ABSTRACT

This guide gives educational service providers materials and resources to increase motivation and address other barriers that hinder the progress toward self-sufficiency of participants in Job Opportunities and Basic Skills/Greater Avenues for Independence (JOBS/GAIN) programs. Section 1 contains an explanation and sample of the Comprehensive Adult Student Assessment System (CASAS) Curriculum Index and Matrix. The index contains suggested competency areas and related materials that infuse motivation and guidance activities into the basic skill instructional program. A complete list of the CASAS Competencies for Employability are included. Section 2 has two parts: (1) instructional strategies and suggestions to address low self-esteem and lack of assertiveness; and (2) student materials. Section 3 contains the Employability Competency System Pre-Employment and Work Maturity Checklists along with directions for their use in the classroom or Job Club/job search. Section 4 lists community services most often needed by students. Suggestions are made for local adaptations. Section 5 provides a sample JOBS/GAIN student handbook that presents school information in an easy-to-read format. Section 6 is a program self-evaluation process. It consists of several checklists that facilitate a review of a program's current services and identify recommendations for modification and improvements. It may be used as a needs evaluation and as a means of planning follow-up technical assistance. A motivation bibliography lists eight references.

Introduction and Table of Contents

JOBS/GAIN participants come to the educational service provider with a variety of barriers to planning and achieving goals. In order to help the participants keep on task and work toward a goal, materials and resources are needed which are useful in increasing motivation and in addressing other barriers which hinder the progress toward self-sufficiency.

SECTION 1

Pages 1-16

This section contains an explanation and sample of the CASAS Curriculum Index and Matrix. The index, contains suggested competency areas and related materials which infuse motivation and guidance activities into the basic skill instructional program. A complete list of the CASAS Competencies for Employability are included.

SECTION 2

Pages 17-49

Barriers to self sufficiency such as low self esteem, lack of assertiveness, and time management problems affect the total learning experience. This section has two parts: Part I includes strategies and suggestions for instructors, and Part II consists of student activities and materials.

SECTION 3

Pages 50-67

The absence of work maturity and work experience is often a major barrier to development of self sufficiency. The ECS Pre-employment and Work Maturity Checklists are included in this section, complete with directions for their use in the classroom or Job Club/Job Search.

SECTION 4

Pages 68-77

Other problem areas such as conflicts with family members, child or spousal abuse, lack of support systems, dependency patterns, and mental or physical problems, are better addressed by professionals in the community. It is essential that a good system of referrals be available to the classroom instructor, JOBS/GAIN counselor or coordinator. Included in this section is a sample community resource list and suggestions for local adaptations.

SECTION 5Pages 78-86

JOBS/GAIN participants may express apprehension about returning to a school setting. Accurate school information may help to alleviate their fears. A sample JOBS/GAIN student handbook, presenting information in an easy to read format, is included as a model.

SECTION 6Pages 87-94

This section is a program self-evaluation process. It consists of several checklists facilitating a review of a program's current services and identifying recommendations for modification and improvements. An agency may use this as a needs evaluation, and as a means of planning follow-up technical assistance.

CASAS PRE-EMPLOYMENT INDEX GUIDE AND CASAS COMPETENCIES FOR EMPLOYABILITY

CURRICULUM INDEX AND MATRIX

The Curriculum Index and Matrix provides a resource for teachers to locate instructional materials which are linked to competency statements and are relevant for instruction. All materials included in the Index are coded to the CASAS Competency List by type of program (ABE/ESL), by level within the program (A, B, C, and D), and by specific chapters or modules within the books listed. Included are appropriate materials for programs in Basic Education, Pre-Employment/Work Maturity, and English as a Second Language. The utilization of the Curriculum Index and Matrix to select training resources provides an important link in the system between curriculum, instruction, and assessment. All materials selected for inclusion in the Curriculum Index and Matrix are recommended to CASAS by practitioners and are carefully reviewed and updated annually by CASAS staff to ensure that they meet all established criteria, including their appropriateness for competency-based adult education programs.

