It is intended for counselors, teachers, principals, administrators, and Boards of Education to help them set goals for their students. The guidebook's purpose is to communicate to professionals the planning, development, implementation, and assessment of school guidance and counseling programs that support the personal, social, educational, and career development of all students, prekindergarten through grade twelve. At the elementary level, the guidance program emphasizes decision making, skill development, awareness, and beginning exploration of future educational and occupational possibilities. Middle school guidance focuses on the rapidly changing needs of young adolescents. For high school students, the program focuses on assisting students in developing realistic and fulfilling life plans. The comprehensive guidance program organizes the work of counselors into activities and services. The Table of Contents includes the following sections: (1) "Basis for Counseling Program Model"; (2) "Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Model"; (3) "Roles and Responsibilities of School Counselors"; (4) "Program Development Cycle"; (5) "Guidance Curriculum Standards for Student Development"; (6) "Evaluating a Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program"; (7) "Appendices"; and (8) "References." ## Foreword

October 1999

Dear Educators:

As we move into the twenty-first century, the third millenium, school counselors are faced with the challenges of assisting and preparing students to meet the expectations of high academic standards and to become productive citizens and contributing members of our communities and society. To assist school counselors in meeting these challenges, a model for school counseling programs has been developed and written by school counselors, counselor educators, district guidance coordinators, educators, and parents from across our State.

School counseling programs must be comprehensive, serving all students, and must provide learning opportunities that are individual and grade-appropriate. A comprehensive guidance and counseling program is an essential component of the total instructional program through which all students have maximum opportunity for their total development, including learning to live (knowledge of self and others); learning to learn (education and academic knowledge); and learning to work (career planning and knowledge). In addition, as school counselors implement a comprehensive guidance and counseling program in a systematic manner, they provide learning opportunities and services to all students that will contribute to success in the learning process.

This program model for comprehensive guidance will serve as a planning guide to districts, schools, and school counselors as they develop and implement their comprehensive guidance and counseling programs.

Very truly yours,

Inez M. Tenenbaum
State Superintendent of Education

SOUTH CAROLINA COMPREHENSIVE DEVELOPMENTAL GUIDANCE AND COUNSELING PROGRAM MODEL

Purpose

A comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program is an essential component of the total instructional program which provides all students the opportunity for optimum development. Students should gain skills that assist them with their own development toward productive citizenship.

The South Carolina Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program Model has been created to assist local districts in developing their own program. This model can be used as a guide to assist districts and schools in the development of their guidance and counseling program.

The guide is intended for:

Counselors: to help them establish, implement, and manage their guidance program which will benefit all of their students.

Teachers: to help them understand the goals of the guidance and counseling program and maintain a teacher-counselor partnership for the maximum benefit of students.

Principals: to help them collaborate with counselors to design and deliver a quality guidance and counseling program and assist counselors in implementing the program.

District Administrators such as Superintendents, Assistant Superintendents, Guidance Directors, and Curriculum Directors: to help them provide appropriate support for guidance and counseling program development efforts, and to establish procedures which enhance the effectiveness of the guidance and counseling program.

Boards of Education: to help them set policies for effective guidance and counseling programs in their schools.

Mission Statement

The South Carolina Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program Model is to assist school districts and communities with the planning, development, implementation, and assessment of a school guidance and counseling program that supports the personal, social, educational, and career development of all students, prekindergarten (PreK) through grade twelve. The program model will assist school districts in complying with State regulations which impact comprehensive guidance programs.

This document provides standards and strategies for school districts to use and follow in developing and implementing a comprehensive guidance and counseling program in their districts.

Philosophy And Rationale

The South Carolina Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program is based upon the following beliefs:

- All children are unique and should be respected with dignity.
- Every student can succeed at high levels.
- Learning is a lifelong process.
- Fostering a positive self-image is the collaborative effort of the school, home and community leading to responsible and productive citizenship.
- Through guidance programs, the needs and diversity of all students are addressed at all educational levels.
- Every student needs appropriate personal and social skills to achieve optimum benefits from the educational program.
- Comprehensive guidance counseling is a developmentally appropriate program rather than support services.
- The guidance program is an integral part of the overall educational program and serves as a critical link to the instructional program and the community.
- A comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program is an integral part of the total educational program. The program provides developmental opportunities and experiences as it addresses student development areas: learning to live, learning to learn, and learning to work.

Introduction and Overview

The local education agency's comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program provides important benefits to individual students by addressing their intellectual, emotional, social, and psychological needs. It includes sequential activities designed to address the needs of all students by helping them to acquire competencies in knowledge of self and others, in identifying educational goals, and in career planning in our elementary, middle, and senior high schools. The program is implemented in each school by the certified school counselor with the support of teachers, administrators, students, and parents.

