ABSTRACT

This guide outlines the purposes, rules, procedures, funding, and status of federal education grant programs in Hawaii. These projects--funded by the United States Department of Education's Offices of Elementary and Secondary Education, Vocational and Adult Education, Special Education and Rehabilitative Services, Educational Research and Improvement, and Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs, and also by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services--are described in order, according to grantor and then by type of grant. Each program description summarizes eligibility requirements, basic provisions, significant rules and regulations, application and disbursement procedures, and matching provisions; lists the state agency and officers administering the grant; tabulates federal allocations for the years since the program's inception; and briefly reviews the program's activities. An appended table compares federal funds received in fiscal year 1983 with those received in 1984. (MCG)

F O R E W O R D

This is the eighteenth edition of the Guide to Federal Programs Operated in the State Department of Education since it was first published in January, 1966.

The purpose of this guide remains the same as that in the first edition: to provide a brief overview of current federal education grant programs to members of the Board of Education; legislators; the Governor and his staff; state, district, school administrators and staff personnel interested in the educational welfare of the people of Hawaii.

This guide will have served its purpose if it will be of use to its readers.

Requests for additional information about any of the programs described should be made to the Grants Application and Management Services Section, Planning and Evaluation Services Branch.

The federal funded programs listed in this Guide are grouped according to types of grants. This preface examines the types of grant funds distributed either directly or indirectly to our schools.

GRANTS

There are two major types of Federal grants--Block grants and Categorical grants. The program managers of elementary and secondary education programs would be primarily concerned with the Categorical grants since most Federal education grants are of this type.

1. Block Grants. These grants are made usually to states or local communities according to some formula such as population, unemployment figures, or other socio-economic factors and which allow the grantee great flexibility in the use of the funds as long as they are applied to the overall purposes for which they were appropriated. An example of this type of grant is Chapter 2 of the Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981.
2. Categorical Grants. These grants, when awarded, are to be expended by the recipient within specific categories. There is less flexibility in the use of these funds than the Block Grant funds. There are two types of Categorical grants--
 - a. Project Grants. These grants, also known as direct or discretionary grants, are for a specific project or the delivery of specific services or products. Project grants are generally established for a fixed or known period of time. The project may be involved in research, planning, fellowship, scholarship, technical assistance, survey, construction and unsolicited contractual agreements.

Project grants are competitive in nature. Every school district, nonprofit agency or unit of local government is in direct competition with every other similar entity which chooses to apply for the grant. A local school district would, therefore, compete with other districts and not against a state educational agency for the same grant. The competition for project grants gets keener as the amount of available federal money gets tighter. Examples of project grants include Follow Through and Bilingual Education.

- b. Formula Grants - These grants are made to specific grantees (usually State educational agencies) on the basis of a specific formula (prescribed in legislation or regulation) rather than on the basis of an individual project review. The formula is usually based on population, enrollment, per capita income, level of unemployment, fiscal capacity of the recipient or a specific need. Proposals are usually not required to receive formula grant funds, but applications and/or annual program plans are required. There may be intense competition within the States at the local level for the "pass-through" funds. Examples of this type of grants include ECIA Chapter 1, ECIA Chapter 2, and the Education of All Handicapped Children.

There are other types of grants available from the Federal agencies including sole source contracts, contracts, unsolicited proposals, etc. However, these grants are not normally available to applicants involved in elementary and secondary programs.

Programs under the jurisdiction of the Office of Elementary and Secondary Education, U.S. Department of Education, Washington, D.C. 20202.

- I. Federal Program: Financial Assistance to Meet Special Educational Needs of Disadvantaged Children
- II. Department Title: 84.010, 97-35, ECIA 1, Educationally Deprived Children
- III. Eligible Applicants: Public school districts.
- IV. Basic Provisions: Full reimbursement to boards of education of public school districts for programs designed to meet the special educational needs of educationally deprived children in school attendance areas having high concentrations of children from low-income families.
- V. Significant Rules and Regulations:
 1. Payments will be made only to the public educational agency, but the public educational agency must provide services to educationally deprived children from private elementary and secondary schools to an extent commensurate with the number of such children enrolled within the area concerned.
 2. Participating schools will be selected on the basis of the concentration of eligible children in the area. Projects will be approved on the basis of significant size, scope and quality to give reasonable promise of meeting the special needs of the most educationally deprived.
 3. Projects must include provisions for an annual objective evaluation of educational achievement.
 4. There must be provisions for the consultation of parents and teachers of children to be served.
 5. The State must provide services to Chapter 1 schools which are comparable to those provided to non-Chapter 1 schools.
 6. Chapter 1 funds must be used to supplement and, to the extent possible, increase the level of funds that would in the absence of federal funds be made available from non-federal sources.
- VI. Procedures for Applying for Approval:
 1. Through their District Offices, local public school authorities will file project application forms with the Compensatory Education Section, Office of Instructional Services, State Department of Education.
 2. Final approval of projects rests with the State Superintendent of Education.

