interaction, speaking and listening, functional language, movement from speech to print, and phoneme/grapheme relationships. The publication also contains a teacher's daily checklist of language experiences and a statement of concerns about preschool reading instruction. A list of resources for use in organizing language experience activities is included. (FL)

To support young children in bringing all of their resources to bear on constructing meaning from print, teachers must be aware of how children learn, must make use of a variety of learning materials, and must carefully prepare the contextual setting in which children move into reading. Teachers should focus on planning a classroom reading environment that enables children's language and experiences to be brought to bear on constructing meaning. They should familiarize themselves with community resources and create a classroom environment that reflects many aspects of the community. Among the many activities they can introduce are the highlighting of children's names in contextual settings and the recording of children's observations about weather and plants. Activities can be related to children's family experiences, to their television and story reading experiences at home, and to current or seasonal interests. Teachers should also focus on developing purposes for reading that become part of daily living. Many functional classroom routines can show children the usefulness of reading, and opportunities for purposeful writing support the notion of purposeful reading. Teachers should also model reading behavior both by reading stories to children and by showing how reading meets some of their own personal needs. (GT)

The activities described in this publication are based on a language experience approach that involves primary grade children in progressions from experience to art, writing, and reading. The first and longest section presents a model lesson plan for activities in which children fantasize about being balloons and then progress to related movement, art, and language activities. The other sections suggest activities useful in redirecting children to art and language experiences; developing show and tell sessions that involve lively, natural interactions; setting focuses for listening; building language experiences upon natural, spontaneous play; enriching communication and language through movement and art experiences; building language upon experiences with Cuisenaire rods, attribute blocks, and unit blocks; creating a classroom writing center; and helping children learn to write and to identify letters through scribbling. The publication includes anecdotes and examples of pupil/teacher dialogue to show how the activities were used in class, discussions of skills that can be developed through the activities, and suggestions to help teachers become comfortable in using the suggested techniques. This paper, a response to questions raised on state and local levels on reading in kindergarten, deals with insights required to teach early reading rather than daily reading activities for children. Sections briefly discussed are: A view of reading as a communication process; the importance of teacher sensitivity to individual differences in children's development; curriculum considerations (the importance of story reading, oral language use, speaking and writing experiences, understanding the organization of print, and a good assessment program); organization considerations such as planning, grouping, and activity areas; and the importance of encouraging parent involvement. Also included are a list of available bulletins and brochures for parents on reading, and a joint statement by seven professional associations of concerns about present practices in pre-first grade reading instruction, with recommendations for improvements. The viewpoint taken is that reading is broader than any one method, commercial program or narrow skills approach, and that reading instruction goes beyond workbooks and ditto worksheets which do not adequately provide for creative and individual achievement. The failure of many beginning reading students to become efficient or enthusiastic readers is due to mistaken views of the reading process that cause teachers to stress isolated reading skills and error-free oral reading, rather than focusing on children's ability to read with understanding. Teachers who want to teach differently must take an objective look at reading practices, create settings in which children are willing to take risks, view errors as clues to children's logic, and examine the process of language acquisition for clues that might be applied in reading instruction. Language acquiring children are language receivers long before they are language expressers; they are immersed in the whole of language; and they receive reinforcement for partial success in language production. Similarly, teachers of beginning reading can permit reception to precede expression and can immerse students in the whole of written language through such approaches as the oral cloze procedure and having students follow written material read aloud by the teacher. They can then begin to encourage student help with the reading and to use selective cloze procedures that develop students' predictive abilities. As students begin to read, teachers should respond to miscues by rewarding word approximations, placing first emphasis on what makes sense. Using this approach, teachers can prevent the proliferation of problem readers. (GT)

Beginning reading instruction is a challenge that teachers can meet successfully by using imagination, working hard, displaying enthusiasm, and expressing genuine concern for the young children that they teach. This paper offers guidelines for beginning reading teachers who base their programs on traditional basal readers. The guidelines are summarized as follows: (1) Choose the preprimer with thought for its content and your students. (2) Spend time on prereading activities as you become acquainted with the class. (3) Make your classroom reflect the enjoyment of reading. (4) Teach the vocabulary of the first preprimer before letting children use the book, and use this period to "sort out" the pupils according to reading readiness and ability. (5) Introduce the first preprimer to only those children that have mastered the vocabulary. (6) Finally, make reading a "natural" part of the whole school day, integrating it with other course activities, especially writing. Some specific class reading activities (for groups, pairs, and individuals) are discussed. (RL)

The beginning reading method explained in this book combines a phonics approach with a sight word/basal reader approach, a method which the author used during her many years in the classroom. The author has found that children can become independent readers in two to four months and may read from 10 to 200 books independently in the first year. Spelling and writing are also stressed in this method. Chapter topics are: the purpose and advantage of the blended sound-sight method, the advanced phonics course taught in grade 1, basic steps and procedures in the blended sound-sight method, the activity set-up, the pre-primer stage, teaching advanced phonics, the individualized library, the teaching of spelling, tying phonics into other subjects, written communication, grouping, what parents should know about reading, individualization, interaction learning climates, and basic procedures when using an individualized approach. Also included are practical helps for teachers such as examples of seatwork, references, and charts. (MKM)

The DPI Criterion-Referenced Pre-Reading Screening Test is to be used as one means of identifying some strengths and weaknesses in certain areas of pre-reading skills. It is intended to be used as a screening instrument for beginning first graders. The areas of pre-reading skills to be screened are (1) auditory perception, (2) letter knowledge, (3) perceptual motor, (4) sentence meaning, (5) visual perception, (6) word meaning, and (7) word recognition. The test is to be given under the direction of a fully certified teacher who has studied the test and understands the directions. For valid results, the test should be administered in groups of 5 or less. (Author/BJG)

This book, intended for use by inservice teachers, preservice teachers, and parents interested in open classrooms, contains three chapters. "Beginning Reading in an Open Classroom" discusses language development, sight vocabulary, visual discrimination, auditory discrimination, directional concepts, small muscle control, and measurement of abilities. "Beginning Math in an Open Classroom" describes stages of math development, activities for developing math skills, and evaluation of pupils' mathematical skills. "Five Children: Case Studies" presents the case studies of five children to illustrate how diagnosis and learning strategies were initiated. A conclusion discusses the lack of patterns in the development of a child's learning. Three appendixes describe evaluation procedures for math and reading, and the selection and use of classroom materials for math and reading. (WR)

The first grade instructional unit, part of a grade school level career education curriculum series, is designed to assist learners in relating present experiences to past and future ones. Before the main body of the lessons is described field test results are reported and key items are presented: the concepts, the estimated instructional time, the vocabulary introduced, the resources required, and the instructor preparation tasks. Instructional procedures are presented in three sections: an introduction, learners' tasks, and a summary. Some supplemental activities are presented, strategy and resource profiles provided, and assessment procedures outlined. The unit's overall purpose is to help the learner understand the importance of developing those skills that will enable him to become a competent individual. By taking a close look at three basic skills (reading, writing, and numbering) that he uses in school, at home, and at work, the learner becomes aware of the fact that the skills are relevant to everyday life. The 8-hour unit develops skills in the areas of reading, math, writing, and social studies and is applicable to group instruction. Transparency masters, game materials, and sample forms are included. This curriculum guide was written with the intention of providing continuity to the Wilmington, Massachusetts, reading program—grades kindergarten through twelve. The skills and suggestions presented are adaptable to all reading materials currently available in Wilmington. The skills are meant to be developed in grades kindergarten through third as on-going processes. The guide is divided into the following sections: language development, vocabulary development, motivation, comprehension, word recognition, criteria for selecting activities, fluency, implementing the curriculum, assessment, and comparison of basals. In each section a rationale is presented and suggestions for developing skills in each area are provided. At the end of each section, pages for teacher comments are included. (WR)

Descriptors—Beginning Reading, *Curriculum Guides, Early Childhood Education, Evaluation, *Instructional Materials, Learning Activities, Primary Education, Reading Diagnosis, *Reading Instruction, Reading Materials, *Reading Programs, *Reading Skills, Vocabulary Development

This guide represents an overview of reading skills presented in a developmental sequence with illustrative learning activities for each skill. The activities are suggestive rather than prescriptive, and resources are included. The ideas and materials included in this document are designed so that teachers can modify and adapt them to ongoing reading programs for early childhood education. Both a rationale for a reading program and skills, activities, and resources useful in the reading program are included. The rationale discusses: "Participants," "Philosophy," "Definitions," "Scope and Sequence," "Reading Diagnosis," and "Evaluation." Contents under "Skills, Activities and Resources," include: "Primary Vocabulary Development," "Word Attack Skills," "Auditory Discrimination," "Visual Discrimination," "Phonetic Analysis," "Structural Analysis," "Vocabulary Acquisition," "Instructional Materials," "Selected Teacher References," and "Selected Periodicals." The first section looks at several approaches to reading instruction: "The Language Experience Approach," "The Initial Teaching Alphabet," "Linguistic Approaches to Reading," "Programed Instruction with Reading Materials," "Words in Color," "Special Reading Series for Disadvantaged Urban Children," and "Technological Approaches to Reading: The Talking Typewriter and the Computer." Communication Skills Through Authorship (CSTA) is an initial and early reading program designed to complement any basal reading plan and based on the premise that a child will learn best to read what is important to him personally. Begun in Idaho schools in 1969-70, the program encourages each student to tape record many impressions, stories, or experiences which he considers meaningful. Typed copies are returned to the child and become his personalized reader. He may choose to share his story with his teacher, his peers, or simply read it to himself. In 1971-72, district-wide implementation of the program began in grades one and two with a similar district serving as a control group. Experimental first graders significantly outscored the control students on the Stanford Achievement Test. No significant differences were found in achievement between second grade groups or in reading attitude and self-esteem for either group at both grade levels. Seventy-eight percent of the participating teachers expressed a strong desire to continue the program, and most indicated a decline in their preference for the basal approach and an increase in their preference for individualized and language experience approaches. A more complete program description and other findings are included in the document. (TO)

The purpose of this "Reading Aid" is to help teachers and other school personnel responsible for selecting readiness programs to evaluate those programs they are considering for selection. The programs reviewed here represent a cross-section of the many language and perceptual readiness programs available. The assumption underlying each of these programs is that mastery of the readiness skills identified in the program contributes to later school achievement. The programs discussed range from sets of simple visual-motor and auditory discrimination tasks, to combinations of complex tasks, to tasks involving reception and production of language. The programs are designed to improve oral language or to encourage perceptual-motor development. The programs reviewed include: Peabody Language Development Kit—Level 2, Auditory Discrimination in Depth, Perceptual Training Procedure, Developing Learning Readiness, Pathway School Program, Frostig Program for the Development of Visual Perception, Pictures and Patterns, Fairbanks-Robinson Program—Level 1, and Eric Program. Since there is an increasing demand that teachers teach reading at the preschool level, this guide is designed to assist preschool teachers. The first section of the guide provides information on the following questions: When should formal reading instruction begin? How does traditional kindergarten experience affect readiness for reading? Do perceptual programs affect reading readiness and reading achievement? Is formal reading readiness instruction more effective than informal reading readiness instruction? How effective is formal reading instruction at the preschool level? Does formal reading instruction at the preschool level result in children experiencing emotional problems or adversely affect their attitudes toward reading? To what extent is there evidence that formal preschool reading instruction is sufficiently effective that its practice should be widespread at the preschool level? How effective is preschool reading instruction through educational television? Should teacher aides and parents be used in preschool reading programs? The next section of the guide discusses informal reading readiness, the language experience method, and formal reading readiness and instruction. Grouping for preschool reading instruction is then described, and ways of motivating children to read are discussed. Instructional materials for use in preschool reading instruction are listed, together with their publishers. A list of over 900 books for preschool children is then provided. Publishers who specialize in reading materials for all grade levels are listed. The guide concludes with references. (DB)

This report, one of a series of twenty-one studies discussing the developmental history of a recent educational product, discusses a beginning reading program for kindergarten that is planned as part of a broader communication skills program for the elementary grades. The first section of the report describes the product, which consists of student and teacher materials for ten units of classroom instruction. This section also discusses the characteristics of, rationale for, and procedures for using the product. The second section discusses the origins of the product in terms of key personnel, sources and evolution of ideas, and funding. Section three discusses the development of the product in relation to management and organization, the original plan and its modifications, procedures for development, and formative evaluation. The remainder of the report provides a summative evaluation of the product, and discusses its distribution, installation, future, and some of the critical decisions made during its development. Appendixes describe (1) rules for developing instructional products, (2) a trainer's guide, (3) names of consultants who reviewed the program, (4) the product development cycle, (5) product development stages, and (6) a list of the twenty-one educational products and their developers. A Title I 5 year Visual Literacy Experimental Program was initiated in four kindergarten classes during the 1972-73 academic year. The program was designed to focus on a hierarchy of visual skills and aesthetic experiences involving body language, graphic expressions, and photography, and to correlate these with the objectives of the classroom teacher. Conventional techniques for distinguishing differences and similarities among tastes and tactile impressions, light and dark, open and closed, shape, hue and size, space perception, and rates of movement were greatly enhanced by photographing these experiences and playing them back to the children. The children's verbal complexity index was increased. The incorporation of a tape recorder was complementary to the overall goal of developing vocabulary, articulation, and the appreciation of visual and verbal forms. The program was initiated enthusiastically by the classroom teachers and was relatively easy to carry out. (MC)

In teaching reading, teachers should understand the three categories of language information which all readers draw upon in the processing of information. These three categories are (1) grapho-phonics, the information from the writing system and from the phonological system of oral language; (2) syntactic information, the information from grammatical structures of the language; and (3) semantic information, information related to meaning and concepts represented by the printed word. An effective language experience program is one based on educational, psychological, and linguistic understandings. In the implementation of the program, teachers seek to help children relate the written language code to the spoken language code at the same time as they help children develop strategies for language recognition of the grapho-phonics, semantic, and syntactical information. Communication is foremost in this child-oriented program with reading instruction built on existing language performance, but the instruction does not stop with and is not limited to that performance, as language facility is constantly extended. The more than one hundred approaches to initial reading instruction can be grouped under ten headings: basal reader, phonemics, phonemic reading, "linguistics," total language arts, language-experience, one-to-one sound symbol, individualized reading, early reading, and perceptual discrimination. Although the basal reader approach is used in more than 90 percent of American elementary schools, selected techniques identified with the other approaches can provide alternative and supplementary day-to-day strategies. These borrowed techniques can do much to increase students' motivation to learn to read: imaginative phonics drill (key pictures, phonics charts, every pupil response; "Soundie" stories, personification), "write and see" workbooks, rebus reading, color clues, word shapes, language experiences, and student-owned books. Children enter primary grades at the height of their language learning momentum, and this momentum should be preserved throughout the primary grades. In the last decade there has been a move toward the knocking down of physical walls within the school (nongraded, team teaching, and individualized instruction), but first the psychological walls within the curriculum should be knocked down. This curriculum change may be accomplished by (1) extending elements of the informal kindergarten to the years beyond so that a proper balance is struck between learning on one's own and learning in groups; (2) integrating language arts programs to include writing, reading, content reading, and oral skills; (3) teaching grammar incidentally in connection with the others; (4) using a basal program selectively and applying new technology; and (5) using books written by the children. Encouraging children to select what is to be published or discarded will help to develop criteria of excellence and improve their insight and taste as well as writing. Thus the major components of a language arts program are the children, the teacher, and books. (AW)

Very little has been reported in the literature as to how a child actually learns, but what is known can be put to more effective use in teaching the child to read. The brain has at least five input systems: sight, hearing, touch, taste, and smell. The first of these senses is employed more than the others in reading; however, it is believed that the more input centers used to learn and consequently to store in the memory, the more efficient will be the retrieval of learning for future use. Three other important factors in learning and consequent retrieval are repetition, speed, and quantity of input. A method which makes use of two senses and can supply repetition, speed, and quantity without further burdening the teacher is the use of the tape recorder. By careful manipulation and measurement of the process, the child can rapidly increase his vocabulary without pressure and with pleasure as he listens to and reads from good trade books. This is, of course, to be considered a supplemental teaching device. The teacher must still teach many of the basic skills, such as comprehension and word attack. (DH)

A series of lessons designed to explain what the Initial Teaching Alphabet (i.t.a.) is and to prepare prospective teachers of i.t.a. materials and methods as thoroughly as possible is presented. The eight lessons of the course, for each of which a separate booklet is provided, include the following: (1) The difficulties of traditional orthography and the development of i.t.a. (2) Study of i.t.a. characters, (3)

Study of i.t.a. characters continued, (4) How to spell in i.t.a., (5) Teaching reading with i.t.a., (6) Children's writing and spelling, (7) Setting up i.t.a. in a school, and (8) Remedial reading and i.t.a. Each lesson consists of a series of notes which covers a specific aspect of i.t.a. followed by a short test. The author recommends that the best results will be obtained from the course if teachers work through it in a fairly short time while all the problems discussed are kept fresh in the mind. In addition to the lessons is a separate booklet containing an i.t.a. booklet and various teaching materials for use with i.t.a. (Author/DH)

This Title I pilot program had two broad purposes: (1) to create a growing desire to read and (2) to introduce the skills that are necessary for success and satisfaction in reading. Since the children involved had limited experiential backgrounds, part of the program was geared to providing experiences through the type of classroom setting, the wider school and community environment, and informal reading contacts. Built on the premise that the reading skills on the prereading level are the same as at the highest stage of reading development, the prereading program incorporated the following skills: (1) listening for comprehension of content, (2) auditory discrimination, (3) visual discrimination and development, (4) oral language skills, (5) motor-perceptual development, and (6) sound-symbol correspondence. Emphasis was placed on presenting the reading readiness activities in sequential steps. (DH)

Linguistics as it relates to teaching children is discussed under the headings (1) Linguistics and Language and (2) Reading and Linguistics. In the first part, many interesting facts about our language are pointed out, along with the manner and usefulness of presenting them to children. While linguists may seem to be communicating mainly among themselves in their terminology, much of what they are saying about language development, its function and use, and principles governing it can help to clarify and expand the child's concepts and use of language. In the second part, Reading and Linguistics, reading is defined in terms of what happens as you read—that is, you recognize the symbols, put meaning into them, and react on the basis of past experience. References are made to studies which indicate the close relationship of the language a child uses, his skill with it, and the ease with which he learns to read. In the light of these and other studies, different methods of teaching reading are discussed. Educators are urged to familiarize themselves with evolving ideas about language and to pick and choose materials and methods adapted to applying these ideas. (DH)

Variations between standard and nonstandard dialects are described as they relate to teaching reading. Children, when they enter school, have developed patterns of oral language which affect their abilities to learn to read in proportion to the degree to which their language patterns vary from standard English. Studies have shown that while disadvantaged children have more poorly developed language skills than their middle-class counterparts, they can be given instruction which will raise these skills. Speech should be encouraged without correction of dialectal differences as mistakes by providing stimulating experiences such as field trips, book sharing, films, pictures, etc. Teaching methods such as those used in English as a second language programs may be used profitably in direct language skills instruction. The first stressed the increased use of multisensory materials which have expanded the chances for success of many language-limited children. The second trend focused on the extended use of learning centers to provide them with a place for personalized learning. The third trend emphasized new teaching materials for a language-experience approach focusing on the development of language of high content. References are included. (CL)

Those psychological principles which might aid the teacher in the selection of instructional materials are examined. Since learning is a process which builds sequentially on past learning, beginning reading materials should include words that have personal relevance for the individual child. Meaningful material is learned more quickly than nonsense syllables. Materials related to the child's experiences are more easily comprehended by him. The development of attitudes and interests cannot be measured by reading tests, but do contribute to reading growth. According to Blom, Waite, and Zinet (1968), the content of preprimers, primers, and first-grade readers is remote from the child's life. While he is keenly interested in the world around him, his reading stresses family attachment, younger siblings, and ambiguity in sex roles. Anthropomorphic and animistic thinking which the child is exposed to are thought to be barriers to his intellectual development. Natural sentences of normal length often are understood more easily than short, artificial ones which are remote from the true language experience and normal speech patterns the child is familiar with. Research has indicated that one significant deficiency in the intellectual capabilities of disadvantaged children is a disability in abstract thinking. Although all very young children lack this ability, the environment of the middle class child provides an opportunity so that as this child matures, the ability to think in abstract terms naturally develops. The environment of the disadvantaged child does not provide adequate opportunities for the development of this ability. In response to this need of disadvantaged children, a tutorial program was created with the goal of fostering abstract thinking. The program occupies only some 15 to 20 minutes of a nursery school day; but, as it is tutorial, it is effective because of the one-to-one teacher-pupil ratio. The teaching techniques to be used in this program include (1) techniques for the development of cognitively directed perception, (2) techniques to facilitate the child's use and understanding of language, and (3) techniques to focus the child on developing problem solving skills. The several specific techniques within each of the above three broad topical areas are also delineated in the text of the paper. (WD)

A brief review of the research leads to the conclusion that children learn to read equally well with very different teaching methods and that the truly important factor in creating good or poor reading achievement is the quality of the teacher. Recommendations for preservice, inservice, and graduate training of teachers are given. The great influx of new instructional materials and gadgets can help to revitalize the curriculum and bring about exciting changes in pupil interest and attitudes. However, procedures must be implemented for studying and evaluating these innovations according to predetermined professional standards. New instructional materials, educational television, and computer assisted instruction will allow more attention to be given to individual differences among children. References are given. (RJ)

BASED ON "COLD DATA," SOME CONCLUSIONS ABOUT THE PROBLEMS OF TEACHING READING TO SOCIALLY DISADVANTAGED CHILDREN ARE LISTED AND BRIEFLY DISCUSSED. AMONG THEM ARE THE FOLLOWING--(1) MOST OF THESE CHILDREN ARE RETARDED READERS, BUT THEY LEARN TO READ IN SPITE OF, AND PRIOR TO THE SOLUTION OF, THEIR PSYCHOSOCIAL PROBLEMS. (2) WORD ATTACK SKILLS INCLUDING PHONICS SHOULD BE PART OF THE INSTRUCTION IN REMEDIAL READING PROGRAMS FOR THESE CHILDREN. (3) BECAUSE THEY TEND TO BE VISUAL RATHER THAN AUDITORY READERS, THEY SHOULD BE GIVEN LINGUISTIC-PHONIC INSTRUCTION AS EARLY AS BEGINNING READING PROGRAMS. (4) BECAUSE THESE CHILDREN HAVE DIFFERENT LEARNING STYLES, THE CONTENT, LEVEL, AND RATE OF THEIR LEARNING SHOULD BE ADJUSTED TO MEET THEIR INDIVIDUAL NEEDS, AND (5) TEACHERS DO NOT KNOW ABOUT NEW AND APPROPRIATE MATERIALS AND METHODS FOR TEACHING THESE CHILDREN. THIS PAPER WAS PRESENTED AT THE NEW YORK STATE ENGLISH TEACHERS COUNCIL (KIAMESHA LAKE, NEW YORK, APRIL 22, 1966). (JL)

THE CONTENT OF THE VISUAL-LANGUAGE READING SERIES WHICH CAPITALIZES ON THE COPY MACHINE, OVERHEAD PROJECTOR, AND TRANSPARENCIES IS EXAMINED. THE RATIONALE IS BUILT AROUND THE MINIMIZING OF INITIAL DIFFICULTIES IN LEARNING TO READ, CONTROLLING THE EARLY FORMATION OF DESIRED READING AND WORD-ATTACK HABITS, MEETING A WIDE RANGE OF INDIVIDUAL DIFFERENCES, AND HEIGHTENING THE REACHERS EFFECTIVENESS AND POSITION. INITIAL DIFFICULTIES ARE MINIMIZED BY 1 TO 1 LETTER SOUND RELATIONSHIPS, EXTENSIVE REINFORCEMENT OF THOSE RELATIONSHIPS, INTRODUCTION OF SIGHT WORDS MOST LIKELY TO BE MET IN SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIAL, AND BUILDING OF A MORE EXTENSIVE SIGHT VOCABULARY THAN IS USUAL. DESIRED READING HABITS ARE CONTROLLED BY PROVIDING FOR A STRONG LEFT TO RIGHT ORIENTATION. INDIVIDUAL DIFFERENCES ARE PROVIDED FOR BY A FUSING OF VISUAL, LINGUISTIC, PROGRAMED, AUDITORY, AND CONTEXTUAL METHODS. THE TEACHER SAVES TIME IN MATERIAL PREPARATION. STUDENTS' ATTENTION IS CONTROLLED, AND EYE CONTACT IS MAINTAINED WITH THE CLASS. THIS PAPER WAS TO BE DELIVERED AT THE INTERNATIONAL READING ASSOCIATION (MAY 4, 1967) (BK)

THE NATURE, FUNCTIONS, AND TRANSITIONAL STAGE OF THE INITIAL TEACHING ALPHABET (I.T.A.) IN BEGINNING READING IN THE UNITED STATES ARE DISCUSSED. THE MEDIUM, I.T.A., WAS ORIGINALLY CONCEIVED AS A TRANSITIONAL ALPHABET, OF WHICH SPELLING IS AN INTEGRAL PART. THE MEDIUM IS DESIGNED TO RATIONALIZE THE DECODING PROCESS AND AT THE SAME TIME PROVIDE A FOUNDATION FOR EASY TRANSITION TO TRADITIONAL ORTHOGRAPHY (T.O.). METHODS FOR USING I.T.A. IN TEACHING READING ARE THE SAME AS THOSE USED WITH T.O. IN DEVELOPING MATERIALS. OPTIONS ARE TO TRANSLATE EXISTENT T.O., TO PRODUCE NEW MATERIALS, OR TO DEVELOP MATERIALS ATTEMPTING TO UTILIZE THE ADVANTAGES OF THE NEW MEDIUM. THE NEW MATERIALS DEvised BY TANYZER AND MAZURKIEWICZ CONTAIN DISCRETE FEATURES WHICH DIFFERENTIATE THEM FROM TYPICAL BASAL READERS. INITIAL READING AND WRITING ACTIVITIES, DEVELOPING AND EXTENDING SKILLS, AND TRANSITION IN READING, WRITING, AND SPELLING ARE DISCUSSED. REFERENCES ARE INCLUDED. (BK)

THIS UNIT GUIDE WAS DESIGNED FOR DEMONSTRATING TO THE PREREADER THAT WRITING IS A CODE FOR SPEECH AND THAT LETTERS ARE SYMBOLS FOR SOUNDS MADE IN SPEECH. IT WAS DEVELOPED AS A PREREADING UNIT UNDER "PROJECT LITERACY," A BASIC RESEARCH AND CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM IN AREAS OF EDUCATION RELEVANT TO THE ACQUISITION OF LITERACY SKILLS. THE LESSONS OF THE UNIT WERE DEVELOPED IN PROGRESSIVE SEQUENCES FOR ALLOWING THE CHILD TO FORM CONCEPTS OF A VARIETY OF COMMUNICATION MODES. IT WAS ANTICIPATED THAT THE PARTICIPATING CHILD WOULD DEVELOP UNDERSTANDINGS OF (1) THE ARBITRARY NATURE OF WRITTEN LANGUAGE, (2) THE IMPORTANCE OF SENTENCE ORDERING TO MEANING, (3) THE LEFT-RIGHT ORIENTATION USED IN READING THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, AND (4) THE NECESSITY FOR CORRECTLY POSITIONING LETTERS. THE UNIT WAS DESIGNED FOR USE IN THE SECOND SEMESTER OF KINDERGARTEN OR IN THE FIRST SEMESTER OF GRADE 1. (JH)

A NEW CURRICULUM OF CODING GAMES WAS DEVELOPED FOR BEGINNING READERS. THE CURRICULUM'S CONTENT EMPHASIZED TEACHING THE CHILD TO DECODE LETTERS INTO SOUNDS THAT REPRESENT LANGUAGE. THE PURPOSE WAS TO SHOW THE CHILD THE REASONABLENESS OF THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN WRITING AND SPEECH. THE CODING GAMES BEGAN WITH AN EMPHASIS ON LANGUAGE AND THE VARIOUS CODES THAT CAN BE USED TO STAND FOR LANGUAGE. PICTURES AND PICTURE-SYMBOLS WERE USED TO INTRODUCE WRITTEN CODES. THE GAMES WERE COMPLETED WITH AN INTRODUCTION TO THE USE OF ALPHABETIC CODE (TO SUPPLEMENT ABILITY TO COMMUNICATE WITH SIMPLE WRITTEN SYMBOLS). THE CURRICULUM WAS TRIED OUT IN TWO KINDERGARTEN CLASSES. THE RESULTS ACHIEVED BY USE OF THIS CURRICULUM WERE EVALUATED BY INTERVIEWS WITH INDIVIDUAL CHILDREN. ALTHOUGH ONLY ONE CHILD KNEW A LETTER STANDS FOR A SOUND, THE CHILDREN UNDERSTOOD THAT CODES STAND FOR LANGUAGE AND COULD HANDLE CODES EFFECTIVELY. FOLLOWUP RECOMMENDATIONS, AS WELL AS AN OUTLINE OF THE CURRICULUM ITSELF, WERE PRESENTED IN THE REPORT. THE CURRICULUM WAS DEVELOPED AS PART OF "PROJECT LITERACY," A COMPREHENSIVE RESEARCH PROGRAM IN AREAS OF EDUCATION RELEVANT TO THE ACQUISITION OF READING AND WRITING SKILLS. (JH)

PHONICS INSTRUCTION IS A BASIC SUBJECT IN THE PRIMARY SCHOOL CURRICULUM. THE HARVARD-BOSTON SUMMER PROGRAM BEGINS WITH A DIAGNOSTIC TEST TO DETERMINE JUST WHAT SKILLS SHOULD BE TAUGHT. THE PROGRAM IS BASED ON THE CONCEPT THAT PHONICS IS THE SPOKEN WORD, THUS IT IS SUGGESTED THAT A LITERARY APPROACH BE USED IN WHICH THERE ARE A VARIETY OF WRITING AND ORAL ACTIVITIES. THE BASIC COMMON SOUND FOR SINGLE LETTERS SHOULD BE TAUGHT FIRST, THEN SKILLS SHOULD BE TAUGHT AS NEEDED. CONSONANT LETTERS CAN BE TAUGHT FOR AUDITORY CONTRAST. VOWEL SOUNDS CAN BE TAUGHT IN PAIRS OR GROUPS FOR CONTRAST. BLEND COMBINATIONS, PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES, SYLLABIFICATION, AND BASIC SPELLING RULES CAN BE TAUGHT AS THEY BECOME EVIDENT IN FOLKLORE

TALES, AND AS THEY ARE EXPRESSED IN SUCH ACTIVITIES AS RECITATION, SINGING, DRAWING, DISCUSSION, AND THE CHILD'S CONSTRUCTIVE USE OF BASIC SOUND-LETTER RELATIONSHIPS.

