GUIDELINES AND RESOURCES FOR TEACHING HOLOCAUST

It goes without saying that teachers should adapt the ideas, lesson plans and activities presented below to their own specific class needs and time constraints, or to develop different teaching strategies and approaches using this material as a resource. There is a plethora of materials, necessitating choice.

Goals and Objectives of a Holocaust Study Unit:

Promote tolerance, understanding, empathy, acceptance of different cultures, growth as a human community; to explore what it means to be human

To encourage moral decision-making

To give students a language, a vocabulary to deal with human rights violations/crimes against humanity

To drive home the lesson that those who do not learn from the past are condemned to repeat it

To understand, through the study of the Holocaust, that one of the ultimate consequences of race hatred and prejudice is murder on both an individual and a mass scale

To promote student buy-in -- life-experience/life connection - make connections to their own lives - to involve students affectively; to involve students as actors, probing, questioning, recording, debating, discussing

To have students learn history, literature, geography, ethics -satisfying the cognitive

Through understanding the roots of violence, cruelty, race-hatred, prejudice, as manifested in the Holocaust and other crimes against humanity, ultimately to sensitize and to humanize, promoting self-understanding, self-awareness as an indispensable step in reducing the violence and conflicts in everyday life

Lesson Plan
Human Behavior

Lesson objective:

To examine the nature of human behavior and come to some sort of resolution as to what makes humans act the way they do; the worst and the best in human beings, capable of committing the greatest atrocities but also of great sacrifice in behalf of others.

To create basis for understanding what happened in the Holocaust and other genocides.

Materials:

Worksheet

Human Nature Survey (adapted from The Holocaust and Genocide: A Search for Conscience) or Attitudes About Groups

Supplemental Readings

"The Dying Girl that No One Helped" (source: same as above)
Shirley Jackson, "The Lottery" (short story)
William Golding, Lord of the Flies

Video

"The Milgram Shock Experiment"
Gregory Allen Williams on Racism and Rescue

Activities:

1. Have students work on the human nature survey or attitudes about groups worksheets. What brings out the worst in people? The best? Have them relate instances in which humans showed their best side and their worst. What accounts for the difference? Circumstance? Education? Situation? Religion? What is morality? What makes a human human. Where do negative traditions (i.e. bigotry, discrimination, scapegoating) come from? Positive traditions? What is morality? What do we understand by ethics, ethical behavior. Where do the codes that govern our conduct come from? List some principal features of our code of ethics.

2. Give students a blank piece of paper and tell them to imagine that the blank piece of paper represents them at birth. Then ask them to think about who they are today and what formed them (family, school, state, society, ethnicity, history, class, etc.) and to list some of the main beliefs they live by. Are human beings blank slates? If so, what are the implications? And if not, what are the implications of that? In other words, nature vs. nurture. Ask: what makes human beings human? In what way do humans differ from other species? Are there things all humans have in common? What are they? Are there differences between humans? What are they?

3. Give them another piece of paper. Tell them to make two columns: HUMAN RIGHTS, CIVIL RIGHTS. (This activity can also be done with students coming to the front of the class and working with butcher paper and recording.) Ask them to list HUMAN RIGHTS. Then proceed to consider CIVIL RIGHTS. Where do these come from? Where does our society keep to these and where does it fall short? What processes undermine them?

Lesson Plan

"The Teachings of Contempt -- Entry Points for Examining the Holocaust: Prejudice, Bigotry, Racism, Stereotypes, Scapegoating"

Lesson objective: Students will define and identify examples of prejudice, discrimination, stereotyping, racism and scapegoating across a broad spectrum. Students should be introduced to and think about where both negative traditions and positive traditions come from and speculate about the conflict between the two. Why it is, for example, that negative traditions (i.e. racism, bigotry, etc.) exercise such a strong hold over people (possible answers: fear, conformity, fear of the unknown, the strange, historical legacies such as slavery, competition, e.g. economic conditions, difference). Students should be made aware of the consequences of racism and bigotry (e.g. immigrant-bashing, gay-bashing, fear of young blacks; robs people of self-esteem, humiliation, degradation, dehumanization; may lead to murder/genocide).

Activities:

Activity 1:

A. List the terms prejudice, discrimination, stereotype, scapegoat, bigotry.

Ask basic questions and encourage students to share personal experiences of racism, sexism, scapegoating, etc.

Where do these come from?

Why do they occur?

Do they occur in all societies?

Who are the victims of each and what are the consequences on the victim, perpetrator?

Have students record the answers on the blackboard or sheets of butcher paper. Have them come to some kind of agreement on the definitions.

B. Divide the board into two parts, headed by the word TRADITIONS; divide that into negative/positive. Have students come up to write down classmates' suggestions.

Under positive, one might put "love your enemy"; "liberty, equality, fraternity", "justice for all"; "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" -- where do these come from? Under negative: kill your enemy, inequality, injustice, discrimination, prejudice, racism, scapegoating; stereotypes of various groups.

Have students ferret out what is universal, where does racism overlap from group to group, what do they have in common and where do they differ? How and why do negative stereotypes come into being for various groups? Afro-American? Hispanics? Asians? Jews? Possible roots: socio/psycho/political - nativism, know-nothingism; populism; nationalism; irrationalism; fear of change; desire for simpler life, for return to days of simpler, purer values and cultural life; scared of upheavals of modern society; mysticism and occult; feelings of inferiority; social anger, resentment; need to find scapegoats.

Teachers may want to "test out" this syndrome by examining the beliefs of groups such as the KKK, Aryan Nation, Posse Comitatus; skinheads; Church of the Creator; Identity Church (Identity Church has a "two seed" theory - non-white races are pre-Adamic". When Eve broke God's original commandment, she was implanted with two seeds. From Adam's seed sprang Abel and white race; from serpent Satan's seed came the lazy, wicked Cain. Angered, God cast Adam, Eve, and the serpent out of the Garden of Eden and decreed eternal racial conflict. Cain killed Abel and then ran off into the jungle to join the pre-Adamic non-whites. "Identity theology provides both a religious base for racism and anti-Semitism, and an ideological rationale for violence against minorities and their white allies.") (see Blood in the Face, p. 54)

C. What have been and may be some of the consequences of racism? e.g. immigrant-bashing, gay-bashing, fear of young blacks What are some of the common stereotypes about people? What are the effects? (robs people of self-esteem, humiliation, degradation, dehumanization; may lead to murder/genocide)

D. Examine this quote by Rollo May: "Deeds of violence in our society are performed largely by those trying to establish their self-esteem, to defend their self-image, and to demonstrate that they, too, are significant ... violence arises not out of superfluity of power but out of powerlessness." Discuss.

Activity 2: Stereotyping. Attitude Toward Groups (Adapted from "Attitudes Toward Groups" (The Holocaust and Genocide, A Search for Conscience, p. 22). (two possible formats provided)

A. Have students work in groups on this piece. Each group should, after extensive discussion, come to a consensus about which statement applies to which ethnic and racial group(s). Appoint spokesperson to report to the group. Afterwards, have the different groups compare their responses. Have students record the results on blackboard. Then continue with activity such as outlined earlier concerning the origins of these stereotypes and how they are maintained. What is unique to each and what is general (universal) in the "anti" beliefs? List. (Two groups)

B. Discuss:

What race are you?

How do others see/classify you?

Do we see with our eyes or minds?

Can racial "boxes" promote racism?

What would you teach your kids about race?

C. Make a list of unthinking, uncaring put-downs you've heard or used.
What have you learned? How might you view/treat other people differently?

Activity 3: Jew-hatred. (Some teachers may wish to do a piece on the most persistent of hatreds, Jew-hatred. This is especially good for examining shallow and deep roots of prejudice, from Christian times to the present. Religious roots run deep; Jew as symbol of everything that obstructs redemption; Jews as poison, devil, rats; outsiders (outside of church/society); accused of poisoning wells (Black Plague); updated in 19th century as Jewish-controlled press, film; today: press, Hollywood, finance. Notion of crucifixion of Christ recycled into murder of Europeans by the Jew through usury and treacherous financial dealings; Christ's suffering at hands of Jews = Germans suffering at hands of loveless, avaricious Jews; crucifixion of modern German society by Jewish capitalism/communism; internationalism - wandering Jew; Jew embraces love of money and self instead of humanity; purveyors of materialism/communism Jew as devil, anti-Christ: anti-race; "demon Jew"; "international Jewish conspiracy" goes back to beginning of 19th century when earlier conspiracy theories accounting for the French Revolution (Freemasons, enlighteners) were adapted by placing Jews in central role. Nationalism on rise; Jews cosmopolitan, international, bankers. Ultimate goal: world domination; later adapted to communism and capitalism. In America, Henry Ford was instrumental in spreading the story (The International Jew; Dearborn Independent) Nazis blamed defeat in World War I on Jews (scapegoating) Protocols of the Elders of Zion (forgery concocted during Czarist times in Russia (goal: to foment pogroms), still circulated today.

Historically, three stages:

You cannot live as Jews (Christian attempts to convert Jews at swordpoint)

You cannot live among us (Christian Europe: ghettoization/expulsion)

You cannot live (Holocaust)

Activity 4: Examine the Following Quotations

Students should reconstruct the reality behind them, determine the implications.
Teachers may wish to divide the class into groups and give each a set of quotations to work with. Appoint a spokesperson to report the results to the class. List the conclusions.

Discuss:

Which do you agree with, which do you reject?

Are these ideas dangerous? If so, why? And if not, why not?

Where did people get the idea of one race being superior to another?

Questions to keep in mind:

Why are theories based on race wrong?

Where do negative traditions come from?

Where do positive traditions come from?

Why do you think both Martin Luther King and Malcolm X called racism a disease?

"... nationality or rather race does not happen to lie in language but in blood" (Hitler)

"It (the Nazi state) must see to it that only the healthy beget children...." (Hitler)

"God created the world as a place for work and battle. Whoever doesn't understand the laws of life's battles will be counted out, as in the boxing ring. All the good things on this earth are trophy cups. The strong will win them. The weak will lose them..." (Bernard Rust, Nazi minister of education)

"How many people can seek protection in a bomb-proof cellar, length 5 meters, width 4 meters, and height 2.25 meters. Each person needs 1 cubic meter per hour, and they remain there for three hours." (Algebra problem in Nazi textbook)

"The history of the world is to be regarded from a racial point of view."

"Jews have different noses, different ears, different lips, a different chin, a completely different face than we Germans. They have flat feet. Their hair, their eyes, are different from ours. They have longer arms than us.... Children must be made aware that the Jew thinks, feels and acts different from us; that his thinking, feeling and actions are diametrically opposed to our morality." (Fritz Finck, Die Judenfrage im Unterricht (The Jewish Question in Education)).

"Do I propose to exterminate whole ethnic groups? Yes Nature is cruel; therefore we may be cruel too." (Hitler)

"Anti-Semitism is the same as deworming; getting rid of lice is not a question of ideology, it is a matter of cleanliness." (Himmler)

"The race question is the key to world history." (Der Sturmer - Nazi newspaper)

"The state is a racial organism and not an economic organization..." (Hitler)

"The Poles are especially born for low labor.... There can be no question of improvement for them" (You may substitute some other ethnic group)

David Duke: "It's time that our white taxpayers' money goes to building a better country instead of breeding more blacks."

"We're gonna keep on going, keep on fighting until every one of us, until we achieve victory for our klan movement and we assure the future of our race in this universe. White Power!"

"What we have to fight for is the security of the existence and the increase of our race and our people, the nourishment of its children and the preservation of the purity of the blood, the freedom and independence of the fatherland in order to enable our people to mature for the fulfillment of the mission which the Creator of the universe has allotted also to them. Every thought and every idea, every doctrine and all knowledge have to serve this purpose." (Hitler, Mein Kampf.)