Program Goals

At the elementary level, the guidance program promotes successful achievement by assisting students in learning the skills and attitudes necessary to be successful. It emphasizes decision making, skill development, awareness, and beginning exploration of future educational and occupational possibilities. The program also stresses self-concept development and the acquisition of skills in developing interpersonal relationships.

The middle school guidance and counseling program focuses on the rapidly changing needs of young adolescents. It is especially sensitive to the struggles of middle school students for identity and for balancing the demands for academic, career, and social competencies. The programs begun at the elementary level are continued. However, they are adjusted to fit the special needs of the middle school students. In addition, counselors will work with the students to develop a four-year plan that covers graduation requirements. The plan will take into account students' interests as well as educational and occupational plans.

Building on the goals of the elementary and middle school, the guidance and counseling program in the high school assists students in becoming responsible adults who can develop realistic and fulfilling life plans based on clear understandings of themselves and their needs, interests, and skills. The four-year plan developed in the middle school moves with the students to the high school and is reviewed and updated annually in accordance with students' post-graduation educational and occupational goals. Continued attention is given to assisting students to develop competence in decision-making, career planning, working with others, and taking responsibility for their own behavior.

Program Activities

To accomplish these goals, the comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program is an integral part of the school system's total educational program. The program includes sequential activities in the elementary, middle, and high schools.

Counselors work with all students, parents, teachers, administrators, and the community through a balanced program of counseling and guidance services. Large- and small-group structured learning units provide systematic instruction for all students in all grade levels.

Counselors plan with teachers and then teach, team teach, or assist in teaching these coordinated units in classrooms or in other large-group settings. Individual planning activities are provided to assist all students. They are initiated in the upper elementary grades and continued and expanded in the middle and high school years. Individual, small-group, personal, and crisis counseling are available to all students. Consultation service concerning student behavior and academic progress are provided for parents, teachers, and administrators. Referrals to other professionals in the school district or to agencies and institutions outside of the district are made as required or requested.

Counselors support the overall district's educational program through general consultation activities and committee work. Counselors also support their local school program through management and research activities, community outreach, business and industry visitation, and professional development.

Program Components

The comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program components organize the work of counselors into activities and services. They include the counselor services of guidance curriculum, individual planning, responsive services, and counseling and guidance system support.

Guidance Curriculum includes structured experiences presented systematically through classroom and group activities from prekindergarten through grade twelve. The curriculum emphasizes choice-making, self-understanding, career exploration and preparation, and the improvement of study skills.

Individual Planning includes counseling activities to assist all students to plan, monitor, and manage their own academic achievement as well as their personal and career development. Individual planning emphasizes test interpretation, informal counseling, educational counseling including pre-college and post-secondary vocational-technical planning, and career planning.

Responsive Services includes counseling or referral activities to meet the immediate needs and concerns of students. Responsive services includes personal counseling; crisis counseling; agency referral; consultation with parents, teachers, and other professionals; support groups; and problem solving.

System Support includes indirect guidance management activities that maintain and enhance the total guidance program. Responsibilities in this component include staff and community relations, special research projects, committees, professional development, and student support teams.

Comprehensive Guidance and Program Components

1. Guidance Curriculum

The guidance curriculum consists of structured developmental experiences presented systematically through classroom and group activities in prekindergarten through grade 12. The purpose of the guidance curriculum is to provide all students at all levels with knowledge of normal growth and development, to promote their positive mental health and to assist them in acquiring and using life skills. While counselors' responsibilities include the organization and implementation of the Guidance Curriculum, the cooperation and support of the entire faculty and staff are necessary for its successful implementation. The Guidance Curriculum is delivered through such strategies as:

Classroom Activities: Counselors teach, team-teach or assist in teaching guidance curriculum learning activities or units in classrooms, the guidance center, or other school facilities.

Group Activities: Counselors conduct group activities outside the classroom to respond to students' identified interests or needs.

Suggested Time Allocations

Elementary School	35%-45%
Middle/Junior High School	25%-35%
High School	15%-25%

2. Individual Planning

Individual Planning consists of activities that help all students plan, monitor, and manage their own learning as well as their personal and career development. Within this component, students evaluate their educational, occupational, and personal goals. The activities in this component are counselor-planned and directed. These activities are generally delivered on an individual basis, or by working with individuals in small groups or advisement groups. Individual Planning is implemented through such strategies as:

Individual Appraisal: Counselors work with students analyzing and evaluating students' abilities, interests, skills, and achievements. Test information and other data are the bases for assisting students to develop immediate and long-range plans.