THE EXPERIENTIALLY POOR CHILD WHO HAS HEARD LITTLE ADULT CONVERSATION DIRECTED AT AND FOR HIM IS ILL-PREPARED FOR BEGINNING READING. HIS LEARNING ACTIVITIES SHOULD BE PLANNED TO INCLUDE EXPERIENCE. REAL AND/OR VICARIOUS. BEFORE HE IS INVOLVED WITH THE SYMBOLIC REPRESENTATION OF THE SPOKEN OR WRITTEN WORD. THE CHILD SHOULD HAVE DEVELOPED STRONG LISTENING HABITS AND HAVE GAINED THE ABILITY TO HEAR GROSS AND FINE LIKENESSES AND DIFFERENCES. HE SHOULD HAVE ALSO DEVELOPED VISUAL ACUITY TO THE POINT OF SEEING GROSS AND FINE LIKENESSES AND DIFFERENCES. A PROGRAM COMPENSATING THE EXPERIENTIALLY POOR CHILD SHOULD PROVIDE AUDITORY AND VISUAL READINESS, STRESSING BEGINNING SOUNDS AND USING OBJECTS AND PICTURES. BY THE END OF THE PROGRAM (THE END OF THE KINDERGARTEN YEAR), THE CHILD SHOULD BE FAMILIAR WITH THE SOUNDS OF THE INITIAL CONSONANTS AND SHOULD RECOGNIZE THE LETTER NAMES BELONGING TO THEM. AT NO TIME SHOULD ISOLATED INITIAL CONSONANTS BE TAUGHT. THE SOUND SHOULD BE ATTACHED TO A SPOKEN WORD. INSTRUCTIONS SHOULD BEGIN WITH THE EASIEST SOUND FOR A CHILD TO PRODUCE, "M." FROM THERE, INSTRUCTION SHOULD PROCEED TO THE EXPLOSIVE, "P." "B." "T." "D." AND THEN TO OTHER CONSONANTS. TEACHING THE "M" SOUND SHOULD BEGIN WITH HAVING THE CHILDREN WATCH THE TEACHER FORM "M" WITH HER LIPS HOLDING UP AN OBJECT STARTING WITH "M." THE CHILDREN WOULD THEN REPEAT HER PROCEDURE WHILE AT THE SAME TIME HOLDING UP THE OBJECT SHE SHOWED THEM. THE PROCESS SHOULD THEN BE REPEATED USING PICTURES. THE USE OF THE OPAQUE PROJECTOR SEEMS TO BE AN EFFECTIVE AID FOR DEVELOPING GOOD VISUAL DISCRIMINATION. LANGUAGE AWARENESS AND READING SKILLS IN IMAGERY FORMATION, SPEED, PHRASING, INTONATION AND EYE MOVEMENT. IT SHOULD BE PART OF A WELL-ROUNDED PROGRAM INCLUDING THE RECOGNIZED TECHNIQUES FOR TEACHING CULTURALLY DISADVANTAGED CHILDREN. READING MATERIAL USED IN THE PROJECTOR IS USUALLY READ BY EITHER THE TEACHER (USING A MARKER FOR CHILDREN TO FOLLOW) OR THE GROUP IN CHORUS. WITH THIS TYPE

OF SUPPORT THE CHILDREN ARE NOT AFRAID TO TRY, AND THE VISUAL AND AUDITORY ELEMENTS ARE CONTINUALLY REINFORCING EACH OTHER. MANY USES FOR THE PROJECTOR ARE LISTED FOR KINDERGARTEN, FIRST AND SECOND GRADE. FLASH CARDS CAN BE USED TO DEVELOP SPEED, AND THE USE OF MARKERS OR POINTERS IS BENEFICIAL. YOUNG CHILDREN'S EYES ARE USUALLY FAR-SIGHTED WHEN THEY ARE MATURING, THEREFORE, THE USE OF THE ENLARGED IMAGE ON A SCREEN WOULD HELP FIRST GRADERS OVERCOME THIS HANDICAP. THE DARKENED ROOM REDUCES DIVERTING STIMULATION. FOR THE CULTURALLY DEPRIVED, THE PROJECTOR CAN ALSO PROVIDE REMEDIATION FOR THEIR LACK OF VISUAL EXPERIENCES. OTHER ADVANTAGES OF THIS TECHNIQUE ARE THAT IT RELIEVES PRESSURE ON SLOWER READERS, IT ALLOWS EXPOSURE TO MANY BOOKS SINCE ONLY ONE OF A KIND IS NEEDED, AND IT IS FLEXIBLE AND CAN BE USED IN OTHER CURRICULUM AREAS. ABOVE ALL, CHILDREN RESPOND TO AND ENJOY THIS TECHNIQUE. IT IS CLEARLY "NOT" A METHOD IN ITSELF, BUT SHOULD BE USED AS A SUPPLEMENT. ITS EFFECTIVENESS WILL STILL DEPEND ON THE TEACHER AND HER PROGRAM. THE RESULTS FROM THE USE OF THE PROJECTOR HAVE BEEN ENCOURAGING. IN ALL INSTANCES THE EXPERIMENTAL GROUP'S PERFORMANCE ON STANDARDIZED READING TESTS ADMINISTERED AFTER A YEAR OF ITS USE WAS SIGNIFICANTLY HIGHER THAN THE CONTROL GROUP'S.

The Degrees of Reading Power Test was developed to address some existing problems in testing comprehension. The test design reflects the need to consider problems of passage dependency, difficulty of questions, tests for continuous text, and sensitivity to gains. It emphasizes a set of response options controlled for familiarity, a test that is informationally adequate to determine the best choice, and that only one answer is correct. It employs a structural cloze format. A language-centered test such as this one encourages students to apply an array of language skills. Some possible instructional techniques that result from the introduction of a meaning-based testing instrument might include a language-centered curriculum using changes in word order; the addition of words, phrases, and clauses; and the use of discourse markers. Vocabulary development should include strategies with synonyms, classifications, connotative and denotative meanings, and multiple meanings. Instruction should be directed to such language cue systems as semantic meanings of words; word affixes influencing meaning and function; phrase and clause structures; identification of antecedents of pronouns, proverbs, and anaphora; and structures in paragraphs and structures modifying sentence, paragraph, and section meanings. Intended to provide educators with units that will help them create student enthusiasm for reading, reinforce the teaching of reading skills, and interrelate the language arts with other areas of the curriculum, this book contains guides to 27 works of children's fiction. The guides are arranged in order of increasing difficulty and cover ten picture books, four "transitional" novels, and thirteen longer novels. Each guide opens with a brief plot summary, including a list of themes emphasized in the book. Next, a brief appraisal of the book's appeal to children, its strengths, and other relevant information is presented. The problems children might have in reading the book are discussed in a section of reading considerations, and a list of initiating activities offers suggestions for ways to introduce children to the book. Each guide also contains a list of discussion questions, suggestions for activities in art and media, creative dramatics, and composing, and a list of instructional resources. (FL)

Informal reading models, although more like metaphors than truly scientific models, may be just as useful in making instructional decisions as formal models are in physical science. Models are a vital part of the instructional process even when teachers are not consciously aware of their presence. Three classes of reading models are bottom-up models, which assume that the translation from print to meaning begins with the print; top-down models, which assume that the translation process begins in the mind of the reader with an hypothesis or guess about meaning; and interactive models, which assume that the two types of processing are interactive. Components that are included in most models of reading are attention and capacity, memory, sensory capabilities, and perception, while common exclusions from models are intelligence, motivation, and instructional setting. Alternative, and sometimes opposing, decisions derive from alternative models in the areas of initial program emphasis, reading subskills, skill sequence, integration of reading activities, amount and type of practice, attention to oral reading errors, selection of reading materials, and diagnosis and remediation of reading difficulties. Teachers should try to articulate and make explicit whatever implicit models seem to guide their teaching behavior. (GW)

A review of the research on study techniques indicates that reading and generating questions from the material is an effective technique for ensuring better comprehension. Familiarity with a model of studying that divides studying into prereading, reading, and postreading provides one explanation for this effectiveness. In prereading, students clarify the purposes related to the study session. During reading, they go through a series of instructional episodes that include reading, a response-demand event, student response, feedback, and decisions on what to do next. In postreading, students employ strategies to enrich learning. The self-questioning technique provides guidelines for how to divide the reading material into small units, helps create a non-trivial response-demand event, and encourages students to test themselves on how well they know the material. Positive comments from students indicate that the technique is a guide, distinguishes the relevant from the trivial, and facilitates memory. Negative comments are that it is too time-consuming, the overall picture is sometimes lost, and students learn more than they need to know. Nevertheless, the technique can be a supporting activity used in a number of ways or the questions can be seen as an index to students' reading comprehension. (TJ)

Some children lack the framework of prior experience necessary for the comprehension and enjoyment of fanciful literature. Fanciful literature, though grounded in reality, deals not only with what is, but also with what could be or might have been. Since readers actively construct meaning by relating what they read to their conceptual systems, certain elements of fanciful novels may cause frustration. First, because the setting is often the author's invention, readers must cope with the author's careful descriptions of it and must often create a mental map of a new country. Readers must also deal with a history of a people that does not exist, organizing many names and events in their minds. Language and style can also cause confusion, since fanciful works may include archaic language, unusual structure, and allegorical plots, and are in many cases the works of British authors. Finally, the need to cope with the ambiguity of fantasy may be burdensome to readers. In anticipation of these difficulties, teachers should read fanciful works aloud and help children to deal with the ambiguities involved, thus developing a prereading framework of experience. (The paper cites specific fanciful novels and includes a list of classroom activities to develop creativity.) (GW)

Children learning to read are often exposed to "stories" which are really little more than lists of sentences. A good story has at least continuity and conflict which may be analyzed in two ways: story grammar (analysis of setting and plot) and plans and beliefs (analysis of the plans and beliefs of the characters, including the reader's understanding of the events of the story). Using the story "The Fox and the Rooster" to illustrate these two methods of text analysis, we find that story grammar provides a summary of events but ignores the internal structure of the plans and the beliefs of the characters concerning actions which occur. A plans and beliefs analysis includes an analysis of the reader because individuals have different beliefs and expectations (for example, about foxes, roosters, dogs, and stories). Sometimes the writer's understanding and the reader's understanding are different, and "misunderstanding" of the story results. This appears as a reader comprehension problem but may be a problem of point of view about social roles and behavior as discovered through a plans and beliefs analysis. (TJ)

Three basal reading series are compared and descriptions are given of the DISTAR reading and language programs, objective-based reading programs, the language experience approach, and a psycholinguistic view of reading. The report describes each program according to five features of comprehension instruction: the text involved, skill emphasis, instructional procedures, skills taught, and requirements for skill mastery. Clear differences in emphasis appear among the reading programs, as reflected in the number of exercises and questions devoted to various skills. Although the teaching procedures—primarily questioning—are similar, only DISTAR stresses the mastery of comprehension skills and specified error correction procedures. (MA1)

Successful reading is a complex, interactive process in which the reader's experience and information are as important to comprehension as the content of the printed page. This article describes several reading processes, discusses the problems involved for the beginning reader, and indicates some implications for reading instruction. Five processes involved in reading comprehension are considered: decoding, syntactic structure, the differences between spoken and written language, semantics, and textual organization. Stressing the inherent difficulties in teaching each of these processes to beginning readers, the article urges further research on how primary grade readers relate personal experience to the reading process. After reviewing the evidence that boys in American elementary schools are far more likely than girls to have serious reading problems, this report considers two lines of investigation into this discrepancy. The first line of investigation is based on the hypothesis that the predominance of female teachers in elementary schools is responsible for boys' poorer reading performances; the second is based on the hypothesis that the material children read in school is unappealing and that boys would read as well as girls if they were given more interesting material. The author concludes that, despite the plausibility of the hypothesis that boys might benefit from having male teachers, this assumption is not supported by the data. The research on high-interest reading materials, however, suggests that the content of what students read may have an impact on boys' reading performance. (AA)

This study discusses six specific strategies that teachers can use to improve elementary students' reading comprehension. First, teach the students to use context clues as one vital part of the decoding process, in order to improve comprehension. Second, increase students' depth of comprehension by triggering discussion of materials they have read with questions which call for them to make inferences from—and evaluations of—that material. Third, provide planned exercises in listening over a sustained period of time. Fourth, provide cloze exercises and discuss with students who are weak achievers the logic behind the choices of words that were made to fill in the blanks. Fifth, have students make mental images as they read. Sixth, provide planned instructional activities which help students understand connectives and how they influence meaning. (MB)

To help preservice and inservice social studies teachers develop systematic ways of integrating skills and content, this manual offers a model and simple instructional exercises for the diagnostic teaching of how to investigate a cartoon. Designed mainly for use with children in grades 4-6, the material is adaptable for use at other grade levels. The document, Part 1 of three installments of which the balance will be published at a later date, is in loose-leaf format to allow for future inclusion of Parts 2 and 3. Part 1 focuses on investigating visual devices. A model consisting of the following three major components is presented: Pre-Instructional Exercises, Diagnosis and Prescription, and Post-Instructional Exercises. Pre-Instructional Exercises include a series of questions for five levels of investigation, a variety of question styles, allowances for pupils whose learning styles are predominantly visual-oral, a systematic way of assessing the level at which the pupil is having difficulty, and suggestions for the selection and use of visuals. The Diagnosis and Prescription component consists of suggested activities for students experiencing difficulty in operating at certain levels of investigation. Post-Instructional Exercises feature a systematic reassessment of skills developed using a different visual. Adapting this model, a teacher can develop similar exercises using other kinds of visuals such as pictures, slides, graphs, tables, maps, and time lines. (Author/JR)

The goal of this project was to develop a sequential program for the development of critical thinking skills that could be extended to all the elementary schools in the school district. The major objectives were: (1) to enhance teachers' ability to think critically, practice in their classrooms teaching strategies to develop pupils' thinking, and develop and implement a critical thinking program; and (2) to develop overt manifestations of critical thinking in pupils attending classes taught by teachers trained in the use of critical thinking and to help students score higher on tests measuring critical thinking skills than children in a comparison class where these skills were not stressed. The teachers of grades K-5 in the project school, the principal, and the staff development teacher received inservice training in procedures for developing children's thinking skills. The procedures included: the Hilda Taba Teaching Strategies program, the Building and Applying Strategies for Initial Cognitive Skills program, the teaching of critical reading skills, analyzing levels of thinking, and organizing for instruction. An analysis of evaluation data indicated that the children in the project school tended to make greater gains than the children in the comparison school. The teachers also asked more open questions and there was more classroom interaction exhibited. (WR)

As a guide for in-depth study of "Island of the Blue Dolphins" by sixth-graders who have completed the basal reader, this document focuses on ways of enabling each child to find satisfaction and enjoyment in the novel; to develop a greater interest in literature; to gain an understanding of plot development in a story; to realize what the mood, setting, and background contribute to the novel; to become aware of the ways in which an author develops characterization in a story; and to appreciate the specific writing techniques of an author. Material is organized under seven units for group discussions—the first, an introduction to the book; the next five, discussions of groups of chapters as they are read; and the last, an appraisal of the novel as a whole. Specific questions and discussion guidelines are provided for each meeting as well as suggestions for factors to be considered while reading the next chapters. (JM)

An implicit contract between author and reader during discourse production and comprehension that defines the liberties each may take in relation to the text is proposed in this report. Discussed in the report are the writer's responsibilities in such a contract—to be sincere, informative, relevant, and clear and to establish points of contact between the communication and the reader's experience. Also discussed are the reader's responsibilities, including the selection of a fitting text that generates meanings that do not distort the author's message, bringing to the text conceptualizations that support a reasonable interpretation of the text rather than result in an abandonment of the author's message, employing strategies that are sensitive to the purposes of the text, responding to the text as it exists in context rather than apart from it, and recognizing that a text represents an author's viewpoint. It is recommended that teachers use the notion of "contract" as a frame from which to explore and encourage effective communication. Appended to the report is a linguist's response to the idea of "contract" that supports adding correct grammar usage and discourse fluency to the writer's list of responsibilities, and a teacher's view that exploring a variety of responses to text material works only with literature or creative writing texts and not with expository writing where students need to learn to restrict their interpretations. Three characteristics of school writing activities that may make it difficult for students to learn to write with skill and enthusiasm are identified in this paper. They are: the solitary nature of most writing tasks, a lopsided emphasis on low-level details of text such as grammar and spelling, and the isolation of writing from reading in the classroom. The paper describes a set of educational devices that attempt to change these aspects of writing instruction: the Story Maker, based on the notion of story trees with which children compose stories by making choices among story segments; and the Pre-Fab Story Maker and the Story Maker Maker, which allow children more creative input into the story-making process. These three tools are described both as suggestions to teachers for innovative classroom language activities and as concrete examples of the implications of the theoretical framework developed in the paper. Reaction to the Story Maker from a teacher's perspective and the author's response to that reaction are included. (Author/FL)

Some of the aspects of the author/reader relationship that make communication possible are discussed in this paper. The paper begins by describing the most important components of that relationship. Next, through an analysis of two readings of one of Aesop's fables, it illustrates the way the author and the reader must depend on these components. It then focuses on three kinds of knowledge that the author and reader must use for successful communication to take place: conceptual knowledge, social knowledge, and story knowledge. Finally, it discusses implications of this work for reading education. (FL)

The intent of this publication is to provide an opportunity for educators to consider reading comprehension as dependent, at least in part, on specific features of written language. Chapter 1 discusses a theoretical framework for thinking, problem solving, and reading comprehension. Chapter 2 deals with teaching word-level comprehension, presenting a nine-level taxonomy of word-level relationships and techniques for teaching words at each level. Chapter 3 offers ideas about sentence comprehension for reading teachers to consider. Chapter 4 deals with the comprehension of passages by asking readers to consider three questions and their possible answers—"Comprehension of what, for what purpose, and how much is required?" (RL)

This booklet provides teachers with models for interactive reading activities that reflect an awareness of comprehension as a complex mental and linguistic process rather than as a hierarchy of mechanically applied subskills. The instructional strategies represent a combination of insights presented in recent research with those gained through practical classroom experience. The strategies are: open-ended and student-generated questioning to sharpen focus; using key words as semantic, syntactical, and relational cues; using the cloze procedure in predicting and confirming relationships among cues; categorizing as a process for organizing information; modeling concept attainment; and summarizing and paraphrasing. Many of the model activities stress oral and written activities such as retelling, summarizing, condensing, and expanding on meanings that help students to organize and verbalize understandings gained through active processing. Instruction that promotes the awareness and use of contextual aids in reading may be achieved by use of the cloze procedure in the classroom; training with the cloze procedure helps to focus the attention of the student on the conceptual aspect of reading rather than on the perceptual, and may be used from the primary grades through college. This paper reviews the literature from 1953 to 1974 on the use of the cloze procedure as an instructional device. Recommendations for the use of the cloze device in instruction include the following: begin with a two-item multiple-choice format in material that is at or below the student's independent reading level; instruct students to read silently the entire cloze passage; discuss progress; do not demand the exact word, but accept close guesses and synonyms; use a self-checking format; have students make comparison of cloze passages with the original passage; and make use of systematic, organized, long term instruction. (DF)

Teachers calling on students to answer questions in class regarding homework assignments and general knowledge frequently invoke the Drama Triangle (Karpman, 1968). Many of these questions automatically put the teacher in the Persecutor or Rescuer role and students in the Victim role. Retaliatory transactions by students often put the teacher in the Victim role and students in the Persecutor role. The players switch about the Drama Triangle as the games are played. One way to end the game-playing involves the Classroom De-Gamer. This is a teacher-invented device which randomizes the question-and-answer process. The device consists of a "spinner" which lands on a number from 1-30. Students have been preassigned corresponding numbers, and the person on whose number the pointer lands must answer the question. All questions can be presented in advance if desired. The device has proved highly successful in the classes of its teacher/inventor. (Author/BP)

The models of small-group lessons provided in this booklet were developed by the New York City Board of Education, under the Elementary Secondary Education Act (ESEA) Title I, to act as guides from which the teacher can generate materials on reading comprehension. Chapters deal with the instruction of such comprehension skills as utilizing contextual clues for vocabulary meaning, locating specific information, gleaming the main idea from materials, and making inferences from reading.

Each chapter is divided into a discussion of "process," a general outline of the skill involved; techniques for teaching; and sample teaching activities. Appendixes include a skill/grade-level chart, a class profile sheet, and a mini-taxonomy of comprehension and vocabulary skills. (KS)

This self-instructive workbook focuses upon teacher-initiated questioning strategies and the relationship of the strategies to students' thinking. It utilizes written materials, audiotapes, videotapes, and students in the classroom. The goals of the workbook are to enable the teacher to (1) identify and classify types of questions in terms of their potential effect on students' thinking; (2) use each type of question strategically so as to facilitate the development of students' thinking processes; and (3) assess themselves in terms of knowledge and ability related to questioning strategies. The workbook is supplemented by a program and support system which includes instruction, experiences for practice, and individual conferences. The guide defines types of teacher-initiated questions and types of written questions and explains how to make a statistical profile of scored questions. It also discusses the classification of questions from a transcript and questions from an audiotape. In addition, it helps the teacher in assessing questioning strategies, in relating types of questions to instructional goals, in sequencing questions strategically, and in matching types of questions to learning processes. It also provides a review of research on the use of questions in instruction and a bibliography. (BD)

This paper discusses questioning patterns that can be used by teachers to facilitate cognitive development in reading instruction. The questioning patterns suggested are intended to include the kinds of questions used on worksheets, tests, and in class projects. The opinions of various authors who stress the importance of teacher questioning patterns are reviewed. Among these authorities are Harris and Smith, who emphasize the importance of teacher questioning in developing critical thinking; Guszak, who indicates that teachers overemphasize recall thinking; and Taba, who indicates that teachers give little thought to the classroom questions they ask and the sequencing of such questions in instruction. A brief description of each of the six levels of thinking in the cognitive domain are listed—knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, and evaluation. Also included is a reading passage with sample questions and representative answers. (WR)

This paper presents procedures and techniques for teaching comprehension skills to middle school students. Comprehension is described in terms of four skill areas: word meaning, structure, literal and inferential thinking, and critical reading. To help students think as they read, a strategy is proposed which involves a logical sequencing of all the skills and the use of directed assistance techniques. The strategy discussed utilizes a spiraling hierarchy in which the concept of prerequisites is employed. Directed assistance consists of analyzing the thinking task that is to be taught and actively guiding the student's attention to the crucial elements of the task through the use of modeling and highlighting techniques. Two main points are stressed in this essay: (1) Reading literature aloud to students is not only educationally sound, but for many youngsters, necessary; and (2) In order to help his students become critical listeners of the literature that is read to them, a teacher must build bridges between the youngsters' experience and that in the literature. Three types of spoken language are listed: reading aloud, monologue, and real conversation. The differences between the first two and conversation include: (1) The intonation patterns of spoken prose are highly standardized; those of conversation are not; (2) Spoken prose is even in tempo; conversation is not; and (3) The pauses of spoken prose are closely related to the grammatical structure of these sentences; in conversation, they are frequently unpredictable. To attune his ear, a student not only needs to hear his teachers read aloud a great deal, he also needs occasional practice himself. Listening comprehension in slow-learning children far exceeds reading comprehension for the following reasons: the speaking voice brings to interpretation pitch, stress, pause, rhythm, tone-audible clues to meaning which slow youngsters are unable to infer from print alone. It is suggested that television and film be used more often than they are to help slow learners, as these media combine visual and auditory clues to meaning. (CK)

STATUS STUDIES OF THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN VOCABULARY SIZE AND THE EXTENT OF READING SUPPORT THE BELIEF THAT MORE AVID READERS HAVE RICHER VOCABULARIES. HOWEVER, STUDIES OF DIRECT EFFORTS TO INCREASE VOCABULARY THROUGH WIDE READING ALONE HAVE NOT YIELDED SATISFACTORY RESULTS. HENCE, WIDE READING SHOULD BE COMBINED WITH DIRECT AND INDIRECT

APPROACHES IS RECOMMENDED FOR A COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM IN VOCABULARY DEVELOPMENT. SUGGESTED GUIDELINES EMPHASIZE THE USE OF INDIVIDUAL WEAKNESSES IN DETERMINING THE DEGREE OF INVOLVEMENT IN VOCABULARY STUDY, THE STUDY OF WORDS IN CONTEXT, THE STUDY OF WORKING RATHER THAN ESOTERIC VOCABULARIES, AND THE APPLICATION OF WORD LEARNING. THE USE OF CONTEXTUAL AND STRUCTURAL CLUES, THE STUDY OF WORD ORIGINS AND MULTIPLE MEANINGS, THE STUDY OF WORD LISTS IN RELATION TO STUDENTS' ACTIVITIES, AND THE USE OF PROGRAMED MATERIALS ARE RECOMMENDED TO HELP STUDENTS BROADEN AND EXTEND THEIR VOCABULARIES. The reading habits by which students formulate a critical analysis of a literary work should focus attention on the choices that a writer makes when putting words on paper. These choices include sound, diction, language, imagery, organization, metaphors, sentence structure, transitions, allusions, and patterns. Discussing these choices does not exclude the consideration of ideas; the understanding of a writer's careful language choices makes ideas clear for the readers. Investing students' time in attending to an author's language usage is more profitable than spending time to indulge opinions of what students like and do not like. For students who have not learned to see the craft that is on the page, this type of analysis is more practical than a lecture about the specific literary period or the author's personal life at the time the literary work was created. It gives students a consistent set of questions that makes them aware of language, the writer's tool. When students learn to analyze the language of the text as the writer's craft, they have not only an appreciation of the complexities and beauties of the language, but also a better understanding of what the writer said. They have learned to see more than reflections of themselves and they have sharpened their literary tastes with a specific analytical method. (RL)

The dimensions of critical thinking and reading encompass the levels of analysis, reaction, evaluation, and growth in self-image. Historically, the four major views of critical reading have seen it as a cognitive process, a way of detecting propaganda devices, a way of examining distorted and dishonest use of language, and a way of applying the principles of logic to reading. The skills in developing critical reading can be divided into four categories: the application of the principles of logic to language, the evaluation of the tone of language, problem solving, and the development of insight in evaluating language. Some activities that represent the main categories of critical reading include: analyzing and evaluating name calling as a device that influences thinking; analyzing and evaluating the denotations and connotations of words; selecting alternative courses of action and analyzing the consequences of them; and evaluating ways in which reading influences the attitudes, concepts, and behavior of the reader. University and college reading improvement teachers need a repertoire of techniques designed to guide carefully students' growth in developing independent comprehension strategies. Such strategies should avoid use of prepackaged commercial kits and collections of articles (content-simulated materials) and should stress the application by students of comprehension strategies directly to the narrative and expository materials that they are required to use in their academic course work. This approach facilitates transfer of instruction and prevents assumptive teaching often found in college reading improvement programs. One strategy for guiding growth in comprehension is the guided writing procedure, which is designed to encourage active comprehension and recall of content area material through a writing and discussion exercise. A second strategy is a brainstorming activity in developing content area vocabulary that emphasizes the active learning and retention of technical vocabulary from a content area unit. (Author/TJ)

Literature can be used in a writing course if the teacher carefully chooses the literature to be studied, if the writing assignments are sequenced so that they make some kind of developmental sense, and if the writing activity is used to clarify student thinking about the literature. Attention to these three elements was essential to the success of a six-week summer course in basic writing, where the teachers grounded all writing activities in responses to literature. Using the workshop approach, they developed student writing in stages that emphasized levels of generality, subordination, and the basis of rhetorical (oral and written) discourse in probabilities. These concepts were developed by interpreting literature while coincidentally applying fundamentals of F. Christensen's rhetoric, the "TRI" pattern (topic, restriction, illustration), and Aristotle's treatment of the enthymeme. Attention to the enthymeme especially reaffirmed the teachers' resolve that teaching students how to write about a story helps them to learn how to think, how to interpret information, and how to transform external realities into internal, intellectual constructs. Visual literacy—an increasingly important skill that has lately been added to the wide range of skills that reading/English teachers are expected to teach can be coupled with lessons in literary appreciation through the medium of the adolescent novel. Since students participate in a great deal of television viewing, it is as important for them to learn critical viewing skills as it is for them to learn critical reading skills. Teachers can mesh lessons in literary appreciation and visual literacy through examining how authors create characters, actions, and descriptions. As has been illustrated by author Richard Peck, students can examine adolescent novels in the light of considerations that might be made in filming them. In novels such as those of Paul Zindel, chapters can be analyzed in terms of camera shots, images, and scenes. Filmed versions of novels can be compared with students' prior envisioning of filmed versions of those books. Teachers can also help students to explore the film technique of montage and to consider such topics as the cinematic qualities of the dialogue and opening scenes of Zindel's novels. (GT)

Three articles are presented which concern college reading instruction. Karen Pelz describes an intensive approach to teaching reading and writing which entails: (1) special classes for underprepared students; (2) standard administration of freshman reading tests; (3) teaching reading and writing together; (4) using the same instructor to teach Basic English and Analytical Reading employing a related syllabus and complementary materials; (5) gearing the instructional approach to the students' actual level rather than to an expected level; (6) coordination with related student services; and (7) emphasizing the value of reading and writing. In another article, Michael Kahn provides suggestions for effective notetaking, which outline student and teacher responsibilities, use of abbreviations and short hand notation, paraphrasing, and determining the main idea and supporting details from lectures and texts. In the third paper, Robert C. Gerace discusses the use of videotapes in the improvement of comprehension. The videotape, "The Fine Art of Seeing," and related materials which introduce in layman's terms the techniques employed by artists in the creation of a painting, are examined as aids in fostering motivation and achievement in humanities courses. Gerace considers the usefulness of relying upon the text for content and the tape for appreciation of technique. (MB)

Intended for use every day for a semester, this secondary seminar handbook provides a schedule, lesson plans, materials for classroom distribution, and a bibliography for a course designed to teach critical reading and basic writing skills through an in-depth study of Ernest Hemingway. Because the course requires that students write seven position papers that combine biographical information about Hemingway with analyses of individual examples of his writing, the handbook outlines the procedures involved in writing each paper and offers models that can be used as examples for the students in writing their own papers. The handbook also describes the process for "Defense Day," an activity that is integral to the seminar, and suggests ways that the teaching methods might be adapted to other authors and their works. Among the items included in the appendixes are an outline of the life and times of Ernest Hemingway and seven anecdotes from Hemingway biographies. (MA1)

To encourage reluctant readers, teachers can use a technique called "read a book in an hour." Students are assigned individual chapters of a paperback novel to read silently. After they have finished reading, they retell the significant chapter events, state the conflicts, and identify the characters as the teacher records the information on the chalkboard. A sentence combining activity can be used following a "read a book in an hour" session. The teacher writes student contributions in short, simple sentences on the board and then asks students to combine the sentences either working alone or in small groups. Instruction in comprehension also can be enhanced by use of the "read a book in an hour" technique. Organizational patterns used by authors such as cause and effect, comparison and contrast, time order, and simple listing, can be recognized by students as they analyze a story. Activities which might teach these elements are numerous. "Read a book in an hour," then, can be a valuable technique by itself for encouraging reluctant readers or it can be combined with other exercises to teach several language arts skills. (TJ)

This paper discusses some of the procedures for assessing specific content in books, suggests some ideas for activities which adolescents could select to demonstrate that they can recognize and judge certain elements in books, and lists several cautions which need to be considered when analyzing content. The first procedure in a content analysis might be to ask the adolescent reader to become acquainted with the beginning of the story and to meet the main character or characters. The second step for a content analyst is to recognize and judge setting. There are six key words which may help the reader recognize setting: social, economic, religious, physical, political and psychological. The third step for the content analyst might be to recognize and judge the plot. The next steps are to compare and contrast the personality characteristics of the main characters at the beginning and at the end of the selection and to recognize and judge the theme in realistic fiction. Teachers are warned that content analysis procedures should be used as guides and encouraged to allow the adolescent reader to be creative in attaining the general spirit of these procedures. (LL)