"The White Man's Burden"

Rudyard Kipling

*Take up the White Man's Burden-
Send forth the best ye breed-
Go bind your sons to exile
To serve your captives' need;
To wait in heavy harness,
On fluttered folk and wild-
Your new-caught sullen peoples,
Half-devil and half-child.*

"I wondered of, a few hundred years from now, some half-black ancestor (sic) of mine would be sitting in the ruins of our civilization brushing away the flies. Every day our nation grows a little darker from massive non-white immigration, high non-white birth rates, and increasing racial miscegenation, and with each passing day we see the quality of our lives decline a little more. Crime increases, drug abuse proliferates, educational quality degenerates, and productivity declines. The healthy values of our racial forefathers are ridiculed and discarded like old rags, while corruption and moral leprosy feed in the highest places. The only things that keep our society trudging on are the small numbers of scientists and technicians (almost entirely Caucasian) who continue to create technological wizardry that lessens the economic slide caused by lower individual productivity; and secondly, the hard-working, increasingly-pressed Caucasian middle-class that keeps the wheels turning and the taxes coming." Article signed by David Duke "India: My Racial Odyssey," NAAWP News issue #36, November 1986

"He [Hitler] used his greatness for evil and wickedness. But they [Jews] are wickedly great too, brother. Everywhere they go, and they always do it and hide their head.... Brother. I don't care who sits in the seat at the White House. You can believe that the Jews control that seat that they sit in from behind the scenes. They control the finance, and not only that, they influence policy-making Many of you control the libraries.... But [they] also are most influential in newspaper, magazine, print media and electronic media...."

Khalid Abdul Mohammad, Nation of Islam National Spokesman, at Kean College, NJ, 11/19/93.

Activity 5: Nazi Party 25-Point Program

A. As students enter the class, hand out doctored versions of the 1920 Nazi Party platform wherein all references to Germany and Germans have been changed to America and Americans and all references to Jews to Asians, Blacks, or some other minority. In addition, remove all references to immediate post-war Germany (e.g. Treaty of Versailles). You may want to have definitions of difficult words on the board (abolition, self-determination, surplus). Have students read them and decide independently whether to sign the petition. Once decided, have them turn it over and list on back as many points as they remember.

B. Determine roughly what the students remembered and discuss the meaning of the survey, point by point.

C. Eventually reveal what they have signed or not signed were major points of the 25-Point Nazi Party Platform of 1920, with the Jews as targets.

D. Write a summary of your response to the petition and relate it to some aspect of current U.S. policies, past and present and feelings of native-born Americans towards foreigners, immigrants, illegal aliens, and so forth. What, in your opinion, motivates people to come to California illegally? To make use of the state's generous public services, or can you think of other reasons? If jobs, why do employers continue to hire "illegals" even though it is against the law? The following bit of "verse" was circulated in California's Assembly by Assemblyman William J. Knight:

Everything is mucho good.
Soon we own the neighborhood.
We have a hobby -- it's called breeding.
Welfare pay for baby feeding. (New York Times, August 25, 1993)

Who is being mocked? What is your reaction for this? Is this a classic case of scapegoating? What is the impact of illegal immigration on legal immigrants? What can be done about illegal immigration? Should anything be done?

Discussion guide for classroom use with 25-point Nazi Program:

When general discussion ensues, you may wish to ask:

1. How much of this or any petition should you agree with in order to sign in approval? Do you have to agree with all of the points?
2. Should you sign something most of which you can't remember? Is most legislation similarly memorable?
3. Is this in-class activity similar or different from the ways in which signatures are solicited outside the classroom?
4. What does the activity show about petitions in particular and/or legislation in general?

When discussing the petition point by point, you may wish to ask:

What are the implications of this point?

Who stands to lose if this is passed? Who to gain?

Is this fair? Why and why not?

Are simulations in the classroom effective? Are they fair? Did you feel tricked or did you learn more as a result?

You may also want to bring in Jim Crow and Canonical Laws to look for similarities with Nazi racial law.

Lesson Plan
The Holocaust

Objectives:

To have students understand that the murder of Jews was precipitated by race-thinking, a racial conception of history, a vital part of the overall strategy to "clean out" the world, making it safe for one race, the so-called Aryan. Teachers may want to discuss ramifications of Nazi theory, effects on non-Jews (women, gays, gypsies, the disabled, Slavs, Asians, etc.), if they haven't already discussed this generally in the previous lesson, which dealt with racism.

Teachers should keep in mind that nothing Jews did or didn't do could make any difference, since race was held to be immutable and Jews considered irremediably evil.

At the end of the lesson students should understand the process that led to the slaughter of Jews: Ostracization, Identification (Nuremberg Laws), Expropriation, Marking, Ghettoization, Deportation, Annihilation.

They should know the meaning of the term "final solution".

Stressed, too, should be the process of dehumanization, both through relentless anti-Jewish propaganda (likening Jews to rats, vermin in order to rob them of every vestige of humanity in the eyes of the killers) and abuse visited on Jews as such: taking away their livelihood, making them wear stars, marking them (with yellow badges and "J" stamped on their important papers), starving them, and in camps such as Auschwitz, robbing them of every personal attribute (they were given numbers, shaved, stuck in filthy uniforms, beaten, worked to death, constantly humiliated). All of this made it easier to kill them (for the Nazis) and for many Jews destroyed the will to resist.

Ancillary questions: how could a civilized nation sink so low? Why were Jews considered more dangerous than other groups? There were 11 million murder victims of the Nazis (civilians), 6 million of which were Jews. "Not all the victims were Jewish, but all the Jews were victims." Elie Wiesel. By this Wiesel meant to underscore the fact that the only victims specifically designated for total annihilation were Jews, a goal to be achieved in a systematic, mechanized manner against defenseless men, women and children with the full support and resources of the state. And that too is unique in the annals of human history.

Activities:

The best way into this material is through visuals/film/slides/photographs. When showing film footage, the teacher must be cognizant of the source of the filmed images along with what the camera does not show. Film must be treated seriously. Teachers must know why they are showing film.

Night and Fog Lesson:

What follows is a lesson plan based on Alain Resnais' film "Night and Fog" (1955; 32 minutes), adapted from study guide prepared by Social Studies School Service (10200 Jefferson Blvd, Culver City, California). The title refers to a 1941 decree providing for the seizure of "persons endangering Germany's security." These individuals were not to be executed immediately but were to vanish without a trace into the "night and fog" (Germany's concentration and death camp system).

The dialogue is in French with English subtitles. Some of the subtitles are difficult to read, flash on and off the screen quickly. You may want to turn off the sound. You will have access to the complete text of the film. You may wish to highlight certain passages to frame your questions. The excerpted pieces can be used to frame questions. You should distribute these after the film, in conjunction with debriefing activities. Always leave time to "debrief" students at the end of the film!

Teachers should view the film beforehand. In the introduction to the film, the teacher should create a bridge between the previous class (classes) and the content of this film. Teachers may want to refer to "Schindler's List". You will also be provided with a glossary of special terms, which you may also want to distribute and briefly look at some of the most important terms.

Suggestions:

Students should be warned about the graphic nature of this film.

There should be a short introduction to the film, apprising students of its contents and alerting them to certain key components.

Show the entire film. If two class periods are available, do not hesitate to stop the film at various points to allow discussion, reflection, opinion, etc.

Suggest students concentrate more on the visual images rather than the text (subtitles);

Turn down the French audio if you wish

You may wish to give students excerpted script after they have viewed the film.

You may want to use the text to draw students' attention to specific incidents and scenes before viewing

Always allow time for follow-up activities! For example:

Discussion questions:

What points are emphasized in this film

a. racial policies of National Socialism

b. role of anti-semitism

c. the concept of genocide/death camps/gas chambers

e. resistance movements against the Nazi plans of mass murder: within the ghettos (Warsaw), within the death camps (Sobibor, Treblinka, Auschwitz); within the partisan and resistance movement in occupied Europe.

2. The goal of the Nazis was to dehumanize their victims. Discuss this issue with your students. Name vs. number. Have students concentrate on individuals within the crowd.

3. Contrast between pleasant footage (contemporary scenes) at most concentration camps and films of actual horror of the camps; between SS, Kapos, and prisoners; between home life of commandant with his children.

4. Use of deception by the Nazis (gas chambers disguised as bath houses, use of orchestra in the camp, etc.)

5. The author poses many questions in the text. Those can be points of discussion with the entire class.

6. Ask students which pictures left the greatest impression.

7. Except for the final scenes (liberation), most of the pictures shown were taken by the Nazis. Why would the Nazis wish to document such horrors?

8. What can one say about the doctors who conducted experiments for the Nazis?

9. The Jews are never mentioned in this film, though Jews were the principal object of the Nazi annihilation program. Why?

10. Why does the author have a dreaded fear of the future? Why does he view the camp scene like "another planet"?

(Errors of fact: there is no evidence that the Nazis made soap from the remains of the victims. Lampshades yes, slippers for submarines from the victims' hair, yes. But not soap.

There were 11,000,000 million victims, six million Jews and five million non-Jews.)

Elie Wiesel: "It defies language, it defies memory, it defies categories. yet one must remember and one must." Have students react to this quotation.

Students should write their personal feelings regarding the images they have seen. They should be encouraged to express their reactions, which can range from the emotional to the cognitive (new facts they have learned). Write a review of the film (class project). Draw/paint to express feelings (time permitting).

"Night and Fog' deals more with our memory of the camps, our mental image of them, than with the camps as they actually existed, for the memories are real and present, as are the physical remains through which his restless camera ceaselessly tracks. From frozen photographs of the actuality at the end of the war and from contemporary color footage of the remains of the camps, Resnais composes a dialectic which extrapolates backwards towards the unimaginable horror... Jean Cayrol's narrative is intentionally understated, almost ironic at times, and this further adds to the power of the distancing effect. It was vitally important for both Cayrol [a former camp inmate] and Resnais to describe the phenomenon of the camps not as a fact of dead history, but as evidence of a present reality. It isn't the camps that count, it's the ability to build them: and that is still a very real and present talent. Cayrol concludes his narrative with this quiet warning:

And there are those of us who look concernedly at these ruins as if the old Concentration monster were dead in the rubble, those of us who pretend to hope before this distant picture, as if the plague of the camps had been wiped out, those of us who pretend to believe that all this happened long ago, and in another country, who never think to look around us, who never hear the cry that never ends.

James Monica, Alain Resnais, New York, 1979, pp. 20-21.

"World at War, Part 20: Genocide" Lesson Plan

For classes that have two periods to spend on the Holocaust. The film should be done in two parts. Please consult the glossary of "World War II and the Holocaust" for unfamiliar terms.

Why do you think the makers of this film chose to start with a segment outlining Nazi racial beliefs? The Nazis looked to nature (survival of the fittest, "the weak go under") and the way animals are bred to improve the stock and applied the "lessons" to human society. Is this a legitimate exercise?

Why did Hitler blame the Jews for starting the war?

Himmler's adjutant (Karl Wolff) said that he came to the SS "by fate." He also says that it never occurred to him that Nazism would ever spill over into mass murder. Do you believe him? How did one become a member of the SS? What was the SS? What was their function in Nazi Germany?

What do you think went through the minds of those who were designing the crematoria and the gas chambers? Do you think they knew what they were going to be used for?

How do you think that young Jewish boy waiting to receive bread felt when his former friend pointed Jews out to the Germans and told him that he was no longer his friend because he was a Jew.

What, in your opinion, were those men clearing the skeletons with bulldozers at the end of the film thinking of? Those who threw the gas pellets into the gas chambers? The people making slippers or lampshades out of the bodily parts of the victims? Do you think slipper wearers and crutch users knew?

How and were the victims deprived of their identity? Why did the Germans pick on the Jews?

What were the Nuremberg Laws?

Roughly describe the stage of Jewish persecution from the time Hitler came to power to the time they were hustled into the gas chambers?

How was it possible for the Nazis to deceive Jews and non-Jews alike about the true purposes of the deportations? What were some tactics of deception?