VII. Disbursement of Federal Funds: Federal funds are allocated to the State by the Federal Government. Basic grants to each county are allocated on the basis of the numbers of children from families below the poverty level and from families on welfare. Funds are disbursed to project schools by the Department of Education through the District Offices. Each district may file special project applications up to the amount of the basic grant.

- X. Status and Analysis: A special project, Education Program for Delinquent Adolescents, seeks to provide the youths confined in the Hawaii Youth Correctional Facility--Olomana School--with educational experiences that will enable them to adjust upon release from the institution. The activities include individualized instruction and group discussions that supplement the instructional program of the school. Approximately seventy students are enrolled in this project.

Hoomana School in the Oahu Community Correctional Facility became eligible to receive Chapter I funds in 1974-1975. Projects will provide special supplemental educational services for youths below 21 years of age confined in the institution. (However, Hoomana School did not submit any project applications for the 1981-82, 1982-83 and 1983-84 school years. Hence, did not receive the funds allotted.)

XI. Status and Analysis: To develop institutional centers (within selected Hawaii schools) for extending the educational gains made by disadvantaged children in the preschool project, Head Start, and other similar quality preschool programs; to help children in grades K-3 to become self-confident, responsible, inventive, and productive; to develop model institutional centers (within selected Hawaii schools) where the developmental-interaction approach to early childhood education can be demonstrated and is available for observation and study for the purpose of replication in Hawaii schools; and to develop and refine materials and strategies for evaluating, disseminating, demonstrating, and replicating various aspects of the developmental-interaction approach (present focus).

Among the activities continuing in 1983-84 are development of materials and strategies and designing, implementing, and refining an in-service education program on the developmental-interaction approach for more groups of interested teachers and principals within the school districts. Other basic project activities are continued to provide comprehensive services to the students of Kaiulani, Kaewai, and Palolo Schools, target schools of the project according to funding guidelines.

A special focus during 1983-84 is related to the Educational Provisions for School Success (EPSS) program, the statewide effort on strengthening grade K-3 primary education through legislative funding of 1.8 million dollars. The Follow Through project assists schools by conducting in-service education on early school assessment and follow-up instruction based on students' strengths, interests, and needs identified through early assessment. The Follow Through project's instructional model (developmental-interaction approach to early childhood education) is basic to assessment and follow-up instruction.

VI. Entitlement: The entitlement for each local educational agency is computed by the U.S. Department of Education. Simply speaking, the entitlement for each sub-category is found by multiplying the percent entitlement specified by law for each sub-category, times the local contribution rate, times the average daily attendance of children in each sub-category. The local contribution rate is also determined by the U.S. Department of Education. It is an amount which is not less than (a) 50% of the average per pupil expenditure in the State two years ago or, (b) 50% of the national average per pupil expenditure two years ago.

The sum of the entitlement for each sub-category is the local educational agency's total entitlement which it would receive if 100% funding was available.

Historically, the level of appropriation has not been sufficient to provide all local educational agencies with their total entitlement. In such case, the U.S. Department of Education computes the amount each local education agency will receive in accordance with the method of allocating the available funds set forth in P.L. 81-874 as amended and the provisions of the appropriation act.

The ECIA consists of two major programs:

1. Chapter 1 - Financial Assistance to Meet Special Educational Needs of Disadvantaged Children
2. Chapter 2 - Consolidation of Federal Programs for Elementary and Secondary Education

Chapter 2 of the ECIA consolidated over twenty-eight smaller federal education programs including part of the Higher Education Act and National Science Foundation Act into a single block grant. The grants are to be administered by State educational agencies.

The purposes of the Chapter 2 program are to:

1. Improve elementary and secondary education for children attending both public and non-profit private schools.
2. Allow States and local educational agencies to use the program funds to meet their own educational needs and priorities.

V. Significant Rules and Regulations:

5. Maintains such records as may be required for fiscal audit and program evaluation.

VI. Program Requirements:

Three major program areas, outlined below, are authorized under this chapter. There are no requirements that funds be allotted equally to each area or that each area be funded.

2. Educational Improvement and Support Services
3. Special Projects

Chapter 2 funds must be used to supplement and, to the extent possible, increase the level of funds that would in the absence of federal funds be made available from non-federal sources.

A State must maintain the combined fiscal effort per student or the aggregate expenditure within the State for the preceding fiscal year at not less than 90 percent of such combined fiscal effort or aggregate expenditure for the second preceding fiscal year.

State and local educational agencies must provide children enrolled in private elementary and secondary schools equitable participation in any program funded under this chapter.

- III. Eligible Applicants: Local public educational agencies (in Hawaii it is the State educational agency because of its single school system and the Community College System of the University of Hawaii).
- IV. Basic Provisions: Federal aid for vocational education in schools of secondary level and above is augmented and broadened in a renewed effort on the preparation of job skills. Matching grants are made to states to augment curriculums.