Suggestions are given for over 50 activities which secondary students at many levels can use with fiction or non-fiction to provide opportunities to read, relate, reflect, and record their thoughts about a book. The primary goal is to help students gain insight into the literary elements that prompt their responses. Stated objectives for each activity are based on the literary elements of action, plot, or content, characterization; setting; theme; and tone, audience, or style. These materials are designed to enable students to engage more easily in the process of talking about books with other students and reshape and make visible their responses to books. Suggestions for grouping are given. Examples of objectives and activities include the following: "analyze the personality of the protagonist by preparing a case study that includes all the known evidence (appearance, age, occupation, principal actions, and their implications) for presentation to a panel of psychiatrists and social workers, or by using all the known evidence to compose a horoscope analysis of the protagonist"; and "demonstrate a process described in a work of nonfiction by creating a photo essay in which the steps of the process are illustrated by the student's own photographs and written captions." Teachers of literature do not merely guide students; they also serve as critics. Teachers should remember that their classroom role as literary critics is to serve the needs of students who may not become future scholars of literature. Consequently, in deciphering the complexities of literature, teachers must focus on what the students need in order to learn to read more perceptively and analytically. The teacher must try to help a student develop three basic understandings of a piece of literature: an understanding of the approaches to determining meaning; an understanding of genres or forms and their characteristics; and an understanding of the limitations of interpretation and evaluation. Rather than restricting themselves to the particular approaches which they prefer when analyzing literature for their own publications, teachers should guide students to an awareness of various approaches which may include literal, historical, and cultural interpretations, stressing several different analytical approaches. Described are two English units Aggression and Death—developed at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, intended for use in the inner city secondary school. Built on the premise that erudition should be an extension of the search for self-knowledge, both units involved the students in a general discussion of how aggression (or death) is apparent in our daily lives and analyzed the ways in which we cope with these problems. Following the reading of a specially prepared article (e.g., high interest, low vocabulary), as well as more literary articles for information on the topic, a reading guide was used to further language skills and an understanding of the issues. Group discussion and student interviews with the author of the special article encouraged a deeper analysis of the subject. Finally, the students were asked to complete one of five possible independent projects. An initial evaluation of the unit on Aggression showed the need for more student participation; consequently a "Think and Do" section (involving questions and activities) was added to the unit on Death. It was generally felt that a discussion of any topic works best by looking first to the needs of the students, and then to the available materials. (HS)

All literature teachers agree that students should read with perception, enjoy reading, and continue reading after classes have ended. Because perception promotes the pleasure that leads to continued reading, the basic step toward improved reading is to increase perception. The "index-card" system, which focuses attention on textual explication, invites the student to react to a story and to record on cards his responses, together with the lines or details that prompted them. Then, in class discussion of noted passages, the students can compare their reactions and ideas. Such an approach benefits the teacher because he becomes sensitive to precisely how students respond to particular works and he receives, through their various viewpoints, the raw materials which he can use in a discussion of the work. More importantly, this method benefits the student by encouraging him to respond to the work, to share ideas with his classmates, and to evaluate his own insights through the class discussion. The pleasure derived from increased perception then leads to additional attempts to understand the story more completely. (LH)

Understanding ideas, drawing inferences, and recognizing the author's organization and purpose are teachable comprehension skills. Prereading discussions can stimulate students to think before reading, to survey the material, and to raise questions which focus attention while reading. A study guide can develop comprehension through careful questioning which causes students to reason and to draw inferences, and post-reading discussions will allow students to develop thought processes as they verbalize their own thinking. Finally, practice in analyzing the learning process, work in oral reading, use of the cloze procedure, and time and practice help teachers to develop students' comprehension skills. (RT)

LEARNING THE BASIC SKILLS OF READING AND WRITING IS NOT SUFFICIENT FOR A HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION. ALL STUDENTS SHOULD COMPREHEND, AND REACT CRITICALLY TO, THE IDEAS AND PROBLEMS ABOUT WHICH THEY READ. STUDENTS WHO WERE CONSIDERED MATURE READERS COULD DISTINGUISH FACT FROM OPINION, DISTINGUISH BETWEEN CONNOTATIVE AND DENOTATIVE LANGUAGE, AND DRAW INFERENCES FROM AND JUDGE THE VALIDITY OF THE IDEAS PRESENTED. THE BEST SOURCES OF MATERIAL TO DEVELOP CRITICAL READING SKILLS WERE JUDGED TO BE NEWSPAPER AND MAGAZINE ARTICLES WHICH REFLECT THE ROLE OF LANGUAGE IN FORMING OPINION, CREATING MISUNDERSTANDINGS, AND ACCENTUATING DIFFERENCES. THE FIRST STEP IN TEACHING CRITICAL READING SKILLS STARTS WITH WORD MEANINGS. TO DEVELOP SUCH SKILLS, STUDENTS MAY EACH DESCRIBE THE SAME PHOTOGRAPH AND DISCUSS HOW THEIR DESCRIPTIONS DIFFER FROM ONE ANOTHER. THE SECOND STEP CONNECTS LANGUAGE AND REALITY, REACTING TO WORDS AS SYMBOLS FOR THINGS AND IDEAS. THE THIRD STEP DISTINGUISHES BETWEEN REFERENTIAL AND NONREFERENTIAL, DESCRIPTIVE AND EMOTIVE LANGUAGE. A SUGGESTED ACTIVITY WAS TO INDICATE WHETHER CERTAIN WORDS HAD FAVORABLE OR UNFAVORABLE CONNOTATIONS. THE FOURTH STEP WAS TO RECOGNIZE THE WRITER'S AND THE READER'S PURPOSES. AN ACTIVITY THAT COULD DEVELOP THIS SKILL WOULD BE TO FIND EXAMPLES OF MATERIAL WRITTEN IN DIFFERENT LANGUAGE STYLES FOR DIFFERENT AUDIENCES, BUT WITH ESSENTIALLY THE SAME PURPOSE. THE FIFTH STEP WAS TO DISTINGUISH AMONG FACTS, JUDGMENT, INFERENCES, AND NORMATIVE STATEMENTS. FOR EXAMPLE, A COPY OF A POLITICAL SPEECH COULD BE TALLIED FOR THE NUMBER OF JUDGMENTS AND OBSERVATIONS IT CONTAINS. THE SEVENTH STEP, THE USE OF METAPHORS, COULD BE EMPHASIZED BY WRITING OUT THE IMAGES EVOKED BY METAPHORS AND COMPARING INDIVIDUAL RESPONSES. THE EIGHTH STEP, CRITICAL READING, WAS THE COMPREHENSION OF WHAT WAS READ IN ORDER TO DRAW CONCLUSIONS.

The paper suggests rationales and practical procedures for improving student learning skills in high school social studies courses. A major objective is to help classroom teachers minimize problems brought about by the mismatch between student capabilities and program demands. It is hypothesized that secondary social studies teachers have not usually had formal training in teaching the basic mathematics and reading skills required for comprehending textbook material. To rectify these deficiencies in teacher training, the document presents tips on assessing student reading ability, determining textbook readability, teaching content vocabulary, providing structure to reading assignments through directed activities, and helping students comprehend content presented through mathematics. Included in the descriptions of each of these procedures are background information, formulas used to calculate various ability ranges, vocabulary definitions, suggested reading, and pointers on specific learning problems of which teachers should be aware. Information is presented in textual form and is illustrated by means of graphs, charts, pictographs, tables, and scale drawings. (Author/DB)

Eight social studies skills and strategies for their implementation at the secondary level are outlined. Each skill is presented in a separate chapter which defines the skill, offers a rationale for its inclusion, and provides sample activities. Chapter I focuses on listening and speaking skills. Activities emphasize using a recording to develop skill in listening for main ideas and using oral reports to develop speaking skills. Chapter II, Reading Skills, outlines study techniques based on surveying, questioning, reading, reciting, and reviewing. Activities in Chapter III, Writing Skills, include describing candidates for public office, writing précis and summaries, and developing theses. Chapter IV, Observation Skills, involves interpreting editorial cartoons, charts, and graphs. Chapter V discusses space and time orientation. Students identify states from cards containing fragments of maps and draw a map of the world from the perspective of different countries. Chapter VI focuses on quantitative skills. Students generate and display data on television viewing habits and number of jobs available through newspaper advertisements. Chapter VII presents activities for problem solving. Students develop hypotheses from newspaper stories, complete a research assignment, and examine case studies. Chapter VIII features democratic participation skills. Activities include rating political candidates and writing a position paper. Sample case studies, methods for stimulating reflection, and methods for building a skill network are included. (KC)

Teachers can improve students' content reading by preparing reading profiles in terms of student abilities, instructional material selection, and content learning objectives. These profiles should contain the following elements: orientation questions that give the teachers their present bearings; the identification of the readability levels of textbooks, weekly news magazines, and ancillary materials used in the course; the identification of student reading abilities and learning potentials; the relationships between students' past experiences, their self-concepts, and their attitudes toward the subject; the teacher's own concept of a content teacher's role; the current trends in teaching the subject area; and the reading resources currently available in the content area. As teachers fill in the reading profile for their classes, they begin to see how they can enhance learning, improve performance, develop student thinking skills, motivate students, and effect change in the subject area. The linkage manual presents social studies material in story outline form. Linkage refers to the bonding of study skills (particularly logical thinking and reading) with subject area content. The document is intended as an aid to intermediate and junior high school classroom teachers as they develop and/or adapt social studies materials to meet the particular needs of their students. Seventeen sample lessons are presented. Topics focus on life in earliest times, earliest civilizations, contributions of ancient China to the world, events leading to the crusades, and reasons for seeking a new route to the East. Activities involve students in locating answers, using charts and diagrams presented in the lessons, writing brief answers to questions based on reading in the lessons, drawing time lines, listing sequences of events, participating in educational games, and matching ideas with clues presented in the lessons. For each lesson, information is presented on a social studies objective; a reading objective; background information involving illustrations, maps, and questions; vocabulary development exercises; context clue exercises; silent reading suggestions; and reading and social studies questions. Supplementary reading suggestions are listed for each topic. (DB)

Most content area teachers face a common problem—students who cannot read their textbooks or who do so with difficulty. Before they can provide help for such students, teachers must first try to understand the reasons why the students have reading problems and then they must find some way to teach subject content and reading at the same time. Among the many reasons for the poor reading of students are a lack of student skills, text materials that are too complex, curriculum pressures that make teachers feel that they do not have the time to teach both content and reading skills, and a lack of teacher training in the teaching of reading. However, there are two approaches to the teaching of reading that can be easily modified for use in the content areas—the language experience approach and the individualized reading approach. Both of these approaches have the advantage that the content teaching continues at the same time as reading instruction. The teacher who uses both also demonstrates an insight into why students have problems reading in the content areas, and a willingness to help solve those problems. (FL)

Guides, Vocabulary

Identifiers—Alaska Department of Education

This manual contains examples of techniques for science teachers to use in making the teaching of reading a simultaneous function of teaching science. The task force members of a three day work session with the Alaska Department of Education used science texts from their own programs to provide samples of various activities and guides. Each section begins with an explanation of the technique in that section. The readability graph developed by Edward Fry at Rutgers University is presented with directions for its use. Sample science textbook usability checklists are included with four categories that aid the teacher in selecting texts. A simplified technical vocabulary analysis chart allows the science teacher to plan for teaching technical vocabulary and skills at the same time. Sample concept guides illustrate the technique of determining major concepts that students should acquire and listing them in short phrases. Students then can select statements which underlie the major concepts. Teachers are guided in analyzing a passage to determine a pattern of organization which supports the major concepts. Students later will be expected to indicate whether statements actually occurred in the passage and must identify the major concept supported by the statement. Samples in science comprehension and vocabulary reinforcement help teachers guide students in interacting with important technical terms. (SA)

Noting that the terms "language of mathematics," "language of science," and "language of business" represent very real language differences which frustrate even good readers, this curriculum report suggests several procedures teachers might use to assist students in reading in varied content areas. The procedures include teaching students to recognize how textbook authors shape concepts by the use of sentences, paragraphs, and graphic aids; serving as models for students by adjusting reading rates, by learning new vocabulary, by identifying how authors' shape concepts, and by struggling with problems; selecting reading materials in content fields on the basis of conceptual as well as technical difficulty; and strengthening student responsibilities in reading assignments. The bulletin contains suggestions for secondary level social studies teachers to improve students' reading skills in social studies while at the same time enhancing the learning of social studies content. The materials can be easily adapted for elementary grades. Chapter one describes specific procedures for determining student reading levels. Three levels of reading skills are defined: independent, instructional, and frustration. To determine these levels, the book explains the use of informal reading inventories, the cloze test procedure, and the San Diego Quick Assessment technique. Chapter two discusses ways to estimate the reading level of social studies materials based on average sentence length, average number of syllables in the words, and number of unfamiliar words. Specific readability formulas which make use of these variables are the Fry, SMOG, Flesch, and Dale-Chall. Chapter three suggests ways to improve social studies vocabulary skills, comprehension, and thinking skills. Techniques include teaching words in context; using concrete examples; and having students examine words for meaningful parts. How to administer a directed reading activity is explained, as well as how to ask questions that make use of memory, interpretation, and analysis skills. (AV)

The guide is designed as an activity supplement for social studies teachers interested in helping students in grades 6-12 improve their ability to critically read social studies materials with a global focus. In addition, teachers are provided with basic tools to use in assessing the readability of social studies materials. The activities are based upon specific reading and thinking skills, concepts, content, and issues of importance in the social studies. The nine chapters deal with critical thinking and reading abilities such as formulating questions, identifying problems, gathering and categorizing information, making judgments, understanding different perspectives, recognizing bias, and analyzing propaganda. Chapter one defines basic reading skills necessary for understanding social studies materials. Chapter two presents activity models for reading social studies concepts. Chapters three, four, and five are concerned with word meanings, social studies vocabulary, and functional literacy. Chapter six presents activities to improve students' ability to read maps. Chapter seven provides teachers with systems for checking the readability of social studies materials. The concluding chapters focus on skills for reading newspapers and for analyzing and evaluating propaganda. Each chapter contains a general introduction followed by teaching activities for which objectives, grade level, time, materials, and procedure are specified. (Author: DB)

Some practical ways to improve reading skills in social studies classes without sacrificing content objectives and goals are presented. It is emphasized that social studies teachers are best suited to teach reading skills in their own subject field. Social studies teachers need to focus on three reading skills: vocabulary development and word recognition skills, comprehension skills, and study skills. To make a conscious effort to help students improve reading skills, several methods are suggested for gaining an information base about students reading ability. These include use of standardized tests of reading ability; informal surveys of students' reading habits; and content inventory consisting of reading passages followed by questions about the main ideas, inference, and details. The cloze technique, in which students fill in blanks in a reading passage, indicates student understanding of the central idea as well as vocabulary development. Students' reading gaps can be determined by comparing their reading ability with textbook readability based on the Fry scale. Effective teaching techniques to improve content reading are discussed. These include purposeful reading directed by teachers' prereading questions and discussion, and the SQ3R method (survey, question, read, recite, review). Directed reading activity, in which teachers guide students through reading assignments, is recommended. In addition, students should keep vocabulary notebooks. (Author/AV)

The purposes of this booklet are to acquaint both mathematics teachers and reading teachers with some skills which students need for effectively reading the language of mathematics and to provide sample activities which may be used as an integral part of the mathematics class, in an effort to help students develop those skills. Since mathematics is an abstract science involving the use of a system with highly specialized symbolism and technical terminology, it is suggested that the mathematics teacher accept major responsibility for teaching students to read mathematics. A section on vocabulary and symbols discusses reading mathematical symbols, the directionality of such symbols, and reading mathematical words. Following directions, interpreting graphic materials, reading mathematical sentences, and reading and solving word problems are discussed in the comprehension section. Other sections include a detailed discussion of study techniques, a list of books suggested for voluntary mathematical reading, a bibliography, and a list of resource materials suggested for teachers. The purposes of this booklet are to acquaint physical education teachers with the meanings of some terms used in reading that are related to physical education, to acquaint physical education teachers with reading skills that can be taught or reinforced through physical education activities, to provide a source or model of such activities, and to assist reading teachers in relating reading skills to physical education. Suggested activities are grouped in the areas of readiness, comprehension, decoding, reference and study skills, and diagnosis. Examples of sensorimotor activities noted under readiness include locating parts of the body, balancing on one foot, skipping, and coordinating eye/hand and foot/eye movements. It is suggested that these activities be used by teachers in physical education and reading classes at all levels, to assist students in upgrading their reading skills. (MKM)

This monograph is designed to furnish classroom teachers with insight and ideas for teaching reading more carefully by emphasizing the what and how aspects of instruction. It is written for the teacher of mathematics in the middle and secondary grades who realizes the important relationship between effective reading skills and learning mathematics. At least one instructional suggestion per page is contained in what is intended as a practical and usable teaching guide. The guide includes such topics as learning to read mathematical symbols, skills for developing vocabulary, analyzing the meaning of words and comprehending the relationships among concepts, and assessing students' abilities. The purpose of this manual is to assist teachers in developing those reading skills necessary for successful social studies learning. Chapter I discusses the supportive emotional climate and necessary diagnosis that are concomitants. Chapter II discusses reading vocabulary and essential reading skills through selections and sample questions. Chapter III deals with teaching techniques which the teacher can acquire to assist students in the improvement of reading. Chapter IV contains a taxonomy as a guide to materials which can be used to teach needed skills. The guide focuses on a social studies approach to Africa and the United States Government. A workable plan to help social studies teachers develop the competencies they will need to teach students to read social studies materials in grades K through 12 is provided in this document. A directed reading lesson is included which suggests practical techniques for improving reading skills. A unit sample and some suggested techniques for evaluation illustrate the use of many materials at varied reading levels. Suggested classroom organizational patterns which will help the teacher to individualize instruction and evaluation are also included. To be effective, teachers must know the reading levels of their students. Accordingly, this publication contains some techniques to determine those reading levels as well as the readability levels of social studies books and other written material. (Author/TO)

Despite the continued lack of adequate professional preparation of secondary teachers in reading, there are steps which the secondary classroom content-area teacher can take to improve the reading ability of his students. The first thing the teacher must do is determine the specific reading and study skills required by students for content learning. This establishing of goals takes place before instruction begins. The next step is to determine the extent to which students possess these skills. When students' reading status has been assessed and their particular skills deficiencies determined, the teacher should gather reading materials which represent the range of reading abilities found in the classroom and provide practice in particular areas of weakness. The teacher must then decide upon patterns of classroom organization to maximize teaching effectiveness. The most obvious organizational pattern is to group students by their determined reading levels and to teach content using material written at the appropriate level of difficulty. Finally, the teacher should use a functional approach to evaluate students' growth in reading and study skills. (WR)

Presented is the basis for an integrated approach to teaching reading skills and mathematics concepts at the elementary school level. A general explanation of concept formation, of oral and written language, and of mathematics symbols, with specific suggestions as to their application in mathematics, is included in the first section of the pamphlet. The second section deals with the specialized skills needed for reading and thinking in mathematics. These skills include decoding words and math symbols, understanding the processes of mathematics, and applying the decoding and comprehension skills to problem solving. A list of eight suggestions and two references are given to help the teacher and students in developing their mathematics vocabulary. Reading comprehension skills are detailed, with activities specified for helping students with story problems, graphs, and charts. The final section deals with the role of the teacher as one of management and includes a discussion of objectives, evaluation, diagnosis, and organization of materials and experiences. (DT)

This unit guide, seventh in a series of seven, is designed to provide eighth-grade social studies teachers with materials that develop the facts, attitudes, and concepts of social studies and that also present reading and study skills instruction. Information about the United States as a world leader is presented along with reading exercises in assigned chapters of "This Is America's Story" by Wilder and Ludlum, a text to be used with average classes, and "Exploring America's History" by Schwartz and O'Connor, a text to be used with modified classes. New vocabulary words are introduced at the beginning of each chapter. Exercises provide practice in (1) making generalizations, (2) interpreting pictures, charts, and maps, (3) outlining, (4) reading under direction, and (5) the SQ3R study method. Questions directed to organization, cause and effect, and sequence and analogy are given. Combined questions applicable to both textbooks are also provided. (RT)

This curriculum guide is based on the belief that a reading program should help students develop the skills needed to read with ease and satisfaction, learn to use reading as a tool for learning, and develop an appreciation of literature and a lifelong in-reading in the content areas, literature, critical reading, and creative reading. Each chapter presents an overview of the skill area dealt with and suggests activities for helping students develop desired skills.

 The final two chapters describe strategies for providing for individual needs and suggest methods for assessing student reading performance and attitudes.
 Appendixes provide an index to curriculum materials, list word recognition and comprehension skills for five sequential levels, and offer suggestions for guiding silent reading, determining readability of reading materials, creating "activity boxes" for independent learning, planning a year-long "Use of and reading comprehension. Within each group, the activities are listed according to the grade level for which they are most appropriate; a learning objec-

 section on word recognition includes student review activities in the guide are designated for students in grades one through six, some objectives and activ-

The New England Consortium for the Right to Read Plan of Action is designed to assist participating school systems in meeting the national Right to Read goals by 1980. The purpose of the New England project differs from that of most projects in that it seeks to eliminate the possibility of failure rather than to deal with failure after it occurs. The 26 statements comprising the Criteria of Excellence for the project are organized under five main concerns: community and school climate organizing and managing a reading program, staffing a reading program, selecting and utilizing materials, and fostering reading interests. This report presents a set of suggested behavioral objectives for the Florida Migrant Right-to-Read Program. Each proposed objective was considered in terms of its logical contribution to the development of reading competencies of migrant elementary school children and in terms of its relationship to the goals of the Right-to-Read Program. The program utilizes materials from fourteen publishers which are arranged into a wide variety of teachable packages. Each package requires from one to two weeks for completion with mastery, and each covers one or more basic skills as delineated on the scope and sequence charts included in the report. The content of the program and its materials is of a basic and functional nature--advertisements of family necessities, common signs found in buildings and along highways, simple forms and instructions, and literature which appeals to modestly educated persons. The program is being implemented in 35 Florida schools enrolling high percentages of migrant children. Outlines of objectives, skill descriptions, and sample materials are included. (Author/TO)

This guide to the instructional program in reading in the Cincinnati Public Schools is intended to provide a structure for planning and implementing the reading skills program K-6. It contains suggestions for diagnosing, developing, and reinforcing skills, and for assessing pupil mastery. Within this guide the total language program is viewed as a communicative process central to human life and the learning process. Hence, the natural interrelationships among the language arts are utilized in the planning of reading instruction and activity. Included are objectives for each level, scope and sequence of reading skills, role definitions, an interest checklist and inventory, and extensive sample lesson plans. This communication arts program is part of a larger plan designed to provide a continuing link between the language arts component of grades 3 through 6 and the language arts programs for middle and high schools in Hartford, Connecticut. The purpose of the program is to develop communication skills in sequence, and to relate all of the communication skills to each other. The student receives a foundation in perceptual training, oral language development, and reading-writing skills; the teachers and students are then given options for achieving their own objectives. Among the related materials used in this program are audio cards, cassettes, games, diagnostic tests, and supplementary books. Practical activities and suggestions are included in this course guide. The program also contains an evaluation form. (RS)

The Developmental Reading Program K-6, one phase of the Reading Curriculum, provides teachers and administrators with a comprehensive guide to sound educational practices related to the teaching of reading skills. It is based on classroom experimentation and study of research findings by Cincinnati teachers, principals, and supervisors who have worked on this project the past three years. This guide is intended to provide a structure for planning and implementing the reading skills program K-6. It contains suggestions for diagnosing, developing, and reinforcing skills, and assessing pupil mastery. The present plan is to provide selected elementary school staffs, in grades kindergarten through six, with copies for tryout and reaction during the school year 1971-72. (Author/WR)

The first volume of an elementary curriculum guide prepared by the Summer Workshop Reading Committee of the Rochester Public Schools in Rochester, Minnesota, applies to kindergarten through grade 4. It is divided into the prereading level, the beginning reading level, and the independence level. Grade designations under each level suggest the level at which an average student is likely to be working, but teachers are encouraged to adjust instruction, activities, and materials to individual pupil needs and to use multiple approaches and flexible time schedules. Each reading level covers vocabulary development, comprehension, oral reading, and study skills. The reading skills to be developed in each of these areas are outlined in four scope and sequence charts. The place of a developmental reading program in the total elementary school curriculum is described. Practical classroom activities with corresponding references and evaluative techniques are suggested to help teachers develop skills and evaluate reading instruction. This guide could serve as a frame of reference in planning the school year's program or a day's lesson, as a resource material in selecting appropriate materials, activities, and techniques, and as an aid in evaluating the total reading program. THIS STUDY DEMONSTRATES THE FEASIBILITY OF ANTICIPATING THE NUMBER LOCATION, ARRIVAL TIME, AND DURATION OF THE STAY OF MIGRANT WORKERS IN ORDER TO PLAN A PROPER PROGRAM FOR CHILDREN. THE DATA SUGGESTS THAT SCHOOLS SHOULD PLAN FOR A MIGRANT POPULATION EDUCATIONALLY RETARDED FROM 1-4 YEARS, WITH THE RANGE ADVANCING WITH THE AGE, INABILITY OF MANY TO SPEAK ENGLISH WELL. THE CURRICULUM GUIDE LISTS BOOKS OF HIGH INTEREST AND LOW VOCABULARY LEVEL. ADVANTAGES OF INSTITUTIONALIZED EDUCATION ARE THE ENHANCEMENT OF LEARNING AND THE CONTINUITY OF THE EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM, WHICH WAS NOT AVAILABLE IN THE FORMERLY SECTARIAN CONTROLLED MIGRANT SCHOOLS. EMPLOYERS SHOULD INFLUENCE PARENTS TO SEND CHILDREN TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS, AS FINANCIAL SUPPORT IS AVAILABLE. ADMINISTRATORS SHOULD NOT BE TOLD THAT EDUCATING THE MIGRANT CHILD IS THE SAME AS EDUCATING THE AVERAGE CHILD, BUT NEITHER SHOULD THEY VIEW THE PROJECT AS HOPELESS OR IMPOSSIBLE. THE EDUCATION OF THE MIGRANT CHILD IS A RESPONSIBILITY OF RESPONSIBLE SOCIETY.

The purpose of this booklet is to provide information on what is known about standards for effective basic skills improvement programs to persons developing such programs, philosophies, standards, and strategies. It also provides access to current thinking by practicing professionals on standards for building effective programs to eligible applicants for Title II grants and contracts. The eight sections in the booklet contain a position paper on basic mathematical skills prepared by the National Council of Supervisors of Mathematics; a report of the Kansas City Coordinating Conference on Mathematics Issues, held in 1978; the standards for basic skills writing programs developed by the National Council of Teachers of English; guidelines for the professional preparation of reading teachers devised by the Professional Standards and Ethics Committee of the International Reading Association; a discussion of reading programs that work; a reading program assessment scale developed by Right to Read; and a flow chart for program assessment and planning from the "Right to Read Assessment and Planning Handbook." Organized according to prescribed goals and learning outcomes determined for the province of British Columbia, the teaching techniques and learning activities presented in this resource guide are designed to be used in conjunction with specific eighth grade textbooks. The suggested teaching methods develop the four areas of language arts through a number of classroom activities that include small group discussions; sentence, paragraph, and story writing; listening activities; crossword puzzles; speech and drama assignments; and reading activities. The guide also lists the textbooks on which the activities are based, discusses related administrative concerns such as time allotment, defines the purpose of the resource section, and presents techniques for student evaluation. As part of a language arts series for kindergarten through grade nine, this eighth grade guide examines environmental values, concepts, and problems according to a common conceptual scheme: all living things, including humans, are interrelated and interdependent; heredity and environment interact to determine the characteristics of an organism and therefore a population; living things and environments are in a continuous state of change; the world has finite resources and almost infinite demands are made on these resources; and each individual, as an agent of change, has a responsibility to the environment. The guide offers a series of environmental activities that stress the development of reading, writing, and discussion skills and emphasize the discovery method of observation. The guide includes background information, a teacher's outline, and task sheets for the students. (MAI)

The language arts curriculum activities presented in this guide were developed as one component of a total career education demonstration project for Appalachian Maryland, and are intended for use as supplements to the total middle or junior high school curriculum. Introductory material lists career education concepts and outlines career and occupational development objectives. The body of the guide consists of the following four areas grouped according to progressive levels of difficulty: oral skills, listening skills, writing skills, and reading skills. Each unit relates career education activities to one or more concepts within the skills area. Career education activities are identified according to type of activity (e.g., research, puzzle, community activities, daily living activities). Materials required for many of the activities are appended. (SH)

Identifiers--*Effective Reading Programs, Maryland

This two-volume curriculum guide, designed to meet the functional reading needs of Maryland's 182,000 public school students in grades one through twelve, contains objectives, activities, and materials for classroom use. The guide, part of a reading program started in 1972 and described in "Effective Reading Programs..." is used by teachers in the Maryland reading program, the prime objective of which is to ensure that all students can meet the functional reading demands of society. Some of the practical reading activities covered include reading the listings in "TV Guide," filing federal income tax form, reading a city map and locating places and streets, acquiring social information from the newspaper, filling out an application for a United States Savings Bond, balancing a checking account, and subscribing to a magazine. The major goals of the reading program as they are presented in this curriculum guide are to develop skill in following directions, locating references, gaining information from various sources, and understanding forms. Emphasis is also placed on attaining personal development through reading. (RB)

This guide reflects the definition of reading as a complex intellectual act involving a variety of behaviors to decode and comprehend printed symbols and is intended to help the teacher be aware of all the skills within each dimension of the reading act. The reading skills are described in terms of learner behavior and a criterion reference is provided for judging the effectiveness of instruction. The skills appropriate for each of the goals are categorized under the major skill areas of decoding, comprehension, and study skills and are referred to as general instructional objectives. The schematic arrangement of goals, general curricular objectives, and instructional objectives becomes the framework for reading instruction. The pages of the notebook are color coded to the instructional objectives and additional coding is used to identify objectives concerned with the major skill areas. (WR)

This curriculum guide suggests ways for teachers to provide students with learning experiences which develop communication skills and facilitate the learning of language concepts. The guide, whose design is process oriented and student centered, can be used as a basis for developing an individual language arts program for every student. Eight conceptual statements serve as the basis for the program: "language is symbolic" includes a discussion of the uses and values of symbols; "language is used to communicate" discusses the importance of language in observing, listening, speaking, reading, and writing; "language changes constantly" discusses geographic, social, and historical effects on language; "language is a form of social behavior" discusses the relationship between culture and language; "language has power" discusses the use and misuse of language in the media; "language is structured" discusses grammar, vocabulary and syntax; "language is basically oral" discusses the effects of verbal and nonverbal expression on oral language; and "written language is a representation of oral language" discusses the relationship between oral and written language. The language arts curriculum of the Fort Benton school system was developed with funds under Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act to stimulate the inherent creative talents of the student with the skills of communication. Basic goals of the K-12 curriculum are to develop an appreciation of varied forms of literature and fine arts; to develop reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills; to develop the ability to use the English language effectively, and to develop the ability to use a library. The curriculum is sequential from beginning experiences in language arts at the K-3 level to a non-graded, phase-elective language arts program for grades 10-12. Objectives and instructional resources are specified for each grade level. (JH)

