ABSTRACT

In response to an unstable economy and diminishing resources, Lansing Community College, in Michigan, initiated a college-wide reorganization in July 1993 to improve institutional effectiveness and increase efficiency. This paper provides a description of the reorganization process and organizational structure before and after the change. First, a narrative is provided of the reorganization process from February to July 1993, highlighting the reorganization of the college into the following five new divisions: (1) student and academic support; (2) careers; (3) liberal studies; (4) community services and continuing education; and (5) administrative services. The narrative also describes the formation of a restructuring transition team of administrators to manage the overall process; a 13-member, college-wide operational transition team to manage operations; college-wide teams to develop organizational structures for the new units; and a divisional transition team to finalize the assignment of functions in divisions. Organizational charts are then presented of the entire college structure before and after the July 1993 restructuring. Finally, organizational charts are presented for each of the new divisions, including information on the major units constituting the divisions; the academic and non-academic functions of each unit; and their divisional locations prior to reorganization. LANSING COMMUNITY COLLEGE REORGANIZATION: AN OVERVIEW

INTRODUCTION

Over the past few years, Lansing Community College has faced a series of challenges which have had considerable impact. An unstable economy, reductions in state funding, and an unsuccessful millage effort have all served to diminish the resources available to the institution during a time when the costs of providing quality educational programs have continued to increase. In partial response to this situation, the College initiated a process of college-wide reorganization, designed to improve institutional effectiveness and increase efficiency, while holding down costs. This new organizational structure became effective on July 1, 1993.

This document provides an overview of the process of reorganization. It includes 1) a description of major reorganization events, 2) charts indicating the overall organizational structure of the College prior to and following the July 1, 1993, reorganization, and 3) charts showing the organizational structures of each of the new divisions.

THE PROCESS OF REORGANIZATION

Outlined below are the highlights of the reorganization process from February 1993 through July 1993.

February 9 - The President met with the College-wide North Central/Program Review team to present the basic framework of a new organizational structure for Lansing Community College. The College was to consist of the following five new major organizational units:

The Student and Academic Support Division: Offers coordinated courses and services that provide the highest probability of student success, focusing on student needs holistically. Includes courses that prepare students for work in the Careers or Liberal Studies Divisions. Provides support services throughout the student's LCC attendance in areas related to enrollment management. Offers support to instruction through delivery of various learning resource functions.

Careers Division: Offers certificate and degree programs which prepare students for successful employment upon completion, including careful coordination with area employers' needs.

Liberal Studies Division: Offers non-terminal degree programs which prepare students for successful transfer, including careful coordination with transfer institutions for maximum acceptance.

Community Services and Continuing Education Division: Offers activities and services, including non-credit courses, that meet community needs outside of the range of courses and services offered through the other divisions. Emphasizes learning opportunities for constituents who are not degree-oriented, including services to business/industry/government and various community groups. Provides all fee-for-services and other contracted training. Coordinates with other divisions to utilize College resources for community service and continuing education functions. Provides marketing and public information services for the College.

Administrative Services Division: Provides administrative support for the activities of the other divisions, including various managerial and technical services. Responsible for the physical plant, campus safety, business services, and fiscal management functions.

At the request of the President, the College-wide North Central/Program Review Committee participated in a process to determine where to relocate current academic and non-academic functions within new units.

March 3 - A comprehensive list of functions within each divisional unit was compiled and distributed campus-wide, along with a calendar of events for the reorganization.

March 9 - Campus-wide hearings were held to allow the College staff to bring forward questions or concerns related to the placement of functions within divisions.

March 16 - The President announced the names of the individuals who were to provide leadership in the new divisions. A national search was to be conducted to fill the position of Dean of the Careers Division, and a transition leadership team was appointed to oversee operations in the interim.

March 19 - The Restructuring Transition Team (RTT), consisting of deans, vice presidents, and other key College personnel, was established. This team was given responsibility for the overall management of the restructuring process, including guiding the process, establishing priorities, providing support to structures throughout the transition, and coordinating the efforts of various teams.

Also at this time, the 13-member college-wide Operational Transition Team (OTT)

was established to handle the operational details of the restructuring. This included identifying the tasks, timelines, and processes needed to ensure a smooth July 1 transition and, once the transition had begun, to monitor processes and make changes where necessary.