Individual Advisement: Counselors work with students using personal-social, educational, career, and labor market information in planning personal, educational, and occupational goals. The involvement of students, parents, and the school in planning students' programs that meet their needs is critical.

Placement: Counselors assist students in making the transition from school to school, school to work or school to additional education and training.

Suggested Time Allocations

Elementary School	5%-10%
Middle/Junior High School	15%-25%
High School	25%-35%

3. Responsive Services

Responsive Services consist of activities to meet the immediate needs and concerns of students, whether these needs or concerns require counseling, consultation, referral, or information. This component is available to all students and is often student-initiated. While counselors have special training and skills to respond to these needs and concerns, the cooperation and support of the entire faculty and staff are necessary for the successful implementation of this component. Responsive services are delivered through such strategies as:

Consultation: Counselors consult with parents, teachers, other educators, and community agencies regarding strategies to help students.

Personal Counseling: Counseling is provided on a small-group or individual basis for students expressing difficulties dealing with relationships, personal concerns, or normal developmental tasks. Personal counseling assists students in identifying problems, causes, alternatives, and possible consequences so appropriate action is taken.

Crisis Counseling: Counseling and support are provided to students and their families facing emergency situations. Such counseling is normally short-term and temporary in nature. When necessary, appropriate referral sources are used.

South Carolina Roles and Responsibilities of School Counselors

Counselor Orientation

Professional school counselors accept responsibility to help all students through a systematically delivered comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program. At the same time, they respect each student, strive to understand each student's background and the factors that are influencing his/her present circumstances, and maintain optimism about each student's future.

School counselors approach students, parents, teachers, and others with warmth and understanding, an accepting and optimistic attitude about the potentialities of people, and the belief that people can change in positive ways. They are committed to personal change and growth, not only in others, but also in themselves. They have the ability to relate to and effectively communicate with people of all ages and cultural backgrounds. Counselors have a high degree of self-awareness of their own values, knowledge, skills, and limitations, and know not to act beyond the bounds of their professional qualifications. When counselors who demonstrate these personal characteristics and competencies are selected for employment, the probability for having an effective guidance and counseling program is increased.

Counselor Roles

When a fully certified school counselor is employed, the administration, faculty, parents, and community should expect the counselor to carry out six basic roles in a professional and accountable manner. The six roles are:

- Program Management
- Guidance
- Counseling
- Consultation and Student Advocacy
- Coordination
- Assessment (Collaboration and Interpretation only)

In order for counselors to perform their roles and responsibilities, they need to be free to provide direct services to all students rather than burdened by administrative and/or clerical tasks such as: bus/lunchroom duty, supervising recess and detention halls, substituting for teachers, doing vision/hearing screenings; building the Master Schedule; OSIRIS Coordinator, school testing coordinator; being in charge of IEP meetings and special education procedures, etc. These job guidelines can assist school districts in better understanding the role of the counselor in implementing the school counseling program.

These roles and the responsibility of professionalism are further defined as follows:

Program Management

School counselors function in the area of guidance program management within the school unit and the school district. Counselors will work with faculty, staff, students, parents, and community members to plan, implement, and evaluate a comprehensive guidance program. Counselors must be able to use a planning process to define needs and priorities and to determine appropriate objectives. Counselors must be able to organize personnel, physical resources, and activities in relation to defined needs, priorities, and objectives. They also must evaluate the guidance program to maintain its contribution to the total educational program.

Guidance

School counselors provide a proactive, comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program to all students, from prekindergarten through 12th grade, within the school and district in which they are employed. The developmental approach focuses on the “normal” processes of growing up in a complex culture. Multi-cultural issues, individual differences, and problem-centered concerns are taken into account when considering the focus of the comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program. All students need guidance for maximizing personal/social development, academic development and career development; thus guidance is provided to groups of students.

Counseling

Counselors provide appropriate theories and techniques of counseling to develop and maintain effective individual and group relationships and to provide counseling in response to individuals and small groups with educational, career, personal, and social needs or concerns.

Consultation and Student Advocacy

Counselors, functioning as consultants, provide professional expertise to assist faculty, staff, administrators, parents, and other community members to understand both individual behavior and human relationships. In addition, counselors interpret relevant information to those persons concerning the development and needs of students.

Coordination

Counselors, as coordinators, bring together people and resources in the school, the community and the district for the fullest personal/social, academic, and career development of the students.