The 1971 Oregon Small Schools Program summer institute at Willamette University, June 14-18, was attended by 200 elementary and secondary teachers, librarians, counselors, principals, and superintendents from more than 50 Oregon school districts. The major purpose of the summer institute (funded under Title III of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act) was to disseminate information regarding new techniques, innovative programs, and current educational thinking. The theme for the institute was "Contemporary Curriculum for Small Schools." The program attempted to meet the varied curriculum interests of participants with concurrent, small group sessions for administrators, secondary education, and elementary education. Sessions for elementary teachers and administrators were concerned with individually prescribed instruction, behavioral objectives, effective discipline, questioning strategies, and change in reading instruction. Sessions for secondary educators dealt with educational trends, behavioral objectives, and the legal process and concerns in school affairs. Major presentations dealt with a new design for rural elementary and secondary schools, individually prescribed instruction, due process, improvement of self-concept, student apathy, reading instruction, and teacher selection and evaluation. Condensations of major presentations, reports of concurrent sessions, 7 papers prepared by participants, and the results of an institute evaluation questionnaire are included in this institute report. The purpose of this guide is to provide seventh- and eighth-grade teachers with a variety of approaches to teaching reading. Chapter 1 provides the groundwork for a sequential skills reading program, dealing with materials, diagnosis of students' reading abilities, grouping, and procedures. The three chapters which follow recommend different, but complementary, approaches to teaching reading. The oral approach section includes articles for background information, a bibliography of selections for reading to students, and bibliographies of taped stories from state-adopted texts. The chapter on developing individualized reading programs includes suggestions for motivating student interest in stories; a bibliography of high interest, easy reading books, and recommendations for grouping. Suggestions for the humanities approach to enhance reading include enumeration of various themes treated in state-adopted texts, including specific behavioral objectives and lesson plans for examining these themes. The final chapter of the guide is concerned with techniques for evaluating the reading program. Also included is a bibliography of professional works on reading and teaching methods. (VJ)

This guide is designed to help teachers, staff members responsible for teacher training, and reading supervisors provide better reading instruction. The skills that lead to mature reading are arranged on eight levels of developmental sequence. Level A is concerned with developing prereading skills. Levels B to D treat initiating and developing basic reading skills; levels E to H stress extending, refining, and applying reading skills. Within each level, these skills are grouped in relation to the development of word power, recognition and interpretation of meaning, and work-study skills. Arrangement by level of difficulty rather than by grade level should encourage individualized instruction. The application of each skill to practical reading experiences in various curriculum areas and in functional situations in and out of the classroom is emphasized. Skills that help the reader develop appreciation of literary excellence are not included. A short overview of the levels of reading skills is given, and specific suggestions for skill application are noted. (BS)

The Career English Curriculum Guide has been prepared to better equip students with communication skills required in the working world. Basic skills of reading job-related materials and writing brief resumes are blended with the less measurable skills of developing good relationships with fellow employees and good attitudes toward work in general. Concepts, objectives, and suggested activities are outlined for three units: seeking employment, on the job, and improvement of communication skills. The course is intended to meet the needs of students in grades 10-12 and can be completed in one semester. Seven appendixes, including reading printed directions, work attitudes, and self-evaluation, are followed by a three-page list of resource materials (books, filmstrips, kits, microfiche, and tapes). If a student reaches high school and cannot read, the only route to success may lie in a media-oriented curriculum. In line with this philosophy, this report describes an experimental media-based curriculum developed to capitalize on the students' ability to grasp the visual image in situations where they cannot grasp the written image. The philosophy behind the concept of a bookless curriculum is discussed first; then the objectives of the program and how it has been implemented are outlined. A year's lesson plans, centering around the use of mass media, are detailed. For each lesson plan, a particular film or discussion topic is identified, and the source, length, and a synopsis of each suggested film are provided, along with information about rental costs. Discussion questions and suggestions for small-group activity are also provided. Appendixes provide the teacher with student questionnaires, statistical data derived from a pilot project, and 12 production units the teacher may want to use for class involvement and participation. THE STUDENT IN A VOCATIONAL SCHOOL HAS BEEN MOTIVATED BY A DESIRE TO PREPARE HIMSELF FOR A SPECIFIC OCCUPATION. THE VOCATIONAL HIGH SCHOOL ENGLISH COURSE SHOULD CAPITALIZE ON THIS MOTIVATION BY OFFERING THE STUDENT COMMUNICATION SKILLS CLOSELY RELATED TO HIS TRADE EXPERIENCE. AS A CURRICULUM GUIDE, THIS HANDBOOK IS DESIGNED TO ASSIST THE VOCATIONAL ENGLISH TEACHER IN SETTING UP A VITAL PROGRAM FOR HIS STUDENTS. IT OFFERS SUGGESTED PROCEDURES WHICH ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE OR MODIFICATION, BUT WHICH HAVE BEEN FOUND TO BE FEASIBLE UNDER ACTUAL TEACHING CONDITIONS. THE COURSE CONTENT FOR 4 YEARS AND SPECIFIC PROCEDURES FOR THE FIRST AND SECOND YEARS ARE OUTLINED. THE PROCEDURE SHEETS EXPLAIN AS SPECIFICALLY AS POSSIBLE HOW THE COURSE MAY BE TAUGHT. GENERAL SUBJECT AREAS COVERED BY THE PROCEDURE SHEETS INCLUDE AN ORIENTATION ON STUDY METHODS, READING, ORAL EXPRESSION, WRITING, AND THE MECHANICS OF ENGLISH.

THE DEVELOPMENTAL READING IN GRADES 7 THROUGH 12 WAS PRESENTED, GIVING PROCEDURE AND TECHNIQUES, READING MATERIALS, BASIC SKILLS, ENRICHMENT, LESSON PLANS, AND A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF RECOMMENDED READING. BASIC SKILLS CITED WERE—PHONETIC AND STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS, COMPREHENSION, LOCATION, SKILLS, VOCABULARY, AND ENRICHMENT. EVALUATION, ORGANIZING, AND APPRAISING MATERIAL IN SILENT AND ORAL READING WERE STRESSED. OBSERVABLE CLUES TO POOR READING ARE—EYE MOVEMENTS, LIP AND THROAT MOVEMENTS, HEAD MOVEMENT, POSITION OF THE BOOK, TENSIONS SUCH AS GRITTING TEETH AND SQUIRMING, AND LOW INTEREST. NINE COMPARISONS ARE SHOWN BETWEEN EFFICIENT AND INEFFICIENT READERS. FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF RESOURCE MATERIALS INCLUDING BOOKS, WORKBOOKS, MECHANICAL DEVICES, TESTING MATERIALS, FILMS, AND FILM-STRIPS. A DIAGRAMMATIC PLAN OF A READING LABORATORY IS GIVEN. TWO UNITS OF STUDY, "EFFICIENT READING" AND "SPEED, POWER AND PROFICIENT READING," ARE OUTLINED.

The use of context clues is basic to the reading act. This paper emphasizes the importance of teaching students to recognize context clues and outlines reasons for teachers' frequent failure to do so. It then suggests ways of helping students become aware of ways context clues can be of value to them as readers and of teaching them to identify different types of context clues, such as those that provide a direct definition of an unknown word or a comparison with it. Teaching strategies are then suggested for introducing the concept of context and helping students learn how to use context to determine word meaning. Finally, the paper shows who to design lessons based on the cloze procedure, context response cards, and "super sleuth" cards as practice exercises in using context clues. (GW)

This publication deals with the classroom use of rate sheets as aids in teaching reading decoding skills systematically and sequentially. The introduction explains the use of rate sheets in presenting a systematic arrangement of instructional cues to which children respond for a standard period of time, and it discusses the original development of rate sheets for use in precision teaching programs. The publication then lists terms used in precision teaching, explains the use of paraprofessionals, tells how to set up student folders, and provides a sample student record sheet. Eleven sample rate sheets are presented for helping children develop skills related to the following areas: consonant blends, consonant substitution, rhyming word parts, variant vowel sounds, affixes, prefixes, word definitions, and heteronyms. Teachers working with a language experience approach to reading may use word-sorting activities as a means of exploring the letter/sound concepts and semantic concepts that children are forming. Using words that are already in a child's reading vocabulary, words that the child has made into sight vocabulary, and words that the child has requested while composing stories, the teacher asks the child to decide on categories into which the words may be divided. Words may be sorted according to letter/sound relationships, prefix or suffix likenesses and differences, etymological kinships, or semantic relationships. As teachers help the children to see that words may be categorized in different ways, children may recategorize their set of word cards many times. Experience has shown that the less useful categories will be used less and less frequently and that the more useful categories will be used often. As children become more adept at working with words and begin to read more widely, they are encouraged not only to sort old words but to seek out new words for their categories. Such word-sorting activities help children to explore words in a way that is related to other meaningful exploration in reading and using language. (GW)

This publication presents fundamental ideas necessary for effective teaching of word recognition as part of the reading process. Chapter 1 defines and discusses word recognition techniques. The second chapter reviews word recognition techniques and discusses how they aid the reader in unlocking words. Exercises and suggestions for teaching word recognition skills and subskills are presented in chapter 3. Chapter 4 presents an overview of the place of phonics in the reading program. Chapter 5 offers selected exercises for teaching phonics and related skills. A listing of word recognition skills by reading grade levels and a check list for use in evaluating the child's knowledge of word recognition skills are presented in chapter 6. A brief lesson plan for teaching word recognition skills when basal readers are used is outlined in chapter 7. An informal reading inventory is described in chapter 8, and chapter 9 contains summary comments on word recognition skills. (LL)

The purpose of this instructional unit is to help secondary school students gain proficiency in phonetic analysis. The format of the unit provides the student with practice, testing, and retesting. It contains controlled vocabulary lists for each area and attempts to establish overlearning and automatic response to several of the high frequency pronunciation generalizations in the language. The areas covered include: consonant sounds, short vowel sounds in closed syllables, long vowel sounds in open syllables, long vowel sounds with silent "E," compound words, break between doubled consonants, break between two sounded consonants, break before single consonants, ending syllables, the schwa sound, three syllable words and introduction to suffixes, and three and four syllable words and prefixes. Also included is an all area proficiency test. (WR)

This book is concerned with the skill of learning to read and factors primarily related to teaching the beginning reading skills. The contents include: "Rationale," which discusses abilities related to reading, reading as a different medium, decoding coming before reading, decoding as separate from reading, hypotheses for decoding, and a demonstration using the previously discussed decoding skills; "Glass-Analysis for Perceptual Conditioning," which looks at an approach for beginning reading instruction which utilizes shaping for perceptual conditioning and requires the learner to examine known words, out of context, both visually and auditorially, to develop instant visual clustering of letters with their associated sound; and "Considerations," which looks at the Glass-Analysis technique in terms of opportunity to differentiate, to redefine difficulty, to determine structural letter sound frequencies, and to screen for decoding ability. Reading instruction should be modified to make it compatible with students' perceptual skills. Assessing the adequacy of a student's perception is pertinent to planning his reading instructional program—not because the teacher can then teach to a preferred modality but, rather, because it can help the teacher determine whether the student has acquired the basic skills that are assumed by the particular instruction program that is to be used in the classroom. Some suggestions that teachers should follow for teaching reading to children with substandard perceptual skills include: only capital letters should be used until the student has acquired some degree of reading fluency; modify the text by adding a distinctive cue to potentially confusing letters; "b" and "d" should not be taught in juxtaposition; instruct the student to use his finger as a pointer, pointing to each word as he reads; teach the student that the start of a new sentence is signaled by a capital letter and the end by a period; introduce only a few sentences at first; for students who exhibit a deficit in auditory perception, phonics based instruction is needed; and teach the student to repeat what he has heard and wants to remember. Intended for use with grades three and four, this curriculum unit developed by the Oregon Elementary English Project attempts to (1) develop an interest in, respect for, and curiosity about words; (2) expose students to the concept that when we know a word we know its meaning, pronunciation, and relationship to other words; (3) build language confidence through word building; and (4) introduce the student to the dictionary. The first two lessons introduce the idea of the individual word bank and the concept of words as building blocks of the language; lessons 3 through 6 deal with the meanings of words; lessons 7 through 11 emphasize the use of the dictionary; and lessons 12 and 13 are primarily concerned with pronunciation of words. Each lesson is accompanied by a statement of its purpose, suggested procedures and materials, possible extensions, and student exercises. A supplementary packet of materials to be used in conjunction with some of the lessons is also provided. (See related documents CS 200 482-486 and CS 200 487-499.) (HS)

A word attack program that begins with phonics and incorporates various aspects of a linguistics approach is described in this paper. Regardless of the material that is used, there are 13 consonant sounds which are easier to learn than others: b, d, j, f, k, p, t, l, m, n, r, v, and z. W and h would be introduced next because in isolation they make only one sound. The remaining six consonants are different because they consist of more than one sound. The blends should be introduced next, emphasizing that these are letters which go together. Short vowel sounds would follow because they are easily controlled, easier for the students to identify, and require only one vowel rule to be learned. After the short vowels, children would be introduced to the long vowel sounds. After vowel sounds are learned, special combinations are introduced. These combinations are digraphs, diphthongs, "r" controlled, etc. Finally, the second sound the additional six consonants make would be introduced. (WR)

The importance of word analysis skills to reading ability is discussed, and methodologies for teaching such skills are examined. It is stated that a child cannot become proficient in reading if he does not master the skill of associating printed letter symbols with the sounds they represent. Instructional procedures which augment the alphabet with letters and involve respelling of words are, it is suggested, confusing, and the claims of proponents of this methodology are contradictory. Another instructional approach creates dependency on charts for translations of letter to color to sound. A linguistic method rests on the assumption that a child should learn initially only those words which have regular spellings, thus neglecting 61% of 5000 basic vocabulary words with irregular spellings. Programmed reading materials have the advantage of allowing students to work at their own pace, but are lacking in emphasis on reading as a meaning-making activity. Over emphasis on word analysis skills can lead the student to resist reading for meaning or enjoyment. It is concluded that word analysis skills are necessary to reading ability and should therefore be taught systematically, but that reading for meaning and enjoyment should be given equal emphasis.  This course is designed to assist high-school students who have not achieved mastery of decoding skills in relating phonemes to graphemes and sequences of graphemes representing these phonemes: to deal systematically with the basic word pattern of English; and to analyze the structure of word pairing, morphology, roots, prefixes, suffixes, and derived inflectional forms. Additional emphasis is given to instruction in the use of redundancies available in syntactic structures toward analysis and identification of previously unknown words, and to verify meanings as they are modified by context, including punctuation. Besides these phonetic, structural, and contextual analyses, dictionary use and enrichment activities are also important aspects in the course design. The course rationale, program principles and procedures, teaching strategies with respect to each approach, and assessment procedures are described. Four possible alternative approaches for developing word recognition skills (including sample lesson plans for both primary and intermediate grades) were presented. The first emphasized the importance of the relative order of difficulty of word analysis skills involving phonic abilities and auditory and visual discrimination in both primary and intermediate grades. The second program stressed the use of vocabulary selected from words in the child's speaking vocabulary. The third focused on the inductive method of word recognition, and the fourth program emphasized the importance of acquiring both an intensive and extensive vocabulary. The lesson plans stressed the aspects of phoneme identification, knowledge of homophones, word classifications, and awareness of multimeaning vocabulary. The plans utilized self-directing/self-correcting material, every-pupil response techniques, and team-learning organizational patterns. References are included. (CL)

This study involved the development of exercises for teaching the use of context clues in word recognition. Although authorities believe that context clues are best used in combination with other methods of word identification, such as phonetic analysis and word form, no hierarchy of difficulty among the many exercises for teaching context clues is known. Subsequently, to measure the degree of difficulty of six different word recognition techniques found in literature, students in grades 3-10 of 11 schools were given six different exercise forms. The results indicated that the more clues given a reader, the more easily he could identify a word. The easiest form provided phonetic and configuration clues with the context clues, while the most difficult form indicated only the omission of a word. Students, regardless of sex, intelligence, comprehension, or vocabulary and grade level, used the same clues to determine the suitable word. The exercises developed can also be used for teaching context clues in the classroom. (JM)

A discussion of several shortcomings of phonics instruction is aimed at aiding teachers in avoiding such pitfalls as (1) following just one method of phonics instruction whether or not it is helpful to children; (2) treating all children alike and teaching them all the same phonetic elements at the same time; (3) continuing an approach regardless of its effectiveness with some or all children in a class; (4) treating phonics and phonetics as if they were the same; and (5) adhering to pronouncements by experts without scrutiny of their value in immediate circumstances. Examples of these pitfalls are given, along with suggestions for avoiding them. The conclusion is reached that an eclectic approach to phonics should be taken by teachers in order to provide individual children with the particular help they need in whatever way they can best learn.  A GUIDE ON THE TEACHING OF WORD ANALYSIS SKILLS IS PRESENTED. KNOWLEDGE OF WORD ANALYSIS ALONE DOES NOT ENSURE GOOD READING ABILITY. IT SHOULD, HOWEVER, ENABLE THE INDIVIDUAL TO BECOME MORE INDEPENDENT IN HIS READING. SKILLS DEVELOPED THROUGH A KNOWLEDGE OF WORD ANALYSIS CAN DO MUCH TO ENHANCE THE UNDERSTANDING OF WRITTEN MATERIAL AND TO ENABLE THE STUDENT TO BECOME A MORE PROFICIENT READER. THE STUDY OF WORD ANALYSIS CAN DO MUCH TO ENHANCE THE UNDERSTANDING OF WRITTEN MATERIAL AND TO ENABLE THE STUDENT TO BECOME A MORE PROFICIENT READER. THE STUDY OF WORD ANALYSIS IS APPROACHED THROUGH AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE PRINCIPLES INVOLVED IN FOUR MAJOR AREAS—(1) PHONETIC ANALYSIS OR SOUND CLUES, (2) STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS OR SIGHT CLUES, (3) SYLLABIFICATION, AND (4) ACCENT. TEACHERS ARE URGED TO LEAD THEIR PUPILS IN DISCOVERING FOR THEMSELVES THE RULES, PRINCIPLES, OR GENERALIZATIONS IN EACH OF THESE AREAS OF ANALYSIS AND IN EXPRESSING THE PRINCIPLES IN THEIR OWN WORDS. THE EXACT WORDING OF A RULE IS NOT IMPORTANT IF THE MEANING IS CLEAR TO THE CHILDREN. IT IS THE UNDERSTANDING OF THE UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES OF WORD ANALYSIS AND THE ABILITY TO APPLY THESE PRINCIPLES THAT MAKE WORD ANALYSIS AN INVALUABLE TOOL IN LEARNING TO READ.

Written primarily for special needs students in the exploratory phase of a vocational program in food services, this activity book employs basic content material of the food service trade to serve as a vehicle for developing reading and language skills. Each lesson follows a similar format. The lesson is introduced by an illustration and a list of key words found in the reading selection which follows. Each reading selection is followed by short answer questions (getting the main idea, getting the meaning from the context), true-false questions, sentences to complete, vocabulary-spelling exercises, and a word puzzle. The titles of the lessons are A New School; A New Shop; What to Wear; Clean Hands, Please; Setting the Table: What to Use; Dishes and Glassware: How to Hold; What Is Flatware?; How a Table Is Set; Kitchen Work; Kinds of Foods; Large Kitchen Equipment; and Small Kitchen Equipment. (The last two lessons include a number of illustrations.) (LMS)

The aim of this curriculum guide is to help teachers train educable mentally retarded high school students with marketable skills, enabling them to compete in the world of work. Stress is on teaching appropriate work attitudes as well as skills. Four sections included are (1) Reading: Development of Reading Ability to Highest Intellectual Level, Development of Oral Comprehension to Same or Greater Degree, Ability to Read to Make Life and Work Easier; (2) Mathematics: Use of Four Basic Arithmetic Skills; (3) English: Ability to Communicate as Well in Writing as Vervally; (4) Preparation for Work: Assembly Line Worker, Worker for a Small Corporation, Short Order Cook, Restaurant Worker. Each section is presented in chart form with the following headings: Behavioral Objectives, Suggested Solution for Teacher, Suggested Activities for Students, and Evaluation. Each section is prefaced by a brief discussion and statement of the goals. Training activities are reinforced by nine appendixes. A bibliography and evaluation sheet for the curriculum guide are included. (TA)

The student manual has been designed primarily for beginning students in a high school level vocational program in building maintenance. A workbook for special needs students, the document does not cover all areas of custodial training but has been written for the purpose of refining the basic skills of reading comprehension, vocabulary building, spelling, word usage, and word recognition while relating these skills to some of the tasks a beginning student must know. Some of the building maintenance skills covered include dust-mopping and buffing floors, vacuuming, dusting, and lavatory cleaning. Lessons are intended to coincide with performing the actual activity in a shop situation. (Author/LJ)

Nine conference papers focus on education of educable mentally handicapped (EMH) children. A prototype evaluation of procedures for teaching reading comprehension involves assessment of 96 EMH or normal students' skills in identifying main and supporting ideas in connected discourse. Described is the Lincoln School's behavioral management system for EMH students, which stimulates the American capitalistic system through teacher development of a realistic environment, wherein students establish governing rules, and receive pay for good work and behavior. Reported are studies of contextual analysis and concept learning of normal and retarded children. Results of a token economy to develop money management skills in EMH students 12- to 17-years-old indicate higher competency levels in functional mathematics. Provided is a basis for assessing and programming retarded children's cognitive and motor development from infancy through 7 years of age. Described as adaptable for institutional or agency use is a model which evolved from a teacher's workshop in Pennsylvania in preparation for teaching previously excluded EMH children. Discussed is the Charles Carroll Occupational School's program for EMH boys, which offers prevocational and vocational education, and work study experience. Six of eight EMH girls are reported employable as maids after a 6 week training program, which included class and on-the-job training, slide presentations, and a pictorial manual. A prototype evaluation of procedures for teaching word meaning skills to EMH and normal pupils centers on 2 years' research on synonyms and homonyms. (MC)

 Activities, procedures, and resources are suggested for teaching reading comprehension skills to mentally retarded students. The document is intended as a handbook of teaching ideas based upon a flexible listing of sequential comprehension components. Comprehension skills are divided into five global grade levels and 12 major kinds of skills. Emphasis is upon individualizing instruction, using parents to reinforce school training, and presenting material audiovisually. Suggestions for classroom planning and program management are included. Major tests which can be used in the diagnosis of comprehension problems are summarized. Also included are resource lists of supplementary reading materials which can be used to teach comprehension skills, and a resource list of books for slow learners. (KW)

 The reading program for the junior high special curriculum which is described uses a protective vocabulary of about 100 words and phrases, experience charts, incidental materials, and basal texts. Basic considerations of the functioning of mentally handicapped children are used in determining the scope of the program; instructions are given for using types of reading procedures, including protective vocabulary, the experience story approach, and directed reading. Also considered are planning for directed reading activity, establishing a reading program, and developing comprehension and word recognition skills with both structural and phonetic analysis. Skill assignments and a developmental sequence of reading skills are given. The goals of the English program, the spelling and handwriting units, and the rewriting of reading materials are described. Illustrations and examples are given for the material and a 21-item bibliography is included. (SN)

 A READING PROGRAM WAS STUDIED AND TESTED FOR MENTALLY RETARDED ADOLESCENTS WHO READ SIGNIFICANTLY BELOW EXPECTANCY. THIS REPORT REFLECTS AN ORIGINAL ATTEMPT TO DEVELOP AN EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM ONLY FOR THOSE EDUCABLES WHO HAVE NOT LEARNED TO READ. THIS PLAN WAS DISCONTINUED WHEN PRELIMINARY SCREENING REVEALED ONLY A FEW NONREADERS AMONG THE COMMUNITY AREAS CHOSEN FOR THE STUDY. THE INVESTIGATION COVERED THE FOLLOWING AREAS (1) AN INVESTIGATION OF BACKGROUND FACTORS RELATING TO READING ACHIEVEMENT, (2) AN INQUIRY INTO LEVELS OF READING EXPECTANCY FOR EDUCABLES, INCLUDING THE KINDS AND AMOUNT OF READING WHICH MIGHT BE NEEDED, AND (3) AN EXPERIMENT WITH READING METHODS, MATERIALS, AND PROCEDURES. THE PROGRAM EMPHASIZED READING THROUGH THE EXPERIENCE-METHOD APPROACH WHICH MAKES USE OF INDIVIDUAL INTERESTS AND EXPERIENCES IN PRACTICAL AND MEANINGFUL WAYS THROUGHOUT THE SCHOOL DAY. TRADITIONAL AND SEMI-EXPERIENCE APPRO-

ACHES WERE ALSO USED TO MAKE A COMPARATIVE STUDY. PROGRAM RESULTS GAVE EVIDENCE THAT EDUCABLES ARE CAPABLE OF HIGHER ACHIEVEMENT WHEN APPROPRIATE EMPHASIS IS PLACED ON A SPECIFIC ACADEMIC AREA SUCH AS READING. IT WAS THE EMPHASIS ITSELF THAT SEEMED IMPORTANT TO READING PROGRESS, NOT THE PARTICULAR METHODS THROUGH WHICH EMPHASIS WAS APPLIED. (JH)

 grades one through three are described in this guide.
 The guide contains an introductory session and ten lessons designed to help children learn about three elements of plot (story line, buildup, and theme), the roles played by story characters, story mood and tone, elements of suspense and surprise, figurative and descriptive language, point of view, first-person and third-person stories, and mystery stories. The lessons include suggestions for discussion questions, activities, and recommended reading. The guide also suggests methods for helping students write original stories as a culminating project to the study of literature, learn to write simple book reviews, and evaluate the books they read. (GW)

The transcript of a four-part radio program on learning disabilities (LD) focuses on issues involving the definition, identification, and education of LD children. Definitional concerns are voiced by J. Gallagher, S. Kirk and S. Richardson. Controversy over prevalence estimates is discussed. Teachers of LD children comment on effective identification and education strategies for dyslexic and LD students. Teacher training is examined by M. Frostig and J. Gallagher. Reactions of an LD elementary student and an LD adult are cited. Other topics covered include reading and emotional problems of LD students, dangers in labeling children LD, and the teacher's role in working with LD students. (CL)

The 8-chapter booklet gives an overview of what is known and what remains to be known about developmental dyslexia. Chapter 1 defines the scope of reading problems in general, while chapter 2 defines dyslexia—"children who have difficulty learning to read, for no apparent reason". Chapter 4 outlines the normal reading process. Possible causes for dyslexia, including educational, biological, and psychological factors, are discussed in chapter 5. Developmental, corrective, and remedial teaching methods are explained in chapter 6. Chapters 7 and 8 deal with prognosis and needed research respectively. (PHR)

Presented for teachers of children with learning problems in regular classrooms, grades 1-4, this is a developmental, sequential guide for teaching reading at the primary, intermediate, and advanced levels. Material for each level is organized according to behavioral objectives, motivating activities, content (or theoretical base) and appropriate learning aids, and learning activities (or practical application). Teachers are advised to evaluate the children's status, to relate the content to individual needs of the children, to be enthusiastic and versatile, and to expect success. Given for each level are behavioral objectives and activities for vocabulary building, word recognition skills, comprehension associational abilities, oral reading skills, study skills, and library skills. As an example of the approach used to teach word recognition skills at the upper primary level, the pupils are expected to recognize familiar parts in longer words as measured by teacher observation, to analyze compound words such as "everyone", to use learning aids such as word games, and to perform learning activities such as finding two words in a compound word. (MC)

Identifiers—Elementary Secondary Education Act Title III, Nebraska

Presented in the language arts teaching guide, developed by Project Success (Nebraska) through a Title III grant for language handicapped elementary level students, are 33 basic lessons stressing phonics, a daily writing program, and ideas for creative writing. Noted are characteristics of students and goals of Project Success. The language program is said to begin simply with names, sounds, and forms of letters and to progress sequentially to more complex structures through a multisensory approach that integrates reading, writing, speaking, and listening. Emphasized are constant review, individualized learning stations, a relaxed classroom environment, and desirable teacher qualities such as sympathetic understanding. Directions for teaching a 1 1/2- to 2-hour daily lesson include aspects such as presenting the new skill; encoding (auditory), decoding (visual), and communicating. Listed for reference use is material such as the formation of letter sounds. Lessons are presented in terms of concepts, behavioral objectives, and procedures for introducing skills, building words, and reading. As an example, lesson 18 on the Magic e Syllable specifies skills such as adding a final e to words like cap and teaching procedures such as telling a story about a magic e that reaches over one consonant and sprinkles magic dust on the vowel to make it long. Listed are 44 language lesson topics such as contractions and letter writing. The daily writing program includes sequential steps such as picture presentation (said to be valuable for students having trouble with paragraphing), suggestions for evaluation and dictionary work, and motivation. Listed for creative writing are 178 topics such as "If I were President". Noted are ways to teach capitalization and punctuation. (MC)

Identifiers—Florida State University
The individualized reading curriculum guide contains conceptual and instructional models, instructional modules, and competency tests to be used by special education teachers for exceptional children. The curriculum is said to be a critical component of the model developed at Florida State University for trainee demonstration of competency in diagnosis and intervention during practicum experience. The conceptual model gives guidelines for reading competency, major competency tests, performance objectives and cluster competency tests. Reading competency is defined as integration of the four major skills of pre-reading, reading-phonetics, reading-linguistics, and reading comprehension. The criterion referenced competency tests are said to be helpful in diagnosis. Individualized instructional modules described include auditory and visual discrimination, memory, sequential memory, comprehension, and visual letter knowledge in the area of pre-reading; consonants and vowels in the area of reading-linguistics; and phonetics-linguistics, word and phrase meaning, syntax, sentence and paragraph meaning in the area of reading comprehension. Usually given for each area (or competency) is the model cluster (such as visual discrimination), module (such as discrimination of position), purpose, behavioral objectives, instructional resources/options/activities, and sample test items. Appended are lists of words and sentences to illustrate such aspects as rhyming, consonant blending, blends, prefixes, or sentence meaning. Intended as an instructional guideline, the last of three reports on taxonomic instruction explains strategy development and use in instruction. The instructional content is reading, with a target population of emotionally disturbed, underachieving students. Strategies are defined as instructional actions resulting from a process of experimentation and hypothesis testing by the teacher. The taxonomy is intended, therefore, as an organizing index for instructional behavior of teachers. The content of reading is described as being divided into basic skills, basic subskills, and sequential levels. The reading instruction strategy is described as enriposed of settings of student grouping, modes of instruction, sensory modality input channels for a student's reception of information, and sensory modality output channels for a student's expression of information. Each aspect of instructional strategies is explained with examples of taxonomic strategies. Achievement of individualization and personalization in strategies is then explained. Included are different tests and observations used in strategy formation. Then four case studies are presented illustrating the decision making process in strategy formation. Concluding is a discussion on relationship of strategy use and formation to computer assisted instruction. (See also EC 040 216 and EC 040 217.) (CB)

Dyslexia is too often a general category for an assortment of reading disabilities. Reading ability might be considered as a continuum ranging from lexia to dyslexia with no implication regarding the cause of the disability. Instead of labeling the child with a reading problem a failure, present teaching techniques should be evaluated on the basis of their effectiveness in individual situations. The initial stages of learning to read comprise a highly complex perceptual learning function that varies from child to child, and current reading tests frequently do not measure these differences. Until better tests are developed, it is the teacher's responsibility to diagnose individual differences in learning styles. A suggested model for classroom diagnosis provides all students with a rich language experience program that allows early identification of quick perceptual learners. The slower learners could then be given special attention through the use of various individualized approaches to the teaching of reading. (BS)

