ABSTRACT

This statement of function for pupil personnel services (PPS) in the Department of Defense Dependents Schools (DDDS) focuses on the support role of pupil personnel workers. General, program, and specific functions of school counselors and psychologists, social workers, educational prescriptionists, school health nurses, and resident hall advisors are outlined. Program evaluation and research functions are also listed. The guide is designed to identify the broad areas of responsibility commonly found in PPS programs, although the actual function depends on the unique needs of the population being served. Emphasis is on the creation of an educational environment that is conducive to the personal, social, academic and vocational growth of students. (JAC)

Pupil Personnel Services

Statement of Functions

Anthony Cardinale, Director
Dept. of Defense Dependents Schools

Preface

Pupil personnel services (PPS) are designed to provide supplementary support to the regular educational program and daily classroom/school activities. In this role the pupil personnel specialists have the opportunity to work closely with students in areas of personal and educational concerns which support the classroom teacher's objectives.

The major task of PPS is to assist in creating an educational environment conducive to personal, social, vocational, and academic growth of students.

The statement of PPS functions is designed to identify the broad areas of responsibility commonly found in PPS programs. The actual functions of the pupil personnel worker should respond to the unique needs of the population being served. Specific service which may be provided within the broad areas described in this manual should be the result of discussions between the supervisor and the PPS staff member.