The curricular materials listed are available through recognized publishers. The names, addresses, and telephone numbers of these publishers are included with the titles of materials so that they can be ordered easily. Many schools and educational sites are able to obtain from publishers copies of the materials listed in the Index. The Curriculum Index and Matrix provides a quick reference system for coordinators and instructors to use before ordering books and other materials for courses.

CASAS COMPETENCY LIST

Principles of Competency Based Education serve as a framework for the CASAS Competency List. Competency Based Education (CBE) has been defined as "a performance-based process leading to demonstrated mastery of basic and life skills necessary for the individual to function proficiently in society." (National Center for Education Statistics, 1982, p. 80.) Competency Based Education emphasizes teaching basic and life skills through their application in a functional context that is relevant to a learner's needs and goals. Therefore, the measure of success becomes demonstrated learning rather than accumulated class time. CBE has been successful in a variety of programs including English as a Second Language classes, high school diploma programs for the adult learner, workplace literacy programs, on-the-job training, and staff development.

The process for placement, monitoring of performance, and certification of individual learner competence is an integral part of program planning for competency-based educational programs. Individualization of instruction is based on each learner's needs as indicated by pre- and post-testing of competency attainment rather than on what others in a group have achieved. Consequently, learners progress through the instructional sequences at their own rate.

Prior learning or achievement and employment history is determined and accounted for in developing each learner's educational and employment plan. The standards for successful performance are clearly stated and openly shared with the learner and instructor/facilitator so that they will know to what degree or level learning must be demonstrated for successful competency attainment. The focus of the learning process becomes the transfer and actual application of basic skills to appropriate life skills areas.

The competencies included in the CASAS Competency List were developed for relevance and instructional appropriateness by a majority of the 45 CASAS consortium agencies. The List is validated and updated on a yearly basis by the consortium. A three-digit coding system is used to define each of the competency statements. A statement from the Competency List is as follows:

- 4.1.3. Identify and use sources of information about job opportunities such as job descriptions and job ads.

The first digit (or 4) of the three-digit code represents the content area. The eight (8) CASAS Content Areas are as follows:

- 1) Consumer Economics
- 2) Community Resources
- 3) Health
- 4) Occupational Knowledge
- 5) Government and Law
- 6) Computation
- 7) (for future development)
- 8) Domestic Skills

The second digit represents the competency found within the designated content area. In this example, the 4.1 competency is: Understand basic principles of getting a job.

The third digit represents the specific competency statement (see above 4.1.3.).

A fourth digit is used in conjunction with the CASAS Item Bank, the Class Profile and the Test Content by Item forms. This represents the task (situation-specific requirement) area. The tasks are listed below:

- 1) Completing fill-in-the-blank forms
- 2) Answering questions based on information contained in consumer billings, maps, charts, matrices, graphs, or tables
- 3) Answering questions based on information contained in stories, articles, paragraphs, sentences, directions, or pictures
- 4) Answering questions based on information contained in signs, price tags, advertisements or product labels
- 5) Answering questions based on information contained in measurement or diagrams
- 6) Selecting correct picture or aural response from oral clues

Instructors can use the Class Profile and Test Content by Item forms in instructional planning to build skills in task areas needed by individual learners or groups of learners.

The CASAS Competency List for Employability includes target competencies for programs whose focus and outcomes are employability skills. All the competencies included in the Competency List for Employability is also included in the general CASAS Competency List. The current list with an employability focus is found on pages 6-16 in this section.

USING THE INDEX

Section III, the Curriculum Index, contains the entire list of publishers and materials listed in the 1990 Curriculum Index and Matrix. STUDENT MATERIALS

Part I

INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES AND ACTIVITIES TO ADDRESS LOW SELF-ESTEEM AND LACK OF ASSERTIVENESS

Barriers to Self-Sufficiency

Low Self Esteem

Lack of Assertiveness

These are group and individual activities which address low self esteem and lack of assertiveness. They may be used in or out of the instructional program. The instructional strategies listed below, work well with the student activities which are found in this section.