TWO SETS OF MULTISENSORY DEVICES WERE USED TO DETERMINE WHETHER THEIR INDIVIDUALIZED USE WOULD HELP RETARDED READERS DEVELOP A BASIC SIGHT VOCABULARY. STUDENTS WHO HAD SPENT 9 OR 10 YEARS IN SCHOOL AND WHO WERE READING AT THE SECOND-READER INSTRUCTIONAL LEVEL WERE GIVEN THE DANIELS WORD RECOGNITION LIST, FORMS A AND B, AS PRETESTS AND POST-TESTS. NEW WORDS WERE LEARNED THROUGH THE "LANGUAGE MASTER" WHICH ALLOWS EACH STUDENT TO SEE THE WORD, HEAR IT, AND SAY IT. AFTER MASTERING THE WORDS, THE CHILD CHECKED HIS SKILL THROUGH THE "FLASH X" WHICH FLASHES A WORD ONE THIRTIETH OF A SECOND. TESTS ON WORDS MOST FREQUENTLY USED IN READING AND WRITING ENGLISH WERE GIVEN PERIODICALLY. SINCE NINE OUT OF 10 STUDENTS TESTED GAINED 1 YEAR IN BASIC SIGHT WORD RECOGNITION, IT SEEMED THAT THE INDIVIDUALIZED USE OF THE MULTISENSORY DEVICES HELPED DEVELOP A BASIC SIGHT VOCABULARY. IT IS RECOMMENDED THAT A DEFINITE SCHEDULE FOR PRACTICE AND CHECKING BE ARRANGED FOR THE STUDENTS, THAT TEACHERS BE GIVEN MORE TIME THROUGH BETTER STRUCTURING, AND THAT MORE SCIENTIFICALLY CONTROLLED RESEARCH BE MADE. THE IMAGE STORY IS WRITTEN BY THE TEACHER FOR A CLASS, SMALL GROUP, OR INDIVIDUAL IN AN ATTEMPT TO CAST EACH STUDENT IN A POSITIVE IMAGE THE STUDENT PREFERS. THE STUDENT-CREATED ANTHOLOGY IS A BOOKLET OF FICTIONAL, TRUE NARRATIVES, OR AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES WRITTEN BY STUDENTS AND USED, WITH THEIR PERMISSION, AS ONE OF THE READING TEXTS. THESE THREE DEVICES FOR TEACHING RETARDED READERS ARE DESCRIBED AND ILLUSTRATED IN THIS GUIDE. THEY ARE OFFERED AS POSSIBLE AIDS WITHIN A TOTAL READING PROGRAM, NOT AS THE SOLE COMPONENTS OF SUCH A PROGRAM. STEP BY STEP EXPLANATIONS OF THE PREPARATION, USE EVALUATION, AND SHARING OF THESE DEVICES ARE PROVIDED. THE NECESSITY FOR THE TEACHER TO KNOW AND UNDERSTAND EACH CHILD IS STRESSED, BUT THE TEACHER IS CAUTIONED TO AVOID ASSUMING THE ROLE OF PSYCHOLOGIST. CLASSROOM-TESTED SAMPLE MATERIALS ARE INCLUDED TO ILLUSTRATE, FOR POSSIBLE EXPERIMENTAL USE. MATERIALS POPULAR WITH STUDENTS AND TO ENCOURAGE TEACHERS TO COMPOSE AND ADAPT THEIR OWN READING MATERIALS. (RD)

Noting that sensory impaired children often have poorly developed or ungeneralized concept development that impedes their ability to comprehend stories or content texts, this paper presents a brief description of the learning problems of these children as they relate to the reading process. It then presents implications for teaching reading and a model of concept development. Designed for teachers who feel unprepared for mainstreamed children, the suggested activities offer a "common sense" approach to adapting the curriculum and materials for the sensory impaired child. The materials help the teacher monitor student progress on a unit to unit basis; diagnose reading difficulties and prescribe appropriate learning activities; and provide a variety of reading experiences for the student; such as alternative typefaces, formats and subject matter. Each unit contains line by line or lesson by lesson instructions for the teacher and materials to be used by the student. Many units are followed by criterion exercises to evaluate student learning. Word attack skills, equipment orientation, and recognition of upper and lower case letters and numerals are among the content areas of the units. (CL)

 The activity cards present supplementary ideas and resources related to economic education for use by classroom teachers in grades K-8. The main purpose of the cards is to encourage student discovery of basic economic and consumer concepts through activities which stress reading and writing skills. The 28 activities deal with a variety of basic concepts, including consumers, producers, diversity of goods and services, economists, wants and resources, labor, market economics, budgeting. ecoomic choice, capital resources, competition, advertising, labeling, entrepreneurs, investment, supply and demand, and human resources. Each card outlines one topic (an economic idea) and suggests a related activity. Students create bulletin boards and dioramas, summarize ideas related to the topics, draw charts and graphs, take field trips to community stores and markets, define and illustrate terms on flash cards, simulate consumer roles, and write product reviews. Although appropriate grade levels are not designated for each activity, it is suggested that teachers use the cards with individual students, or duplicate the cards as worksheets for classroom studybooks. While the games may be used by children in small groups, they were designed primarily for the child to explore alone. The games are described and organized in a sequence of three basic concepts: objects can be organized according to shape, color, and size; objects can be organized by their identity; and objects can be organized according to relationships. These concepts are then developed in a series of 64 games through which the child may discover organizational relationships. The purpose of the games is to help children transfer concrete knowledge into abstract concepts. This booklet describes approximately 30 instructional games submitted by Oregon teachers and teacher resource centers. The games are organized in two major sections—one for reading games and one for mathematics games. Within each section, games are grouped according to the similarity of their format; for example, all "road race" games are listed together. Those games with a unique format are listed at the end of each section. Each entry lists the game title and the number of players recommended by the person who submitted the game. Materials for constructing each game are given along with the instructions for play. Rule variations and different techniques for maintaining player interest or altering the level of difficulty are also suggested. A bibliography, which lists readings on the use of instructional games and resource guides that describe games and similar activities, is also included. (Author/JG)

Developed by the Oregon Elementary English Project, this curriculum unit on language games and activities is intended for grades one and two. The games and activities are designed to make the child aware of language indirectly by requiring him to construct sentences of various kinds, observe relations between parts of sentences and between words, use various kinds of sentence parts in the proper place, construct words, alphabetize, categorize, and focus attention on the sounds of language. For the child the emphasis is on the game; the specific objective, however, is stated at the beginning of each game or activity. Sample sets of material for the first eight games are provided in separate manila folders which are labeled with the name of the game and instructions for using the materials. Many of the lessons also include supplementary materials consisting of such things as tapes, charts, overhead projector materials, and activity cards. (HOD)

Three game approaches to the teaching of poetry, designed to make the student actively involved with poems are described as "teaching tools." The semantico-dictionary or word-cross game involves programing techniques, logic, and lexicography in poetic analysis. The punched-out poem game involves filling in the blanks of a poem in which all the words supplied act as cues. The poem-paradigm game used traditional sentence outlining to show how sub-parts are interrelated. Byron's poem "She Walks in Beauty" is used as the example for all three games. The influence of Wittgenstein, Descartes, and I.A. Richards is briefly discussed as well as the Cloze procedure in game theory. (AF)

Presented are units prepared by the participants of Arizona's Migrant Teacher Institutes which were organized to train participants in the implementation of individualized instruction. Part I describes what a learning center is, how to begin and evaluate learning centers, and the distinguishing features between a teaching unit and a resource unit. Suggested learning center activities presented on the topic of food include: a language center featuring show and tell and use of the telephone to order groceries; a math center with play money to buy groceries and estimating exercises; a science or health center using food and food pictures to distinguish likenesses and differences and to classify foods by taste; an art center with macaroni art; a music center with songs about food; and an audio-media center using food related films and tape recordings of children eating food. Part II presents six complete resource units; collections of suggested teaching and learning experiences and materials are organized around a selected topic or area. Each unit includes goals, objectives, specific teacher-directed motivational activities, committee and group work projects permitting students to make alternative topic choices and approaches, pre- and post-unit evaluative measures, and a unit-concluding activity. The grade K-3 units focus on animals, dinosaurs, and community awareness. The grade 4-8 unit topics concern the migrant worker, air and water pollution, and life in the middle ages. (NEC)

The objective of this teaching guide is to provide a comprehensive system for individualizing reading instruction through planning, organization, management, and skillful teaching. The planning stage involves establishing goals, reality bases, work bases and flows, and review, evaluation, and revision. The organization of program content involves structures and foundations of reading, a scope and sequence for the program, and readability evaluations of materials. The environmental management component involves management of both materials and the classroom. Effective teaching, finally, must include both an instructional strand (including assessment using informal inventory, and actual instruction), and an independent reading strand. Additional sections on working with beginning readers and the whole process in action are also included. (DS)

Individualized, self-directed correction in elementary level reading instruction becomes a reality when pupils can work independently with materials that provide instruction and practice in the skills in which they are deficient and can check the accuracy of their own answers. Commercially prepared teacher-directed materials can be converted to pupil-directed materials through the provision of simple directions and answer keys; answers may be provided in a variety of ways that ensure that they cannot be seen prematurely. The likelihood of cheating can be minimized if the teacher emphasizes learning rather than grading. Among materials that can be used in an individualized, self-directed program are the following: electronic card readers through which pupils observe a visual presentation, listen to a teacher-recorded audio portion, and record their responses; tape recorders, which can be used in the teaching of sight words; teacher-made reading kits that provide a supply of practice material; and reading games. Reliable diagnostic procedures must be used in planning such a program. (GW)

This booklet is Part II of a two-part manual for teaching reading through the Systems Approach to Individualized Instruction (SAII) program developed at Llanaztan Elementary School in Josephine County, Oregon. Part II describes the SAII program in detail and is intended for use by elementary teachers as a day-to-day reference for teaching reading by the SAII method. The SAII program uses basically the same approach for grades 1 through 6, although the routine is usually more challenging for first graders to master. Chapters 1 through 5 present an overview and outline of the basic SAII system, and chapter 6 focuses on the unique requirements of the first-grade program. The appendix contains a hierarchy of reading skill activities, sample instructional materials and tests, sample planning and record-keeping forms, and an instructional flow chart. (Author/JG)

The program described in this paper was based upon the premise that the activity of cooking in the classroom is an excellent way of integrating all areas of learning and a very useful reading vehicle. Through cooking activities and related field trips, children can add to both their knowledge in basic subject areas and their motor skills as well as art, writing, and reading skills. Kindergarten children read two-dimensional recipes, first graders read large-scale recipes (similar to language-experience charts), and children in second grade and above use cookbooks on an individual reading basis. The Dale Avenue Project was developed in the Dale Avenue School, Paterson, New Jersey through funding from the Elementary Secondary Education Act Title III. The project was validated in 1973 by the standards and guidelines of the U.S. Office of Education as innovative, successful, cost-effective, and exportable. As a result, the New Jersey ESEA Title III program is funding the project as a demonstration site to offer interested educators the opportunity to see the program in operation and receive training in its replication. This manual is stated to have been prepared as a guide for the administrator who is responsible for the introduction, maintenance, and evaluation of the Dale Avenue Project in any educational setting. The Dale Avenue Project: A Performance Objective Curriculum for Prekindergarten through Third Grade is considered to have been successful in raising the academic performance level of urban, educationally disadvantaged children to the national norm. The curriculum is divided into ten areas that were determined by a needs assessment carried out by the original project's development staff. The Performance Objectives in each area begin with the minimal skill that a child must exhibit in order to enter prekindergarten and progress to complex skills that are consistent with the developmental capabilities of third grade children. The Dale Avenue Project: A Performance Objective Curriculum for Prekindergarten through Third

Grade, funded under 1965 Elementary Secondary Education Act Title III, is asserted to have been successful in raising the academic performance level of urban, educationally disadvantaged children to the national norm. The curriculum is divided into ten areas that are stated to have been determined by a needs assessment carried out by the original project's development staff. Paterson children showed deficits in Listening, Naming, Observing, Speaking, Mathematics, Writing and Motor Skills, Perceptual Motor Skills, Decoding/Encoding, Classification, and Seriation. The Performance Objectives in each area begin with the minimal skill that a child must exhibit in order to enter prekindergarten and progress to complex skills that are consistent with the developmental capabilities of eight year old children. The teacher has the freedom to teach the skills and concepts in any way that she wishes. This enables her to use her own talents and to find the teaching method that suits the child best. The objectives are considered compatible with any learning materials since they are a compilation of skills that apply to all subject areas and reinforce one another. The program's essential components are stated to be: (1) the use of the performance objectives as a curriculum; (2) a forty-five minute reading program which utilizes all available school staff; and, (3) an intense parent involvement program. A pilot program, established at Griffin Creek School (Medford, Oregon) from September 1970 to June 1971, consisted of five Laubach-trained volunteer reading tutors, an experimental group of five fifth- and sixth-grade boys, and a control group of eighteen boys and girls in a regular classroom. The experimental boys, reading at a second- or third-grade level at the beginning of the project, met four days a week with their individual tutors and once weekly for an hour of group instruction. Control group students were reading at levels ranging from the second grade to the sixth grade. The Gates-MacGinitie Reading Tests (1965) were administered to both groups at the beginning and at the end of the project, with the experimental group receiving an additional testing in April 1971. Results showed that the range of reading gain for the experimental group was from nine to sixteen months, that 100 percent of the experimental group showed a gain in the comprehensive or vocabulary test sections, and that the range for the control group was from a loss of four months to a gain of 27 months, with 89 percent showing some gain in comprehension or vocabulary. Appendixes provide reading scores, a lesson plan guide, and a rationale for letter sound mnemonics. (JM)

The contents of this document, concerning the demonstration of a linkage between monetary incentives and academic achievement motivation and the utilization of this knowledge in educational programs, are organized in three sections. The first section is a report of an experimental demonstration of "the effect of monetary incentives on test performance of a sample of pupils in four Detroit public schools." The second section, "The effect of a self instructional-contingency managed mathematics program on student test performance," reports a study the purpose of which was to determine the effect of the SIMPLE (Self-Instructional Mathematics Program, Learn and Earn) program on the performance of students on a standardized achievement test. The third section, "Contingency managed self instruction self instructional reading laboratory," describes another application of the linkage between motivation and monetary incentives. The Self Instructional Reading Laboratory consists of the following key features: individualization, self instruction, self management, high motivation, differentiated staffing, and class size reduction. Emphasizing successful reading instruction as a nonrepetitive, creative process which provides the child with both challenge and opportunities for success, units in this handbook focus on the child as an individual—his behavior, his maturity, and his capacities for understanding, learning, and creating. Each of the 10 units provides teaching techniques and classroom examples concerning the child as he (1) explores and discovers, (2) listens, (3) talks, (4) expresses his ideas in writing, (5) feels competent, (6) gives clues to the teacher, (7) follows clues given by the teacher, (8) learns to select materials and activities, (9) helps and is helped by other children, and (10) thinks for himself. Appended are suggestions for teacher preparation, for developing specific reading skills, and for the use of audio-visual materials; recommended independent learning activities; a section on language development in the content fields—science, social studies, math, art, and music; and a brief bibliography. Today's most promising techniques for differentiating reading teaching are noted to be those which focus upon the individuals within the classroom. Short descriptions are given of nine programs which differentiate reading instruction, and the reader is urged to adopt their most promising features. Programs described are intraclass grouping (multiple grouping within the classroom), varied exposure to reading in kindergarten, individualized reading, team teaching, programed instruction, computer-assisted instruction, pupil learning according to need (PLAN), individually prescribed instruction, and personalized progress. Reading programs in 3 small elementary schools are discussed and evaluated by the teachers involved. The first and second programs involved individualized multilevel reading materials and reading labs. Testing indicated, and instructors felt, that students showed more growth than they had under former methods (especially the middle and top groups). The third program involved taped daily reading lessons with earphones for students, thus allowing the teacher to give more individual attention to the students. The teacher of this program concluded that the thorough presentation of reading skills on the tape recorder gave students the ultimate in reading instruction. (AN)

THE INDIVIDUALIZED METHOD OF TEACHING READING IS BEING USED IN SCHOOLS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, AND MORE AND MORE SCHOOLS ARE BEGINNING TO TRY IT. THE MONOGRAPH WAS PREPARED TO HELP THOSE INTERESTED IN INDIVIDUALIZED READING TO UNDERSTAND THE METHOD, THE PROBLEMS WHICH MAY ARISE, AND HOW IT COMPARES, IN DETAIL, WITH THE METHOD OF GROUP READING. INDIVIDUALIZED READING IMPLIES THAT THE CHILDREN ARE SEATED AT THEIR DESKS IN A CLASSROOM, EACH WITH A DIFFERENT BOOK HE HAS SELECTED. EACH CHILD RECEIVES INDIVIDUAL HELP FROM THE TEACHER AND PARTICIPATES IN SHARING WHAT HE HAS LEARNED WITH THE OTHER CHILDREN. THE INDIVIDUALIZED METHOD ASSUMES THAT "SPECIAL NEED" GROUPS WILL BE USED TO LEARN CERTAIN SKILLS SUCH AS PHONICS. PROBLEMS DISCUSSED INCLUDE TEACHER CONTROL OVER THE CLASS, CLASS SIZE, AND THE SUPPLY OF ENOUGH BOOKS TO SUPPORT THE PROGRAM. THERE ARE NO CLEAR SOLUTIONS, BUT SATISFACTORY RESULTS HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED THROUGH INGENUITY AND RESOURCEFULNESS. EXPERIMENTS TO MEASURE THE COMPARATIVE VALUE OF INDIVIDUALIZED READING TO GROUP READING HAVE NOT LED TO A DECISIVE CONCLUSION BECAUSE OF THE DIFFICULTY IN COMPARING EQUAL TEACHERS WORKING EQUALLY HARD, CHILDREN OF EQUAL BACKGROUND AND INTELLIGENCE, EQUAL TIME AND EMPHASIS, AND EQUAL CLASS SIZES. SUCH RESULTS AS THE GROWTH OF CHILDREN'S ENTHUSIASMS FOR READING BECAUSE OF THE INDIVIDUALIZED METHOD ARE MEASURED. IT SEEMS LIKELY THAT BOTH METHODS WILL TAKE A PLACE IN THE REPERTORY OF A SKILLED READING TEACHER. THIS ARTICLE WAS REPRINTED FROM "ELEMENTARY ENGLISH," DECEMBER 1961.

 Materials contained in this booklet were developed to assist the teacher in a self-contained classroom to develop, organize, and utilize learning centers for reading and the language arts. Learning centers in a self-contained classroom are designated areas where students may go to work on a specific skill related to a new concept or a skill reinforcement. Centers allow group interaction and flexibility in skills grouping, freedom for the teacher to work with small skills or individuals, and also provide opportunities for students to move around and work with their peers in a variety of experiences. Self-selection, self-motivation, self-pacing, and self-correcting are desirable results which can come from a room with adequate learning centers. A procedure outline suggests guidelines for a teacher beginning to develop learning centers. Management suggestions are offered in the areas of room arrangement, scheduling, record keeping, organizing materials, support services, center standards, center tracking sheets, and evaluation. Sample center activities are described for kindergarten, primary, intermediate, and secondary students. A section of diagnostic/prescriptive teaching through the use of learning centers is provided. The author explains that there does not exist one single method of teaching reading since there are different teaching styles and preferences of individual teachers; varied backgrounds, experiences, and abilities among children; and different school administration considerations. Five approaches for teaching reading are described. (1) The developmental guided basal approach uses a systematized series of basal books, workbooks, tests, and reading aids. Different basal series may stress different methods: sight word method, intensive phonics program, balanced phonics, or the linguistics approach. (2) The highly individualized language experience approach emphasizes the child's own language and experience while reading is taught as one part of the total communication process. (3) Individualized reading programs encourage children to read widely according to their own interests and levels. (4) Independent learning activities expose children to programed instruction, often mechanized, to learn reading independently at their own pace, and (5) The initial teaching alphabet provides 44 symbols to represent English sounds. It is recommended that parents understand the reading programs in their child's school so that they can cooperate with the teachers to achieve the goal of competent readers. This brochure is one of a series commissioned by the National Reading Center to help inform all citizens about reading issues and to promote functional literacy. (AW)

The 16 papers which make up this volume of conference proceedings are related to the general theme of providing classroom instruction which will meet the needs of all individuals in the classroom. Four major areas with which the conference was concerned are (1) the nature and extent of differences, (2) diagnosis as a blueprint for action, (3) strategies for teaching, and (4) affective factors which in the final analysis determine how well children learn. Among the speech topics are using classroom management strategies, creating tastes and interests, teaching study skills and content reading in various secondary school subjects, and diagnosing through looking at total behavior. Individualized reading and mathematics programs in the United States and Canada were surveyed as a means of providing a report of successful programs for use by the Calgary, Alberta, schools. The report contains definitions of terms related to individualized programs, statements of rationale for individualized reading and mathematics programs, guidelines for individualizing instruction, and descriptions of existing programs. Aspects of individualized programs are described, and approaches for use in such programs are recommended. Individualized instruction is strongly recommended, and a comprehensive plan is proposed through which transition might be smoothly made from the present basal system to individualized instruction. A list of schools and centers visited and an extensive bibliography are included. (MS)

Individualizing instruction is not in itself the answer to the problem of teaching all children to read. With the development of many new materials and devices, problems relative to meeting the needs of each child may be compounded. There is danger that the child may become isolated from what should be a community of learners. Reading as a social process is developed through social context. This includes a need for relevancy. Instead of enclosing learning within the four walls of the classroom, the outside world—the child's real world—can be brought in through the use of newspapers, filmmaking, research, current magazines, and other activities and materials. Whether a language-experience approach or a basal reader approach is used, reading materials can be selected which have meaning for the student. For learning to take place most effectively, it is necessary that the teacher and student together organize and structure a student-centered environment. Two important qualities of the teacher who can encourage this type of structure are (1) creativity and (2) the ability to develop a questioning attitude in her students which will lead to their making decisions and choice. References are included. (DH)

 The purpose of this publication is to show parents how they can facilitate their children's growth in reading. Section one suggests numerous parental activities to aid children's reading growth, such as reading to children, talking and listening to them, giving them responsibilities, and building a reading atmosphere at home. Sections two and three present a pyramid of reading skills and a summary of consonant and vowel sounds. Section four discusses games and activities that pertain to the following areas: visual and auditory discrimination, sight and meaning vocabulary, word attack skills, library and study skills, and comprehension. Section five describes recommended books for parents of children in the primary grades, and section six presents a core vocabulary list, a list of Dolch basic sight words, and a handwriting model.  This handbook is designed to help parents help their children learn to read and to deal successfully with school tasks. It contains suggested activities and games, many of which can be made at home. Suggestions are also given for how to make reading an easy, pleasant task instead of a difficult tiring one. Suggestions are offered for children of all grade levels, from preschool (readiness) through secondary. A special reference section lists children's books and periodicals, games to improve particular skills, books for younger children, and useful materials to save. This handbook might be helpful to reading and resource room teachers as well as to parents. A separate volume, the instructor's manual, provides PASS program goals and implementation strategies. (BP)

 A community-based course sponsored by Project TRAIN was designed to teach parents techniques and activities to be used at home to reinforce children's reading skills and to increase their interest in reading. Parents who showed an interest in reading, who read to their children, and who played word games with them indicated to their children, by their actions, that reading is a valued activity. This course consisted of four meetings, with topics and activities. The purpose of the first meeting was to explore the learning-to-read process; a simulation activity was used as explanation and demonstration of how children learn to recognize words by sight, using flash cards with pictures and words. The second meeting focused on learning sounds: the parents made picture cards designed for matching initial sounds, learned how to help their children make a collage of pictures with the same ending sounds, and played word games. In the third meeting, the parents learned activities using labels from common household items, for example, circling on a milk carton label all words beginning with the same sound as cat. The last meeting focused on how to build the meanings of new words through a guessing-game procedure and how to construct scavenger hunts. (MB)

 This teacher guide describes a parent education course designed to develop the skills of preschool and elementary school children by introducing parents to a number of learning activities suitable for implementation at home. The guide contains a series of seven lesson plans focusing on: (1) what the child learns in the primary grades, (2) how the parent can help a child do his best in school, (3) muscle development, (4) speech habits, (5) reading skills, (6) writing skills, and (7) mathematics. Each lesson plan is divided into two parts: directed activities to be used in the class with the parents and home activities for the parents' use with their children. Parent take-home sheets, which can be duplicated in quantities sufficient for distribution, make up half the booklet. (CS)

 The purpose of this manuscript is to encourage the development of the communication skills of preschool children by introducing their parents to a number of learning activities suitable for implementation in the home. It is written to be used by an instructor who is working with preschool parents. The activities, which are designed to be uncomplicated and reasonable in cost and invested time, are grouped in 10 sections: (1) knowing the child; (2) what happens between parent and child; (3) setting goals for the child; (4) emphasizing everyday happenings; (5) reading to children; (6) using free and inexpensive materials for language experiences; (7) making the alphabet letters; (8) games that can be made at home; (9) writing down children's experiences; and (10) writing stories with the child. Each of the sections contains directed activities to be performed with the instructor's guidance, at home activities involving the parent and child, and parent take-home sheets with information and exercises they can use to increase their own knowledge. Some benefits of the program are listed; the major expectation is that the activities will enhance a child's chances of success in the initial stages of learning to read and write. (SDH)

Comprehension is seen as involving meaningful communication between author and reader. Different degrees of comprehension such as literal comprehension, evaluation, reorganization, and reaction are discussed, and experience, intelligence, language development, and decoding skills are noted as important factors which influence reading comprehension. In addition to perceptive questioning and group discussions, using a wide variety of materials, giving background information, and utilizing listening activities are included as teaching strategies for developing comprehension. Parental understanding of reading comprehension and how it is achieved is seen as an important contribution to the child's educational success. References are included. (RT)

This paper recommends that poetry rather than other literary forms be used to teach creative reading and writing to young children. The advantages of using poetry are described as follows: inhibitions are overcome quickly; opportunities for a wider range and more complex level of student achievement are created; high quality pieces of writing are composed in a reasonable time; penmanship, grammar, spelling and syntax are mastered; and sensitivity, social acceptance, and a sense of self worth are developed. The paper also includes basic directions for implementing a creative writing/reading program, suggestions for encouraging a playful atmosphere in such a program, and a set of six creative writing lesson plans. A new kind of reading-language processing system, which has been in use at the Patterson Road School (Orcutt, California) since December 1972, is described in this document. The program consists of two ungraded reading chains of twelve groups each (determined by reading comprehension) which meet for 45 minutes daily, read material above the group's tested total reading level, and decode unfamiliar words using the Formula Phonics System learned by videotape at the beginning of the program. Reading matter—short stories first, then novels and other works—is chosen for literary worth and interest level and instruction is designed to teach critical thinking with open-ended questioning and to reinforce thinking processes and reading skills by writing tasks keyed to the reading experience. Pupils move up on the chain upon the teacher's recommendation. Detailed information about the reading chain design, staff development procedures, specific methodology, and the school is included in this document. A separate leaflet contains a discussion of a program evaluation scale and an evaluation-contrast form to be used after viewing "Video Trip to Patterson Road School." (JM)

This program, included in "Effective Reading Programs..." serves 720 predominantly white students in kindergarten through grade six. The program, located in a small rural town in which families are mobile but incomes are low ($6000 annually), began in 1970. Needs-based instruction is the focus of the program. The reading curriculum is organized into an ordered number of levels, and the schedule is arranged to provide for a two-hour period of instruction in reading and special areas (art, music, instructional media, and physical education). Approximately 50 minutes of this time are devoted to small-group reading instruction. On the basis of continuous informal diagnosis and evaluation, teachers place each student on the level that suits his or her needs; grade levels are not used. The student is given a prescription card for reading activities and is allowed to proceed at her or his own pace. A 30-minute period is provided daily for teachers to meet and evaluate student progress, plan teaching strategies, and discuss utilization of materials. (RB/AIR)

The education television programs presented in this manual are designed to acquaint viewers and readers with the variety of reading methods and approaches which are receiving wide attention today. The series consists of 15 one-half hour programs, each of which is designed to accomplish the following objectives: to explain the philosophy and viewpoint of an approach, to acquaint teachers with the materials used in the approach, to have a master teacher demonstrate the approach, to discuss with the teachers why they might use a particular approach, to discuss and review with nationally known experts in the field of reading the pros and cons of each method or system to be studied, and to analyze and evaluate each approach fairly. The approaches and topics covered are: words in color, the Initial Teaching Alphabet, perceptual approaches, linguistic approaches, language experience, phonic supplements, individualized reading, programmed instruction, language and reading readiness, enrichment and supplementary materials, and the basal reader. A materials index is also included. (WR)

The purpose of this project was to increase the reading achievement of students in kindergarten through grade 8 in three rural schools in Shasta County, California. Current practices in the teaching of reading and the fine arts were analyzed and recommendations were made for the implementation of new techniques and methods to be incorporated into the reading program. It was hoped that these innovations would result, at the end of the project, in students reading at significantly higher levels. Activities consisted of the finalization of program design and the printing and distribution of an operational program manual. A teacher inservice program provided instructional activities to promote teacher acquisition of predetermined skills. (Author/WR)

The development of reading programs by publishers traditionally began with the selection of a qualified team of authors and consultants who then worked with editors in the research, development, and writing of a program. Another approach now emerging begins instead with the identification of learning needs, the specification of outcomes, and the overall design of a program to meet the following needs: instruction, content, and pedagogy. Learning strategies take precedence over teaching strategies. Authors are often not determined until the overall structure of the program is identified and the authors' roles are defined. Field tryouts of representative units or modules are conducted prior to full development of a complete multiyear program. The present model for program development in reading also stresses data on pupil performance and pupil attitudes accumulated in field tests, rather than the recorded impressions of teachers. An increasing number of new programs stress field testing of teacher-training systems to assure that the programs will work as intended. Developmental research and development models in publishing have moved from a concern with the improvement of content to a concern for pupils' performance. (RB)

This teacher's handbook for computer assisted instruction (CAI) in reading describes a CAI program and presents sample lessons. The reading program for grades 3-6 consists of reading practice items designed to develop the student's skills in five areas: word analysis, vocabulary extension, comprehension of sentence structure, interpretation of written material, and development of study skills. The program is divided into two parts: (1) Basic Sentences begins at grade level 2.5 and ends at grade level 3.5. All the items in this section represent the simplest type of practice problem that can be presented in a contemporary CAI system. (2) The section on strands, which are sequences of related items, extends from grade level 3.5 through the sixth grade. There is one strand for each of the five areas covered by the program. All the material in the program is organized into classes, groups containing five items, or questions, of similar difficulty. Examples of introductory lessons, answer formats, and topic lists for each strand are presented. (WR)

A SUMMER PROGRAM WAS CONDUCTED TO SERVE AS A MODEL FOR EDUCATORS WHOSE INTEREST LAY IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF A NONGRADED ELEMENTARY SCHOOL PROGRAM. EDUCATORS FROM APPROXIMATELY 35 PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEMS WERE INVITED TO OBSERVE THE PROGRAM. THE SCHOOL CONSISTED OF 80 CHILDREN 6 TO 12 YEARS OLD, AND A GROUP OF 20 CHILDREN 5 YEARS OLD. THE EMPHASIS WAS PLACED ON READING AND MATHEMATICS, WITH ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES INCLUDING SPANISH, RHYTHMS, LISTENING SKILLS, AND RECREATION. QUESTIONNAIRES, ACHIEVEMENT TESTS, AND INTERVIEWS WERE THE MEASUREMENT PROCEDURES EMPLOYED. THE CONCLUSIONS INDICATED THAT THE PROGRAM WAS GENERALLY A SUCCESS. THE NEED OF MATERIALS TO MEET STUDENT DEMANDS WAS BELIEVED TO BE MOST CRUCIAL FOR DEVELOPING SUCH A PROGRAM. (RS)