How would you account for doctors abandoning their Hippocratic oath and carrying out the "selections" and bogus medical experiments? Is it morally permissible to use data from "medical" experiments performed by doctors at Auschwitz if such data is proven to have advanced our medical knowledge? In your opinion, how did healers become killers?

Much of the footage in this film was taken by Germans. Why do you think they wanted to film and show these horrors?

Why did the Jews in Warsaw revolt only after everyone had already been carried off to be killed? Can you think of reasons that might have obstructed resistance until then?

In this film you saw a number of former participants in the "Final Solution". How do you feel about them? They all appear to express revulsion at what they were doing at the time of the war. How sincere do you think they are?

One of the Jews being interviewed worked in the crematoria and had the job of removing the bodies from the gas chambers. How do you account for his ability to do this job? Is what he says true: "Any person, without exception," is capable of doing the worst things just to live another minute"?

Activities:

A woman relates the story of how she survived lying in "a pit of blood" after being shot by the Germans. This woman saw her father, mother, sister and daughter being killed before her eyes. Imagine you are a researcher charged with interviewing her. What questions would you ask her? What do you think she might tell you? Write your report.

Himmler told his men that they must do their duty, no matter how they felt about the atrocities they were committing. What, do you think, happened to personal responsibility? Could one have said "No"? Would you follow an order if it violated your personal moral convictions. Choose something you would not do and write a letter to your army superior describing why you cannot follow something that goes against your moral code.

View the news-magazine piece from NBC's "The Crusaders" in the final minutes of class. The news cameras returned with a survivor, her son and grandson to the concentration camp at Stutthof, Germany, where she was interned during the war. Ask students to listen to the substance of her story, as well as the importance, emotionally and psychologically, of passing her story from one generation to the next.

Lesson Plan

Rescue and Human Behavior

Moral Decision Making - The Courage to Care

Lesson objective:

To develop a concern for ethics and a respect for multiculturalism, as well as examine human behavior under stress, instances of moral decision-making, the range of human behavior of ordinary citizens and the role of apathy.

It is recommended that teachers show the video THE COURAGE TO CARE (COLOR, 28 MIN. Available for rent from the Bureau of Jewish Education Media Center, 415/751-6983) in conjunction with this lesson. Some of the quotations cited below are taken from the book based on this video.

While the Holocaust eliminated the choices Jews had, non-Jews often were put in a position requiring them to make choices concerning the oppressed. Teachers should have students investigate and discuss the respective motivation of rescuers, bystanders, and perpetrators, with the lion's share of the attention going to the rescuers. In the course of this, they should raise the questions about human nature and human behavior, and examine the complex values, moral dilemmas and ethical choices that led some people to assist Jews while others stood by or actively participated in their destruction.

Concepts and Terms: Holocaust, human behavior, brotherhood, Ten Commandments, rescuers, Righteous Persons (or Righteous Among the Nations), resistance, underground, humanitarianism, anti-semitism.

QUESTIONS AND DISCUSSION TOPICS:

What is meant by the title of the film, The Courage to Care? What constitutes courage? What did it mean to those who rescued Jews during the Holocaust? Would you consider rescuers to be outstanding people who showed tremendous moral courage, or were they simply decent people?

What were common traits of the rescuers you saw or read about? Why did people rescue others?

Elie Wiesel says, "The victims died not because of the killers. They died because of the indifference of the others." What is meant by indifference? Why were some people indifferent to the fate of the Jews?

What constitutes "moral choice"?

What does Wiesel mean when he says that those who helped Jews during the Holocaust remained "human."

*No man is an Island entire of itself;
Every man is a piece of the Continent, apart of the maine;
If a Clod be washed away by the Sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a Promontorie were,
as well as if a Manor of the friends or thine own were;
any man's death diminishes me because I am involved in Mankind;
And therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls;
It tolls for thee. (John Donne, seventeenth century English poet)*
Comment.

One of the legacies of the Judeo-Christian tradition is a strict code of ethical behavior. Would you agree that the most important of all the commandments is the one that directs us to treat others as we would have others treat us? Why is it that this commandment seems to be honored only in the breach?

Are we our brother's keeper?

Why would people risk their lives to save others? What values, do you think, must they have? Where do you think they got these values?

What factors enter into people making difficult ethical decisions?

At what point, do you think, would you begin to assist victims of persecution? What if one of the possible consequences to you and your family is death?

Why did the overwhelming majority of people fail to help the Jews, and why did others assist the Nazis in their persecution?

What role did anti-semitism play in making people apathetic toward the fate of the Jews? Would their reaction have differed if, say, red-haired people had been the butt of Nazi killing?

Why are most people apathetic regarding other people's suffering?

Is the bystander as guilty as the perpetrator?

Do people behave differently under stress than under normal conditions? Should immoral behavior under stress be excused or be judged by a different yardstick?

If both the perpetrators and the rescuers were ordinary people, how do you account for the difference in their behavior?

Are people good, or are they evil?

Were those who denounced Jews in hiding evil people?

What steps would need to be taken in order to stop persecution of minorities?

The following are some of the rescuers' explanations of their actions:

"It was the natural thing." "It was necessary." "Somebody had to do it." "I do not feel that I'm a hero. I feel that I only did my duty." "We just helped people who were in need." "I did nothing unusual; anyone would have done the same thing in my place."

How do you account for the modesty of the rescuers?

A study of rescuers shows that they typically grew up in home in which the parents tended to be gentle disciplinarians, demonstrated caring behavior, communicated caring values and stressed the potential impact of one's behavior on others. Rescuers' parents encouraged their children to be dependable, responsible and self-reliant and taught them to do things for others without concern for rewards or reciprocity. (Samuel and Pearl Oliner, The Altruistic Personality. What other influences besides the family might shape behavior in the manner exhibited by rescuers?

"It did not occur to me to do anything other than I did.... I think you have a responsibility to yourself to behave decently. We all have memories of times we should have done something and didn't. And it gets in the way the rest of your life."

Do you think that those who did nothing when they could have done something later struggled with their consciences about their lack of concern? Can you think of anything you've done in the past that you feel might get in the way the rest of your life?

"I cannot explain exactly why or how I did these things, but I believe that my mother's influence on when I was a child has a lot to do with it. My mother was a simple, uneducated person came from a peasant family, and as a young person worked for doctors and others in Marburg, Germany. She told me, when I was ten or twelve years old, that I should not take advantage of other people's vulnerability."

What made the Jews in Europe vulnerable to mass murder? In what way are minorities vulnerable in our country? How can they become less so?

"People sometimes ask me what the lesson is from all this. I think it is that we have to teach that we belong all together. That no matter what a person's color, race, religion, or language, we are created by one God, no matter what you call Him. And I think that if there would be less hate, if people would try to understand each other more, there would not be the wars."

What might be some of the things that stand in the way of people understanding each other more?

"During our lives, each of us faces a choice: to think only about yourself, to get as much as you can for yourself, or to think about others, to serve, to be helpful to those who are in need. I believe that it is very important to develop your brains, your knowledge, but it is more important to develop your heart, to have a heart open to the suffering of others. As for myself, I am just an ordinary person, just someone who wants to help his neighbor."

How can one develop one's "heart"? Samuel Oliner, co-author of The Altruistic Personality, a study of rescuers, wrote: "What is required is nothing less than institutionalized structures that promote supportive relationships with the same seriousness as is currently devoted to academic achievement. Above all, rescuers inform us of this important truth."

Can goodness be taught? If so, should schools teach it?

"Remember that in your life there will be lots of circumstances that will need a kind of courage, a kind of decision of your own, not about other people but about yourself." This rescuer's son told his mother that he would take revenge when he grew up. She answered him, "If you do such a thing, someone else is going to take revenge against you. And this is why we are never finished. We go on and on and on. We must forgive, must forget, we must do better."

What do you think of her advice? Should we forgive and forget? Is revenge a natural reaction, a part of human nature?

Courage to Care Activities.

Write a speech for an honoring ceremony.

Design a medal to be given to all rescuers.

Distribute rescuer profiles (from Rescuers by Gay Bloch and Malka Drucker) to pairs or small groups of students, and ask each to make a short presentation on the rescuer to the rest of the class. This could take the form of someone speaking as the rescuer, as someone he or she has rescued, as an official dignitary recognizing the rescuer, etc. Share the presentation.

"When they came for the Jews I was not a Jew, so I did not protest. When they came for trade unionists, I did not belong to the trade union. When they came for the Catholics, I was not a Catholic. When they came for me, there was no one left to protest."

Activities:

A. Divide class into a number of manageable groups. Five topics appear below. Your group should spend 15 minutes discussing and making notes on as many interesting topics as you can. Do the discussion in any order you choose. Your goal should be to build your ability to respond to the item. Participate fully. After 15 minutes, you will be given another 15-20 to write your response to any (or more than one) of these. In your writing on one or more of these topics, try to reveal something of your knowledge and your feelings.

1. What kinds of things fuel hatred, indifference, prejudice, intolerance or other negative traditions we have discussed? How can these catalysts be neutralized?

2. What is (or should be) the role of schools in educating for tolerance, advocacy, fairness and justice, promoting altruism?

3. Elie Wiesel, survivor of death camps, says that silence and neutrality only helped the killers. Apathy and indifference led to suffering. Respond.

4. What would have to happen here for a genocide on the scale of the Holocaust to occur? Who would be its victims, most likely? Can a society "immunize" itself against committing such horrors? How?

5. Can prejudice be reduced in your age or peer group? What would have to happen for that to take place?

B. Maurice Ogden, "The Hangman"
CRM McGraw-Hill Films
THE HANGMAN

Objectives

As a result of seeing this film, viewers will:

1. Realize that human beings are interdependent, and that all have responsibilities in the community of man.
2. Understand that an individual's failure to protect the rights of other members in his society can ultimately lead to the deprivation of his own rights and freedoms.
3. Gain a deeper insight into how tyrannical forces may achieve eventual dominance over a society by playing upon the prejudices, fears, apathy, and self-indulgence of its members.
4. Become more aware of their own obligations to the common good of their own community.

Before viewing the film

I. Suggested topics for discussion

1. What is meant by the expression, "the Family of Man?"

- To what extent (specifically) and in what context is the individual responsible to the group?
- In what way is the group responsible to the individual?

2. How would you define the common good?"

- Is it detrimental solely by numerical majority?
- Is it a moral or political concept?
- Does its defense or preservation require the surrender of individuality?

II. Suggested activities and projects

1. Present to the student the two adages that appear to be antithetical, but are, nevertheless, constantly told to us throughout life:

- "You are your brother's keeper,"
- "Mind your own business!"

Set up a debate between two groups, each of which must defend one of the two maxims.

Summary of the film

Based on Maurice Ogden's award winning poem, and narrated by Herschel Bernardi, this animated film creates a chilling metamorphic journey of the forces of evil as they grow and flourish in the fertile soil of apathy and social irresponsibility.

In ballad form, a man tells the story of his town, the Hangman who comes to it, and his own personal confrontation of truth with him. When the hangman first appeared in the little town, the scaffold he built was small, and the citizens merely wondered "who the criminal, what the crime..."

Once they discovered that the victim was not a criminal, but simply a man "who came from another land, they did little more than breath a sigh of relief. The man to die was not one of their own, but rather an alien. During the hanging, no one spoke, certain that the executioner would be gone after completing his business. But the following day, an amazed citizenry discovered the Hangman still at his gallows, and laughing as he told them that the exercise of the preceding day was only a "thing I do to stretch the rope when the rope is new." Suddenly, one of the townsmen cried, "Murderer!" The hangman grabbed him as the rest shrank quickly back-and a second execution took place. That very night, the scaffold grew larger:

"Fed by the blood beneath the chute
The gallows tree had taken root..."

The third victim was a Jew -- according to the Hangman, a "usurer and infidel." The fourth's crime was that he was black, and his color caused discomfort to others. Rapidly, the numbers for the scaffold increased, and though the townsfolk made some mild objections, they were easily overridden by the Hangman's glib replies and ever increasing authority. Soon, all questions and all objections ceased entirely:

"And sun by sun, and night by night'
The gallows grew to monstrous height."