Instructional Strategies

- Cooperative Learning - This is structured group work in which students learn together by accepting individual responsibility for pieces of a whole lesson or project.
- Individualized instruction - These are instructional activities which are tailored to each student's performance level. Information is presented in increments for students to master before moving to the next higher level.
- Small/large group activities - In order for participants to grow in their ability to interact successfully with others, instruction should not consist only of individualized instruction but also include a mix of small and large group activities.
- On-going participant support network - These are regularly scheduled sessions (e.g. one a week for an hour), held on the education site. Each meeting should be structured with a facilitator and a designated subject.
- Using speakers and field trips - The use of field trips and speakers exposes participants to appropriate community role models. These may include successful former GAIN graduates.

● Dialogue Journals - These are personal entry journals in which students communicate in a non-threatening, non-graded way with their teacher. Communication can be free response or prompted by the teacher asking for an answer to a question or a response to an issue. The teacher responds personally, and in writing to students journals. Teacher responses are brief but sympathetic. The following are examples of prompted journal assignments:

Write about a time that you experienced success with a task. What was the task? How were you successful? How did you feel about your success?

List the various groups you belong to (church, clubs, family, employee, or student groups). List the positive aspects about your belonging to each group.

● Role Playing - These are activities in which students assume a particular role. The focus of the role playing activity is to examine a variety of response types, understand one's own role, and identify possible alternate responses and behaviors. The following are examples of role playing activities:

Teach the GAIN participant to accept a compliment with a simple "thank you." Students/participants can role play a situation where one person pays a compliment to the other one. The person receiving the compliment acknowledges the compliment with a smile and "thank you." The participants then switch roles and repeat the activity.

Teach students/participants to be a positive, reinforcing coach to their children, spouse, or friend by helping them without criticizing. Have students role play behaviors they currently exhibit and/or the behavior as they would like it to be. Discuss the value of the behavior in terms of how it made the person who was receiving the help feel.

SUGGESTED PROCESS FOR VIDEO-TAPING OF STUDENT ROLE MODELS

One process for a video-tape is to organize interviews with representative former students who have achieved significant progress toward their career goals. These would be good role models for students in ABE/ESL or GED classes. The tape could start with a brief introduction by the interviewer giving the student's background. If possible, part of the interview could be filmed at the student's former classroom or training area. Possibly the interviewer's questions can be edited out so that only the student's voice is heard after the introduction. The conclusion of the interview could freeze on a close-up of the student's face while summary remarks are given by the voice over.

SUGGESTED QUESTIONS

1. How did you decide to come to this school?
2. How did you feel when you first came here?
3. What did you fear when you first came here?
4. What helped you most in this school?
5. What job training did you have and where did you take it?
6. How long did the training take?
7. Tell us a little more about it.
8. Did you have any help regarding how to look for a job?
9. How did you look for a job?
10. Did you get a job?
11. What, do you think, got you the job? Why were you hired?
12. What do you like about your job?
13. Do you plan to continue in your present job, or do you want to change to another one later after you have had more training?
14. What would you like to tell students who are still in school where you were a few years ago?

MOTIVATION

Motivation suggestion for GAIN clients - Ideas in use from around the state of California.

1. Give each client a clock (if he/she doesn't have one) upon entering program. Focus on idea that client no longer has to depend upon someone else (maybe an unreliable someone) to get somewhere on time.
2. Shake hands with each client as they enter. Establish contact as one would in the business world. Acknowledge client as someone you (teacher) will do business with.
3. Emphasize a client's positive attributes while pointing out areas for improvement. Example: You have great verbal skills but you might want to watch yourself when you go on an interview as the employer may wish to say something too.
4. Have clients set goals for themselves in all areas of life. Teachers could share their goals. This shows a commitment to the process and treating the client as a person.
5. Use lots of handouts with clients. They act as reinforcers to class and are tangible things to take home with them.
6. Remind clients that their active classroom participation in group discussions, their attitudes, attendance, dress and hygiene- reflect how they will likely behave on the job site. One day a week might be dress for class as one would on the job.
7. The classroom could be equipped with either a real or prototype time clock. This is appropriate as:
 - a) the students are preparing for employment, and
 - b) going to school in a GAIN program is like their job.