Assessment

Counselors collaborate with other school and district staff to select testing and appraisal programs that help students identify their abilities, aptitudes, achievements, and interests. In addition to test data, other sources of appraisal information include interviews, biographical summaries, academic records, anecdotal records, personal data forms, and records of past experiences. Counselors have knowledge of the principles, practices, and limitations of test data, and are ethically bound to treat assessment data as confidential, so that only those with a need to know have access to the information. Counselors should not have the sole responsibility of coordinating and administering the testing program in their schools. Their role is to interpret the test data and provide input to administration.

In addition to the roles listed above, professional school counselors demonstrate their professionalism by adhering to legal, ethical, and professional standards for performance, as well as South Carolina laws and guidelines for confidentiality.

Counselor Competencies

The Role of the Counselor in Tech/Prep

The School-to-Work Transition Act is an innovative educational program designed to prepare today's youth for tomorrow's work force in technology. School-to-Work is an investment in the future of students and in the economic development of the community. It is a dropout prevention program; a career education program; a curriculum enhancement initiative; and a program to strengthen ties between schools, business, community, and higher education. The result of the program is the students being better prepared for entry into the technological work force, advanced study at the college level, and lifelong learning.

Career guidance is an important function of the entire comprehensive development guidance and counseling program. All students, college-bound or not, benefit from a program of strong applied academics and realistic knowledge about career opportunities. School-to-Work programs provide a framework for viable alternative career paths beyond the traditional general or college-prep tracks. Students are required to plan and execute a sequence of courses, both academic and career, that will prepare them for the future. Such planning is essential for all well-prepared students.

Counselors are one of the keys to the success of School-to-Work initiatives. The counselor is the liaison between the school, student, and parent. They are also the people most frequently involved in assisting students to develop long-range educational and career plans. Counselors facilitate the students' journey through self-awareness and career development, Grades PreK-12. Tech/Prep foundations are initially laid in elementary school with developmentally appropriate activities about the world of work.

The career component (learning to work) of the South Carolina Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program includes conferring with parents and teachers, conducting career guidance activities, completing individual career plans, and implementing the School-to-Work Transition Act.

Through School-to-Work initiatives, counselors become increasingly more involved in training students to enter the work force and be better prepared to meet the needs of an ever-changing world.

The Role of the Counselor in Parent Education

Programs to assist and support parents in the parenting process are an important part of a school's comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program. In addition to PTA/PTO presentations and sending communications home, schools can take an active role in this process by offering parent education opportunities.

One of the ways to aid parents in developing more effective parenting skills is a series of programs about physical and emotional development essential for learning. Communication and behavior management strategies are part of parent education. Parenting education programs may be structured as panel discussions, discussion groups, or instructional programs. Community professional involvement should be a part of this program.

The Role of the Counselor in Working with Students with Disabilities

Students with disabilities have a right to, and will benefit from, a well-planned and thoughtfully implemented comprehensive guidance program. Counselors have an ethical obligation to be knowledgeable of their students' needs and to provide the appropriate programs and services on an equitable basis. Counselors will need to become familiar with both state and federal legislation impacting the education of students with disabilities.

The counselor's role in serving students with disabilities will not differ from those functions performed with any other students. The primary services will include classroom guidance, consultation with parents and teachers of students with disabilities, counseling with students, assessment, coordination of services, prevention and intervention, and career development. These services are inclusive of a comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program.

Through the cooperative effort of counselors, parents, teachers and support personnel, students with disabilities can be provided a solid foundation that will enhance personal, educational, and career development. The goal is to provide a comprehensive guidance program that assists all students in increasing opportunities for success and achievement of their full potential.

The Role of the Counselor in Discipline

Counselors do not deal directly with discipline, but rather approach discipline from a preventive perspective. Discipline problems are identified, discussed, and resolved before they significantly disrupt the learning environment and the educational process. Early behavioral intervention by the counselor is essential.

Consultation is one of the key intervention strategies employed by the counselor to create positive change and facilitate the growth and development of the students served. The counselor acts as an arbitrator between school staff and students regarding problem situations and relationships in classrooms. A systematic process is utilized that includes meeting with the school staff and with the students individually and together to monitor progress and evaluate outcomes.

The school counselor also utilizes appropriate school policies to refer the family to assistance resources outside the school system. The school counselor should continue to provide ongoing assistance.

Specific group guidance sessions employed by the counselor can assist students in their total school adjustment and thus reduce classroom problems. Special small-group counseling sessions are scheduled on a need basis for assisting students who exhibit more aggressive behavior.

Some examples of counselor intervention strategies that focus on school adjustment and discipline are listed below.