 Reading teachers should be flexible enough to adapt to varying situations that they encounter when they are asked to develop school-wide reading programs. Under ideal conditions, the faculty and administration are enthusiastic volunteers who accomplish the bulk of the reading program's objectives in their classrooms, allowing the reading specialist to serve as a general advisor and resource person and to focus on students with specific reading problems. When faculty are less than enthusiastic and supportive, yet available for limited duties, the reading teacher creates a reading program that parallels content-area coursework and uses content-area instructors as advisors and resource persons. When no faculty enthusiasm or support for a reading program exists, the reading teacher shares responsibility for program content with the students, using thematic units, learning centers with relaxed environments, self-paced individual activities, and small group activities that allow the reading teacher enough free time to work with students who need special attention. Topics for major addresses included the role of the volunteer, training of volunteers and the responsibility for such training, and a report on Sesame Street. Training demonstrations were given on the role of the volunteer in child development and in utilizing methods and materials. Panel discussions were held on a number of topics related to volunteers, including methods and skills, materials, training, recruitment, and funding. A program based on the personalized system of instruction (PSI) was written and used in a developmental reading-study skills course for college freshmen. The following principles characterize the PSI: emphasis on the use of written materials—textbook references, questions, and teacher-developed worksheets; the required passing of a mastery test before proceeding to the next module; self pacing for each student; lectures and class activities that are sources of motivation and of critical information; and the use of paraprofessionals, students, or peers in the class as proctors in correcting mastery tests and related materials. Student response to the course was positive and prompted a refining of the program. (MA1)

This paper gives college reading instructors a four-part prescription to ensure the continued success of their college reading programs: Dispel the myth of remediation that separates college reading programs from traditional academic departments. Define and articulate a philosophy for reading instruction at the college level. Expand college reading programs, offering them to all students. Correlate the content of the reading program to the content in academic courses, so that the reading program reflects the demands made of students in their coursework. (R1)

The 12 model assignments presented in this booklet are designed to help secondary-level students become more skillful and knowledgeable readers and to encourage the appreciation of literature. Each assignment provides a general objective, a product that the student is to create, a list of concepts and skills necessary to complete the assignment, a checklist for students to follow, a list of educational objectives which are specifically related to students' actions during the course of the assignment, suggestions for extending the assignment, and an example of a form or an excerpt from a text which can help students complete the assignment. Options are described for using these resource materials as class projects or as independent study assignments. Exercises include reviewing the dominant elements of setting (using haiku), identifying an episode in a novel or biography which lends itself to dramatization (using reader's theater), demonstrating understanding of technical language in a nonfiction book (using a crossword puzzle), and so on. (KS)

This program, included in "Effective Reading Programs..." serves 250 students a year at a small-town junior college. The first- and second-year college students, primarily white, are from families earning between $6,000 and $15,000 annually. The program began in 1964 and offers two elective college reading courses that are open to college students and community adults. Minicourses in reading are also available for special-interest groups such as practical nursing majors, accelerated high school students, and local teachers. The beginning course includes an initial diagnosis of the student's skills using standardized and informal tests. With the help of the teacher, each student develops a plan for improvement using the instructional materials and machines in the reading lab. The courses are organized to meet formally twice a week for a combination of lectures, discussions, and individual work. Discussions and lectures cover such topics as the structure and functions of sentences, how to deal effectively with the reading in a specific type of course, and useful techniques in taking exams. A third hour per week is devoted exclusively to individual lab work. (RB/AIR)

This paper discusses the TV Reading Program in Philadelphia and Mount Vernon which encourages the development of auditory-vocal behaviors without preempting the English, social studies, or science curricula. The program in both districts fosters practice in expressing standard grammar orally. Teachers in the TV Reading Program work from prepared scripts, giving students precise definitions for the vocabulary found in the scripts. Students dramatize the scripts, reciting responses in unison. Although the initial development of a concept is at an abstract level, the verbal input is supported by concrete experience when the video portion of the TV tape is switched on. When concepts are not represented visually, teachers lead students to perceive the parameters of the concept through a questioning technique which requires students to affirm or negate the relationships of the new concept with familiar concepts. A pilot study of the impact of the program on the reading behavior of seventh graders encouraged the expansion of the program and the application for a federal grant to install an on-the-job training program for secondary teachers. The procedures taken and the results obtained in the planning of a reading and study skills course at Floyd Junior College are described. The course objectives and course structure are outlined. The aim of this course is to teach students reading, listening, notetaking, and study skills necessary for college success and to provide them with adequate practice for mastery of these skills. Students are tested both at the beginning and end of the course, and their scores are graphed to show each student's progress. Students are taught either by the instructors or by use of faculty-prepared or commercially-prepared tapes. Each faculty member prepared a taped lecture, an excerpt from his text, and a sample test over this material. A student experiencing difficulty in any course may choose to work individually on tapes, excerpts, and tests. Each student evaluates and improves his own place of study and develops a system of budgeting his time and keeps a weekly schedule of planned activities which are checked by the faculty. A reading program designed for adults in business, industry, or self-directing professions must focus on specific reading skills which are different from other adult reading programs. Professionals generally have good-to-excellent reading skills which they developed in school and college and are thus primarily concerned with developing (1) efficient and fast reading, (2) the ability to deal with professional jargon and technical vocabulary, (3) the ability to deal with specialized reading materials in their fields, and (4) facility for creativeness of expression. Because professionals have learned meticulous and careful reading skills in school, they often need to learn skills of general comprehension of large quantities of material. The materials used should be those the professionals come in contact with either brought in by the students or found by the teacher. Some guidelines for working with professionals are (1) make the program visibly individualized, (2) review basic reading skills, (3) teach general as well as technical vocabulary skills, (4) teach flexible rather than fast reading, (5) explain the theory behind the techniques taught, and

(6) be egalitarian and uncondescending toward the class. References are included. (AL)

It is questioned whether high school students need to be taught the reading skills that have been identified to be taught in high school. Students who have acquired the basic skills forge ahead on their own. If they don't know the basic skills, there's no guarantee that they'll be learned if taught. One study shows college students to be antagonistic toward the work they were doing, and this resulted in little or no skill acquirement. Yet, evidence shows that all high school students don't read with proficiency. Students should acquire reading skills through self-paced instruction, working only with those skills lacking. Packaged learning materials are useful for this purpose. A student is pretested until skills needed are identified. He then selects from suggested materials and activities in a learning package those which fit his unique style of learning. Behavioral objectives guide him as he learns. When he has achieved all the objectives in the package, he may proceed to the next skill. Reading skills necessary for high school students include: decoding, interpreting, and applying. For best possible results, teachers should teach indirectly. Students report liking school better when the teacher accepts student responses, asks questions, and is encouraging. In short, a curriculum change is needed in high school reading programs. (CK)

Students need proper guidelines in their summer programs of reading and writing. In this secondary school summer reading program, at the Holderness School for Boys in Plymouth, New Hampshire, teachers decided to assign 16 books four books to be read by students in each of the 4 years of English. Two criteria were established for book selection: (1) each book must be capable of being handled by students without outside help; and (2) each book must be enjoyable and challenging. Teachers compiled a study guide for each book, containing an introduction, writing topics, and a list of recommended books dealing with the same subject covered in the book being read. One fourth of the student's grade for the Fall Term was based on the four essays which he wrote on his summer reading. The program resulted in improved class discussion during the early weeks of school and students' increased capacity to understand literature on their own. Phase 1 and 2 courses (for less advanced students) deal with such areas as developmental reading, vocational English, oral communication, humanities, and composition; phases 3 through 5 (requiring more highly developed skills and understandings) focus on creative writing, poetry, theater arts, Shakespeare, and English and American literature. Literary objectives, an outline of content, a week-by-week description of activities, suggested teaching approaches, a list of supplementary materials, and a bibliography are provided for each course, which lasts 12 weeks. Using Take Home Stories is one method of providing success-oriented independent reading materials to reinforce basic vocabulary from any reading program. Most easy-to-read trade books have too many words that are not in the beginning reader's reading vocabulary. Take Home Stories can be written to be used after completion of an entire basal reader, after a unit within a reader, or after specific stories or lessons. Two criteria need to be employed when writing Take Home Stories: only the vocabulary that students have been taught may be used and all of the new vocabulary for a particular lesson should be included. Because they are inexpensive, consumable, and contain the exact reading vocabulary learned in the basal program, the stories are an ideal tool for parents to use in helping children at home. A variety of activities can be used with the stories including word recognition and meaning, word analysis, recalling details, locating answers, visual memory, sequence of events, drawing conclusions, finding the main idea, and using context clues. The guide offers a series of environmental activities that stress the development of reading, writing, and discussion skills and emphasize the discovery method of observation. Two types of problems are found in the reading performance of children with poor work habits: a child may have mastered skills but performs inadequately in tasks due to poor work habits, and a child may never have mastered skills because of such habits. Work habit behavior is the student's tendency to apply himself or herself to learning tasks by displaying adequate self-direction in individual or group learning activities. Problems may occur in one of three stages of task performance: getting started, keeping going, and getting finished. Work habit problems increase as students advance in the grades. To build a structure for development of good work habits, teachers must do the following: help the student understand what abilities will be gained as a result of the task and how the ability to do what is expected will be demonstrated; make consequences of good or poor performance clear at the outset and stick to them; plan alternate methods of instruction if performance is inadequate; and help the child organize for the task. Specific techniques are available for teachers to use with students at each of the three problem stages. (DF)

The six authors of this monograph draw from their experience in elementary education in proposing practical techniques for using literature to teach a variety of literacy skills to children. The following topics are developed individually: reading for learning about the nature of language, picture books for reading vocabulary, the trade book as an instructional tool-strategies in approaching literature, book illustration as a key to visual and verbal literacy, reading as leading to writing, and enhancing reading comprehension through creative dramatics. The topics are linked together by the authors' common philosophy regarding the use of the books with children and by the use of headnotes that relate each article to the preceding one. Lists of appropriate children's books are included in several of the articles and a complete bibliography accompanies each topic. (MAI)

As this report explains, the Exemplary Center for Reading Instruction (ECRI) has developed a reading program that teaches 16 skills involved in reading, spelling, listening, thinking, and writing. Daily records are kept of each child's progress. This report shows how the ECRI program can be adapted for use with a basal text. It provides detailed, step-by-step instructions for preparing mastery lists of basal and nonbasal vocabulary words, making word and review cards, planning lessons that use the word cards to teach specific skills, making instructional wall charts, and preparing skills and spelling practice worksheets. Illustrations accompany the descriptions of the materials. (GW)

In the cassette reading method, based on Guthrie's theory of learning (1952), which states that two stimuli occurring at the same time will be learned together, children follow the written text (using a bookmark) as they listen to the same words being spoken on tape. This booklet briefly outlines the method, which works well with children in the second, third, and fourth grades, and suggests ways of presenting the reading material and of stimulating the children's interest. The booklet concludes that most children will need no more than two years using the reading machines to produce reading scores of 100%. (JM)

After reviewing the Houghton-Mifflin reading textbooks, supplemental materials, and teachers' guides, the Materials Review Committee of the Kalamazoo Public Schools developed recommendations for achieving appropriate representation of, and balance in, the portrayal of sex roles in the teachers' guides, especially in those portions of the lesson plan in which exercises are to be read or written on the chalkboard by the teacher. The sequence of skills development was not revised in any way. Specific changes to be made in the guides are included in part one; female-oriented poems selected to support the poetry presented in the texts and guides are included in part two; and part three lists fifty books, published in the last five years, that appropriately represent sex roles. Sections are color coded. (HOD)

Developed by 41 Bureau of Indian Affairs special education teachers, this booklet presents 25 teaching activities which they found very helpful in their classrooms. The purpose, materials needed, and procedures are given for each activity. The activities cover the alphabet letters, letter recognition, vocabulary development, sentence structure, paragraph structure, reading, following directions, eye-hand coordination, spelling, initiation of oral discussion, story beginnings, creative writing and productive thinking, visual memory and perception, identification of words and sounds, auditory discrimination, phrase reading, development of memory and recall, sequencing, likenesses and differences of objects, development of self-confidence through fun and dramatization, animal categories, time sharing, number recognition, and basic addition and subtraction facts. Eighty-three activities to use with the balance beam are given. These activities are to help the child develop laterality, directionality, and dynamic balance. The booklet also includes directions for making crayon or pencil holders, mini-carrels for student privacy, and eight rhymes for rope skipping. (NQ)

A strategy for decision making in the design of reading instruction is suggested in this paper. Decision categories, or "junctures," are anticipated, and a set of principles is developed as a guide to selection and sequencing of program tactics. Included in the discussion is an analysis of the problems inherent in decision making, an examination of principles valuable to content selection, a discussion of the construction of a skills progression framework, and a description of techniques for specifying program pedagogy and teaching procedures. The importance of establishing a sound conceptual basis for teaching is stressed. (KS)

Aim of the Zip Pak is to improve the migrant child's interest in reading. Behavioral objectives are to have the migrant child indicate 10 percent happier faces on the posttest; to have an equal number of blame-self, blame-others on the posttest; and to have 25 percent more praise-self on the posttest. The workbook for boys includes a story about two boys and their model ears and some experiences they had with these models. This story was developed by two boys, one age 12 entering the 5th grade, with a reading level of 2.2, and the other, age 9 entering the fourth grade, with a reading level of 3.2. The story developed over a period of four weeks, using interviews and writing sessions with the boys. Some of the vocabulary words are not third grade level, but these were in the speaking vocabulary of the children. These words are identified and listed in the glossary. The workbook also includes writing exercises, matching activities, sequence exercise, and the pre- and posttest. (NQ)

The student's workbook was developed to give additional aid in reading and vocabulary building to migrant children between the ages of 8 and 12 years old, working at a second grade reading level. Six lessons are given in this student's workbook. Each lesson consists of: words to learn, a story to read, questions to answer, a picture to draw, a story to write, a poem to read, a puzzle to do, and things to make. The students are to talk and write about the things they make. Behavioral objective of these lessons is that the child will improve his word recognition by at least 10%. As a pre- and posttest the child is to pronounce each word on the word list clearly. Correct responses given by the student are recorded. This word list is included. (NQ)

Developed for use with migrant children between the ages of 8 and 12 years, working at a second grade level, this Zip Pak was created to give additional aid in reading and vocabulary building. Since the speaking vocabulary of these children tends to be normal while their reading and writing vocabulary tends to be low, an attempt was made to reinforce their reading vocabulary, using words already a part of their speaking vocabulary. The Zip Pak's objective is to improve the child's word recognition by at least 10%. Two types of lessons are provided. The first type provides a student's book, in which all lessons are presented. These lessons consist of such activities as flash cards, reinforcement activities, drawing, writing, poem reading, magic word puzzles, and a crossword puzzle. The second type is located almost entirely in this teacher's manual. These lessons involve following directions, writing about an experience, reading their own sentences, and putting the story in their books. The various parts of these lessons may be used as single lessons or combined to make longer lessons. A word list to be used as pre- and posttest is also included. (NQ)

This demonstration project provides intensive instruction in reading and mathematics to selected fifth graders in the 1974-75 year and for selected fifth and sixth graders in 1975-76, in order to raise the reading and mathematics performance of underachievers to a level commensurate with measured ability. Aimed at the intermediate teacher in Virginia who is participating in the reading element of the program, this document contains reading activities that are the product of a combination of ideas from many school divisions, many classrooms, and teachers who have identified and shared teaching and learning experiences which they consider to be most promising in teaching reading. After briefly addressing program strategies, diagnostic teaching, teaching tips, and learning activities, six major sections focus on word analysis, vocabulary, literal comprehension, interpretative comprehension, critical comprehension, and study skills. The objective that a given activity will accomplish is stated for each category included in the sections. Some school divisions have developed both pre- and post-tests to accompany the entire set of thirty reading objectives. Although specific items matching specific objectives are delineated in the appendices, individual pre- and post-tests are considered to be needed for each objective to be used to test each pupil's existing level of development. The intent of this handbook is to provide guidelines for tutor-trainers, reading directors, and the community coordinators who need help in organizing programs for training reading tutors. The handbook is divided into three parts. "Reading Directors' Organizational Guidelines" is intended to give direction necessary to form the support group for the tutoring program at the community level; "Tutor-Trainers' Guidelines" provides information useful in the development of the training programs for volunteer tutors; "Teacher-Oriented Guidelines" provides a rationale and gives di-

This handbook provides the basic material needed to guide reading tutors in how to teach appropriate reading skills to children, both inside and outside the classroom. It is one of a series of three handbooks developed for the Right-to-Read tutor-training program; the others are the "Tutor-Trainers' Resource Handbook" (CS 002 047) and "Tutoring Resource Handbook for Teachers" (CS 002 045). Following an introduction, the contents include brief discussions of some of the characteristics of children who have problems learning to read, general principles of successful tutoring, the importance of teamwork, tips for tutoring, a breakdown of the major areas of reading skills, and a reading skills checklist. The bulk of the handbook consists of sample reading lessons for use by volunteer tutors. The appendix contains a copy of the Dolch Word List. (RB)

Designed for use by teachers participating in the Right-to-Read volunteer tutor-training program and by those who wish to develop and conduct such a program, this handbook is intended to provide a starting point for teachers and trainers of teachers to aid them in developing their own tutoring programs. The handbook provides information on the teacher-tutor relationship including goals of the volunteer tutoring program, training volunteers, planning and implementing the program, and serving in a public relations role. The handbook also covers the role of the teacher as the manager of the program, suggesting instructional materials and telling how to find space for tutoring. The appendixes list reading lessons which tutors are prepared to teach, and contain sample forms for evaluating tutors, lesson plans, pupil background information, and the success of the program. This handbook should be used in conjunction with the "Tutor's Resource Handbook" (CS 002 046) and the "Tutor-Trainers' Resource Handbook" (CS 002 047). (RB)

The procedures suggested and the examples included are literally starters. "Introduction to Survival Learning Materials" presents some procedures to help teachers get started in developing materials. "Following Directions" presents five examples which can be used to assist in developing activities which may help students understand how to follow directions when reading such materials as toothpaste advertisements, directions on how to prepare frozen foods, directions for assembling do-it-yourself kits, and labels on bottles. "Locating References" presents examples that may help students understand how to use a table of contents, the dictionary, and the library as a reference center. "Interpreting Forms" discusses examples to use with students to help them understand how to fill out subscription forms, interpret applications, and gain a knowledge of credit card applications and map reading. "Obtaining Personal Information" presents suggestions for interpreting safety signs, travel brochures, and sales agreements. (WR)

This manual offers practical help for the non-professional volunteer tutor. Part 1, "Diagnostic Techniques for Tutors," allows the tutor to find out what problems interfere with the ability of a given child to read so that the tutor can plan activities which deal with each particular difficulty. Part 2, "Developing Learning Readiness Skills," discusses basic learning readiness skills, developing visual discrimination skills, developing auditory discrimination skills, perceptual training, and mixed media instruction. Part 3, "Improving Reading Skills," deals with introducing new words, spelling games, word meaning, word recognition, word association, word sounds, and materials. Also included is a 1973 bibliographic supplement. (WR)

Suggestions for enriching reading programs are divided into six categories in this booklet. Part 1, describing syllable work, recommends using syllable strips (rather than ordinary jigsaw puzzles), word groups, and student teams to work with unscrambling syllables. Part 2 suggests an activity for working with double consonant words, for example, listing words with two pairs of double consonants and then experimenting with omissions and additions. The activity may be called: Which one is right? Part 3 suggests building a good collection of word lists, such as finding words that contain words—his, is—and deleting one letter to create a new word. Part 4 recommends the use of syllables in teaching and reviewing phonetic elements. Part 5 offers activities for building vocabularies, and part 6 lists some fun activities for starting each day. This pamphlet presents a medium which attempts to capitalize on the major strengths of all reading language approaches by incorporating the three basic teaching methods (auditory-visual-kinesthetic). The Picture-Vocabulary-Story (PVS) medium is designed to provide students with suitable experiences, knowledge of vocabulary, comprehension of what they are doing, and the ability to synthesize. The construction of a lesson includes: (1) selecting a picture that tells a story, (2) identifying a list of words related to the picture, (3) mounting the picture on a piece of cardboard, (4) dividing the back of the picture into equal-size rectangles, (5) printing the vocabulary words in the rectangles, (6) dividing the right side of a file folder into the same number of rectangles as the back of the picture, (7)

printing the vocabulary from the back of the picture onto the file folder in the same sequence, and (8) cutting the picture into the same number of rectangles that appear on the back. The pupil then uses the PVS by matching the vocabulary cards by placing them on the file folder, closing the file folder and flipping it over, opening the folder with picture on the left and vocabulary on the right, studying the picture and vocabulary, and writing his own story using the picture and vocabulary words. Paperback publications are an ideal way to supplement the adopted textbook series of the New Orleans Public Schools or to provide common reading materials for special courses or for special students in special schools. Though established guidelines are helpful in making decisions about what books should be read by students, there is no system-wide prescriptive graded reading list for teachers to make "safe" selections from. Therefore, the teacher should read widely, in order to make his own booklist, and should guide the student's out-of-class reading experiences according to the student's abilities in reading areas where he will be motivated to read further. A teacher might plan a unit using adolescent literature by giving the students a voice in the planning. For example, the class might come up with a list of adolescent problems. The teacher can then seek titles that provide insights into these problems, seek materials with a variety of reading levels, and seek materials of varying degrees of maturity. Another way to use paperbacks is through minicourse programs. If the student can become "hooked on books" in elementary school, he may have a more successful academic career ahead of him. (HOD)

The purpose of this introductory unit is to examine the patterns of sexual stereotyping in children's books and the ways in which they reinforce inequality, to consider possible benefits and anticipate problems of change, and to examine the possibility of an alternative children's literature supportive of sexual equality in education. The book proposes setting up a workshop and examining educational opportunities for boys and girls; using suggestive techniques for analyzing traditional sex-role stereotyping in children's picture books; asking participants to search for examples of roles and images contrary to the usual stereotypes; discussing the fact that more female role models are needed in literature and suggesting possible solutions; discussing stereotypes in the classics and methods of dealing with it; discussing education as the solution to sexual inequality; and de-stereotyping fairy tales that are sexist. The book presents conclusions and techniques used in group discussions on sexual stereotypes. (RB)

This booklet is intended for classroom teachers who would like to teach reading within the context of television. Most of the activities presented in this booklet pertain directly to reading, but other aspects of a language arts program (listening, speaking, and writing) are also given some attention. The activities are designed to serve as a series of starting points toward improved reading skills. Only the television programs which the child watches at home are dealt with. The contents include: "How to Get Started," which encourages teachers to watch television themselves to determine how various programs could be related to reading instruction, identify those television programs which could be considered of good quality, and survey the students to determine their favorite television programs; and "How to Use Television to Improve Instruction," which presents techniques for using television to improve the student's listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills. Reflecting an orientation to reading, language development, and students, this guide was drawn together to help give focus and direction to the efforts that are occurring in schools where people are studying the environment in which a child becomes a reader. An overview of the guide centers around the belief that a child will become a reader if he experiences many successes in his encounters with life and language through (1) having numerous life-like experiences that are of personal interest, worth, and meaning; (2) expanding his experiences in some ways that are natural extensions of his curiosity and involvement in the activity; (3) discovering the structure and style of his own language that contributes to the purposefulness, effectiveness, expressiveness, and the beauty of what he says and writes as he communicates with others, and discovering the same things through exposure to the language of many others; (4) gaining an understanding of what others are saying and writing and relating in personal ways to what has been communicated; and (5) acting in appropriate ways upon the ideas that he generates as he interacts with the thoughts of others. The purpose of this study was to develop a reading program that would allow for individual differences and that would attempt to develop in each child a desire to read and to improve his reading ability. Twenty-nine first-grade students and 30 third-grade students who were adjudged to be slow learners were selected from a school located in a deprived urban area. Children's objectives and teachers' objectives were written for the production of a play. A look-say beginning approach was used, involving basic skills from linguistics, language-experience, programmed series, words in color, and some elements from the kinesthetic approach. Follow-up activities in different areas of literature were proposed that would allow the students to practice skills acquired during the first six weeks of the unit. The contents of this unit of study include (1) objectives, (2) initiating activities, (3) developmental activities, and (4) culminating activities. (WR)

Having screened preview films and tapes and teacher manuals for educational television series available for his students' viewing, the teacher can identify the kinds of reading skills typically emphasized in each, perhaps charting them for ready reference. Subsequently, the preparation the teacher gives students before they view the programs and the activities into which he leads them after the viewing can deepen both enjoyment and learning; but the teacher must be flexible enough to capitalize upon potentially fruitful though unexpected turns in class activity. Such projects as creative dramatization, newspaper analysis, puppetry, and poetry composition have engaged the interest and talents of elementary school children whose class work has been planned in conjunction with educational television programs. (Sources of 8 program series are cited and a chart of reading skills they emphasize is provided.) (RD)

In our concern to improve the quality of reading, we have neglected vocabulary development; in our zeal to teach children to pronounce words, we have neglected teaching them word meanings. Vocabulary can be developed by using all the communication processes: reading, writing, speaking, listening, visualizing, and observing; and vocabulary deserves emphasis throughout elementary and secondary grades. Though language inheritance, background, and competencies are outgrowths of out-of-school factors, attempts must be made to compensate for deficiencies of these sorts when encountered. Because children learn words individually and in relation to personal conceptual systems, vocabulary instruction should be viewed as concept building. Thus the generative potential of words, the commonality of roots, prefixes, and suffixes, and the utility of given words in numerous contexts should be emphasized. Finally, a systematic vocabulary development program involves student mastery of the technical terms and concepts needed for instruction in all subjects. (Author/RD)

Studies of beginning reading sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education indicate that teachers, not methods, account for the major differences in the results of instruction and that reading instruction can be improved via combinations of methods. Consequently, teachers should be free to select materials and methods most appropriate for children for whom they are responsible. In planning instruction so that the child's reading development phases with his over-all development, the teacher should keep several basic considerations in mind: (1) Development and maintenance of a positive self-image are vital to the child's academic growth as well as to his personality development. (2) Children differ in their preferred sensory modes of learning. (3) Programmed materials do not provide opportunities for a child to question, share ideas, react to situations, or test ideas on others. (4) Some research indicates that differences in interest patterns are more important to reading development than those of age, sex, intelligence, or reading achievement. Providing properly for that difference involves both presenting materials which match the child's interests and those capable of broadening and advancing them. (Author/RD)

Ways in which schools can develop the lively arts of language—listening, speaking, reading, and writing—through furnishing a learning ecology, is the focus of this paper. The establishment of a learning ecology is described as being based on the primacy of talk. In this context, teachers must personify the ways in which talk joins people. The methods used by teachers in creating common human bonds can include improvised drama, classroom discussion, choral speaking, and telling stories. To teach children how to read literature so as to gain its highest satisfactions, a planned program is said to be of prime importance. The elements of such a program are described, and its advantages enumerated. Listening is said to be a precondition to writing in that it helps the student to know how the words should go. The teacher's approach to teaching the child to write creatively is described. (DB)

Although the structured tutoring model was designed to cope with the unique learning characteristics of low achieving primary grade children who are considered high risks in terms of failure, structured tutoring can be used to teach more objectives not readily attained by students generally, at any grade level. The best tutors for primary grade children are older elementary school students. These students should be closely supervised by an adult with experience in devising diagnostic criterion-referenced pretests, preparing and maintaining record sheets and instructional materials, and selecting and training student tutors. The adult should be someone other than a classroom teacher. As most interested groups do not have the resources or time to meet the stipulations advocated by the author, he has written a series of tutor guides and manuals and developed several complete tutorial systems. The guides and manuals can be used with tutoring programs at almost any level or in any subject area. The complete tutorial systems are designed for programs in which fifth and sixth graders are teaching first and second graders reading or arithmetic. (RT)

The purposes of this paper are: (1) to illustrate the nature of the difficulty when disadvantaged black children are taught reading by conventional methods; (2) to show that the conflict points, specifically, the phonological conflict points, need not be a problem if they are simply disregarded; and (3) to argue that disadvantaged black children who speak nonstandard Negro dialect be taught to read their dialect first (with only grammatical changes made in reading texts to match their nonstandard grammar), and later, after they have attained some facility in standard English, they should be taught to read standard English. Some of the conflict points between nonstandard Negro dialect and standard English are identified, and how these differences conflict during the teaching of reading by conventional methods is shown. The Use of Films and Filmstrips in the Teaching of Reading.

The communication of messages from teacher to student often includes visual representation of the material under study. The place of mass media in the classroom becomes increasingly important as materials are developed and made available. Films and filmstrips of all types can be utilized in many ways, some of which have been the subjects of research studies pointing to their effectiveness. Films of children's books can be used to present stories, to culminate units, or to introduce units. Both films and filmstrips can also be used in a variety of ways to teach skills, to supplement classroom activities, and to motivate reluctant readers. Teachers intending to use films and filmstrips should follow guidelines in selection to assure maximum success. (MS)

Reading the Language of Public Life.