March 22 - The President delivered a college-wide address to reiterate the changes that would be brought about as a result of the reorganization. (This address followed previous informational meetings held for each of the divisions. These meetings provided an opportunity for the President to answer specific questions raised by divisional staff and to discuss issues related to the reorganization.)

April 9 - Approximately 90 persons, including members of the North Central/Program Review Committee, participated in the first stage of the divisional structuring process. Teams were formed, consisting of persons from within and outside of each of the divisions. These teams, with the assistance of facilitators, recommended an organizational structure for each new division by clustering and grouping related functions within those divisions according to the following guidelines:

1. Centralization of certain functions such as hiring, purchasing, budgeting, business services, etc., within the Dean's Office.
2. Administration through a team-oriented approach regarding decision-making and communications, with representation from all groups of employees.
3. Standardization of processes and procedures at the divisional and institutional level for curriculum/course development, with faculty input and involvement in the decision-making process.
4. Coordination of process and procedures among the five divisions regarding services to students, faculty, and staff, in support of curricular and co-curricular delivery, community outreach, and service to business and industry.
5. Systematic review of services and curriculums within the division to minimize duplication.

April 15 - Proposed divisional structures were distributed to the campus.

April 16-23 - Meetings were held for each of the new divisions. These meetings focused on divisional structures and provided opportunities for response and suggestions from divisional staff.

May 3 - Divisional Transition Teams (DTT's) were established by each dean for each division in consultation with the College-wide Restructuring Transition Team (RTT). The dean served as the chair of each DTT. The divisional teams were charged with finalizing the assignments of functions within clusters and sub-clusters within the division, developing a detailed organizational structure for the division, and developing the structure to organize the functions within the divisional dean's office. Individuals across the campus were encouraged to attend the transition team meetings of their respective divisions. A schedule of meeting times was distributed campus-wide.

May 17 - The final divisional structure for the new College divisions, as proposed by the DTT's and approved by RTT, was distributed, along with a list of leadership positions for each division. At this time, all members of the College staff were invited to recommend (to divisional deans) faculty, administrators, and staff whom they felt might be particularly qualified for such positions.

May 24 - A listing of individuals assigned to divisional leadership positions was distributed to the campus. Assignments were made based on employee profiles, input from the College community, deliberations by divisional deans and the RTT, and approval by the President.

May 28 - Personnel assignments beyond the divisional leadership group were finalized and staff were notified. The assignment process involved the RTT, the divisional deans, divisional leadership appointees, and consultations with the appropriate personnel.

June 7 - As a result of a recommendation made by a subcommittee of President's Council, a process was developed whereby employees could appeal reassignments that resulted from the College's reorganization. The process was recommended by Expanded President's Council and accepted by the bargaining unit representatives.

June 8 - To provide answers to questions across campus regarding the reorganization, a Question and Answer Forum was created. On a bi-weekly basis, questions generated by the College community were responded to by the Executive Office and distributed campus-wide.

In addition, a bulletin was developed by the College Communication Team (formed to address the College's communication needs through the restructuring process). Disseminated on a weekly basis, this bulletin was intended to inform the campus regarding divisional committee meeting times, locations, and agendas, so that all employees who wished could attend.

July 1 - The new organizational structure was officially implemented.

July 27 - RTT reviewed the role of the DTT's and acknowledged the need for a college-wide team to monitor the progress of the reorganization. RTT finally concluded that it would be appropriate to move from DTT's to a single, college-wide Monitoring Transition Team (CMTT), composed of an administrator, faculty member, and staff member from each division, one of whom would be a part-time employee. The CMTT was expected to meet on a monthly basis and to make reports to the RTT.

It is anticipated that the new institutional structure will be fully implemented by August of 1994.