- Orientation sessions are conducted at all grade levels to acquaint students with the discipline policy. The positive aspects and rewards of acceptable practices in attendance, classroom behavior, and social relationships both inside and outside the school environment are emphasized.
- Group guidance sessions are held that stress responsible behavior and coping skills.
- Individual sessions are scheduled on the basis of a referral or request from parents, teachers, or administrators. Minor first-time behavior problems may be referred to the counselor for assistance and follow-up.
- Follow-up activities with a student returning from a suspension are conducted when requested by the school administrators.
- School staff are in-serviced on appropriate referral procedures and provided with necessary forms.
- Referrals to outside agencies are initiated when appropriate.
- Conferences with parents, teachers, support staff, and administrators are scheduled when appropriate.

Guidelines for Counselor Confidentiality in South Carolina

The issue of confidentiality is involved in every counseling interaction. It is important to inform students prior to beginning the counselor/student relationship that there are possible limitations that may affect the relationship. Counselors must know their limitations and not act beyond the bounds of their professional qualifications, but refer students to community resources when appropriate. Counselors must inform students of the purposes, goals, techniques, rules of procedures, etc., prior to entering into the relationship. The following guidelines have been developed for legal and ethical behavior on the part of the school counselor who works with students in South Carolina schools.

1. Whether the topic of confidentiality is discussed or not, all communications between the students and the counselor are, in fact, confidential. Therefore, the counseling session itself, and not explicit agreements between the counselor and student, determines the validity of confidentiality for the student.
2. Informal discussion of case material, as opposed to a consultation, with persons not directly involved is a breach of confidentiality. Case material may be discussed with another professional when the focus of the discussion is on helping the student. Counselors who feel the need to "vent their feelings" should center the discussion on themselves, keeping the identity of the student private.
3. A list of persons who have expertise in legal/ethical issues in school counseling should be available to counselors for the purpose of consultation. In instances in which the counselor is not sure of actions to be taken, consultations with other professionals must be used where possible. Other professionals include, but are not limited to, members of the student's support team, professional counselors including school counselors, school/district administrators, community mental health agencies, university professors, South Carolina Department of Education personnel, and various experts/professionals in the field of counseling.
4. Written or oral reports present only data germane to the purposes of an evaluation and every effort is made to avoid undue invasion of privacy (APA, 1981, P.5). If counselors are asked to observe a student's behavior in the classroom, the report should reflect only observable data and not the counselor's personal opinions.
5. If a student has revealed information that indicates a violation of South Carolina laws regarding child welfare and/or protection, then the counselor must inform the appropriate authorities, which may include parents, school authorities and law enforcement agencies. Ethical standards do not supersede the law!

6. When a student has revealed information that indicates involvement in an activity that is likely to bring HARM to himself/herself or to someone else, the counselor should: (a) try to persuade the student to discontinue the activity and (b) explain the counselor's responsibility to inform appropriate authorities about the situation without revealing the student's identity. If steps (a) and (b) do not deter the student, the counselor is ethically bound to (c) take reasonable personal action to inform responsible authorities and/or parents. However, depending on the nature of the situation, the student's name may have to be revealed to the authorities and/or parents as soon as the counselor is aware of the situation. The authorities (parents, school, legal, community) will be determined by the context of the situation and the counselor's judgement of which authorities will best serve the needs of the student. When action is taken in (c) the counselor needs to make a dated written record in the confidential file.
  7. If the counselor is subpoenaed to testify in a legal proceeding but does not wish to reveal information to protect the student's best interests, the counselor may: (a) become an agent of the student's attorney (that is, by revealing the student's case, the counselor may invoke the attorney-client privilege; the attorney must raise the privilege in court for the counselor to be protected by it) and (b) request that the information be received in the judge's chamber rather than in open court. Neither of these options guarantees the counselor's privilege not to reveal information. Again, ethical codes do not supersede the law.
  8. When parents or school personnel request information revealed in the counseling relationship by the student, the counselor would first consider the student's right to privacy. If, in the counselor's judgement, significant others have a need to know, and revealing information would be in the student's best interest, the counselor should respond by discussing, with these caring adults, what they can do or refrain from doing to help the student. In this way the student's communications are still confidential.

In summary, the counselor-student relationship is private and requires compliance with confidentiality standards. School counselors, however, work with minors and their legal responsibility is generally to the parents, whereas their ethical responsibility may be more to the student. Many times the legal and ethical requirements are not always in agreement, thus placing the counselor in a precarious position that must be balanced to ensure the rights of students and at the same time ensure the rights of the parents. Applying ethical standards to practical situations is difficult because the students are minors in most cases. Moreover, there exists an ethical-legal responsibility to the school district. In reviewing the literature relating to confidentiality, it is recommended that students should have control over the release of information that results from their choosing to engage the counseling process, and the student can bring suit against the counselor for revealing confidential information without his/her permission. Counselors must become familiar with local, state, and federal laws as well as following the professional guidelines for their code of ethics.