Until, finally, they cast their shadow "across the town."

At last, there was no one left in the town but the narrator of our story. When the Hangman called his name, he went to the courthouse confident that he had done no wrong, and, by his silence, had given nothing but loyalty and obedience to the executioner. The Hangman stretched his rope once more -- and the man cried that he had been tricked, that the scaffold had been built for other men. As he stood on the gallows, the realization came to the man that he had actually created his own death. "I did no more than you let me do," the Hangman said. The man discovered, too late, that humans are responsible human beings, and, as such, must stand together for the common good -- or answer to the consequences. As the Hangman strapped him with a rope, the man listened desperately for a voice to cry, "Stay!" But there were no voices forth coming. The square was empty of all life. The man himself helped see to that.

After viewing the film

III. Suggested topics for discussion

1. The Hangman's annihilations started with one individual and eventually progressed to an entire community. What in effect, were the method and circumstances that enabled him to succeed?

-- Discuss his manipulative use of human prejudices and fears; his reliance on the community's disposition towards appeasement: his understanding of the human psychological tendency to believe that it could only happen to someone else, not to me.'

Summary: Discuss why the Hangman says that the narrator is the one who has served him most "faithfully." Reread the lines "First the alien, then the Jew...I did no more than you let me to do." Ask students to restate this idea in their own words, and to give an example from their own experience of how this idea can play a part in everyday life.

-- Do they feel that such a thing could happen here?

-- Has it ever happened here -- to one degree or another? (E.g., Is it applicable to the early Salem witch hunts or the Red Scare and the spread of McCarthyism?)

What applications of the film's theme can be made to current situations in our own society? Point out to the students that the situations need not parallel directly that of the film.

IV. Suggested projects and Activities

1. Have the students write a poem-specifically, a ballad-using the same town, Hangman, townspeople, and first-person narrator as those in Maurice Ogden's poem. Have the students, however, reverse the outcome of the story, illustrating individual and community attitudes and actions that arrest the progress of the Hangman and eventually defeat him.

-- It might also be an exiting project for the students to have several of their ballads serve as lyrics to be set to music by any budding composers in the class.

2. As a communal project, have the students make a series of drawings illustrating the poem. Suggest that they do not attempt to copy the style of the film's artwork-but, rather, use their own inventiveness to make a statement that might be pertinent to their own current society.

3. Symbols are things that stand for something other than themselves. (For example, the American flag stands for the United States, justice, equality, etc.)

An Allegory is a story in which almost everything is a symbol.

"The Hangman" is an allegory because almost everything in the story stands for something else. What do each of these things stand for:

The Hangman _____

The Hangman's Cloak _____

The Courthouse _____

The Hangman's Scaffold _____

Blood _____

The Shadow of the Scaffold _____

The Town _____

The People of the Town (we") _____

(Courtesy Jack Weinstein, Milpitas High School)

6. Gregory Alan-Williams Video with Sam Keen poem "To Create an Enemy"

Teachers should preview this video and introduce Williams to the class themselves, then show only Williams' speech. After watching the film of his speech about becoming a rescuer during the LA riots which followed the first Rodney King verdict in 1992, discuss with the class the major themes, including but not limited to:

- A) How did racial hatred affect Williams' life?
- B) How did Williams cope with his early experience with racism?
- C) How did Williams handle his internal struggle with racism after being beaten up at school?
- D) How did Williams strike out as a result of his pent-up hatred?
- E) What changed Williams? How did he change his hostility about being oppressed into empathy for others who are oppressed? What positive traditions does he specifically mention that turned his attitude around?
- F) Who was most hurt of Williams' anger and hatred? Williams? His victims?

7. Efforts have been made to deal with crimes against humanity. Use the materials on the Genocide Conventions and Early Warning Signs to discuss the world's attempts to come to grips with its own brutality and their effectiveness. Apply the Conventions and Early Warning Signs to current world events.

8. Ask students to write to the survivors who spoke in their classroom or assembly. Possible issues to address: What I learned from your talk; what, specifically, will stay with me; how my views and/or perspectives changed as a result of hearing your story.

9. Oral History: Explore history in your own community. Using a tape recorder or video camera or just a pen and paper, interview a family member, friend, teacher or community leader about their participation in some historic event (Civil Rights Movement; grassroots community organizing; founding of a well-known institution or group.) Direct students to connect the struggle with the outcome and trace the growth from idea to fruition.

This spring marks the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II. It also marks the end of the liberation of the Nazi concentration camps and the anniversary of the death of Anne Frank at the Bergen-Belsen camp. In order to foster student awareness of these significant historical events in this unique memorial year, the Osher Marin Jewish Community Center, the Jewish Community Relations Council, the Holocaust Center of Northern California, and the Marin Community Foundation are pleased to present "EVERYONE IS HUMAN," an educational tool centered on the meaning of the life and death of Anne Frank.

"EVERYONE IS HUMAN" is dedicated to strengthening our commitment to promoting justice, defending democracy, and educating our young people about the roots of intolerance.

Anne Frank

1929-1945: She was only 15 years old when she died, yet her diary lives on, capturing her indomitable spirit and putting a human face on a tragedy we must never forget.

"We are all born alike
...Everyone is human."

Anne Frank, 1929-1945

Each year thousands of young people from all over the world pile into an old building in the heart of Amsterdam to have a peek at the cramped quarters where many years ago a teenager was hiding from those who aimed to kill her.

The teenager's name was Anne Frank, and in the "secret annex" she kept a diary that one day would make her the most famous child in the world. The Diary of a Young Girl is a monument to the human spirit, its capacity for enduring "in spite of everything." It has been translated into dozens of languages and read by millions of people.

The diary has been made into a movie and a play, set to music and dance. President John F. Kennedy said it was a "gift for all mankind."

Anne's story "Give"

While in hiding, Anne wrote a story called "Give," in which she urged people not to look at a beggar "as someone to be despised, dirty and uncared for, rude and uncivilized," but to think about how he or she got that way. "The only difference between a child who was 'clean and tidy' and a child that was 'dirty and uncared for'," she declared, was exactly that. "But if a poor beggar's child were to receive good clothes and learn nice manners, then there wouldn't be any difference at all."

But "Give" is not just about beggars and the unkind feelings they inspire. The story is a plea for tolerance and compassion. "Everyone breathes the same air," wrote Anne. "There is plenty of room for everyone in the world Let us begin then by sharing it fairly."

Students: Ask yourselves...

- Have you ever felt discomfort or fear around certain people?
- Do you tend to judge other people because of their appearance, clothing, or speech?
- Do you establish friendly eye contact with some people, but not others?
- When organizing activities, do you make an effort to include different kinds of people?
- What are your most important values and beliefs? Examine the process by which you arrived at them.

What do you think?

- In today's society is everybody treated equally? Why or why not?
- How can our society move toward a future in which there is "room for everyone"?
- What can you do to promote such a future?
- Does government have a role in this?
- Can schools do anything to bring it about?

kitchen and in the delivery room. Their role was to produce warriors for the conquest of "inferior" races.

To stay on top, Hitler declared, Aryans had to keep themselves racially pure, and the state had to make sure that they stayed that way. "What we have to fight for," asserted Hitler, "is the security of the existence and the increase of our race and our people, the nourishment of its children and the preservation of the purity of the blood, the freedom and independence of the fatherland...Every thought and every idea, every doctrine and all knowledge, have to serve this purpose."

Before it was all over and Hitler lay buried in the rubble of Berlin, the "racial state" he created had caused the death of nearly 50 million people.

had been spelled out in a 25-point program, issued in 1920.

His demands included more territory for Germany, undoing the peace treaty, full citizenship only for people of "German blood," "no further immigration of non-Germans," and expulsion of aliens in the event of food shortages.

Hitler divided the peoples of the world into superior and inferior races. Glorifying war and conquest, he saw history as a struggle among the races in which only the fittest deserved to survive.

"The whole work of nature," Hitler wrote, "is a mighty struggle between strength and weakness — an eternal victory of the strong over the weak."

The fittest, he declared, were the Germans and other peoples of northern stock — the so-called Aryans. The ideal Aryan was tall, blond, blue-eyed and male — the myth of the "master race." The place of women was in the humiliation. The victors forced Germany to accept responsibility for starting the war. It lost its empire, army, navy, and air force, and was presented with a bill it could not possibly pay. Defeat in war sparked a revolution at home.

Several years later money became worthless, reducing millions of people to poverty. (A wheelbarrow filled with paper money bought a loaf of bread).

The year Anne was born, 1929, was the year of the Great Depression. In all industrialized countries unemployment reached dizzying heights. For Germany, the Depression proved to be the straw that broke the camel's back.

Hitler promised jobs and food on the table. Other promises centered on making Germany strong again, rebuilding the military, and bringing an end to the current democratic form of government.

The future dictator made no bones about what he meant to do once in power. His platform

The individual ultimately responsible for this slaughter was Adolf Hitler. Austrian by birth, Hitler was the leader of the National Socialist German Workers Party, "Nazi" for short, which rode to power in 1933 on a wave of anger and frustration.

The fifteen years between the end of the First World War (1914-1918) and the beginning of Hitler's rule had been filled with hardship and

Bergen-Belsen, where Anne Frank died

"Life unworthy of life"

One of the first things the Nazis did when they came to power was to pass a law ordering the sterilization of people born with disabilities or illnesses. "Our fatherland needs healthy and fit people," explained a pamphlet intended to persuade the parents of deaf-mutes to let their children be surgically sterilized.

It has been estimated that some 350,000 individuals were forced to undergo this operation, including 500-600 Germans of African descent.

In 1939, Hitler went one step further. With the outbreak of war, he decreed the murder of mentally and physically disabled patients deemed incurable: "life unworthy of life." The "useless eaters" were gassed in special centers carefully screened from prying eyes.

The Nazi Party also waged war on Germany's healthy and able, targeting anyone opposed to the regime or whose way of life did not fit in with the new race-based morality.

Communists incited class warfare; intellectuals couldn't be trusted to give only the Nazi side of the story; homosexuals had no children and "corrupted the youth"; Gypsies were "criminal and asocial"; Jehovah's Witnesses refused to scream "Heil Hitler." All ran the risk of being taken into "protective custody" and sent to one of the concentration camps that sprouted like mushrooms.

Soon the country resembled one big prison where people either followed the leader or learned to shut up.

Everywhere he looked Hitler saw enemies to his goals of total power, racial purity, and world domination. But at the top of his hate list stood the Jews. This tiny minority, less than 1 percent of the population, with roots in Germany that stretched back a thousand years, became victims within months of the start of Nazi rule.

On April 1, 1933, the new regime launched a campaign to boycott Jewish shops, and a week later there were laws banning Jews from the civil service and reducing their number in the public schools. In time, there would be more than 400 pieces of anti-Jewish legislation, including ones that robbed Jews of their German citizenship and took away their businesses, forbade intermarriage, and required them to take "Jewish-sounding" names. And, of course, all of it was strictly "legal," for Jew-hatred was official state policy.

Hatred on this scale is an illness, in this case an illness rooted in the rejection of a moral code based on what is best in Western religious and philosophical traditions. Hitler considered teachings like "thou shalt not kill" to run counter to humankind's true nature and obstacles to Nazi world domination. He predicted a fight to the finish between Aryans and Jews for control of the world, and believed that he was born to secure the victory for the "master race."

In the Nazi scheme of things, Jews were at the bottom of the racial barrel — sub-human. Not even fit to be slaves.

What do you do when you witness injustice?

Nobel Peace Prize Winner and Auschwitz survivor Elie Wiesel said: "The victims died not because of the killers. They died because of the indifference of others."

Are you surprised that during the Second World War when millions were being persecuted and put to death, many more millions stood by and let it happen? Why do you think people preferred not to get involved?

DEBATE:

"The bystander is as guilty as the perpetrator."