Their times would be for in/out as well as for break times. This would be totaled at the end of each week. Both math and work maturity skills are addressed in this activity.

8. A GAIN class lottery could be established. Each day, as students arrive, they receive a class lottery ticket (not an official one). Students who remain for the entire class receive an additional ticket. Drawings are held on Fridays. Those having the most tickets have a better chance to win. Prizes might include some donated by local fast food or community businesses, or other appropriate prizes. (homemade foods, school supplies)
9. Invite former students to give a short presentation on current jobs. Ideas could include how training was acquired; what one needed to know to get the job, etc.
10. Video tape simulated job interviews or on-the-job interviews for future classroom use.
11. District/school/community brochures on vocational training opportunities can be made available in each class
12. Hold a job fair (also a good cooperative learning project.)
13. Arrange for staff from district vocational programs, ROP programs or JTPA training programs to give presentations to the class. Where possible, classes could visit the training site.
14. Project TIDE. Gender equity projects are funded throughout the State to encourage women and men to enter non-traditional fields. Projects are funded with federal Vocational Education Act (VEA) monies through State Department of Education to local districts, ROP/C's or Community Colleges. Check with vocational projects director locally.

STUDENT MATERIALS

INTRODUCTION

Building self-esteem is not something you do to another person. Improving self esteem is an internal self-concept process. You can assist other persons in seeing themselves in a positive image. A person with strong self-esteem can say "I like myself".

The activities in this section are suggestions to assist in the self-image building process. Currently there is a wealth of self-esteem materials and workshops available to educators. Values clarification, decision making and goal setting are inherently valuable components of this process.

It may help to build upon the belief that the reasons for dropping out of school are not as important as the decision to return to school.

SELF-ESTEEM

By Virginia Satir

I am me

In all the world, there is no one else like me; there are persons who have some parts like me, but no one adds up exactly like me

Therefore, everything that comes out of me is authentically mine because I alone choose it.

I own everything about me; my body, including everything it does; my mind, including all its thoughts; my eyes, including the images of all they behold; my feelings, whatever they may be—anger, joy, frustration, love, disappointment, excitement; my mouth, and all the words that come out of it, polite sweet or rough, correct or incorrect; my voice, loud or soft; and all my actions, whether they be to others or to myself;

I own my fantasies, my dreams, my hopes, my fears.

I own all my triumphs and successes, all my failures and mistakes; because, I own all of me, I can become intimately acquainted with me.

By doing so I can love me and be friendly with me in all my parts.

I can then make it possible for all of my to work in my best interests.

But as long as I am friendly and loving to myself, I can courageously and hopefully look for ways to find out more about me.

However I look and sound, whatever I say and do, and whatever I think and feel at a given moment in time is me.

This is authentic and represents where I am at that moment in time.

When I review later how I looked and sounded, what I said and did, and how I thought and felt, some parts may turn out to be unfitting, I can discard that which is unfitting, and keep that which proved fitting, and invent something new for that which I discarded.

I can see, hear, feel, think, say, and do.

I have the tools to survive, to be close to others, to be productive, and to make sense and order out of the world of people and things outside of me.

I own me, and therefore I can engineer me.

I am me, and I am Okay.

BUILDING SELF-ESTEEM

In this activity you will identify and evaluate components of self-esteem

The Components of Self-Concept Are:

SELF-KNOWLEDGE	"I am..."	Facts I know about myself: my age, sex, job, family
SELF EXPECTATIONS	"I could be..."	My ideal image of myself, source of internal pressures.
STANDARDS	"I should be..."	Other people's ideal image of me, source of external pressures.

These Components Lead to Self-Esteem:

Self-esteem is the result of a comparison between our knowledge of ourselves and the expectations and standards we have for ourselves. If what we know about ourselves and what we and other people expect of ourselves is fairly close, our self-esteem will be high and we will have more feelings of success. If there is too much difference between what we know about ourselves and what we expect of ourselves, our self-esteem will be low and we will have more feelings of failure.