ORGANIZATIONAL CHARTS

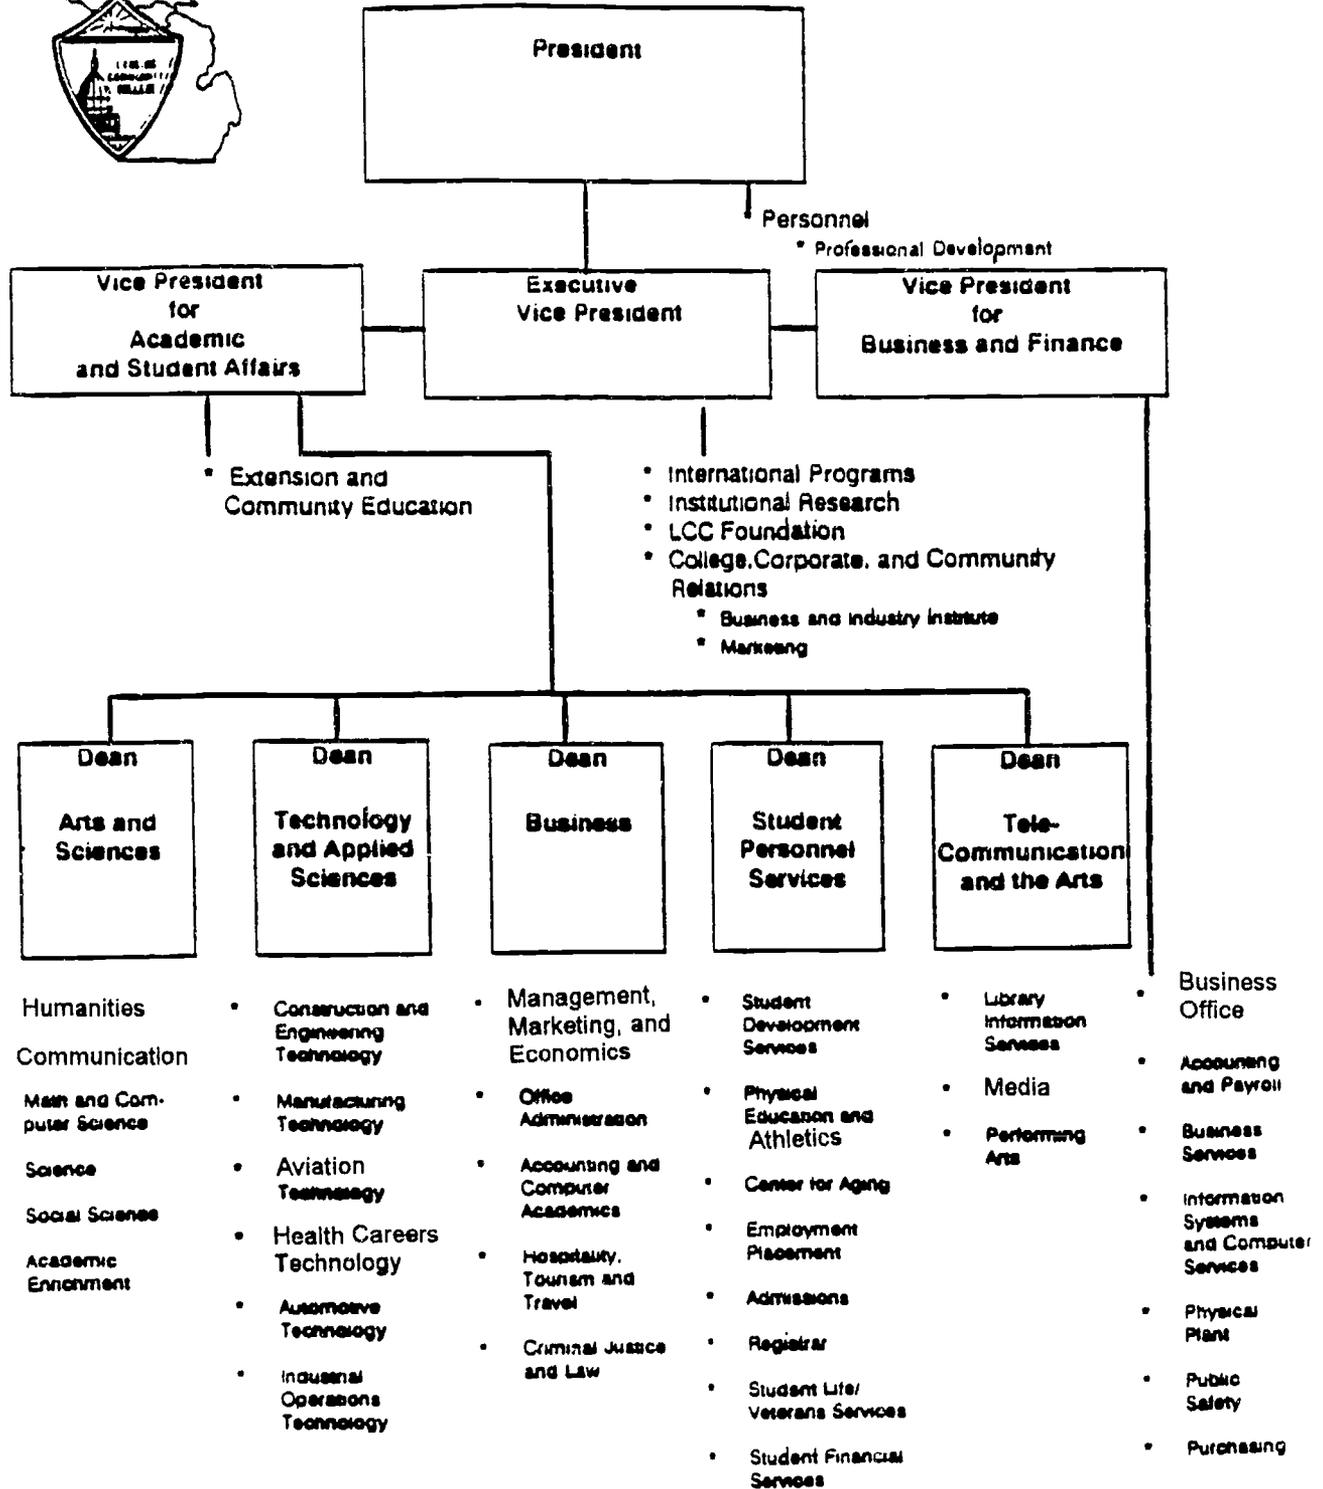

On page 6 of this document, a chart showing the organizational structure of the College prior to the July 1, 1993 reorganization has been provided. For comparison purposes, a chart presenting the new organizational structure of College, which became effective on July 1, 1993, has been provided on page 7.

Pages 8 through 30 include organizational charts for each of the new divisions:

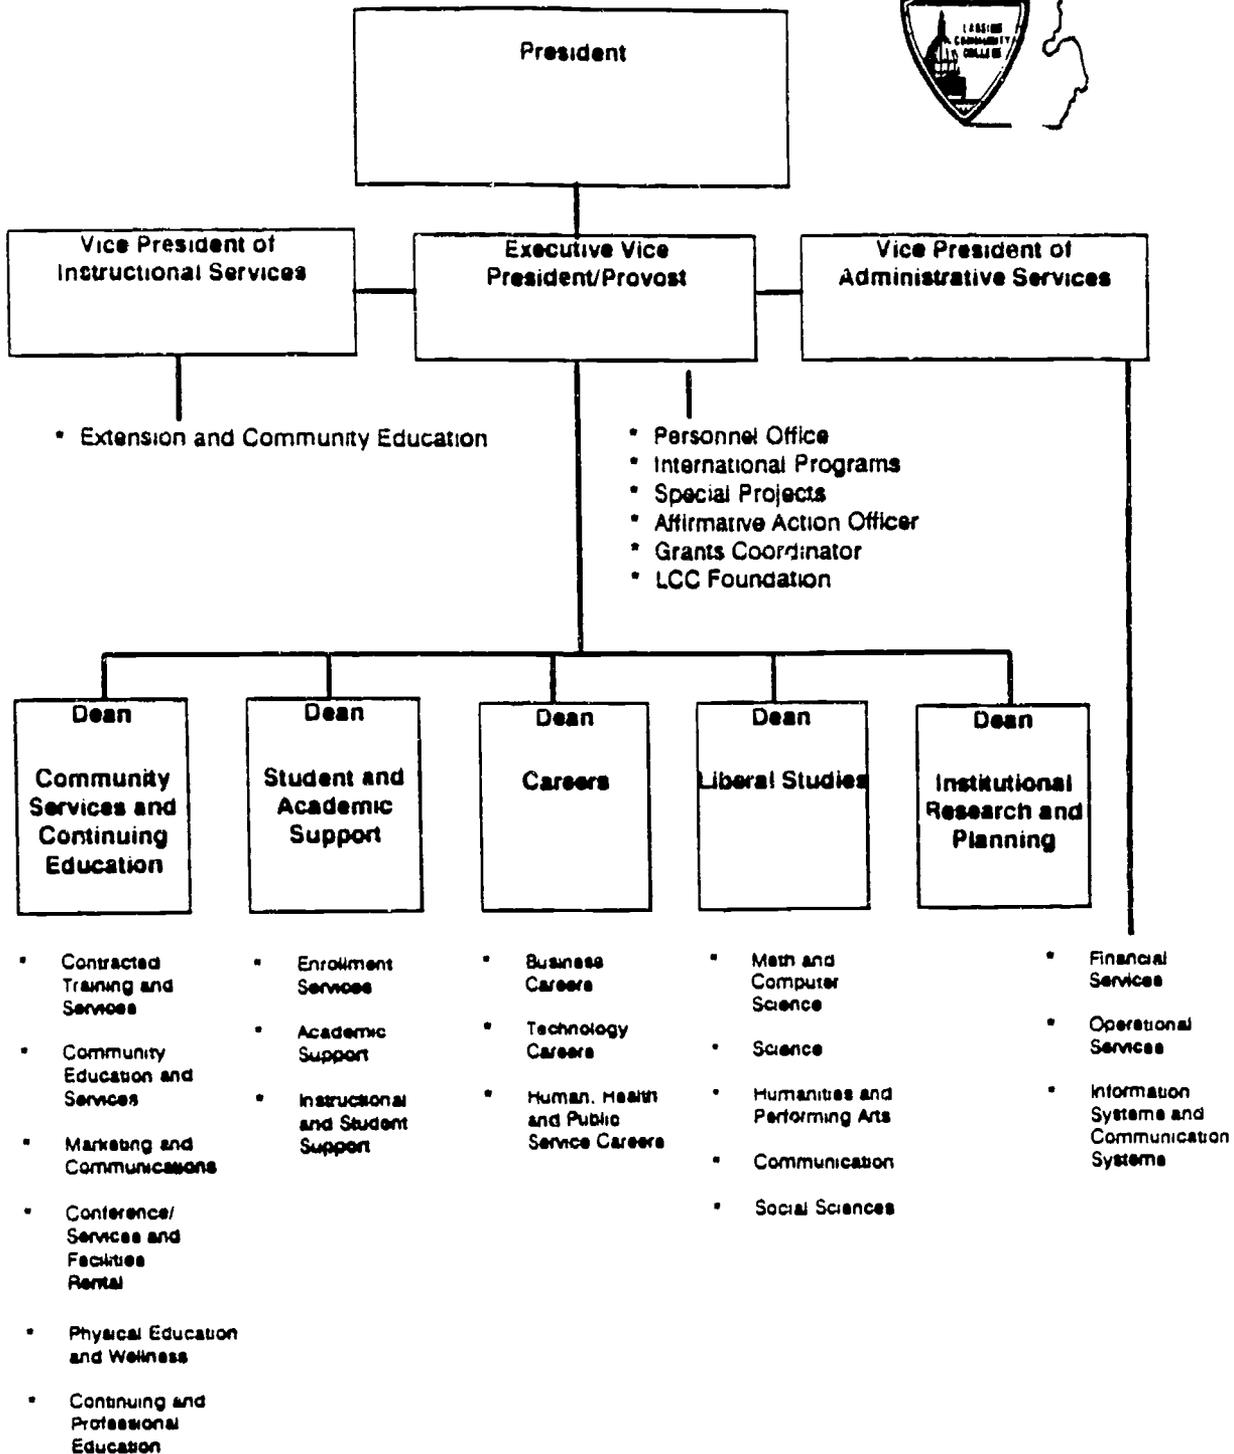

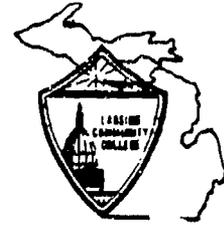

- Administrative Services Division
- Careers Division
- Community Services and Continuing Education Division
- Liberal Studies Division
- Student and Academic Support Division

Each organizational chart is followed by a listing of the major units which constitute that division. The academic and non-academic functions of each unit, along with their divisional locations prior to reorganization, have also been included.