To your knowledge, are there any recent or current events in which this behavior has been or is being repeated?

Classroom Activity:

Locate organizations in your area (or beyond) dedicated to defending civil rights by fighting discrimination and hate.

List these organizations on butcher paper.

Divide into groups with each group responsible for researching the work of one organization.

Compose a list of questions concerning their activities, strategies and tactics, successes and failures. Write or call them.

Record the responses on butcher paper.

Report to the class.

How do you account for differences in approaches?

If possible, invite a representative from one of these organizations to come speak.

Classroom Activity:

How would you protect freedom of speech while fighting hate groups? (For example, should hate groups such as the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have the right to spread their message?)

Anne Frank and the Holocaust

Anne Frank, German and Jewish, was three years old when Hitler took over in Germany. Right after, the Franks decided to move to Amsterdam, the capital of neighboring Holland.

But seven years later, on the way to enslaving most of Europe, the Nazis followed in their path, and the good times were over. Anne's pen registered the Nazi shadow as it passed across her life. Summarizing the period leading up to going into hiding, she wrote on June 20, 1942:

"Anti-Jewish decrees followed each other in quick succession. Jews must wear a yellow star, Jews must hand in their bicycles.

"Jews are banned from trams and are forbidden to drive, Jews are only allowed to do their shopping between three and five o'clock and then only in shops which bear the placard 'Jewish shop.' Jews must be indoors by eight o'clock and cannot even sit in their own gardens after that hour.

"Jews are forbidden to visit cinemas, and other places of entertainment. Jews may not take part in public sports. Swimming baths, tennis courts, hockey fields, and other sports grounds are all prohibited to them. Jews may not visit Christians. Jews must go to Jewish schools, and many more restrictions of a similar kind."

"All Jews are to be destroyed"

Holland's Jews were not the first to suffer the Nazi persecution, however. Regulations designed to hem in the Jews of Poland had been in force from the time Germany crushed her eastern neighbor "like a soft-boiled egg" in the fall of 1939. These were similar to the ones Anne wrote about, except that in Poland things were even worse.

Holland's long-standing reputation for tolerance, and the hope of bringing the "racially compatible" Dutch around to their way of thinking, led the Germans to proceed slowly there. No such pains needed to be taken in a country the Nazis considered to be inhabited by racial inferiors destined either for slavery or for death (3 million non-Jewish Poles were killed in the course of the war). Having sealed off Poland's millions of Jews in special areas known as ghettos, the Nazis unleashed a reign of terror the likes of which had not been seen in Europe since the age of the barbarians.

From the start Jews were being murdered by the thousands, but with methods — starvation, disease, punitive labor, mutilation, execution, poisoning — that were considered too expensive, too public, too messy and, above all, too inefficient. The slaughter of 9 million Jewish men, women and children required careful planning, and by the time Anne and her family went into hiding on July 6, 1942, a complete apparatus of murder was in place.

The engineers and architects of death had rolled up their blueprints. The barracks and the electrified barbed wire fences stood. The poison gas had been selected, tested and ordered. The facilities where doctors would conduct gruesome experiments gleamed with new medical equipment. The six death camps — all located in Poland — were ready to start processing Jews on an assembly line basis. When the gas stopped pouring and the guns grew silent, 6 million Jews lay dead. A fourth were children.

"No escape was open to Jews"

The decision for "The Final Solution of the Jewish Problem," the Nazi code-name for the war against the Jews, had been made around the time of the German invasion of Russia in June 1941. Not a single Jew was to be allowed to live. The little Polish boy with the Aryan features could be taken away from his parents and spirited to Germany under a special program designed to preserve valuable "northern racial stock."

The homosexual, the political opponent, the Jehovah's Witness might be set free after undergoing "re-education" in a concentration camp. The euthanasia program designed to weed out "useless eaters" was stopped after strong protests from the clergy (but not until nearly a quarter of a million people had been killed).

But no escape was open to Jews. "All Jews within our grasp are to be destroyed without exception, now, during the war," stated Heinrich Himmler, the head of the SS, the organization placed in charge of the "Final Solution." "If we do not succeed in destroying the biological substance of the Jews, the Jews will some day destroy Germany."

The Americans liberated Dachau

"I don't believe that the big men ... alone are guilty of the war. Oh no, the little man is just as guilty, otherwise the peoples of the world would have risen up in revolt long ago! There's in people simply an urge to destroy, an urge to kill, to murder and rage, and until all mankind, without exception, undergoes a great change, wars will be waged, everything that has been built up, cultivated, and grown will be destroyed and disfigured, after which mankind will have to begin all over again."

—Anne Frank, May 3, 1944

Jewish history in Europe

The first Jews came to Europe in the aftermath of the first-century Roman conquest of Palestine, the ancient homeland of the Jews. In the centuries following their dispersion, Jews lived among many different peoples, clinging to their religion and way of life, resisting every attempt at conversion and at making them feel inferior. While in some countries they were despised and persecuted, in others, such as medieval Spain, they rose to great heights.

In the modern world, Jews made great cultural, scientific, and economic contributions.

Jews come in every shape and color. It was only with Hitler that Jews were defined solely on the basis of biology. A person with three Jewish grandparents, for example, was considered a Jew.

The Holocaust brought to an end 2,000 years of Jewish life in Europe. Across the continent, thousands of communities, once vibrant with Jewish life — the world that produced Sigmund Freud, Albert Einstein and Kafka — disappeared and with them, a way of life, a civilization. All this adds up to a vast, immeasurable loss.

Because of the Holocaust, the world understood the need for Jews to have their own homeland where they would not be persecuted. In 1948, the United Nations officially declared Israel the Jewish state and Israel took its place among the nations of the world.

142,000 survivors of the camps and the destroyed Jewish communities in Europe found new life in the Jewish state. Today the center of Jewish life outside Israel has shifted to the United States.

After the greatest catastrophe in 4,000 years of its history, Jews have rededicated themselves to maintaining their traditions and culture, thwarting Hitler's plan to destroy them all.

"The march of death"

The eight occupants of the Frank's hideout were not unaware of the fate that would be theirs if caught. They listened in secret to the "illegal" broadcasts from England and were kept informed by the small but devoted group of friends that looked after their needs.

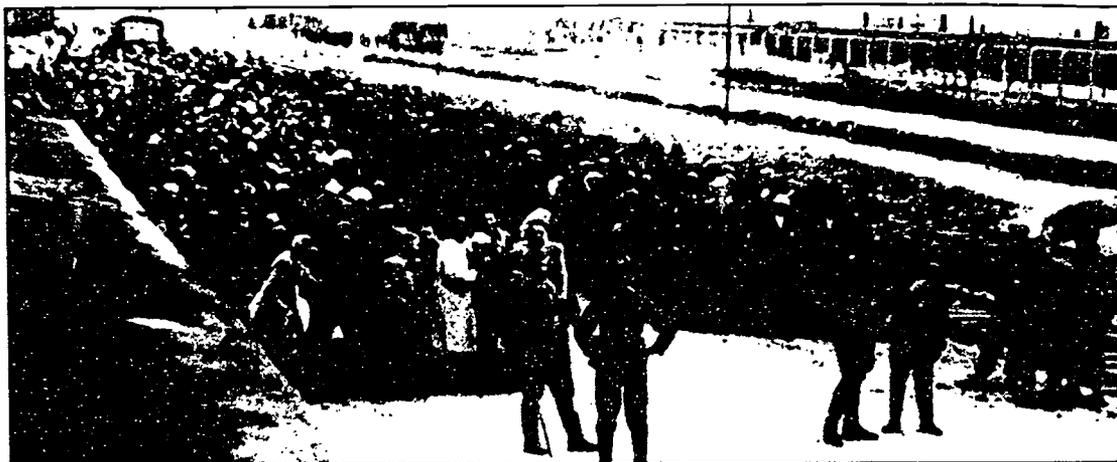

That was how they found out that Holland's Jews were being rounded up and gassed "in distant and barbarous regions." And occasionally, peeking out from behind a tattered curtain, Anne herself caught a whiff of the grim drama unfolding across Nazi-occupied Europe.

"In the evening, when it's dark, I often see rows of good, innocent people accompanied by crying children, walking on and on, in the charge of a couple of these chaps, bullied and knocked about until they almost drop. No one is spared — old people, babies, expectant mothers, the sick — each and all join in the march of death."

"Life in the hideout"

"How fortunate we are here, so well cared for and undisturbed," wrote Anne on witnessing this scene. Compared to that, her life seemed almost "normal." She experimented with different hairdos, friends arranged to take books out for her from the library.

Anne kept a diary and wrote stories. "I can shake off everything if I write; my sorrows disappear, my courage is reborn...." To keep her "mind off it all," she studied like crazy. She grew and matured, and speculated about God, human nature, male-female relations, and the place of women in a man's world. And she fell in love.

"Selection" in Auschwitz: Nazi physicians assess who should live and who should die

Yet, life in hiding was no picnic. Much of the time the hideout was a pressure cooker ready to explode. Anne had run-ins with her parents and the other adults that shared the prison-like premises. She got depressed, had nightmares, took pills to steady her nerves. "At night, when I'm in bed," she wrote on November 8, 1943, "I see myself alone in a dungeon, without Mummy and Daddy. Sometimes I wander by the roadside, or our 'Secret Annex' is on fire, or they come and take us away at night. I see everything as if it is actually taking place, and this gives me the feeling that it may all happen to me very soon!"

For 25 months Anne lived on the edge, in constant fear of discovery. The hideout was "a little piece of blue heaven, surrounded by heavy black rainclouds." On August 4, 1944, the clouds burst.

Betrayed, the occupants of the hideout were arrested and hustled off to Westerbork, the transit camp in Holland from which they would be dispatched to the Auschwitz death camp.

From there, Anne and her sister Margot were shipped to Bergen-Belsen in northern Germany, where both died toward the end of the winter of 1945 from typhus and starvation.

"Immortal words"

Two weeks before she was hauled from the annex, Anne penned the words that have become immortal. "It's really a wonder that I haven't dropped all my ideals," she wrote on July 15, 1944, "because they seem so absurd and impossible to carry out. Yet I keep them, because in spite of everything I still believe that people are really good at heart."

We will never know whether Anne was able to hold on to her ideals in the hells of Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen. But what was the alternative? As she wrote in her next paragraph:

"I simply can't build up my hopes on a foundation consisting of confusion, misery, and death. I see the world gradually being turned into a wilderness, I hear the ever approaching thunder, which will destroy us too, I can feel the sufferings of millions and yet, if I look up into the heavens, I think that it will all come right, that this cruelty too will end, and the peace and tranquility will return again. In the meantime, I must uphold my ideals, for perhaps the time will come when I shall be able to carry them out."

"The price of liberty is eternal vigilance"

What are some of the safeguards in our constitution that that may help prevent our nation from embarking on a course like Germany's in the 1930's?

Do you see anything in today's society that puts some of these safeguards at risk?

What can we do to ensure that these "buffers" remain effective?

After the war, Anne's father Otto, who survived Auschwitz, stated: "Anne has become a symbol not just for the millions of murdered Jews but for all innocent, persecuted people in the world.... I wish and hope that Anne's words: 'I want to work in the world and for mankind' will at all times continue to inspire young people to act on behalf of 'freedom, justice and peace'."

Although Anne did not have the opportunity to carry out her dreams, she can inspire all of us to work toward making that better world her father spoke of. "I want to work in the world and for humanity" means that Anne understood that this fight for "freedom, justice and peace" starts with the self.

"Everything begins with little things.... People will always follow a good example; be the one to set a good example, then it won't be long before others follow." Anne Frank

"In Germany, the Nazis came for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for me."

The HOLOCAUST was the death sentence pronounced by the German Third Reich on Jewish blood. All men, women and children whose ancestry included a single Jewish grandparent must die — without exception — murdered by starvation, disease, slave labor, fire, mutilation, electrocution, lethal injection, hanging, suffocation, exposure, flaying, poison gas, execution. Annihilation of all Jews became the central obsession of the Nazi dictatorship to the last day of its existence.