In this discussion of the reading problems of American Negro dialect speakers at intermediate grade level, the author uses the term "Public Language," because although it is not ideally satisfactory, it is free from the evaluative connotations of "Standard" English and directs attention away from distinctions of race or social class. Since the "Second Dialect" student's everyday speech is further removed than other dialects from the language of public life, his reading problems may best be solved by classroom activities that focus his attention on features that characterize the kind of English customarily presented to the public eye. The teacher should ask to what extent the student has (1) grasped the relationship between speech and writing in English, (2) developed decoding skills that enable him to recognize known words when he sees them, (3) adjusted to the many instances of mismatch between sounds and spelling, and (4) learned to compensate for the absence in print of aids to comprehension which are supplied by the voice in speech. Such questions, with answers in terms of classroom activities (illustrated briefly in this paper), deserve special attention when teachers help students read the language of public life. (AMM)

In the language-experience approach to reading instruction, communicative skills are viewed without distinction among listening, speaking, spelling, and writing. The children learn to conceive of expression and reception of expression as natural parts of experience, rather than as separate tasks that occur during a break in regular activity. The skillful language-experience teacher weaves opportunities for communication practice (listening, speaking, writing, reading, and dictating) unobtrusively into the fabric of daily experience. Through this practice, the child comes to feel that he can talk about what he thinks, that he can talk about what he can communicate in other ways, and that he can recall what he or others dictate and what he or others write through reading. The child comes to recognize letters and their function, and learns little by little the details of language use, because he wants to. New skills are put to immediate use and receive immediate positive feedback. Through this method, children not only learn to read better, but they also develop mature concepts about the value and use of reading and other communicative skills. An investigation was made of the values found in children's basal readers from grades 1 through 3. These values were then each classified by student and professor judges in terms of a particular philosophy of education, either Perennialism, Essentialism, Progressivism, Reconstructionism, or Existentialism. A factor analysis was also undertaken in order to identify specific behavioral modes as indicated by a mathematical grouping of the identified values. Over one-third of the values found in children's readers were classified as Progressive in nature, and approximately one-fourth as Existential in nature. The remaining values were distributed rather evenly among the remaining philosophies of Perennialism, Essentialism, and Reconstructionism. Tables and references are included. (Author/CM)

The activities presented in this book, designed to help children translate their thoughts into spoken and written words, can supplement an elementary teacher's own language arts lessons. Objectives for each activity are listed, with the general focus of the many oral activities being to develop a rich verbal background for future written work. The book is organized into three parts: "Self-Expression," "Word Fun," and "Meet the Authors." The first part includes 16 activities involving listening, talking, and writing skills to help children interpret their feelings about life and the changes in the world around them; references are made to well-known children's books and poems. The 14 activities in part two emphasize the importance of language in conversation, encourage students to increase their vocabularies, and help them to develop an awareness of unusual and descriptive words. Part three (11 lessons) introduces children to some well-known authors through discussing the origins of stories, various versions of the same story, and anecdotes about authors. Authors discussed are Felix Salten, Dr. Seuss, Hans Christian Andersen, Edward Lear, The Brothers Grimm, M. Sasek, Margaret Wise Brown, Beatrix Potter, Joan Walsh Auglund, and Doris Van Liew Foster. ANY ECLECTIC READING PROGRAM MUST BE BASED ON (1) AN UNDERSTANDING OF HOW THE TACTILE, AUDITORY, AND VISUAL SYSTEMS DEVELOP IN EACH CHILD, (2) A KNOWLEDGE OF THE AVAILABLE AND USABLE READING APPROACHES, AND (3) AN ASSESSMENT OF THE COMPONENTS OF EFFECTIVE INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES. INDIVIDUAL DIAGNOSIS AND TRAINING IS MANDATORY. A VISUAL DISCRIMINATION PROGRAM OF DIFFERENTIATING AMONG LETTER FORMS AND AN AUDITORY DISCRIMINATION PROGRAM STRESSING LETTER NAMES AND SOUNDS CONSTITUTE THE MOST EFFICIENT READING READINESS PROGRAM. A TACTILE LEARNING SYSTEM REFINES AUDITORY DISCRIMINATION SKILLS. THE EFFECTIVE READING TEACHER IS ONE WHO USES DIAGNOSTIC EVIDENCE AS A DEVELOPMENTAL METHOD, INDIVIDUALIZING THE USE OF MATERIALS TO IMPROVE SPECIFIC READING SKILL AREAS. SEVEN MAJOR APPROACHES TO THE TEACHING OF READING ARE LISTED—DEVELOPMENTAL, PHONIC, LINGUISTIC, LANGUAGE EXPERIENCE, ORTHOGRAPHIC STRESS, INDIVIDUALIZED-LIBRARY, AND SPECIAL. THEIR TEACHING SYSTEMS OR PHILOSOPHIES ARE DESCRIBED. THIS PAPER WAS PRESENTED AT THE INTERNATIONAL READING ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE (BOSTON, APRIL 24-27, 1968). (RS)

TEACHERS WANTED TWO BASIC CHANGES IN READING MATERIAL. FIRST, ILLUSTRATIONS USED IN THE READING MATERIALS SHOULD BE RELEVANT TO THE CHILDREN'S EXPERIENCES. SECOND, SCHOOL EXPERIENCES SHOULD BE ENRICHED SO THAT THE BEGINNING READERS COULD MOVE FROM AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE ILLUSTRATIONS (SYMBOLS OF LIFE AS THEY KNOW IT) TO AN UNDERSTANDING OF LIFE IN A MIDDLE-CLASS SOCIETY. ACCORDINGLY, THE NEW READING MATERIALS WILL DEAL WITH EXPERIENCES OF CULTURALLY DEPRIVED FAMILIES.  This report summarizes information presented in a technical report concerning the role of vocabulary knowledge in reading comprehension and is designed to be read by educators not directly involved in research themselves. It states that while an assessment of the number of meanings a reader knows

enables a remarkably accurate prediction of an individual's ability to comprehend discourse, the reasons why word knowledge correlates with comprehension cannot be determined satisfactorily without improved methods of estimating the size of people's vocabularies. It suggests that improved assessment methods depend upon thoughtful answers to questions concerning what a word is, what it means to know the meaning of a word, and the most efficient way of estimating vocabulary size from an individual's performance on a sample of words.  Using folklore as educational material helps students to understand and appreciate their society and themselves, while developing their reading interests. This paper suggests ways in which folklore can be used in independent teaching units, as supportive material for motivation, and as recreational material in reading/language arts classes. The suggested learning activities include discussing what folklore is and what students remember from their childhood experiences; presenting selected readings in folklore under a specific topic, such as how traditional beliefs and superstitions have affected people throughout history; studying folk songs; having students write their own folk songs or folklore; and having students discuss local history with senior citizens and community service people. Guidelines for preliminary preparation in folklore studies, a sample worksheet that elicits students' childhood experiences, a bibliography, and a listing of related documents from the ERIC system are attached. This publication describes classroom activities that teach language arts skills through the use of newspapers and magazines. The activities, which include activities for individuals and for groups, involve students in reading and learning about numerous items in the newspaper, including comics, advertisements, editorials, news stories, and featured recipes. The activities are organized according to the following skills, which they are designed to teach: reading comprehension (main idea, sequence, locating information, critical reading, and comprehension at all levels); skimming and scanning; vocabulary development; study skills; and writing skills. The publication also lists sources of newspaper-related instructional material, and provides a brief bibliography of books and articles that deal with using the newspaper in the classroom. A glossary of newspaper terminology is included. (GW)

Descriptors—Affective Objectives, Classroom Techniques, Cognitive Style, Diagnostic Teaching, Educational Objectives, Elementary Secondary Education, Evaluation, Informal Assessment, Instructional Materials, Reading Instruction, Teaching Methods

Each of the five sections in this book deals with one of the five major components in a diagnostic/prescriptive model of classroom reading instruction: instructional purpose, evaluation, materials, methods, and classroom management. Articles in the "Instructional Purpose" section discuss the affective component of instruction and the relationship between cognitive style and reading. The "Evaluation" section includes articles on the reading teacher as diagnostician and on informal diagnosis. The "Materials" section suggests ways of using four types of instructional materials: word lists, process and reinforcement games, classroom publications, and literature that facilitates students' value development. The fourth section, "Methods," provides information on the natural cluster method, action-oriented strategies that emphasize rapid information processing, affective strategies at the secondary level, and language research by children. The final section, "Management," discusses a comprehensive progress management system, management systems in open classrooms, and learning stations in the reading class. Each section lists and annotates additional sources for further information. (GW)

The articles in this issue of "Classroom Practices" were contributed by authors who believe that schools can and should play an important role in removing sexism from life in America. The book is divided into four thematic sections—developing awareness, seeking insights, units on sexism, and theory and resources—which present ideas and lessons adaptable for a variety of classrooms and instructional levels. While specific skill objectives are included for reading, writing, and language, the book is also intended to provide breadth through interdisciplinary study, to free students so that they can make viable choices, to stimulate new perceptions and thoughts, and to help bring students awareness of their values and attitudes. This document contains descriptions of 13 projects undertaken through the Hilroy Fellowship Program in Canada in 1969-70. The stated aim of the program is to encourage and reward classroom teachers who are developing new ideas for the improvement of teaching practices. Each project description contains the following information: (1) the name and address of the teacher; (2) the name and address of the school; (3) a review of the project including the title, purpose, age, and significant characteristics of the pupils, procedures followed, modifications, source of resource materials, and evaluation procedures used; and (4) general comments about the project. Many of the projects have in common an emphasis on individualized learning, field trips, student-initiated work and discussion, and the provision of enriching experiences for disadvantaged students. The projects deal with some of the following areas: pollution and conservation, language development, a culturally deprived area, science education, Canadian history, film, and drama. (CD)

Descriptors—Adults, College Students, Content Area Reading, *Creative Reading, *Critical Reading, Elementary Education, Literary Genres, *Reading Habits, Reading Improvement, *Reading Interests, Reading Materials, *Reading Skills, Secondary Education, Teaching Methods

This bulletin describes the nature and development of reading habits at elementary, secondary, college, and adult levels and offers suggestions for improvement. An appreciation of literary forms, taught in precise vocabulary, should be included in elementary instruction. The teaching of reading skills should be continued and developed in intermediate grades. Content area teachers in the secondary schools can most effectively teach such reading skills as vocabulary, rate adjustment, skimming, browsing, and the "skills of involvement." Critical and creative reading should be developed as separate functions at the secondary level. The reading habits of college students can be improved through the development of critical reading, reading flexibility, and context vocabulary. There is a trend toward lessening interest in reading through adulthood. Catalogs of children's books are listed. Sample topics of interest to a group of fourth graders are accompanied by suggested titles and a bibliography of children's books. Two appendixes of ideas, appropriate for primary and intermediate grade students, for developing lifetime reading habits are verbatim reports by elementary teachers. This paper, from the Workshop Center for Open Education, deals with the problems of recognizing and dealing effectively with reading difficulties. The introductory sections explain the problems of identifying the poor reader and define the concept of reading. The next section investigates the following biases that are prevalent in reading tests: language dialect, class bias, conformity bias, early reading bias, speed bias, emotional bias, and teacher strategy bias. Following this section, the paper discusses the inequalities in the scoring system of standardized reading tests. Some alternatives that the paper recommends are a) a more individualized assessment of reading difficulties, b) a more limited and careful use of reading tests, and c) an understanding of the reader's motivation. Twenty-six references and a 13-item bibliography are included. (BRB)

This volume contains papers that should help both elementary and high school teachers bring literature into the school curriculum and provide literary experiences which should carry over into the future. The introductory group of papers is entitled "The Point of View." The first paper uses the classroom as its center of focus. The second enlarges the frame of reference to the United States and addresses the funding situation for educational materials. The last paper focuses on making world understanding a frame of reference for literature education. In the section of the book a number of papers are grouped under the general heading "Choosing the Books." This section discusses the oral tradition, Newbery Award books, children's literature, sex-typed material, and adolescents and reading. The last section, "Using the Books," includes four papers directed at helping teachers to understand what general considerations should enter into their planning for the use of literature with children and what specific techniques may be employed to make book reading the kind of activity society would endorse. The papers for this proceeding reveal a variety of techniques and ideas for enhancing reading through literature. Lyman C. Hunt in "Literature and Learning to Read" discusses beginning reading instruction and some mistakes teachers commonly make, and reminds teachers that the primary objective should be to encourage reading and help the student realize self-improvement. Jean B. Sanders in "Black Literature for Children and Adolescents" encourages the use of good juvenile books with black characters. Elizabeth Weller in "To Each His Own Book" urges teachers to help children find reading materials based on their own choice and taste. Patricia M. Brown in "From Games to Books" discusses the use of reading games designed to help children overcome their reading problems. Francis I. Williams in "Uptight: Competition Time" discusses how to help students become "book-curious." Louise P. Clark in "How Rich Is Their Reading?" discusses the art of critical reading. Bernice J. Mayhew in "Book Making for Budding Authors" describes in detail how children can publish their own books. Finally, Harriet W. Ehrlich in "Creative Dramatics in the Language Arts Curriculum" suggests the establishment of an atmosphere that nurtures creativity and imaginative thinking. (HS)

Teachers may capitalize on the popularity and availability of the newspaper to increase the reading abilities of their elementary and secondary school students. Vocabulary, word attack, and comprehension skills can be learned through the newspaper from primary grades through high school. One major emphasis should be the development of students' analytical and critical reading skills. Because of the immense variety of subject matter to be found in the newspaper, each student may find something to hold his interest. A directed-reading lesson might focus on encouraging receptivity, guiding silent reading, guiding skill development, guiding silent and oral rereading, and various continuing activities. Other lessons might focus on using the newspaper to teach comprehension, to analyze propaganda, to develop vocabulary and word identification skills, or to develop appropriate reading rates. Considering reading as part of the total language process, the newspaper may also be used for listening, speaking, and writing activities. (An appendix contains a list of books and materials and a list of periodical articles dealing with the teaching of newspaper reading.) (DD)

As the invention of the wheel played a large role in the technological advancement of transportation, so many new teaching devices have played an important role in the technological advancement of reading instruction. Though the spread of technology was initially slow, it now offers many instructional aids (e.g., tapes, records, television, computers, and other teaching machines) in reading usage. The systems approach brought about large scale computer experiments and computers are now widely used in schools' reading programs. Educational television programs (e.g., Sesame Street and the Electric Company) have been very successful in the teaching of reading. Audiovisual aids and other multimedia devices are commonly found in reading instruction. These recent innovations, nevertheless, have many impediments to their gradual acceptance and usage: cost, resistance to change, and dehumanization factors. However, reducing cost through the use of minicomputers, increasing funds for educational technology, cable television, and disseminating multimedia products can help minimize these problems. The reading teacher, too, must become technologically oriented to assist and counsel students in the use of these instruments. With the efforts of the teachers and the use of these new instructional devices, strides can be made in reading instruction. (HS)

The three papers in this resource guide are oriented to the needs of Spanish-surnamed and Indian children. The first paper points out three concerns to be examined before selecting reading materials: (1) the population for whom selection is planned, (2) criteria emphasizing children's needs, and (3) apparent trends in reading instructional materials appropriate for the population. Critical points for selection and evaluation of reading instructional materials for Indian and Spanish-speaking children are discussed. The second paper stresses teacher-student interaction, diagnostic teaching, and classroom management in the elementary school. The author feels that standardized tests, especially their norms, should not be used with minority groups, but that the informal reading inventory is best for these children. He also refers to four approaches used to teach non-English-speaking children and to four language measures. The third paper observes that schools are serving the interests of the dominant social forces, and that while unable to reform schools, teachers can humanize their classrooms by examining and revising certain beliefs which lend to anti-humanistic school practices. Recognition of individual differences and use of evaluation as formative in a diagnostic sense are strongly recommended. References are included. (AW)

The use of good literature in teaching reading can mean the relegation of literature to the role of a vehicle for instruction rather than a process of encountering human experiences. Four principles underlying a quality literature instruction program help determine whether good literature is being used or abused: (1) wide exposure to many levels, qualities, and types of literature; (2) quality exposure as dictated by the curriculum, department, or teacher; (3) the opportunity for free pursuit of reading materials; and (4) the appropriate use of skills instruction. The fourth principle is crucial. The teaching of reading skills is merely a part of guiding students toward analysis and interpretation of literature. The teacher must examine literature for the literary content as well as for the reading processes involved. The teacher can then construct guides which will help the students experience the literature in an appropriate intellectual-emotional manner. Reading skills instruction must stem from content objectives and be incorporated in a broad program of literature instruction. Sample written guides for "Fire and Ice" by Robert Frost and references are included. (AL)

The Guide to Materials for Reading Instruction. 1971 Edition, updates earlier editions and includes approximately 2,300 entries of materials from 114 publishers. The guide is intended to keep educators informed about the constantly increasing supply of new materials available for the teaching of reading. Items appearing in the guide are described through a classification process; however, no evaluative judgments are made. Entries are organized by publishers in alphabetical order. The classification system includes the following: (1) the two major categories of basal (nonbasal); (2) the type of item, e.g., reader, workbook, audio aid; (3) reading difficulty level; (4) interest level; (5) setting of stories; (6) general skills developed; and (7) type of cover and binding. Three specialized indexes which provide easy access to information by sorting it into 240 subcategories are included. The indexes are titled "Interest Level Subdivided by Grade Level," "Skill Subdivided by Grade Level," and "Skill Subdivided by Interest Level." Finally, complete addresses for the contributing publishers are listed. (DH)

Audiovisual aids are properly used in reading when they "turn students on," and they are abused when they fail to do so or when they actually "turn students off." General guidelines one could use in sorting usable from unusable aids are (1) Has the teacher saved time by using an audiovisual aid? (2) Is the aid appropriate to the sophistication level of the students involved? (3) Is the purpose which it serves appropriate at this developmental level in the reading program? and (4) Is the particular medium appropriate to the learning of a given individual at a certain period of time? One of New York City's Reading Action Package, this bulletin was designed to help beginning teachers of reading, grades 5 through 8. It offers suggestions for (1) determining pupil reading needs and achievement, (2) organizing for instructional purposes, (3) getting acquainted and using available reading materials, (4) planning the class reading program, (5) implementing the program through guided reading lessons, individualized reading lessons, and skill lessons, (6) extending and refining reading skills, (7) helping children with second language handicaps and divergent speech patterns, and, (8) evaluating the reading program through formal and informal measures. The concepts and the vocabulary, word attack, comprehension, interpretation, and work-study skills needed by every child in order to participate effectively in reading and learning experiences are listed. Sample lesson plans are furnished. The appendix includes a list of basic sight vocabulary, sample diagnostic tests, instructions on the use of informal textbook tests and the Metropolitan Reading Tests, and selected references. (NS)

A MANUAL DESIGNED TO ASSIST TEACHERS IN THEIR EFFORTS TO IMPROVE THE READING SKILLS OF THEIR STUDENTS IS PRESENTED. IT IS BASED ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT READING CAN AND SHOULD BE TAUGHT AS AN INTEGRAL PART OF THE INSTRUCTION IN ALL SUBJECT AREAS. THE STUDENT SHOULD LEARN TO DIFFERENTIATE BETWEEN FACTUAL READING, IMAGINATIVE READING, INTERPRETATIVE READING, AND ENTERTAINING READING. THE MATERIAL PRESENTED IS APPLICABLE TO VARIOUS SUBJECT AREAS AND PROVIDES ACTUAL PROCEDURES WHICH MAY BE USED IN THE CLASSROOM. WORD ATTACK SKILLS ENABLE THE STUDENT TO DETERMINE THE PRONUNCIATION AND IN SOME CASE THE MEANING OF NEW WORDS. PHONETIC AND STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS ARE EMPHASIZED, VOCABULARY SKILLS INCLUDE DRAWING MEANING FROM CONTEXT CLUES, EXTENDING WORD MEANINGS THROUGH ROOTS, UNDERSTANDING THE PURPOSE, VALUE, AND USE OF THE DICTIONARY, UNDERSTANDING SHIFTS IN THE MEANING OF WORDS, AND EXTENDING WORD MEANINGS USING SYNONYMS, ANTONYMS, AND HOMONYMS. THE COMPREHENSION SKILLS WHICH SHOULD BE TAUGHT ARE IDENTIFYING MAIN IDEAS, IDENTIFYING SIGNIFICANT DETAILS AND RELATING THEM TO THE IDEAS, SELECTING IMPORTANT

WORDS, PHASES, AND PASSAGES, UNDERSTANDING TIME SEQUENCES, DISTINGUISHING BETWEEN FACTUAL STATEMENTS AND JUDGMENTS, RECOGNIZING AN AUTHOR'S POINT OF VIEW, CREATIVE THINKING, AND CRITICAL INTERPRETATION. SUGGESTIONS ARE GIVEN FOR HELPING CHILDREN READ DIFFERENT TYPES OF MATERIALS MORE RAPIDLY. OBSTACLES TO RAPID READING SUCH AS LIP READING, REGRESSING, AND LACK OF CONCENTRATION MUST BE ELIMINATED, THE SPEED MUST BE ADJUSTED TO THE TYPE OF MATERIAL. CHILDREN CAN BE TAUGHT TO MAKE USE OF TYPOGRAPHICAL AIDS AND WORD SIGNALS.

Analogies between the reading and writing processes can be drawn from a method of teaching literature that is based on Louise Rosenblatt's transactional theory of reading. The prime responsibilities of teachers of literature are to allow students the right to experience the text for themselves, arriving at their own interpretations, and to make students conscious of the process of reading literature. This process involves the same cognitive operations that are performed in the writing process: collecting material, questioning material, establishing internal connections, discovering emotional responses, revising, and evaluating. Teaching reading and writing as congruent processes can make the achievement of both mutually reinforcing. (AEA)

The use of nontraditional adolescent literature in the secondary classroom and teacher training for this usage are discussed in this paper. After outlining a humanistic approach to adolescent literature, in which students are taught to use literature to illuminate their lives, the paper contrasts such an approach to the teaching of traditional literature, in which the emphasis is on understanding the text. It tells how certain societal changes have promoted the acceptance of adolescent literature as a serious genre and discusses the classroom focus on sociological, psychological, ethical, and ideological aspects of literary works. It next outlines the need for college methods courses in adolescent literature and presents guidelines for the selection of adolescent literature that are given to students in one methods course. The value of small group instruction in teaching adolescent literature is discussed, and suggestions are offered for the division of students into groups for class organization and for possible group activities. Finally, teacher-developed learning activity packets are described, the values of using them are listed, and suggestions are provided for incorporating questions and activities based on a hierarchy of thinking skills ranging from the factual to the conceptual and evaluative. This volume is the second of a two-volume curriculum manual (see also ED 147 486) for teachers which contains materials designed for use in implementing the World of Related Knowledge and Educational Development (WORK-ED) program. (This program is a career education course for ninth graders developed to enable students who have not chosen the traditional college-prep high school course to make career choices based on occupational information and ability to select goals. It is a guidance-based program incorporating basic skills, human values, and career awareness.) Divided into seven chapters, this manual presents units of study in basic communication skills and various career clusters. The units are designed to be implemented in a daily two-period course and include objectives, activities, time lines, resources, duplication materials, and evaluation procedures. The seven chapters cover (1) listening skills, (2) reading skills, (3) consumer education, (4) introduction to drafting, (5) graphic technology, (6) math careers, and (7) careers in music. An administrator's manual (ED 147 485), teacher training manual (CE 018 798), and a project report (ED 150 452) are also available. (BM)

The guide, developed as part of an exemplary program for junior high school students, is a ninth grade English unit designed to use contemporary literary materials which deal with occupational situations and attitudes of both employers and employees. The emphasis is on the relationship between on-the-job and leisure time activities. Three pages of the guide contain an outline for organizing the unit and cover the broad learning objectives, the task analysis sequence, the learning objectives in performance terms, and strategies to be employed for learning. A bibliography, a unit evaluation, and a unit assignment sheet comprise one page each. The body of the document consists of the texts of the 18 dramatic pieces, short stories, magazine articles, poems, modern songs, and television and movie scripts which make up the unit materials. Affective Strategies at the Secondary Level.

Affective teaching is particularly important at the secondary level when the student is facing the problems of adolescence (physical change, sex, social development, identity, values, and alienation). One of the most commonly accepted strategies at the secondary level is that of improving self-concept through the study of literature. Since an important aspect of the modern youth culture is their music, another affective strategies would be the use of music in the classroom. One of the most popular uses of music in the classroom is the examination of lyrics of modern songs, many of which are intriguing enough to stimulate serious thought and discussion of what the song writer is trying to communicate. Language experience is a viable method of improving the reading skills of secondary students. Drama and skits are effective strategies for improving students' self-concept. Some teachers may want to have their students write a play, cast it, and build the sets to produce it for other classes. Several projective techniques can also be used to help students begin to examine themselves and their relationships with others. (WR)

This paper discusses two questions: How can newspapers be established as acceptable classroom reading materials in the secondary schools? and Why, until recently, have newspapers been so little used in the schools? Some of the answers provided to the first question are that the newspaper presents a viable means of keeping textbooks up-to-date in many different subject fields and that the newspaper offers interesting material that will motivate students to better reading comprehension and improved reading skills. Some of the reasons why newspapers have been bypassed in the schools are that many people regard them as unreliable and sensational and that administrators and teachers continue to judge newspapers by what they were rather than what they are today. It is concluded that newspapers today are more readable and more socially involved in readers' lives and that they present the "why" as well as the "how" of the news. Accordingly, newspapers are an inexpensive and popular instructional aid in the classroom. (D1)

A model for augmenting the impact of the community college reading instructor within the institution is presented in this paper. Reported are the actual findings and the criteria used in: (1) the assessment of the reading levels of students enrolled in three courses at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Illinois; (2) the evaluation of the readability of the texts used in the courses; and (3) determination of how the instructors used and augmented the texts. Six sections of students enrolled in three vocational courses taught by seven instructors served as the study population. The reading comprehension levels of the students were determined by the Gates-MacGinitie Reading Test, Comprehension Subtest. The readability of each textbook used was determined by applying a computerized version of the Dale-Chall Formula. A 219-item survey was used to evaluate the knowledge and attitudes of the instructors with respect to reading and text use. Analysis of student scores, text readability levels, and instructor surveys prompted the instructional personnel involved to modify their course offerings to better fit their students' needs. Due to the benefits gained by faculty and students from the study, the program has been adopted for general use at the College of DuPage. (TO)

Various usages for newspapers in the ninth-grade English classroom are suggested in detail in this teacher's guide. Two large sections—one designed for classes with average learners and one for classes with slow learners—are subdivided into units on the short story, drama, nonfiction, and the novel. Newspapers are used for teaching reading, speaking, listening, and writing skills in each of these units. Student activities suggested include having discussion groups, seeing films, making bulletin board displays, collecting newspaper articles, analyzing styles in newspapers and written materials, and dramatizing newspaper stories. The simplicity and realism of newspaper writing are cited as incentives for slow learners to read. Special attention to grammar, punctuation, style, and language usage is given in each unit. The newspaper is suggested as a good starting point in reading for research, entertainment, information, and opinion. (AL)

A learning system developed at Valencia Junior College (Florida) would incorporate educational and communication skills needed for the job market and give direction for the best educational path to pursue, using the skills the student already possesses. The learning system developed as an ascending spiral, intended to include a series of aptitude and measurement tests, with various points for entrance and exit. It is multimodal, makes use of audiovisual devices; is student-directed and teacher-assisted; and presents materials in such a way that the skills of reading, writing, and listening are continuously inter-related. The student is permitted to work most of the way through it without the aid of a teacher. It has built-in evaluation tasks, repeating exercises, special learning experiences, and external opportunities for students. The system is expected to undergo annual revision for further development. (CA)

Emphasizing the newspaper's influence on people's lives and opinions and its role in preserving a democratic government, this teaching guide attempts to promote student understanding and appreciation of the functions, service, and responsibilities of the press. Units for grades 7-12 focus on particular aspects of the newspaper: introduction to the purposes and content of a newspaper (grade 7); study of the history of newspapers and of news analysis (grade 8); how to read, use, and write for a newspaper (grade 9); history of the American press, the obligation of the press to the community, and the responsibilities of citizens in maintaining a free press (grade 10); examination of the nature, techniques, and kinds of propaganda (grade 11); and comparative study and content analysis of newspapers (grade 12). Reading, writing, speaking, and listening skills are emphasized in specific classroom activities suggested for each grade. A bibliography of books and films, with some annotations, is included. The rationale and techniques for developing skimming and scanning skills with college students are discussed, and it is noted that perfecting these skills involves changing some basic attitudes towards reading such as the ideas that one needs to read every word and that increasing speed decreases comprehension. Lengthy passages in regular college texts were chosen as effective materials to develop skimming and scanning skills, and exercises were developed for skimming for main ideas and for scanning for details and/or specific words or phrases. Techniques for improving skimming and scanning skills which include controlling the amount of time spent on exercises, analyzing the author's organization, and reading the first and last paragraphs are briefly presented. Preliminary studies indicated that including skimming and scanning training in short rapid-reading courses resulted in increased rate gains and that it may produce more flexible readers. Relatively little attention has been given to the use of magazines in the classroom, in contrast to the amount of attention given to the use of newspapers, for example. Yet, the number of magazines continues to increase in the United States, and surveys indicate that high school students read many of them. The surveys also indicate that there is a low correlation between magazines read by students and magazines found in high schools. Such a situation need not exist if an imaginative teacher utilizes the students' reading interests to meet their reading needs through magazines in the classroom. Periodicals can be used to individualize instruction and to give attention to nearly all facets of reading. References are included. (MD)

Comics—as a special literary genre—must be judged by special criteria. In fact, the four-panel daily comic strip must be judged by different standards from the full-length comic book or the single- or double-frame comic. Among the four-panel strips are found comics that make a claim to literary quality—"Li'l Abner," "Pogo," and "Peanuts." These comic strips are "uniquely expressive" and transcend the severe limitations of their genre through a creative use of language and symbolism. Charles Schultz's technique in "Peanuts" involves understatement and symbolism through which adult personality types act in the guise of children. Walt Kelly's "Pogo-lingo"—a purposeful, comic distortion of language employing many puns—becomes part of the cartooning style and, thus, has graphic value. Like Kelly, Al Capp is a satirist, and his Abner is in the American tradition of the innocent picaresque whose responses reveal the shams of society. (JS)

One of New York City's Reading Action Package, this guide was designed to help beginning teachers of reading, grades 9-12. It offers some principles and techniques on the following aspects of reading instruction: (1) evaluation for planning and teaching, (2) organizing classes for instruction, (3) getting acquainted with instructional materials, (4) scheduling time for reading instruction, (5) planning the reading lesson, and (6) getting started to teach. Sample lesson plans representative of the approaches used at various levels of ability are presented. A concluding chapter discusses general procedures for the identification and guidance of students reading below or above grade level and for the teaching of retarded readers and second-language learners. The appendix includes additional suggestions on the appraisal of pupil reading status and progress, grouping techniques, the use of reading centers, Dolch's basic sight vocabulary, a checklist of reading difficulties, suggestions for administering the Metropolitan Reading Tests, reading services available, and selected references for reading teachers. The need for simultaneous teaching of reading skills and course content prompted the formation of a study guide which coordinates these two areas in an eleventh-grade nonregent English program used by Ramapo Central School District No. 2 in Spring Valley, New York. The guide provides exercises with a range of ability and achievement levels which adjust to individual student differences. It contains five literary units: (1) the short story, (2) the novel, (3) nonfiction, (4) drama, and (5) biography and a unit on the complete sentence. Each lesson is divided into five sections—(1) readiness, (2) purpose for silent reading, (3) oral reading and discussion, (4) word attack and word recognition skills, and (5) follow-up exercises. Study guide questions and word attack exercises are provided at the end of the lesson; an answer sheet is provided for the teacher. (BS)

THE "ENGLISH IN EVERY CLASSROOM" PROGRAM IS PRIMARILY CONCERNED WITH MOTIVATING "GENERAL" STUDENTS, FROM KINDERGARTEN THROUGH JUNIOR COLLEGE, TO FEEL THE PLEASURES OF AND NECESSITY FOR READING AND WRITING. TO REINFORCE THEIR LITERACY, STUDENTS ARE SATURATED WITH APPROPRIATE, ATTRACTIVE PAPERBACK BOOKS, NEWSPAPERS, AND MAGAZINES. WRITING ASSIGNMENTS, COORDINATED BY ENGLISH TEACHERS THROUGHOUT ALL SCHOOL COURSES, REQUIRE NUMEROUS BRIEF PAPERS AND PRIVATE JOURNAL ENTRIES, JUDGED WEEKLY ON THE SOLE BASIS OF QUANTITY. AN EXPERIMENTAL GROUP PARTICIPATING IN THIS PROGRAM WAS TESTED AND COMPARED WITH A CONTROL GROUP AT THE BEGINNING AND CONCLUSION OF THE SCHOOL YEAR FOR INTELLECTUAL PERFORMANCE, TEACHERS' PERCEPTIONS OF STUDENTS ATTITUDES, PERSONALITY, AND PERFORMANCE, AND STUDENTS' ATTITUDES TOWARD SCHOOL, LITERACY, AND THEMSELVES. FINDINGS CONFIRMED THAT THE PROGRAM PRODUCED SIGNIFICANT IMPROVEMENT IN VERBAL PROFICIENCY AND LESSENED EDUCATIONAL ANXIETIES IN THE EXPERIMENTAL GROUP. (APPENDICES INCLUDE (1) DIAGNOSTIC TESTS USED IN THE EXPERIMENT AND TABLES COMPARING THE EXPERIMENTAL AND CONTROL GROUPS' PERFORMANCES AND ATTITUDES, (2) DETAILED STUDY GUIDES ON "WEST SIDE

TEACHING A CLASS HOW TO READ AN ESSAY INCLUDES LISTENING, DISCUSSING, AND WRITING, IN ADDITION TO READING. IN THEIR LITERATURE COURSES, THE AUTHORS BEGIN THE PROCESS AT THE FIRST MEETING, USING EITHER THE PRESCRIBED TEXT OR DUPLICATED MATERIALS. PRELIMINARY READING BY THE CLASS IS FOLLOWED BY DISCUSSION BASED ON STUDENT QUESTIONS, ANALYSIS, AND EXPLICATION. THE AIM, WHICH NEVER VARIES, IS TO SHOW HOW TO DEFINE WORDS IN CONTEXT, TO ACCOUNT FOR EVERY RHETORICAL DEVICE AT WORK IN A PASSAGE, TO PARAPHRASE AND SUMMARIZE ACCURATELY, AND TO MOVE SENSITIVELY THROUGH A PROGRESSION. THE PROCESS REQUIRES TIME, AND STUDENTS MUST LEARN TO TAKE THEIR TIME, FOR MASTERY OF SIGNIFICANT MATERIALS AND RELIABLE METHODS IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN THE NUMBER OF ASSIGNMENTS COMPLETED. DICTATION OF PRINCIPLES AND STUDY GUIDES IS AN EFFECTIVE METHOD IN TRAINING STUDENTS TO LISTEN AND BEHAVE IN SUCH A WAY THAT THEY MAY MAKE USE OF THEIR NOTES AND OTHER WRITINGS. USING THESE IDEAS, THE AUTHORS PRESENT A GUIDE TO THE STUDY OF A SPECIFIC ESSAY. (WO)

"The Electric Company" was created by the Children's Television Workshop as an experiment to teach reading to 2nd, 3rd, and 4th grade children having difficulty learning to read. Solidly based on research in the teaching of reading, the curriculum emphasizes decoding skills. The production process included several phases: (1) assembling the repertory company, (2) graphic innovation, (3) research on appeal factors, (4) training of writers in teaching methods, (5) evolution of characters, (6) editing, (7) filming, and (8) informing the public. Each season of productions has been evaluated, and results have been used as formative input in the following year's productions. Research efforts have measured attention, comprehension, attitudes, and national impact. The program has been viewed extensively, and it has received wide acclaim. (EMH)

Project Catch-Up, an ESEA Title I program, operates in Newport Beach and in Costa Mesa, California. It is said to be designed to provide remedial instruction in reading and arithmetic to underachieving children, kindergarten through sixth grade, in schools serving low socioeconomic level suburban areas. Among its key features are the following: (1) instruction takes place in colorful and well-equipped laboratories; (2) teachers, instructional aides, and parent aides are part of the instructional staff, and staff members work four hours a day; (3) one teacher is responsible for no more than 18 students; (4) children participate in daily half-hour sessions on about a ratio of 3 students to 1 teacher; (5) children work with materials different from those used in regular classrooms; (6) students work at their own pace on materials geared to their own needs and abilities; and (7) student progress is measured by continuous criterion referenced testing and pre- and posttesting on normative levels. Project components that are discussed in this brochure and guide are project philosophy, interfaculty relations, staff quality, inservice training, teacher management calendar, student selection, successful project techniques, parent involvement, instructional materials, instructional equipment, testing of children, and reporting of results to parents. The objective of this remediation handbook is to help the classroom teacher to diagnose and remedy the various kinds of problems grouped under the heading of reading disability. The handbook is organized into two volumes: volume one constitutes a reading disabilities checklist which can be reproduced by the teacher as an observational guide. Volume two is an extension of volume one and offers additional reading activities that the teacher can utilize in planning instruction for the students. Once observation or testing indicates the presence of a specific disability, the teacher can refer to a specific page for a discussion of the disability, for recommended remedial techniques, and for recommended materials. A professional reference is also included for those wishing more information about a given disability. Volume one also contains a suggested magazine list for elementary pupils. (WR)

The theoretical basis for a Figurative Therapy Reading Clinic in the elementary schools and the tentative structure for implementing that clinic as a pilot project are described in this paper. The contents include: "Figurative Therapy Defined," which refers to the psychoanalytic approach to art therapy; "The Objectives of the Figurative Therapy Reading Clinic," which discusses identifying and treating emotional impediments that may underlie a student's nonreading; "The Advantages of a Figurative Therapy Reading Clinic," which discusses the principal object of therapy and figurative expression of young children; "Implementation of a Pilot Figurative Therapy Reading Clinic in the Elementary School," which discusses staff composition and background, selection of children for the pilot, proper learning environment, free expression and pure color techniques, and a series of figurative therapy tasks presented in standard, teacher lesson plan form; "A Case Study," which describes the use of figurative therapy with a fourth grader classified as a student with reading problems; "Attaining Fluency in Reading," which looks at specific types of reading skills and techniques of instruction; and "Costs," which outlines the anticipated costs of implementing such a program. Reading for Children with Problems in Social Adjustment.