SECTION IV

Program Development Cycle

A South Carolina Comprehensive Guidance & Counseling Program Model in a district or school should be designed to meet locally identified needs and goals and to make optimal use of available resources. Implementing a comprehensive guidance program means different things depending on situations at the local level. It might mean developing a new program, strengthening an existing program, or redirecting existing resources into a revamped program. A process for tailoring the program model to suit a local situation is outlined in this section. The process is presented as a Program Development Cycle that requires five separate steps: organizing, planning, designing, implementing, and evaluating. These steps are illustrated and highlighted.

Each of the suggested steps is important and should be taken; however, varying the order or taking some steps simultaneously may better suit a district's or school's needs. An outline of the steps is presented first followed by a brief description of each step.

Program Development Cycle

1. ORGANIZING

- a. Commit to action.
- b. Identify leadership for the program improvement efforts.

2. PLANNING

- a. Adopt the comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program model and the program development process to be used.
- b. Understand the four components that comprise the delivery system.
- c. Assess the current program.
- d. Develop appropriate statements of mission and philosophy/rationale.
- e. Outline the program development process.

3. DESIGNING

- a. Establish the desired program design.
  - (1) Assess student, school, and community needs.
  - (2) Define the program specifically.
  - (3) Quantify the desired program balance.
- b. Publish the program standards.
- c. Plan the transition to the desired program.
  - (1) Compare/contrast the current program with the desired program both quantitatively and qualitatively.
  - (2) Establish goals for change.
- d. Develop and implement a master plan for change implementation.

4. IMPLEMENTING

- a. Make the program transition.
  - (1) Formally adopt a written comprehensive guidance and counseling program.
  - (2) Develop strategies for dealing with concerns as part of the transition process.
  - (3) In-service administrators, teachers, and constituents regarding the program and its benefits.
  - (4) Establish standards for guidance facilities that include appropriate space, privacy, equipment/technology, and necessary instructional and financial resources.
  - (5) Assure district-level counselor supervision is provided by personnel who have a professional background in school counseling.
  - (6) Identify and establish appropriate counselor/student ratios necessary for program implementation.
  - (7) Identify and reassign non-guidance duties currently performed by counselors that are barriers to program implementation.
- b. Design program needs and prioritize activities. With newly established priorities, activities will be developed and implemented in the improvement and expansion of the total guidance program. These new activities should be:
  - (1) carefully planned,
  - (2) based on the needs assessment information and the program goals, and
  - (3) have clearly stated comprehensive and developmental learning goals, student standards, and counselor strategies.

5. EVALUATING

- a. Program Evaluation.
- b. Counselor Evaluation.
- c. Assure counselor competency.

1. Organizing

a. Commit to action

For change to occur, a commitment to action must be made by both administrative and counselor leaders. If district-wide changes are sought, the school board, the school district's top-level management, and the guidance staff must support the efforts and decisions that will promote changes.

b. Identify leadership for the program improvement efforts

Those who will be most affected by the potential changes and those who have an investment in the guidance program should lead the program improvement process.

A steering committee must be formed to guide the guidance and counseling program development process. Suggested representation for the committee could include district-level personnel, local school administrators and counselors, business and community leaders, parents, and students.

2. Planning

- a. Adopt the comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program model and the program development process to be used.

This step begins the process of specifying locally relevant content for the local guidance program. The South Carolina Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program model includes three content areas as the foundation for the program. These provide a baseline for specifying local guidance program content.

- Learning to Live (Personal/Social)
- Learning to Learn (Academic)
- Learning to Work (Career)

Student standards and competency indicators are presented. As guidance program development efforts get under way, a thorough understanding of the broad scope of the student standards, competencies, and counselor strategies for student achievement is needed.

- b. Understand the four components that comprise the delivery system.
  - guidance curriculum
  - individual planning
  - responsive services
  - system support

c. Assess the current program.

- Conduct a thorough study of the current program.

Whether the program development effort is being conducted to create a new program or to strengthen or redirect an existing program, this step must be taken. Even in schools or districts without counselors, guidance is provided for students.

This step entails determining the actual design of, the established priorities in, and the resources available to the current guidance program. Begin with a study of the written guidance plan and of the actual implementation of the program. Data should be gathered in light of the comprehensive guidance program model to facilitate comparison with data describing the desired program design. That is, identify the allocation of resources to each of the four program components and the priorities established within each component. These data also facilitate the identification of resources currently allocated to the program, and are also useful as improvement decisions are made.