More than six million defenseless people were murdered as "carriers" of Jewish blood, and a unique civilization was permanently destroyed during the years 1941 to 1945.

The HOLOCAUST confronts us all with a momentous precedent. "Events happen because they are possible. If they were possible once, they are possible again. In that sense, the HOLOCAUST is not unique, but a warning to the future." — (Y. Bauer).

What nation can ignore that warning in the post-Holocaust world?

"To remain silent about the Holocaust is to grant posthumous victories to Hitler"

The Holocaust Center of Northern California (HCNC) is dedicated to the preservation of a past that must not be forgotten. The HCNC's fundamental position is that the facts must be known and must be remembered. The HCNC focuses on research and education, in fulfillment of the testament left by the martyrs of the Holocaust to its survivors — to remember, to record, to understand, to explain, and to enlighten future generations. The Holocaust Center of Northern California is a focal point in a growing network of Holocaust information and library centers in the United States. The Center communicates with other Holocaust institutions, survivors' organizations, memorial and monument committees throughout the country, and universities and colleges teaching about the Holocaust.

ORIGINS:

In 1977, Holocaust survivors and refugees from the Third Reich, assisted by the San Francisco Jewish Community Relations Council, founded the Committee of Remembrance to perpetuate the memory of those who perished and to preserve the record of Nazi atrocities.

The Committee created a permanent institution for Holocaust-related activities, education, and documentation — a living memorial to the victims of the Holocaust.

The Holocaust Library and Research Center opened its doors September 9, 1979 in the Jewish Community Library Building in San Francisco.

In 1986, the Holocaust Library and Research Center was renamed the Holocaust Center of Northern California.

Support from hundreds of individuals and grants from charitable foundations have enabled the Holocaust Center of Northern California to assume a leadership position in the Western United States for primary and secondary Holocaust source materials, archives of original documents, photographs, and oral history tapes, research projects, and community and educational programs intended to increase understanding and public awareness of the Holocaust.

MAJOR FUNCTIONS:

The Holocaust Center of Northern California is:

- A center for Holocaust-related educational activities in Northern California

- An archival library open to the public

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS:

The Center has established educational programs to enhance public awareness and understanding of the Holocaust.

• High School Docents

Selected high school juniors and seniors are educated in the history of the Holocaust and prepared to teach their fellow students. The 50-hour college level course (two 2-hour sessions weekly) culminates in the writing of essays on the Holocaust for the Morris Weiss Memorial Essay Contest. Graduates of the docent program maintain contact with the Center from their college campuses.

• Public Lectures

The Center arranges for speakers, lecture materials, and tours of the HCNC, and provides information about the Holocaust to various schools, civic organizations, scholars, and interested individuals on request.

Herschel Grynszpan

The Night Of The Broken Glass

Vom Rath

The Shooting

On Monday, November 7, 1938, a seventeen-year old boy named Herschel Grynszpan entered the office of Ernst vom Rath, the third secretary of the German embassy in Paris. Asked to state his business, the teenager pulled out a gun and fired five shots at the German diplomat. The youth made no attempt to escape. Two days later vom Rath was dead.

Herschel Grynszpan was a Jew; Ernst vom Rath the representative of a country led since 1933 by Adolf Hitler and the Nazi Party. The Hitler regime was sworn to make life miserable for Jews everywhere, starting in Germany. Soon after coming to power, it orchestrated a boycott of Jewish-owned shops and passed legislation depriving many Jews of their jobs and limiting their number at the universities. Two years later, Jews were robbed of their German citizenship and forbidden to marry non-Jews. In the summer of 1938 they were forced to adopt "Jewish-sounding" names. Then, at the end of October, the German government shipped fifteen thousand Polish-born Jews living in Germany over the border, into Poland, under horrible conditions. Among these was Herschel Grynszpan's family.

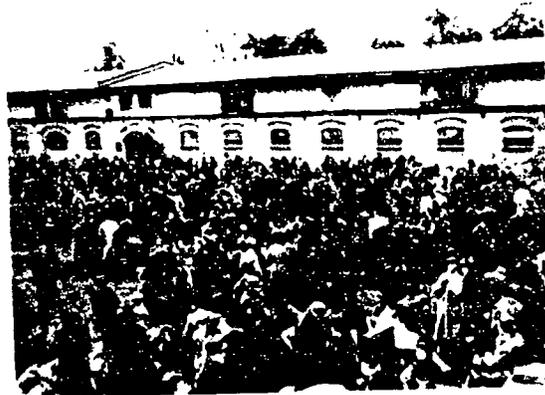

The Grynszpans

Polish citizens, the Grynszpans had been living in Hanover, Germany, since 1911. The elder Grynszpan eked out a living as a tailor. On the night of October 28th-29th the Grynszpans were roused from their beds and deported by train to Poland. "When we got to the border," Herschel Grynszpan's father related,

"we were searched. We were only allowed to take 10 marks; any excess was confiscated.... The SS told us we would have to walk about 2 kilometers to the border. Those who couldn't walk were beaten until the road was wet with their blood.... We were dealt with cruelly and barbarously. They [the Germans] made us run while they shouted, 'Run!

Run!' I was struck down at the roadside, but my son Marcus took me by the hand and said, 'Come on, Papa, run. They'll kill you if you don't.'

Finally we reached the border. We crossed it. The women went first because they began firing at us.... We were taken to a tiny village.... It was raining hard. There were a number of old people among us, some of whom fell or fainted; others had heart attacks. Although we hadn't eaten since Thursday evening and were very hungry, we did not want to eat the Germans' bread. We were taken to the stables of a military camp as there was no room anywhere else. We didn't write immediately because we were too hungry. On Sunday a truck came from Poznan and we all rushed round it. They threw bread and those who managed to catch any had bread, but it turned out that there was enough bread for all of us. Then I wrote a letter to my son Herschel in Paris. It told him not to write to us in Germany but to Zbonszyn in Poland." ¹

That letter, explaining what had happened, reached Herschel Grynszpan in Paris, four days before he fatally shot vom Rath. Prior to this, young Grynszpan wrote to his parents on the back of a photograph of himself: "My dear parents. I could not do otherwise. May God forgive me. My heart bleeds at the news of 12,000 Jews' suffering. I must protest in such a way that the world will hear me. I must do it. Forgive me. Herschel." ²

Vom Rath Dies

Vom Rath died on Wednesday afternoon. That same night an organized mob composed mainly of SS men and Storm Troopers wielding hammers, axes, crowbars and incendiary bombs went on the rampage, looting and smashing windows of Jewish-owned stores, destroying Jewish synagogues, killing and arresting Jews. Tens of thousands of Jewish males were hauled to concentration camps. A victim in the small town of Sonderburg described what took place in her home:

It was around six o'clock in the morning when five young fellows came in. Four whom I didn't know were from Steinhardt [a neighboring town] and one was from Sonderburg who had worked with me at Kahn's department store for at least ten years. He didn't do anything, he only sent the others in and they destroyed everything in the room. They came to me as I stood there, 1938, November 10.

"ALL JEWISH SHOPS MUST BE DESTROYED..."

they told me to go to the window, then they came with an axe but instead of hitting me, they hit the windows. A couple of hours later, the schoolchildren came by and threw stones in.

Destroyed Synagogue

My father had a heart attack in the kitchen so they didn't come in there but the living room was all a mess. My mother ran out into the garden. The man who worked with me said nothing; I looked at him and he looked at me but he lowered his face. Among the four was the veterinarian (an early and well-known Nazi official) and he came to my father's bedroom and said "Mein Herr, following orders from above, we must destroy your house. You and your wife, go out."³

The two large synagogues in my town were burned.... At night I went...to stay with my aunt, because she was alone..... The next morning all the Jewish apartments ...were ransacked. Featherbeds were torn and feathers scattered. When I returned home, nothing was left but the house. My mother and sister were in jail. Every piece of china had been smashed, every piece of clothing stolen. I thought of my two violins. One was new and the other an older, 3/4 child-size. The new one was gone and the 3/4 smashed. I had a mama doll with a china head. The arms, legs, and head were torn off. The furniture had been hacked with saws and axes.⁴

American Outrage

Scenes like this were repeated throughout Germany. The American consul in Leipzig, David H. Buffum, reported:

At 3 a.m. November 10, 1938, was unleashed a barrage of Nazi ferocity as had had no equal hitherto in Germany, or very likely anywhere else in the world since savagery, if ever. Jewish dwelling were smashed into and contents demolished or looted. In one of the Jewish sections an eighteen year old boy was hurled from a three storey window to land with both legs broken on a street littered with burning beds and other household furniture and effects from his family's and other apartments.... Jewish shop windows by the hundreds were systematically and wantonly smashed throughout the entire city at a loss estimated at several millions of marks.... The main streets of the city were a positive litter of shattered plate glass.... Three synagogues in Leipzig were fired simultaneously by incendiary bombs and all sacred objects and records desecrated or destroyed, in most instances hurled through the windows and burned in the streets.... Tactics which closely approached the ghoul- ish took place at the Jewish cemetery where the temple was fired together with a building occupied by caretak- ers, tombstones uprooted and graves violated.⁵

Desecrated Jewish cemetery in Speyer, 10 Nov 1938

The American Consul in Stuttgart told a similar tale of woe. "I have the honor to report," wrote Samuel W. Honaker, "that the Jews of south- west Germany have suffered vicissitudes during the last three days which would seem unreal to one living in an enlightened country during the twenti- eth century if one had not actually been a witness of their dreadful experiences, or if one had not had them corroborated by more than one person of undoubted integrity."⁶

Finally, in Washington, President Roosevelt rapped the Nazis in no uncertain terms. "I myself," he said, "could scarcely believe that such things could occur in the Twentieth-Century civilization."

Planning Spontaneity

Crystal Night, "the night of the broken glass", was carefully stage-managed from Berlin, despite the attempt to give it the appearance of a spontaneous action, an outburst of popular rage against the Jews. Immediately after the shooting in Paris on November 7, Propaganda Minister Goebbels told the press: "The news must completely dominate the front page." When the pogrom was launched in the morning of November 10, all participating parties had been carefully briefed on their role, in compliance with the guidelines from Berlin which called for an attack on all Jewish property with the following limitations:

1. Synagogues were to be burned only if there were no danger of the fire spreading;

2. Jewish shops and houses were to be destroyed, but there could be no looting;

3. Jewish community offices were to be ransacked, but not before the seizure of the archives;

4. Prominent and able-bodied Jewish males were to be arrested and sent to concentration camps; foreign citizens, including Jews, were not to be molested.

Goebbels

The police was specifically instructed not to intervene.

A non-Jewish witness to Crystal Night recalled how the local SS and SA arranged to carry out the wholesale violence in the town of Sonderburg.

All members of the SS were asked to meet in the square behind the town hall, sympathizers were also called to the meeting. I was not in the SS but I went to see what was happening. About a hundred men were there. Dansk said that the provocation from the Jews was no longer to be tolerated, we are going to teach them a lesson, tonight we are going to show them who is boss. Then he and his assistants divided the crowd into groups of five, and each group was told to go to a certain number of houses with instructions to destroy everything. Special groups were assigned to the cemetery and the synagogue. I went home right away and a number of other men also sneaked away. ⁷

Crystal Night Statistics

Number of Jews killed/deaths: 91 (hundreds more after arriving at concentration camps)

Seriously wounded/suicides: 36

Businesses destroyed and/or looted: 7,500

The Jews Must Pay

But Crystal Night did not end with flames, smoke, gutted shops and wrecked homes. Adding insult to injury, the German government slapped a fine of a billion marks ($400,000,000) on the entire Jewish community—"as punishment for their abominable crimes," declared Reich Field Marshal Goering, after Hitler the most powerful figure in Germany. Jews were also ordered to repair all damage inflicted on their shops and homes at their own cost, and they were banned from business, from schools, from movie houses and theaters. A few years later, after the outbreak of World War II, what was left of the Jewish community in Germany was deported and killed in the Nazi death camps.