Example:

1. If I think I could be able to be in top physical condition, but I know that I am not exercising and my body is out of shape, I will not feel good about my body and myself; thus my sense of self-esteem will be low.
2. If my teachers think I should be making A's on my report card and I know I am making A's, I will feel good about myself; thus my sense of self-esteem will be high.

MY SENSE OF SELF-ESTEEM

Instructions:

Complete the rating scale and answer the question at the end.

Six of the areas in which a sense of self-esteem can be developed are listed below

Rate yourself on a scale of LOW (maybe I should work on this) to HIGH (I feel good about this).

A. FAMILY - I am glad I am part of my family. I enjoy being with them. We have a good relationship.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

B. OCCUPATIONAL- I feel good about my school work. I usually do the best I can. I think what I do is important. I look forward to going to school.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

C. SOCIAL - I feel good about my friends and take time for social activities. My friends enjoy being with me. We provide a support for each other.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

D. SPIRITUAL - I know what I believe and take time for spiritual growth. My faith gives meaning and support to my life.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

E. PHYSICAL - I feel good about my body. I take good care of my body, exercise, eat good food, get medical and dental attention.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

F. INTELLECTUAL/CREATIVE/ SPECIAL INTERESTS - I take time for personal growth and development and use of skills that interest me.

LOW 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 HIGH

Choose one area to work on and improve. What could you do to improve self-esteem in this area.?

BUILDING YOUR SELF-CONFIDENCE

As you begin to make plans to take action, you may become anxious about what others may think of those plans, what you might do wrong, and what might happen after you take action. This applies whether you are planning an interview, thinking about being assertive, signing up to take an entrance examination, or filling out an employment application. Although anxiety is not "bad" in itself, too much anxiety may cause you to complete the task with greater difficulty and with less satisfying results. Some people do not do things that could lead to their greater happiness and satisfaction because of that initial anxiety.

To focus more clearly on your positive aspects in order to increase your self-confidence and decrease your anxiety, try the following exercise:

Take several three by five cards and write on each card a positive feature about your life and/ or yourself. Examples might be "I'm proud of being able to make my own clothes". or "I'm proud of handling all arrangements for the church bazaar." Try to identify three positive qualities at first. Continue adding to your list of positive qualities for the week. Read over your cards daily. The qualities must be realistic to be effective, so avoid generalizations like "I'm a good person". Try to focus on specific positive things.

DEVELOPING A POSITIVE SELF-CONCEPT

GOAL: To become the person I want to be, rather than what others think I should be.

1. When I begin to understand who I am and how I feel I will develop my own self-concept
2. When I begin to feel that I want to change I will know that I am developing my own self-concept.
3. When I am mostly happy and feel good and I see things as good instead of bad, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
4. When I begin to believe that I can make a difference in my own situation and in the world, I will know that I am developing my own self-concept.
5. When I start creating the image of how I want others to see me and begin changing the way I see them, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
6. When I start creating a reputation of "can do" rather than "cannot do" I will know that I am developing my own self-concept.
7. When I begin to develop opportunities to say, "Yes I can!" I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
8. When I stop labeling others, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
9. When I look for the best in others and learn to accept them as they are, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
10. When I learn to accept the fact that I have created myself just the way I am and I can accept that, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
11. When I am able to say, "no", to the things I really don't want to do, I will know I am developing my own self-concept.
12. When I am comfortable with myself before and after I say "yes" or "No", I will know I am developing my own self-concept.

SUCCESS IN MY LIFE

LEADER'S NOTE: Looking at special accomplishments or successes and analyzing skills involved has a two-fold purpose of restoring a sense of personal usefulness and giving information to the group. Participants can suggest places to put these skills to use.

Make careful groups. Some success stories will be more powerful than others. Make sure that each person identifies something accomplished and write it down before group work begins. Emphasize that this is a skills-identification exercise. Each has something to say.

Examples of success stories: A welfare mother said, "Someone told me I'm good to my kids." A grant director said, "When I surveyed my neighborhood, I got City Hall to replace the entire water system on my side of town, and received a good citizenship award." Both had special skills.