Examples of useful data to be gathered and analyzed:

Useful Data	Data Collection Method
Standards met	Activity review
Activities conducted	Activity review
Populations served (e.g., students, parents, teachers, other school staff)	Survey
Use of counselor's time and talent	Time/task study
Responsibilities of other personnel	Job descriptions
Budget	Budget study
Materials & Equipment	Inventory
Facilities	Inventory

d. Develop appropriate statements of mission and philosophy/rationale.

The program mission statement includes identification of the populations to be served through the program (students, parents, teachers, administrators), the basic content of the program (content areas and goals), and the organization of the program delivery system (guidance curriculum, responsive services, individual planning system, and system support).

The philosophy/rationale for the guidance and counseling program includes belief statements based on the student, school, and community needs. At the district level, the philosophy may be generalized, while at the school level it may be more specific.

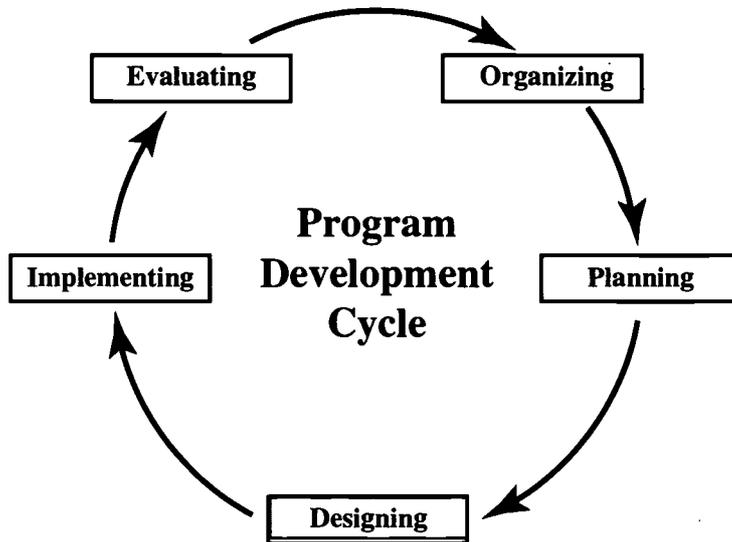

Listing basic assumptions which undergird the operation of the program may be beneficial. These might include recognition of the school counselors' professional training and competencies. A statement can be included that explains the importance of the guidance program to the total school curriculum.

e. Outline the program development process

To design or redesign a comprehensive guidance and counseling program, the time frame should be anticipated in the five phases as follows:

1. Organizing
2. Planning
3. Designing
4. Implementing
5. Evaluating

3. Designing

a. Establish the desired program design.

- Assess student, school, and community needs.
- Define the program specifically.

Qualitative and quantitative data should be considered in defining the program. The quantitative design states numerically the shape of the program and depicts the quantity of resources allocated.

The qualitative design describes the following:

Component:

- descriptive definition and statement of priorities.

Content:

- competencies; goals; objectives; and grade level priorities.

Populations:

- students/category (e.g., developmental, prevention, intervention), adults (e.g., teachers, parents, administrators, other specialists); and priorities for service established.

Staff Roles:

- staff/category and competencies; and priorities established for use of competencies.

Activities:

- list of specific activities/components that represent the minimum level of service.

Preliminary activities are essential to establishing program priorities. A suggested format for determining priorities is presented.

- Quantify the desired program balance.

Philosophical priorities are implemented through the allocation of resources. Resources are finite and it seems that students', parents', teachers', and others' needs for the services are infinite. Thus, it is important to establish a concrete and measurable guide for the allocation of often scant guidance program resources.

- b. Publish the program standards.

The document should include the rationale, assumptions, and definition of the program and the job descriptions for the various guidance program staff members. The more concrete it is, the more useful it is to all staff involved in the guidance program. The substeps in this step are self-explanatory:

- Write
- Print
- Get administrative/board approval
- Distribute to counselors, principals, others with an interest/investment in the guidance program

- c. Plan the transition to the desired program.

- Compare/contrast the current program with the desired program both quantitatively & qualitatively.

Through the data collected regarding the current program, information is available about the program balance, about the use of counselors' time, students served, and the competencies addressed, etc. Through the designing process, comparative information does become available. The gaps between the two programs (the actual and the envisioned) need to be identified, compared, and contrasted.

- Establish goals for change.

- d. Develop & implement a master plan for change implementation.

List tasks to implement change.