"The Jews Are Our Misfortune"

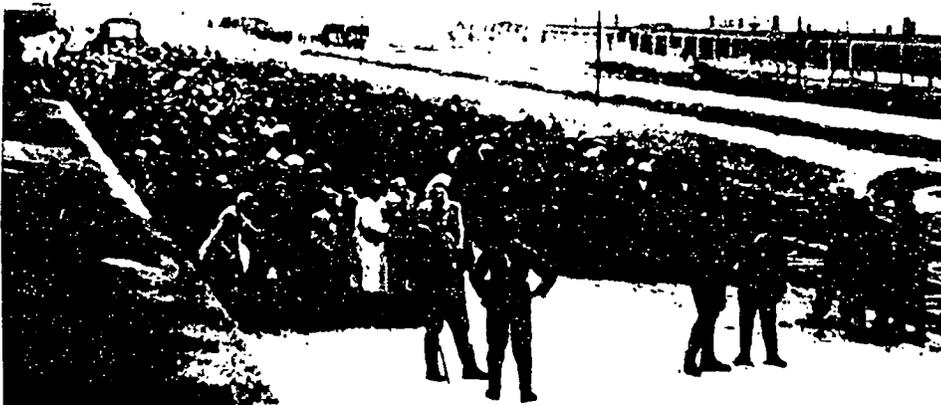

The soil in which something like Crystal Night could occur had been prepared long in advance. From the very beginning the Nazi movement targeted Jews as the principal enemy of Germany. Point 4 of the Nazi Party Program of 1920 bluntly stated: "Only a racial comrade can be a citizen. Only a person of German blood, irrespective of religious denomination, can be a racial comrade. No Jew, therefore, can be a racial comrade." At every major Party rally the Nazis unfurled a huge banner bearing the slogan "THE JEWS ARE OUR MISFORTUNE."

Hitler

To Hitler the Jew was the embodiment of absolute evil and responsible for all of Germany's problems. Jews were blamed for Germany's defeat in World War I. Jews were accused of dominating the theater, the press, publishing, medicine, law and the universities and of using their power in these areas to "poison" the German mind. And all this time the number of Jews in Germany hovered around the 500,000 mark, less than one percent of the population.

Hitler developed a racial theory to justify the persecution of Jews and later extermination. To him the Jews were not people but bacteria or viruses, "nonhuman parasites." Believing them to be part of an "international conspiracy" seeking world domination, he thought it necessary to destroy them on the premise of "them or us." Hitler the dictator waged his war against the Jews with a cruelty unparalleled in human history. The Night of the Broken Glass marked the beginning of a new phase of Jewish persecution, a phase culminating in the 'Final Solution', the cover-up name for the murder of 6 million defenseless Jewish men, women and children.

"LIBERATION OF MAUTHAUSEN" / Center Panel

1 Center photograph. The photograph in the center shows the inmates of Mauthausen, a concentration camp located in Austria. Mauthausen was liberated by American troops on May 5, 1945.

The Nazis built thousands of camps. Some were designated for labor, others as prisons, and still others for killing, while some combined all three functions. What kind of a camp was Mauthausen? Who were the prisoners interned there? Where did they come from? What were the reasons for their internment? Were there any women? Children? List some of the other camps that were liberated.

YOU ARE THERE - You are a reporter entering the camp with the American troops. What do you expect to see? What do you tell the people in America?

DISCUSSION - Fifty years after liberation survivors of Mauthausen come together in a remembrance ceremony. Hold a round-table discussion in which survivors reflect on the nature of their experience and consider what must be done to prevent such things from happening again.

In groups, work on a keynote address that incorporates the above. Have one student read it.

(The same activities can be done for Auschwitz; see below.)

"WHY WE FIGHT" / Panel 1

The following leaders are shown:

- 2 Joseph Stalin (USSR)
- 3 Franklin Delano Roosevelt (USA)
- 4 Winston Churchill (Great Britain)
- 5 Benito Mussolini (Italy)
- 6 Adolf Hitler (Germany)
- 7 Hideki Tojo (Japan)

Write a brief biography of each. What was the fate of each? Who were the Allies and who were the Axis powers?

Each spells out his reason for going to war. Imagine you are giving a speech trying to persuade your people of the rightness of your course. Expanding on the brief statement in the bubble, what would you say in each case? Make sure you pay attention to each country's traditions and the context in which the statements are made.

ROLE PLAY - Students pretend to be the leaders. Hold a debate. Each leader has an advisory body. Before debating, work together on the content, again making sure you are aware of your country's or system's particular set of beliefs.

CLASS PROJECT - Divide the class into four or five groups, each to design a series of propaganda posters to drum up support for the war. Consider two types of approaches, one that emphasizes the virtues of the country/system for which you are fighting, the other emphasizing the wickedness of the enemy. Put them on the wall when finished. Have a person in each group report on the work. Analyze and critique.

Show rival propaganda films. Clips from Leni Riefenstahl's "Triumph of the Will" (available in better video stores) and Frank Capra's "Why We Fight." Compare the different styles. What are their points of departure? Which is more likely to succeed in its aim? Why? Show Bill Moyers' "The Democrat and the Dictator" (PBS). What is its point of departure? How is Mr. Moyers' film different from the other films?

Identify propaganda techniques in advertising. Classify them according to the emotions to which they appeal (fears, desires, security, etc.)

TO THINK ABOUT - "Speech was invented to disguise thought."

George Orwell, author of 1984, coined the term "newspeak" to characterize language that says one thing but means another. Instead of strike-breakers, for example, we have "replacement workers," and "down-sizing" means lay-offs. The Nazis employed words like "protective custody," "resettlement," and "special treatment" to denote imprisonment, deportation and gassing. In the US, the internment during World War II of Japanese-Americans was referred to as "relocation." In the Vietnam war, words and terms like "pacification" and "defensive reaction strikes" (bombing) were in everyday use. Brainstorm research words used to soften or conceal their impact. Make this a week-long project. At the end of the week put them on butcher paper and discuss their real meaning and the reasons for preferring the softer term.

CLASS PROJECT - In small groups, compose a piece of writing employing "newspeak."

8 Timeline.

a. 1935- Nuremberg Laws. The Nazis curtailed or rescinded the civil rights of practically everyone, but Jews were hit hardest. In April 1933 there was a boycott of Jewish shops and a week later there were laws banning Jews from the civil service and reducing their numbers in the public schools. In 1935 came the Nuremberg Laws, which deprived Germany's Jews of their citizenship, forbade marriages between Jews and non-Jews, and defined who was a Jew. According to these laws, a Jew was a person who had two Jewish grandparents and belonged to the Jewish religion or was married to a Jew on September 15, 1935. Jews with three or four Jewish grandparents were also considered Jews.

What are some of the safeguards in our constitution that may help prevent our nation from embarking on a course like Germany's in the 1930s? What can we do to ensure that these "buffers" remain effective? Do you see anything in today's society that puts these safeguards at risk?

b. 1938 - Kristallnacht. The Night of Shattered Glass, November 9/10, 1938. Nazi-orchestrated pogrom (Russian word meaning destruction, specifically now destruction of Jewish life and property). The pogrom claimed the lives of hundreds of Jews, destroyed thousands of Jewish businesses and nearly all synagogues. 30,000 Jews were imprisoned in concentration camps. Adding insult to injury, the Nazis then levied a huge fine on the Jewish community. In Washington, President Roosevelt was outraged. "I myself," he said, "could scarcely believe that such things could occur in the twentieth-century civilization." Kristallnacht was the first pogrom in Western Europe in hundreds of years.

CLASS PROJECT - Find a slogan, cartoon, or a piece of writing promoting hatred. Analyze it. Is it accurate and fair, or is it stereotyping or scapegoating? Where do you think these negative ideas come from, and why do people hold them? Why do they persist? What can you do to change these stereotypes?

9 Hitler addressing the masses. Hitler said the bigger the lie, the more likely people are to believe it. Do you think he is right? Explain. Can you think of any big lie(s) Hitler told and people believed?

10 School children. The children depicted giving the Nazi salute are students in a regular school. Hitler believed that youth (males) should be taught to be brutal, merciless, and violent. "It must be indifferent to pain. There must be no tenderness in it." What was the role plotted out for girls? Why do you think he held these views? How might schools realize this "vision"? Imagine a typical day in a Nazi school. What kind of literature do you think children were made to read? Write a story or draw a picture of which a Nazi teacher would disapprove.

Genocide, it has been said, is learned behavior. How might the Nazi schools condition these children to carry out orders without thinking ten years down the road? Be specific.

11 Josef Goebbels, Nazi Propaganda Minister. Toward the end, when it became clear Germany was losing the war, Goebbels had the task of keeping spirits up. You are a group of workers in Goebbels' Propaganda Ministry assigned to produce films and radio broadcasts aimed at (a) inspiring the soldiers at the front, (b) spurring workers to greater achievement, (c) boosting morale while acknowledging that bombs are devastating Germany's cities and defeat is imminent. Brainstorm in groups. Design your scenarios carefully. What kind of music might you play?

12 Female Nazi camp guards. How did the Nazis construe the role of women in their society?

The Holocaust brought to an end 2,000 years of Jewish life in Europe. Across the continent, thousands of Jewish communities, once vibrant with Jewish life -- the world that produced the likes of Sigmund Freud, Albert Einstein and Franz Kafka -- disappeared and with them, a way of life, a civilization.

The Nazis considered Jews their principal enemy. Europe at the time counted 11 million Jews, scattered throughout the continent and including England. More than three million lived in Poland. Between 1939 and 1945, nine million came under Nazi rule or influence. The Nazis meant to kill them all, including the women and the children. They called the systematic murder of the Jews "The Final Solution of the Jewish Problem." Why do you think the Nazis singled out the Jews as their mortal enemy?

The destruction of the Jews was a step by step process. It started in Germany in 1933, the year Hitler came to power, with boycotts and special legislation designed to eliminate them from the economic and cultural life of the nation. (In Germany, Jews constituted less than one per cent of the total population.) Gradually, Jews were stripped of every mark of civilized existence. They lost their citizenship and possessions. In many places they were forced to live in ghettos, separate from the rest of the population. All had to wear distinctive badges identifying them as Jews. As war raged, the Nazis built the camps designed to kill Jews on an assembly line basis. At war's end, 6 million Jews had been killed. One fourth were children.

CLASS PROJECT - The camps. Some of the principal camps to which Jews were brought are featured here. The best known is Auschwitz, one of six death camps the Nazis built in Poland. Divide the class into groups and ask each one to provide a brief description of one of the camps depicted, noting its location, size, inmate population, and purpose. (Babi-Yar is not a camp.) Have them report their findings to the rest of the class. Identify differences and similarities among the camps.

How were Jews brought to these camps from across Europe? What tactics did the Nazis use to round up and to deport them?

Why would someone say that after Auschwitz it was no longer possible to write poetry? Do you agree? Read Elie Wieser's Night.

Invite a survivor of a concentration camp, hidden child, ghetto inmate, or refugee to speak at your school (contact The Holocaust Center of Northern California 415/751-6041)

13 "Yellow Star" Find the Yellow Star. The word "Jude" (pronounced "Yoodah") is German for Jew. Everywhere the Germans went and conquered they forced Jews to sew this badge on their clothes. Have you ever felt you were wearing a "badge" or a "label"? How did that make you feel? How do you think Jewish teenagers felt? What do you think happened to friendships between Jewish and non-Jewish Germans under the Nazis? Report on an encounter with discrimination you yourself have experienced, heard about, or seen with your own eyes.

A noted scholar observed that the most difficult task facing the Nazi leadership intent on killing the Jews was to persuade those doing the actual killing to overcome the natural pity they might feel as human beings toward other human beings in distress. How do you think this "problem" was resolved? What had to be done in order to condition the killers to cross that threshold? How was the killing process itself made impersonal?