Small Group Activity

(Time Approximately 30 Minutes)

DIRECTIONS: Take five minutes to do the "Successes in My Life" Worksheet. Working in groups of three or four, each person may talk about an occasion when others commented, "You really did a good job." At the top of a page, have the participant describe briefly a successful experience. At the bottom, list the skills used to accomplish these.

Large Group Activity

When examining accomplishments, patterns become apparent in such areas as skills used, people you liked to work with, rewards, or work situations where this could happen again.

In reviewing others' success stories, have them look for patterns that might be missed and discuss them now.

SUCCESS IN MY LIFE EXERCISE

Directions: This is a skills-identification exercise. Think about six areas of your life:

Work
Home
Social
Church
School
Community

Select one of these areas in which you have done something about which everyone said, "You did a good job." In a few words, write a description of your success on the "Successes in My Life" worksheet. List the skills you used to accomplish your success

Description

Skills Used

ASSERTIVE BEHAVIOR

Assertive behavior is the ability to exercise one's rights without infringing on the rights of others. It means being able to state your opinions without abusing or taking advantage of others, and without being abused or taken advantage of.

Assertive People:

- Communicate feelings and opinions clearly and directly
- Speak clearly
- Establish eye contact
- Give honest feedback
- Have facial expressions and body language that match what they are saying

UNDER-ASSERTIVE BEHAVIOR

Under-assertive individuals may be seen as shy, timid, or reserved. In most situations, they do not assert their rights or act on their feelings.

Under-assertive people:

- Make excuses
- Apologize for what they are about to say
- Speak in a voice that is hard to hear; looking down or away.
- Blame themselves when things go wrong

OVER-ASSERTIVE BEHAVIOR

Over-assertive behavior shows insensitivity to other people. This individual may appear to have a high level of self-confidence and command of every situation.

Over-assertive people:

- Blame others
- Take the offensive before anyone has a chance to say anything
- Speak loudly
- Use unnecessary violence (verbal or physical)
- Act overbearing and intimidate others

Being assertive takes practice; it can't be learned in a few minutes. Look for ways to practice. Seek to solve problems by communication, compromise, and cooperation.

BEING ASSERTIVE

in this activity the participant will define and identify assertive behavior

DIRECTIONS:

1. Read "Assertive Behavior" information.
2. For the following situation, answer and discuss the questions below.

QUESTIONS:

1. In a restaurant, you order a hamburger well done, and it is served rare.

If you were under-assertive, what would you do or say?

If you were over-assertive, what would you do or say?

How Much Change Can You Take?

Dr. Thomas Holmes, professor of psychiatry at the University of Washington, and others have devised a scale which assigns point value to stress— good and bad— that affects us when we make changes in our lives. When enough changes occur during one year, their cumulative effect may be detrimental to your health. Of the people he studied, eighty percent of those whose total points exceeded 300 became seriously depressed, had heart attacks, or suffered from other illnesses (1979).

Take time in the workshop or at home to complete the following stress evaluation. Ask yourself what you can do to eliminate excess stress.

REDUCING STRESS

Write down three immediate goals that you can accomplish in the next month to reduce excessive stress.

Minigoals:

3.

Steps I can take this weekend toward the immediate goals.

1.

3.

4.

5.

Realistically, what can I have accomplished one week from today?

Will I do it? (If so, then you're off to a good start)

SETTING PRIORITIES AND MAKING TIME

If you can't have everything, what can you have? Well, What do you want? What do you want most? It might be painful to find that "you're only human," but at least you have the power to decide which things are most important to you. Then you can make those goals your top priorities - the things you'll try hardest for, put ahead of other interests, spend the most time on. It's possible to have hundreds of accomplishments and still find yourself unsatisfied, simply because you never made time to do the one thing you most wanted. The next exercise will help you decide what your priorities are and where your time can best be spent.

Use the spaces provided to make a list of all the things you have to do or would like to do in the following week. Include housework, outside jobs, relationships, activities with friends, what ever you usually do. Then beside each entry, indicate its importance to you. Many factors contribute to how "important" each task is. For example, attending a meeting may not be personally important to you, but cooperating with your employer may be.