The Smith-Hughes Act of 1917 provided federal assistance for vocational training in industry, agriculture, and home economics. A series of laws, including the George-Barden Act of 1946, expanded the vocational training program to include distributive education, the health occupations, and the fishery industries. In 1958, the National Defense Education Act added training for technicians. The extension of vocational and technical training has reflected a shift in emphasis from rural to urban job market demands.

The Vocational Education Act of 1963 shifted program emphasis from limited occupational categories to major groups of people in need of training. It provided for vocational and technical training in high schools, post-secondary schools, vocational-technical area schools, junior and community colleges, technical institutes and four-year colleges and universities. It increased federal matching grants to the States to expand training programs and to build area vocational and technical schools.

The Act also provided for work-study programs, supported in-service teacher training, provided funds for research in curriculum development and in problems of the disadvantaged, provided for the first time funds for training in the office occupations and training of skilled technicians.

The Vocational Education Amendments of 1968 continue the emphasis on people instead of occupations and authorize programs which deal with the dilemma facing the United States today and its changing world of work. Old jobs have disappeared or have been altered; new ones are emerging.

Relocations of industry and shifts in market demand have further complicated the labor market. In addition, jobs for which physical strength and untrained minds were sufficient have declined, while jobs requiring skills and advanced education have increased.

The Vocational Education Amendments of 1968 provided a way to bring about necessary changes in vocational education to meet new manpower needs. The Act is also designed to help the hard-to-reach and hard-to-teach. It places resources and program flexibility at the discretion of State school agencies and is designed to focus on the major deficiencies of the past.

Five categories of persons are eligible for vocational education under the 1968 Act: (1) persons attending high school; (2) persons who have completed or left high school but can study full time; (3) persons in the labor market who need training or retraining; (4) persons with academic or socio-economic handicaps, who need special vocational education programs; and (5) persons who have handicaps (physical or mental) who need special education assistance or require modified vocational education assistance or require a modified vocational education program.

(Although the Education Act of 1972 included the provisions of the Vocational Education Amendments of 1968 and so did the Education Act of 1974, no appropriations were made available under these comprehensive Education Acts. An additional provision, Part J for Bilingual Vocational Education, was also added in the Education Act of 1974.)

Title II of the Education Amendment of 1976, P.L. 94-482, amends the Vocational Education Act of 1963 primarily to assist States to improve planning in the use of all resources for vocational education and to overcome sex discrimination in vocational education. Also, the amendments permit consolidation of programs to provide greater flexibility to the States in conducting vocational education programs.

V. Significant Rules and Regulations:

1. A Five-Year State Plan, Annual Program Plan and Annual Accountability Report approved by the Bureau of Occupational and Adult Education, Department of Education, Washington, D.C., is required. The University of Hawaii is the agency responsible for the administration of the State Plan and for dealing with the U.S. Department of Education with respect to the Plan. A State Advisory Council appointed by the Governor representing at least twenty (20) designated interests is also a requirement.

2. States must reserve 20 percent of federal vocational education funds for the disadvantaged and 10 percent for the handicapped and provide 50 percent match of the federal special population set asides. Combined state and federal dollars for the handicapped and disadvantaged may only be used to pay the "excess costs" of educating these students.
3. Guidelines for eliminating discrimination and denial of services on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex and handicap in vocational education must be submitted. (Reg. 44, 17162-17175).
4. Detailed information on each student is now required under the new Vocational Education Data System (VEDS) for setting record-keeping standards for program audit and evaluation.

VI. Disbursement of Federal Funds: Disbursement of Federal funds through the University of Hawaii is by letter of credit.

VII. Matching Provisions: In-kind contributions shall not be used as part of the State's matching and maintenance of effort requirements. 50-50 Federal/State for annual program plan on a state-wide basis except as follows:

X. Status and Analysis:

A state-wide assessment of the nutrition education and training needs of administrators, teachers, food services personnel, parents and students was completed as required by Program regulations. The plan for assessment was designed by Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory and the assessment was conducted by the Curriculum Research Development Group of the University of Hawaii. The data from the needs assessment will be used to finalize the State Plan for Nutrition Education and Training.

Training models for school nurses, food service managers and teachers were developed and implemented. A draft framework for nutrition education K-6 was developed to aid the integration of nutrition education into existing curricular areas. A curriculum guide and instructional materials for K-12 have been developed to guide teachers and schools in the delivery of a well-planned nutrition education program. A major portion of the program for 1982-83 will be in-service training for teachers--preschool to grade 12, food service personnel, school nurses and parents.

Mini-grants have been provided to schools for proposals consistent with state-wide goals. Multi-media resources are also being analyzed, purchased and made available for state-wide dissemination. A 26-member State Nutrition Education Advisory Council for the Program has been established and consulted extensively.