The head of the organization (SS - Defense Squad) charged with carrying out "The Final Solution of the Jewish Question" (the code-name for the murder of European Jewry) was Heinrich Himmler. Himmler told his men that they must do their duty, no matter how they might personally feel about the atrocities they were being asked to commit. Could they have said "no"? Would you follow an order if it violated your personal moral convictions? Choose something you would not do and write a letter to your commanding officer explaining why you cannot follow an order that goes against your conscience.

RESEARCH - Did anyone help the Jews? Research the following: Denmark, rescuers, Raoul Wallenberg. Rescuers knew that if they were caught helping Jews they ran the risk of being put to death. Can you think of why some people (there weren't many) made the decision to help despite the risk? Try to come up with a "generic" profile of a rescuer. Someone has said that heroes are people who are able to overcome the instinct for self-preservation. What is your definition of a hero? Why would (or should) people put their own lives in jeopardy to help others? Show the video, "Courage to Care."

Who were some of the non-Jewish victims of Nazi persecution? What reasons did the Nazis give for going after these groups? In what ways was their persecution similar to, and in what ways different from, that of the Jews?

Imagine the Nazis had won the war. What would the world be like today? Discuss how the history of the Second World War might be written. How would the Nazis present the destruction of the Jews?

CLASS PROJECT - Design memorials commemorating the suffering and death of the victims.

(High School - upper grades) An excellent film is the BBC production "World at War: Part 20: Genocide." The following questions and activities are based on the film. It is suggested that the film be previewed and, when shown, stopped at appropriate points along the way.

Why did the filmmakers choose to start with a segment outlining Nazi racial beliefs? The Nazis looked to the "law of nature" (the weak go under) and the way animals are bred to improve the stock as examples for humans to follow. Is this legitimate?

A good example of "newspeak" is Himmler's adjutant Karl Wolff explaining how he came to the SS "by fate." He also says that it never occurred to him that Nazism would one day exterminate people they considered to be racially and culturally inferior. Do you believe him? What was the SS? How did one join?

Why did Hitler blame the Jews for starting the war?

Were the Nuremberg Laws (the laws made against Jews) similar to the Jim Crow laws in the US?

What do you think went through the minds of those who were designing the crematoria and the gas chambers? Do you think they knew how they were going to be used?

Some of the footage in this film was taken by the Germans. Why do you think they wanted to film and show these horrors?

One of the Jews being interviewed worked in the crematoria and was assigned to remove the bodies from the gas chambers. Any person, he said, without exception, is capable of doing the worst things just to live another minute. Is what he says true?

14 Canister containing Zyklon B gas. This was the gas used to kill millions of Jews, close to a million and a half Gypsies, and tens of thousands of Russian prisoners of war.

15 Boy with arms raised. In the spring of 1943, the remaining Jews of Warsaw (Poland) rose up against the Nazis in the first large-scale revolt against German rule in all of Europe. The uprising took place after most of the ghetto population had been killed in a death camp called Treblinka. The boy was one of the fighters dragged out of underground bunkers by the "victorious" German troops. What are some of the reasons that might explain why Jews waited so long to attack their killers?

YOU ARE THERE - Report on the fighting. Pay particular attention to the numbers engaged in the battle, the weapons at their disposal, the leaders, the spirit, and why they waited so long before striking back at the Nazis.

16 Women with caps. Female Jewish partisans in the Holocaust. Can you think of some reasons that made armed resistance difficult to carry out? Nevertheless, Jews fought back, against overwhelming odds, as in Sobibor, Treblinka and Auschwitz. Twenty-three year old Hannah Senesh, a Jewish woman from Palestine, wrote "Blessed is the Match."

*Blessed is the match consumed in kindling flame
Blessed is the flame that burns in the secret fastness of the heart
Blessed is the heart with strength to stop its beating for honor's sake
Blessed is the match consumed in kindling flame*

RESEARCH - Hannah Senesh was air-dropped into Hungary on D Day, caught and executed on November 7, 1944. There are a number of books on the young heroine. Have a student, or students, report on her exploits.

RESEARCH - We tend to think of resistance in purely military terms. But armed resistance is only one form of resistance. Locate examples of non-violent resistance such as art and writing produced by Jews in the Holocaust.

17 Anne Frank. Anne Frank, who was killed by the Nazis, kept a diary in hiding that became world famous. In it, she wrote that she believed people were basically good "despite everything." Trace her fate after the hideout was betrayed. Was Anne Frank's diary a form of resistance?

Do you like Anne Frank, believe that people are "basically good" despite everything? Imagine you are she and have the means to continue the diary. What would you write?

TO THINK ABOUT - The Holocaust was a tragedy of civilization in which the victims happened to be Jews. (Det. J. L. Eppstein)

Not all victims were Jews but all Jews were victims. (Eli Wiesel)

Are there any lessons to be learned from the Holocaust?

"STATUE OF LIBERTY" / Panel 4 (Top Center)

When a few years ago Chinese students demonstrated against the Communist dictatorship in their country, they hoisted an effigy of the Statue of Liberty. Why do you think this statue has become the symbol of freedom throughout the world?

18 Female workers in American factories. Report on the changes in the American workplace resulting from the war. What was the role of women, especially minority women like those depicted in this photograph? Write ads to attract female workers. What "buttons" would you push to attract them? Write/give a patriotic speech for the chairman of the board trying to get the maximum out of the workers. What do you think happened to these jobs when the war ended?

19 STOP. While American troops were fighting in Europe for freedom, President Roosevelt ordered Americans of Japanese descent to be imprisoned in special internment camps. Why? Did the government have a right to do this? Were Americans of German or Italian descent similarly put away? The Fifth Amendment provides that "No person shall be deprived of liberty or property without due process of law." Korematsu v. US (1944) upheld the exclusion of Japanese-Americans from the West Coast of the United States during World War II. Research the case. What were the arguments used on both sides? How might the arguments be presented today? Do you think the outcome would be different? Ironically, an army unit consisting entirely of Japanese-Americans was the most highly decorated unit in World War II. Has the government ever acknowledged it made a mistake, apologized, or compensated the victims? How can we prevent something like this from happening again?

"D-DAY to V-E DAY" / Panel 5

D-Day was the long-awaited Allied invasion of Europe. Consult maps of the landing on D-Day (invasion of Europe). V-E Day - Victory Europe Day. Trace the progress of the Allied forces.

CLASS PROJECT - In groups, work on a number of pamphlets intended to demoralize the enemy. Do this for both sides. These may consist of text or drawings.

YOU ARE THERE - You are covering the landing as a radio reporter. Describe what you see.

CLASS PROJECTS - The quote "Bound together by..." is Eisenhower's. Trace his career. Compose a speech for him designed to address the troops as they are about to set out for Europe and hit the beaches. Find out if he gave such a speech. If so, compares yours to his.

Marshall "Marsh" McMath. Diary excerpts. Find Clearfield, Iowa. What kind of town is it? How are its people employed? Is Clearfield an average American town? How could you find out? How do you think the war changed Marsh's life, if at all?

Make some additional entries in Marsh's diary, recording his thoughts and feelings upon his return. Have him give a talk to the local high school about his experiences in Europe. Write a speech for Clearfield's mayor celebrating the victory and honoring Marsh's role in it.

20 Liberation of Dachau. American soldiers liberating the first concentration camp established by the Nazis in 1933.

"LEGACIES" / Panel 6

21 Courtroom. Nuremberg Trials. After the war, the victors put the losers on trial. The prosecution argued that the Nazis had started the war and committed crimes against humanity. Only the top Nazis were tried. What do you think they argued in their own defense? If you were asked to draw a chart designating an order of responsibility, where would you begin? Who was most responsible, who the least?

TO THINK ABOUT - "The victims died not because of the killers. They died because of the indifference of the others." (Eli Wiesel)

The German clergyman Martin Niemöller wrote: "In Germany, the Nazis came for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by then there was no one left to speak for me."

Read the poem "The Hangman" (Maurice Ogden)

YOU ARE THERE - Report on the trial.

RESEARCH - Lieutenant Calley and the destruction of My Lai in Vietnam.

22 Genocide Convention of 1948. The Convention lists the following acts as genocidal: (a) Killing members of the group. (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group. (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part. (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group. (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group. In your opinion, was anything left out? Do you know of anything going on today that might qualify as genocide?

23 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Abroad, a black soldier might be a liberator and dance with anyone he pleased, but in some parts of the US he was barred from many areas of life, and in the army he fought in all-black units. Some black soldiers helped liberate concentration camps. Imagine being a black soldier writing letters to his family back home expressing his conflicted feelings about fighting to overthrow tyranny in Europe and facing discrimination in the country of his birth.

In the US, the African American struggle for equal rights began in earnest in the fifties and is ongoing. The Civil Rights Act was passed in 1964, four years before the assassination of its inspirational leader, Martin Luther King. Can you think of a connection between the civil rights struggle in the US and the war? List some of the changes resulting from the civil rights and feminist movements. How did they change America? Do you think the changes are likely to be permanent?

The twenty-five years that followed the liberation of Europe from Nazism witnessed numerous successful attempts on the part of European colonies to free themselves from their former masters. What are some of the new countries established between 1945 and 1970? Can you think of ways in which these national liberation struggles were connected to the war?

24 The flag of Israel. Because of the Holocaust, there was a climate of sympathy in the world that favored creation of a Jewish State where Jews would not be persecuted. In 1948, the United Nations officially declared Israel the Jewish state and Israel took its place among the nations of the world. 142,000 survivors of the camps and the destroyed Jewish communities in Europe found new life in this Jewish state. Today the center of Jewish life outside Israel has shifted to the United States. After the greatest catastrophe in 4,000 years of Jewish history, Jews have rededicated themselves to maintaining their traditions and culture, thwarting Hitler's plan to destroy them all. Research - What is the population of Israel today? What part of the population is native-born and what are the countries of origin of the others? How did the Ethiopian Jews wind up in Israel?

25 "The Holocaust" (George Segal). Memorial to the victims, located in Lincoln Park, San Francisco, March 18, 1983. "My greatest memory of the Holocaust," writes the sculptor, "was my horror at the photographs in Life magazine that appeared at the time of the uncovering of the camps. The one visual hook I uncovered was the arrogant contempt displayed by the Germans in their chaotic heaping of corpses. In any culture, if a human being dies, there's an elaborate, orderly ritual that accompanies the burial. The body is laid out in a straight line. Hands are crossed. There's a burial case and a prescribed, almost immovable succession of events that involve the expression of grief of the family, the expression of love, the expression of the religious beliefs in whatever civilization. It's a prescribed order, and if a modern state turns that order topsy-turvy and introduces this kind of chaos, it is an unthinkable obscenity. I determined that I would have to make a heap of bodies that was expressive of this arrogance and disorder." Some survivors have commented that Segal missed the mark by portraying the inmates as reasonably well fed and not at all true to the emaciated survivors the Allies found upon the liberation of the camps. (Source: "George Segal's Holocaust Memorial: An Interview with the Artist," by Matthew Baigell, in James E. Young, The Art of Memory: Holocaust Memorials in History (Pestel, Munich and New York, 1994), pp. 83-87). Do you think his approach is appropriate? How would you have done it? Field Trip - Bay Area students visit the site in Lincoln Park. Have a survivor address the students.

26 United Nations. Founded in 1945, the UN was the successor to the League of Nations, the first international organization formed to promote international peace, security, and cooperation. The League of Nations ultimately failed in this task. Do you think the UN has a better chance? Explain. In which countries is it active today? What are some of its goals in addition to keeping conflicts to a minimum? What have been some of its major achievements and failures? Debate. The UN has succeeded in keeping conflicts to a minimum. Or, The UN is a useless organization.

27 Question Mark - Can you think of any other legacies of the war in addition to those depicted? (Examples may be the Cold War and the atomic age.)

CLASS PROJECT - Produce your own World War II collage or one about the 50-year anniversary commemorations.