For each task or activity, indicate its importance by writing an "A", "B", or "C". Place an "A" by activities that have to get done in the next week or are of most importance for you personally. You will sacrifice some things for these. They are your top priorities. Then write a "B" by activities that are important, but not crucial. Write a "C" by items that would be nice to get done if you have time, but won't cause problems if they are left undone.

After you have listed your "A", "B", and "C" priorities, try to work on your "A,s" first and complete them before going on to the "B's". Then finally, if you have the time, do your "C" tasks.

YOUR PRIORITIES FOR THE NEXT WEEK

1. List what you need to do in the next seven days:

2. Give your activities a priority rating of 'A', 'B', or 'C'

	A	B	C

One week later

1. Did you accomplish all your 'A' tasks?

2. Did the 'C's' you left uncompleted really need doing?

3. Did you do 'C's' and leave 'A's' and 'B's' undone?

4. Did you work on your 'A's' first? _____ 'B's' second? _____

'C's' third? _____

5. At the end of this week, how do you feel about what you accomplished?

A list like this allows you to plan your time more effectively, achieve the things that are important to achieve at the time, and helps you avoid procrastination of an important, but perhaps an unpleasurable activity.

YOUR PRIORITIES FOR THE NEXT MONTH

1. List what you need to do during the next month.
2. Give your activities a priority rating of 'A', 'B', 'C'.

Activity: _____

Priority: _____

THE FUTURE

On these pages, you can record the changes that will take place in the coming years. You can expect substantial changes in your goals and values. What ever your age, there will always be new decisions to be made.

Pre-employment and Work Maturity Checklists

ECS Pre-employment and Work Maturity Checklists

The Employability Competency System Pre-employment and Work Maturity Checklists include the following:

- A. Career Awareness: Making Career Decisions Using Labor Market Information
- B. Preparing a Resumé
- C. Cover Letter
- D. Filling out an Application
- E. Interviewing
- F. Work Maturity
- G. Job Experience/Training.

It may be appropriate for your program to choose the use of all the checklists or a few specific ones. They assess pre-employment and work maturity skills and can be used for pre and post assessment. They are reliable tools for monitoring client progress.

The Career Awareness: Making Career Decisions & Using Labor Market Information checklist is designed to assess how much clients know about the job they would like to obtain, what specific skills are necessary to get this job, the knowledge the participant has as to what is available in the job market, and general information on how to locate and contact employers to apply for an appropriate position. This checklist can be used during classroom instruction, during an orientation interview with an educational service provider, and during Job Club/Job Search component of GAIN.

The Checklists: Preparing a Resumé, Cover Letter, and Filling out an Application, may be used in the classroom for instruction or during an interview by the educational service provider. These checklists are designed to assess the applicable writing skills necessary to attain employment.

The Interviewing Checklist assesses the skills necessary to interview for a position. This checklist can also be used for classroom instruction and/or during an interview by an educational service provider.

The Work Maturity Checklist is designed to assess the work maturity or job readiness of a participant in a real or simulated job setting. It can be completed by the classroom instructor and used for classroom instruction and practice when the classroom has been set up to model a workplace. There is an ECS Work Maturity Video available from CASAS, which can be used in conjunction with the Work Maturity Checklist. This Work Maturity Video portrays Jeff who works in a warehouse and Kate who works at a video store. These two vignettes can be used for classroom instruction to allow students to rate Kate and Jeff's work maturity skills and to discuss how these workers demonstrated their skills. This video can also be used to train program staff in using the Work Maturity Checklist.

There are clarifications provided on the back of each Checklist to provide more descriptive definitions for each area to improve consistency among various jobs and program staff.

The ECS Assessment Summary, used in conjunction with an EEDP (Educational/Employment Development Plan), assists in monitoring and documenting a learner's progress in the remediation process.

These Checklists were designed as a result of a statewide survey of all Private Industry Councils in California. A competency was considered a high priority and essential for inclusion into the comprehensive competency system if over 70 percent of the respondents indicated that the competency was PIC-approved. The survey results were organized into the 11 specific competency areas addressed by the Department of Labor's requirements for a "sufficiently developed system" for JTPA programs.