Pub Date--May 74

Note--11p.; Paper presented at the Annual Meeting of the International Reading Association (19th, New Orleans, May 1-4, 1974)

Both the remediation of reading deficiencies and the alleviation of severely deviant behaviors are necessary for the proper social and emotional development of the child and for his normal academic achievement. A successful reading program for children with behavior problems provides for daily success. Initial and continued teacher reinforcement creates increasingly effective self-reinforcement within the pupil. After thorough diagnosis, the teacher furnishes the pupil with reading materials which offer challenge without frustration. Reading activities include individual oral and silent reading, choral and team reading, and writing. There are few requirements for independent study on word attack or study skills. When the teacher plans a reading program which allows for success with a minimum exposure to failure, reinforces each small achievement, and gives unwavering support for all progress, the pupil has an opportunity to overcome the reading deficiency and to make a more satisfactory social adjustment within the classroom. Identifiers--*Graphics Expression Reading Improvement System, Uniondale Union Free School District NY

This manual describes how the Uniondale New York school district uses a technological system, the Graphics Expression System (GES), to produce dramatic reading improvement on the part of elementary school underachievers. It shows how GES, based upon the assumption that all youngsters want to communicate, employs a television mini-studio and an eight step process to motivate students to develop reading and other communication skills. It reviews the fundamental activities necessary for the implementation of GES, beginning with investigations by administrators and teachers, followed by faculty and parent meetings, contracting for hardware, identification of criteria, selection of participants, inservice staff training, and program scheduling. Classroom procedures such as logistics and orientation are covered and information is given on the process whereby students: 1) pick a topic; 2) research it; 3) prepare graphics; 4) write a script; 5) practice reading it; 6) tape a run-through; 7) evaluate the topic; and 8) record a final tape. This program provided corrective reading instruction for disadvantaged pupils (grades 1-3) from black, Mexican-American and Anglo low income families. Instruction was provided for small groups (three to six pupils) by remedial reading teachers, one teacher being shared by two schools. The program also included the assistance of classroom aides, psychologists, and counselors, and the use of special instructional materials and cultural enrichment activities. An in-service training program designed for all project personnel aimed to acquaint staff with the special problems of disadvantaged students. The Wide Range Achievement Test was used in 1966-67 to measure gains, which averaged nine months. Time between testings was about six months. In 1967-68 students gained an average four and one-half months in a period of just under four months between testings. Lists of special instructional materials and tables showing test result data are included. (KG)

TEN PROGRAMS REVIEWED IN THIS PAPER ILLUSTRATE WHAT CAN BE DONE FOR CULTURALLY DISADVANTAGED RETARDED READERS. THE MONTESSORI APPROACH EMPHASIZES INTRINSIC MOTIVATION AND USES SENSE-STIMULATING MATERIALS AND DEVELOPMENTAL ACTIVITIES FOR PERCEPTUAL AND COGNITIVE GROWTH. THE BANNEKER PROGRAM ENRICHES ITS INTENSIVE PRESCHOOL PROGRAM WITH EXPERIENCES IN SPEAKING LISTENING, AND ALL KINDS OF PREREADING SITUATIONS. THE MAURY SCHOOL READING PROGRAM IS BASED ON EXPERIENCE STORIES WRITTEN BY THE CHILDREN, WHILE THE ASHTON-WARNER APPROACH TO READING INSTRUCTION IS BASED ON WORDS THE CHILD WANTS TO LEARN. THE AMIDON SCHOOL DESIGNED CURRICULUM TRACKS FOR TRANSFER STUDENTS AND USES THE PHONOVISUAL TECHNIQUE FOR BEGINNING READERS. LIKE THESE PROGRAMS, THE GREAT CITIES PROGRAM, THE ARTHUR SCHOOL, THE PRINCE EDWARD FREE SCHOOL ASSOCIATION, THE HIGHER HORIZONS PROGRAM, AND THE WORK-STUDY PROGRAM ARE ALL DESIGNED TO IMPROVE THE ACHIEVEMENT OF CULTURALLY DISADVANTAGED CHILDREN AND TO DEMONSTRATE THE NEED FOR INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION, THE IMPORTANCE OF INTERESTING MANIPULATIVE MATERIALS, THE TEACHER'S ROLE IN GUIDING THE CHILD TO BETTER ACHIEVEMENT, AND THE ADVANTAGES OF EARLY ATTENTION. PRESCHOOL PROGRAMS ARE MORE EFFECTIVE IN PREVENTING THE DISADVANTAGED CHILD FROM BECOMING A RETARDED READER THAN ANY AMOUNT OF REMEDIAL OR CORRECTIVE HELP LATER. THIS PAPER WAS PRESENTED AT THE READING INSTITUTE SPONSORED BY SCIENCE RESEARCH ASSOCIATES (SAN ANTONIO, JULY 18-22, 1966). (NS)

This paper is intended as an introduction to the concept of comprehension monitoring, which is an important component of reading and involves evaluating and regulating one's ongoing comprehension processes. A discussion of research that investigated comprehension monitoring with both children and adults is presented and the implications for education are considered with respect to existing factors that influence the development of monitoring strategies. To determine why some children find textbooks to be much more difficult to understand than teachers' presentations, four reading selections for middle grade readers were analyzed, as were tape recorded lessons prepared by ten teachers on the basis of the same selections. Excerpts from one of the written passages and excerpts and analysis of one teacher's presentation suggest four general advantages that teachers have over textbooks in getting children to understand and remember the material presented: they can tailor their messages to the background and level of understanding of the children in their classes; they can remind students of relevant information they already know and help them to see how new information is related to prior knowledge; they can focus students' attention on a passage as a whole or on selected parts of a passage; and they can monitor comprehension. The results of the study point to ways that textbook authors may modify written passages so as to minimize their limitations, as well as to ways that teachers can optimize their classroom presentations and their reading comprehension instruction. This paper reviews recent research to determine why children encounter problems understanding what they read. Four points are discussed as especially relevant to children's problems in reading comprehension: (1) reading differs from early language experiences, and an analysis of these differences can indicate likely sources of reading difficulty; (2) reading is a process that involves constructing hypotheses based on prior knowledge, while a lack of such knowledge can lead to incorrect hypotheses; (3) the emphases on decoding skills in early grades often engages children in essentially meaningless reading activities, giving the impression that reading has no purpose; and (4) an entirely new set of strategic skills is needed for functional reading tasks such as reading textbooks or following instructions, tasks for which no foundation has been laid. Implications for testing are discussed, including the use of an individualized approach that embeds testing in the ongoing reading and writing activities in which the student is engaged. (DF)

Originally supported by Title I, this project is designed to provide remedial instruction in reading and arithmetic to underachieving children in schools serving low economic level suburban areas. Participants enrolled in the project in kindergarten through grade 8 have placed in the lowest quartile in either reading or math in the chosen normative test. Elements of the project include colorful classroom size laboratories, newest high interest instructional materials and teaching machines. Major emphasis is placed on diagnosis of learning problems, prescribing for individual learning, offering instruction in a lab and employing part time veteran teachers as well as instructional assistants and parents. In this project students participate in daily half hour sessions on a ratio of about three students to one teacher. Students work at their own pace on materials geared to their own diagnosed needs and abilities. Their progress is measured by continuous criterion referenced testing as well as pre and post testing on normative tests. A descriptive list of sources for instructional materials in reading and math is included. (Author/AM)

To meet the needs of students reading below their potentials, teachers must learn more about the reading process, become more diagnostic in determining pupils' strengths and weaknesses, and couple their knowledge of reading with an understanding of pupil deficiencies to plan a program to improve the child's ability to read. Diagnosis, though important, cannot consume most of the teacher's time. At the beginning of the year the teacher may ascertain a child's instructional reading level by consulting school records and by administering informal reading inventories and teacher-made exercises. Further, the child's basic area of weakness should be assessed, though his strong skills should be utilized in improving weak areas. During ensuing learning experiences notations about the pupil's reading performance should be made, perhaps on 3x5 cards for periodic summary on a profile card. Teachers hesitant about full commitment to complete individualization can increase the flexibility of their instruction by offering a considerable number of independent activities for the majority of the class, freeing themselves to work with smaller groups. All pupils deserve opportunities to spend time in reading widely--regardless of their reading proficiency. (Author:RD)

Photography, films, and other visual materials offer a different approach to teaching reading. For example, photographs may be arranged in sequences analogous to the ways words form sentences and sentences for stories. If, as is possible, children respond first to pictures and later to words, training they receive in visual literacy may help them learn to read. Ordering a series of photographs offers the child a chance to talk about what happens in the story. Then a child makes his own story. As he does so, he can condense each picture to a word or phrase. He learns new vocabulary. As his vocabulary increases, he becomes better prepared to deal with print. This method has the advantages of building new skills on the strong base of the student's innate or learned abilities, improving the child's self-concept, integrating cognitive, affective, and psychomotor elements into the reading program, using several media to help the child cope with his environment, and providing a strong stimulus for even very young and hard to motivate children. An appendix provides narration to a slide presentation explaining visual literacy. (JK)

Remedial reading, or the teaching of the ability to decode and comprehend, taxes the skills and ingenuity of the English teacher. This problem, however, must be tackled on a day-to-day basis. Remedial reading programs can be made effective by utilizing the following techniques: a daily 5-minute quiz which embraces previously covered material; a brief period of dictation, which emphasizes accuracy; improvised lessons on verb tenses, using the students' daily notes; games; student-created booklets or other projects to be completed at home; at least three totally different tasks to be completed during every class period; exercises to develop basic skills, which is the most important phase of any reading program; and developing a cordial atmosphere where true learning can take place. GRADES OR AGES: Grades 3-12. SUBJECT MATTER: Remedial reading. ORGANIZATION AND PHYSICAL APPEARANCE: The guide is divided into several straight-text chapters. It is off-set printed and edition-bound with a paper cover. OBJECTIVES AND ACTIVITIES: General objectives for the program are outlined in the first chapter. Subsequent chapters present a plan for organizing a summer program for students at three different ability levels and list numerous activities under four categories: basic reading skills, work attack skills, comprehension and leisure reading, and study skills and content reading. Sample lessons in basic reading skills at the primary and secondary levels are included. INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS: Appendixes contain a bibliography of teacher references and a list of materials and equipment, which includes books, workbooks, mechanical devices, magazines, filmstrips, and programed materials. Appropriate reading level is indicated for most materials listed. STUDENT ASSESSMENT: Detailed guidelines for diagnosing a student's reading level and evaluating his progress are presented. Sample forms are included. An appendix contains an annotated list of standardized tests. (RT)

A reading program for junior-high-school students is outlined in this curriculum guide, which shows how multiple materials and approaches may be utilized to teach reading in the various curriculum areas. The program is recommended for use in the first semester of the seventh grade, the second semester of eighth grade, and as an elective in either semester of grade 9. Remedial reading students who receive small-group instruction are not included in the seventh- and eighth-grade programs. Seventh- and eighth-grade reading classes meet 55 minutes daily for a semester. Suggested time allotments are common skills, 6 weeks; social studies, 3 weeks; science, 3 weeks; literature, 4 weeks; and mathematics, 1 week. In the guide, each of the above five sections is divided into the skill areas of vocabulary, basic thought relationships (comprehension), mechanics, locating and using materials, and study skills and is further subdivided within skill areas. The guide provides the general tract for most students and alternate activities and materials for those students either deficient or proficient in reading skills. The ninth-grade program stresses individual achievement and self-motivation. A bibliography of materials and a ninth-grade student self-analysis form are included. (DH)

The Hunter College Project English Curriculum Center (1962-68) developed and field tested 14 units in English language arts for junior high school students in depressed urban areas who were reading an average of 2 years below grade. The purpose of the curriculum was to interest and motivate students by providing them with literature related to their own lives and by involving them in language activities related to their concerns. The anthologies which served as the core of these units dealt with human interest themes and included selections about minority groups. Each unit included a detailed manual for teachers, supplementary audiovisual materials, and an annotated book list for individualized reading. The methodology emphasized active learning and learning sequences which would aid students to discover concepts and principles. Special attention was given to study and test-taking skills. These units were field tested in schools in New York, Ohio, Florida, and California. Approximately 5 000 students participated. Teachers, students, and independent observers judged the units relevant to student interests, motivating, and teachable. Schools which reported reading scores generally showed that students in the experimental program achieved gains equal to or better than comparable to control groups.

THIS GUIDE FOR SETTING UP REMEDIAL READING PROGRAMS IN IDAHO SCHOOLS EMPHASIZES THE IMPORTANCE OF PREVENTING READING DIFFICULTIES. THE GUIDE MAINTAINS THAT WHILE A REMEDIAL READING PROGRAM PRIMARILY DIAGNOSES READING DIFFICULTIES AND PROVIDES THE NECESSARY REMEDIAL TREATMENT, THE PROGRAM ALSO SUPPLEMENTS THE REGULAR CLASSROOM READING PROGRAM TO HELP TEACHERS IDENTIFY PUPILS NEEDING REMEDIAL READING INSTRUCTION. CRITERIA ARE SUGGESTED FOR JUDGING PROSPECTIVE REFERRALS. THE DUTIES OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE STAFF, THE REMEDIAL READING TEACHER, THE REGULAR CLASSROOM TEACHER, AND OF THE PARENTS CONCERNED ARE ALSO CONSIDERED. SINCE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE PROGRAM DEPENDS ON THEIR COOPERATIVE EFFORTS, THE MINIMUM STANDARDS PRESCRIBED BY THE INTERNATIONAL READING ASSOCIATION ARE RECOMMENDED AS GUIDES FOR IDENTIFYING THE READING SPECIALIST. SAMPLES OF FORMS USED FOR KEEPING ACCURATE AND UP-TO-DATE RECORDS OF EACH REFERRAL'S PROGRESS ARE ENCLOSED. (NS)

DURING EACH OF THE FOUR SESSIONS REPORTED, A READING EXPERT SPOKE ON ONE OF THE FOLLOWING TOPICS—(1) REMEDIAL READING, (2) THE MID-CONTINENTAL REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL LABORATORY READING PROGRAM AND MEETING INDIVIDUAL NEEDS, (3) READING AS REASONING, AND (4) THE CONTROVERSY OVER INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNIQUES. THE PARTICIPANTS DISCUSSED EACH TOPIC EXTENSIVELY IN SMALL DISTILLATION GROUPS AND ELECTED REPRESENTATIVES TO A PANEL DISCUSSION WHICH ENDED EACH SESSION. IT WAS RESOLVED THAT REMEDIAL READING SHOULD BE A PART OF DAILY INSTRUCTION. THAT READING DIFFICULTIES COULD BE PREVENTED THROUGH A BALANCED, FLEXIBLE, AND CONTINUOUS READING PROGRAM. THAT READING SHOULD BE TAUGHT AS A REASONING PROCESS, AND THAT TEACHERS SHOULD LOOK FOR THE TECHNIQUE OR COMBINATION OF TECHNIQUES BY WHICH EACH CHILD LEARNS BEST. THIS REPORT ALSO INCLUDED THE QUESTIONS ASKED, THE PROBLEMS UNRESOLVED, THE RESOLUTIONS MADE, AND THE RECOMMENDATIONS GIVEN DURING EACH OF THE FOUR SESSIONS. THIS DOCUMENT IS THE FINAL REPORT OF THE STATE-WIDE READING WORKSHOP (LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, MARCH 31-APRIL 1, 1967). (NS)

WHENEVER IT BECOMES NECESSARY FOR A PUPIL TO RECEIVE EXTRA HELP OUTSIDE THE REGULAR CLASSROOM, HE IS INVOLVED IN REMEDIAL READING. REMEDIAL INSTRUCTION IS MORE HIGHLY INDIVIDUALIZED THAN REGULAR READING INSTRUCTION, AND IS TAILORED TO INDIVIDUAL NEEDS ON THE BASIS OF DIAGNOSTIC TESTING. MOTIVATION IS IMPORTANT TO ALL REMEDIAL INSTRUCTION, FOR PUPILS HAVE USUALLY EXPERIENCED YEARS OF FAILURE AND FRUSTRATION BEFORE BEING REFERRED FOR REMEDIAL WORK. SUCH FACTORS AS INTELLECT, CONSTITUTION, ENVIRONMENT, EMOTION, AND EDUCATION, ARE RECOGNIZED AS CAUSATIVE IN RELATION TO READING FAILURE. REMEDIAL INSTRUCTION SHOULD NOT BE ATTEMPTED WITHOUT SOME FORM OF DIAGNOSTIC TESTING. RESULTS OF DIAGNOSTIC TESTS SHOULD BE REGARDED AS TENTATIVE AND SUBJECT TO REVISION AS THE INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAM PROGRESSES. DEVELOPMENT OF AN ADEQUATE REMEDIAL READING PROGRAM DEPENDS UPON SUITABLE FACILITIES AND PERSONNEL. REMEDIAL READING TEACHERS SHOULD BE SUCCESSFUL CLASSROOM TEACHERS OF READING AT THE LEVEL ON WHICH THEY ARE TO WORK WITH REMEDIAL CASES. THEY SHOULD HAVE UNIVERSITY TRAINING FOR READING SPECIALISTS OR SHOULD SERVE AN INTERNSHIP IN A READING CLINIC. THE READING CENTER SHOULD

HAVE A DIRECTOR, FULL-TIME PSYCHOLOGIST, ASSISTANT TO THE DIRECTOR, AND TWO FULL-TIME SECRETARIES. THE CLINIC TEACHERS SHOULD BE FAMILIAR WITH BOTH GROUP AND PLAY-THERAPY TECHNIQUES. INSTRUCTION SHOULD BE HIGHLY INDIVIDUALIZED. THE READING CENTER AND EACH READING CLINIC SHOULD BE EQUIPPED WITH LARGE QUANTITIES OF READING MATERIALS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION ON EVERY INSTRUCTIONAL LEVEL AND IN EVERY AREA OF INTEREST. THE MAIN LIBRARY AND MATERIALS LABORATORY SHOULD BE LOCATED IN A READING CENTER. EACH CLINIC SHOULD BE EQUIPPED WITH A 16MM SOUND PROJECTOR, AT LEAST TWO FILM STRIP PROJECTORS, AND AT LEAST FOUR TAPE RECORDERS. The organization of this course outline is based in part on current thought regarding the teaching of reading as it relates to whether comprehension is a general skill or a set of specific identifiable skills, to reading as content and process, to vocabulary development, and to divergent thinking. The outline is divided into two major sections: recognizing and understanding ideas and recognizing and understanding words. Subsumed under the first section are comprehension skills including literal comprehension, interpretive or implied comprehension, critical level of comprehension, study skills, consumer survival skills, reading the news; paper, and recreational reading. Also included in the first section is rate of comprehension including flexibility, skimming, and scanning. Subsumed under the second section are vocabulary development, structural analysis, phonic analysis, dictionary skills, and oral reading skills. In the outline, each division consists of a number of teaching techniques and suggestions for direct classroom application with references that are intended to be suggestive rather than comprehensive. Advocating a multisensory approach to vocabulary that involves a "hear it, say it," then, "read it, write it" sequence, the mini-course offers eight pages of word activities organized according to the following format: words with stories associated with them; "a couple of roots that took," or words that are related to one another; interesting foreign words or phrases used in speech; and word games and oddities that require the student to coin new words or to interpret coined words. To help students learn important reading skills and habits and become independent learners, remedial reading laboratories should begin at the level of the student's competence, provide ample

practice in reading and language skills, and provide immediate feedback and evaluation. The University of Idaho Learning Resource Center supplements the remedial reading/writing course with laboratories that provide small groups of students with verbal practice in areas related to reading. The laboratories involve students in a variety of activities, including reading aloud lists of words and sentences that call attention to stress, pitch, and juncture; learning about the function of sentence parts through arranging nonsense words with clear function indicators, or long strings of English words, into sentences; role-playing brief dialogues; reading passages that demonstrate the importance of accurate punctuation; rephrasing active sentence constructions into passive constructions; learning about language history; working on vocabulary development; and learning methods of critical reading and television viewing. The success of the laboratories demonstrates that remedial reading supplements can be both enjoyable and significant. (GW)

The introductory note indicates that it was written with as low a readability level as was practical to enable the students to read as much as possible without interruption. The content is in twenty three- to four-page units, each one centering around a different occupational area. Each unit includes a short (one-page) reading selection describing the occupation and five written exercises relating to ten specific words taken from the selection. Unit titles are Auto Body, Auto Mechanics, Baking, Carpentry and Cabinetmaking, Electrical Trades, Fashion Design, Commercial Foods, Health Occupations, Ornamental Horticulture, Plumbing, Painting and Decorating, Machine Shop, Upholstery, Welding, Graphic Arts, Air Conditioning and Refrigeration, Commercial Art, Drafting, Cosmetology, and Diesel Mechanics. Career education is a vehicle which can capitalize on the interests of learning disabled students and, at the same time, show the relevance of academic skills. Project SELECT (Special Education Learning Experiences for Career Training), funded by the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, Title III, was implemented in order to develop a curriculum in career education to increase sixth, seventh, and eighth-grade students' skills in reading and arithmetic, as well as to improve knowledge of job opportunities. The first year's goal was to produce and utilize ten career kits consisting of film-strips, puzzles and games associated with auto mechanics, health services, cosmetology, public utilities, food services, truck driving, law enforcement, business careers, military service, and an introductory career awareness kit. To create materials such as these, the most important ingredient is a willingness to capitalize on interests already manifested by students. (KS)

A plan for freshman-level composition which includes students at different achievement levels would make the developmental student an integral part of the college, and eliminate the humiliation of being branded "remedial." All students would participate in the class, write the same essays, and read the same material; however, students would be graded on a contract addressed to their individual needs. Entrance tests, which would include a writing sample, would aid the student in identifying his weaknesses and strengths in the areas of writing, reading, grammar, and spelling. In addition to the basic class, students would take special labs in their areas of weakness. Programmed materials designed for use in a lab are available in all four areas, and computer-based education programs are becoming widespread. The lab teachers would keep in communication with the classroom teachers, and vice-versa, sending reports on progress at least once a week. In class, no distinctions besides grading would be made concerning a student's ability. The class would focus on four things: expository writing, meaningful readings, discussion, and reading one another's papers. The student's contract would spell out exactly what would be expected of him in each lab and in the classroom. (Author: NHM)

Identifiers--*Effective Reading Programs, Right to Read

This program, included in "Effective Reading Programs..." serves 1,674 students in grades 9-12, about 70 percent of whom are black. The program began in 1971 and consists of communication classes, one-semester courses that provide self-pacing, success-oriented instruction in reading for 50 minutes each day. The content is organized into two phases, and students can choose one of several courses at each phase. Participating students usually spend two semesters in the program and are either slow learners or underachievers as measured by two reading tests which they take in the spring before they are chosen to be in the program. To provide diagnostic-prescriptive instruction, the staff has developed a Guide to Materials for TEACING Basic Reading Skills, which teachers use as a reference when planning individual programs. The guide includes diagnostic reading tests and a reading analysis sheet, an index of reading skills and materials related to each skill, and suggestions for games and phonics puzzles. The program strongly emphasizes affective development, and at least half of each daily period is spent on open-ended discussions, rule-playing, and oral and listening activities. (CO)

Identifiers--*Higher Education Achievement Program

Six papers presented at a Higher Education Achievement Program (HEAP) Workshop by reading instructors at junior colleges are provided. In two of the papers, Jeanette Wilkerson lists the objectives of the Meridian Junior College reading program and provides a general description of the mode of operation, and Brenda Smith explains the structure and daily feedback incorporated into the organization of the reading program at Kennesaw Junior College. In the other papers, Dan Kesterson first questions motivation as a point of focus. He suggests focusing on the cognitive rather than the motivational aspects of learning, thus making the reading tasks reinforcing in themselves. Lucienne LeBlanc stresses the need for the student to see himself as somebody and the need for the instructor to be aware of the different techniques of motivating students. Clara Rogers presents a specific technique, role playing with vocabulary, as a means of getting students to communicate and become aware of their relationship with others. (Author: DB)

The mediagraphy, a new concept in storing and transmitting information, is a listing of sources of data relating to a particular subject area. In addition to written works, a mediagraphy may include non-book materials. This mediagraphy lists 60 sets of educational recordings available for remedial reading programs at the two-year community college level. Some programs which were originally produced for upper-level high school courses are also included. Entries are arranged alphabetically with format, length, latest catalog price, producer/author, distributor/publisher, date of production, a brief description, and keywords to locate specific approaches and areas of concentration given for each entry. Also included in this mediagraphy are an index to the individual titles arranged by key word and a listing of the addresses of the producers and distributors of the educational recordings. A description is presented of the reading laboratory course for secondary school students on reading levels three through nine in the Dade County, Florida, public schools. The course includes diagnosis of specific reading needs, and teaching word recognition, comprehension, and study skills. Classroom organization for the course focuses on individual instruction and provides for independent, small group, whole group, and laboratory instruction. Teaching strategies for each area of instruction are outlined in detail. Appendices include an informal reading inventory, lists of standardized reading and study skills tests, reading materials, workbooks, kits, audiovisual aids, and professional books. (AL)

This course of study for the slow-learner is intended to help the student understand his own worth and potential for growth, to improve his adjustments to his environment through better understanding and communication, and to show him the value of good work habits and participation in recreational and cultural activities. Introductory sections present objectives, tips for teachers, a time-allocation schedule, and suggested course materials. The bulk of the publication consists of eight units dealing with "Knowing Myself," "Getting the Most Out of School," "Setting the Stage for Independent Study," "Learning About Communication," "Participating in Community Life," "Developing New Concepts of Work," "Learning How to Use Leisure Time," and "Summing Up." Two special units consider the pleasures of reading a whole book, and spelling and vocabulary. A sample lesson plan for the presentation of a reading assignment is also included. (LH)

AVAILABILITY OF DOCUMENTS

Copies of most documents announced in this index can be read in their entirety on microfiche reader/printers at any one of the 700 libraries or institutions that subscribe to the ERIC Microfiche Collection. If the author or corporate source of the document did not give permission for the document to be included in the ERIC Microfiche Collection, another source of availability will be noted in the citation. For a complete listing of ERIC Microfiche Collections in your area, call or write to the ERIC Clearinghouse on Reading and Communication Skills, 1111 Kenyon Road, Urbana, IL 61801 (217-328-3870).

Documents are also available in both microfiche (MF) and paper copy (PC) or microfiche only from the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS), Computer Microfilm International Corporation, P.O. Box 190, Arlington, VA 22210. The price per document is based on the number of pages and is subject to change over time. The ERIC Price Code Schedule permits the user to convert all price codes to actual dollar amounts. Orders for 33 or more microfiche (MF) and all orders for paper copies (PC) will be shipped via United Parcel Service unless otherwise instructed. When ordering from EDRS, please specify MF or PC and include the ERIC Document (ED) number and the pagination of the document. Payment or an authorized original purchase order must accompany all orders.