Community Resources

Community Resources

This section contains the listings of community services most often needed by students. For additional referrals, consult any of these:

- White pages of the phone book, especially community services numbers, section A, in the front of the book.
- Yellow pages of the phone book
- Site counselors or administrators
- Knowledgeable clergy or other professionals who have experience in the areas of concern.

This section, developed for San Diego County, gives an organizational structure and comprehensive listing of agencies in one area. It is intended as a model, therefore phone numbers have not been included.

Local agencies should obtain a copy of a services directory developed for your county. It can usually be obtained through Human Services Agencies. You don't have to re-invent the wheel. As services are used, personal contacts, eligibility requirements, and specific services information could be developed into a format similar to this one.

The compilation of a local resource directory can become part of the instructional program. Students can do the research, call to validate addresses and phone numbers and be generally responsible for the directory. This is an excellent competency based, cooperative learning activity and would require use of several basic skills (including communication) to finish this task.

Program Self-Evaluation Checklist

Activity A: Program Self-Evaluation Checklist

Purpose

This activity will facilitate a review of your program's current services and help identify recommendations for program modifications and improvements. Follow-up and technical assistance consultations may be required based on the results of your organization's self-evaluation in the areas of Guidance, ESL/VESL, Basic Skill, or GED.

Directions

Have an initial meeting with the agency's team including administrator/coordinator, counselor, and appropriate instructors.

Suggestions for Completion

- Distribute checklists to appropriate instructors and support staff. Explain purpose of self-evaluation.
- Each individual completes the checklist to the best of his/her working knowledge of the program.
- In larger programs instructional teams (i.e. ESL/VESL, ABE, GED) may wish to review the statements and identify their priorities.
- The agency teams will then reconvene to review priorities from all departments and complete the last part of the self-evaluation.

Process for Review of Self-Evaluation

- Review each statement and identify the status of each practice named in the statement. (YES, NO, N/A)
- Add any statements that apply to your program practices and identify the status.
- Identify the priority level of each statement. 5 means "must do tomorrow," 3 means "need to start within the next month."

Program Self-Evaluation Checklist

- Basic Skills
- Pre-Employment/Work Maturity
- Job Specific Skills

This checklist is designed to permit a self-evaluation of the services and practices that are administered by an educational service provider serving GAIN/JTPA participants. This checklist, when used in conjunction with the Employability Implementation Plan form, facilitates a review of a program's current services and helps to identify recommendations for program modifications and improvements. The items on the checklist may represent an exhaustive coverage and adaptations may be made to ensure a comprehensive assessment.

Status			Priority
YES	NO	N/A	LO - HI
			1	2	3	4	5
PROGRAM GOALS
Program goals reflect the local needs and are agreed upon by representatives of the community, agency staff, and participants concerned.
QUANTIFIABLE LEARNING OBJECTIVES
Competency statements contain measurable learning objectives (skills, attitudes, knowledge, and behavior to be taught). The levels of achievement to be attained and the means of measurement to be used to demonstrate competency attainment are identified.
Competency statements are validated by a local business and industry advisory committee.
Competency statements are established or approved by the PIC for JTPA funded programs.*
RELATED CURRICULA, TRAINING MODULES, AND APPROACHES
Approaches and activities include CBE in-service training for managers, instructors, intake and guidance personnel, job developers, business and community volunteers.*
Participant orientation to CBE system is included in the related curriculum activities.
Competency based instructional materials and behavior modification approaches are relevant to the competency statements.*
The needs assessment results are used to adapt classroom instruction to meet the participant's identified learning needs and goals.
Competency based instructional materials are appropriate for the program and the participant's level of achievement.

* Elements of a sufficiently developed CBE system are required if the service provider plans to report competency attainment for youth participants in JTPA programs.

There are periodic evaluations of participant achievement to determine if the participant is "making satisfactory progress" (MSP) during program attendance.*
EMPLOYMENT/EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN
An Employment/Educational Development Plan (EEDP) is developed based on assessment results and other information relevant to CBE instruction.*
Participant's personal goals and preferences are incorporated into the learning plans and all components of the EEDP are known and agreed upon by participants.