Identify allocated or additional human, financial, and/or political resources needed to effect changes, for example, improvements in:

Human Resources

- Counselor-to-student ratios
- Clerical assistance
- Other professional personnel

Financial Resources

- Supplies, materials, and equipment budgets
- Facilities development
- Extended contracts; improved salaries
- Funding for special emphases

Political Resources

- Advisory committee
- Updated policies and procedures

Develop a realistic time line for accomplishing the tasks and meeting the resource needs.

This time frame may entail short- and long-term goals, e.g.,

- 1-Year Plan
- 3-Year Plan
- 5-Year Plan

4. Implementing

a. Make the program transition.

- Formally adopt a written comprehensive guidance and counseling program.
- Develop strategies for dealing with concerns as part of the transition process.
- In-service administrators, teachers, and constituents regarding the program and its benefits.
- Establish standards for guidance facilities that include appropriate space, privacy, equipment/technology, and necessary instructional and financial resources.
- Assure district-level counselor supervision is provided by personnel who have a professional background in school counseling.
- Identify and establish appropriate counselor/student ratios necessary for program implementation.
- Identify and reassign non-guidance duties currently performed by counselors that are barriers to program implementation.

b. Design program needs and prioritize activities.

With newly established priorities, activities will be developed and implemented in the improvement and expansion of the total guidance program. These new activities should be:

- Carefully planned,
- based on the needs assessment information and the program goals, and
- have clearly stated comprehensive and developmental learning goals, student standards, and counselor strategies.

5. Evaluating

Evaluation is a process for determining the effectiveness of the guidance and counseling program. The purpose of evaluation is to provide data and a vehicle for drawing conclusions and making decisions, recommendations and plans to improve and revise the guidance and counseling program and the personnel implementing the program. The evaluation process should be systematic, comprehensive and ongoing.

a. Program Evaluation

There are various methods and levels for evaluation of guidance programs to “be accountable.” It is important to develop guidelines that suggest monitoring attainment of program standards as an appropriate approach to accountability through evaluation. Evaluation has and will continue to occur throughout the Program Development Cycle (planning, designing, and implementing stages). The evaluation process must provide for on-going assessment of student needs, attainment of objectives, goals, and benchmarks for standards and allocation to the changing needs of students.

b. Counselor Evaluation

The purpose of counselor evaluation is to ensure continuous growth and improvement of the guidance and counseling program and to ensure that the program serves all students. Counselor evaluation, just like the program evaluation, needs to be a process. The evaluation process should include principles of sound and appropriate evaluation, reflect current techniques in effective guidance and counseling skills, and reflect the district job description of school counselors. The counselor evaluation process should allow for flexibility and individuality in the implementation of the comprehensive guidance and counseling program to better meet the needs of individual students as well as producing a program to serve all students.

Counselor evaluation should make appropriate use of the school counselor's job guidelines and ethical standards. It is important to provide professional development for school counselors because it provides opportunities for counselors to renew and upgrade their knowledge and skills.

Counselor evaluation should be based on the counselor's performance in implementing the comprehensive development guidance and counseling program and according to the job guidelines. Administrators must support and assist counselors in implementing a comprehensive development guidance and counseling program.

Development of a statement of the objectives of counselor evaluation is an important part of the total evaluation process. Following are some examples of possible objectives which should be included in the evaluation plan:

- The evaluation instrument reflects the counselor's job description and/or counselor's competence.
- The counselor is evaluated in terms of program implementation.
- Commend areas of strength.
- Identify areas for improvement and develop a plan for improvement and support.
- The counselor being evaluated has a number of observations by and conferences with the evaluator.
- Provide a system for encouraging counselor self-improvement and professional development opportunities and support.
- Encourage counselor accountability in the implementation of the comprehensive guidance and counseling program.
- Encourage professional development opportunities for faculty, staff, and administrators in understanding the role of the counselor in implementing a comprehensive guidance and counseling program.

c. Assure counselor competency.

- Identify needs and resources for staff development
- Clarify the role of the counselor to assure implementation of the comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program.
- Orient new counselors regarding program standards, guidelines, and implementation strategies.
- Evaluate staff using counseling related criteria and standards.
- Promote, provide, and support opportunities for professional growth.

A Model for Program/Curriculum Development

Guidance Curriculum Standards for Student Development

The purpose of a comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program in a school setting is to promote and enhance the learning process. To that end, a comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program facilitates student development in three broad areas:

LEARNING TO LIVE                    (Personal/Social Development)

The development of personal/social standards is an integral part of an individual's pursuit of success in life. To understand and respect self, relate positively to others, make informed and safe decisions, cope effectively with change, and become responsible citizens are essential to this process.

The content standards for personal/social development provide the foundation for personal growth. They enhance the personal, social, educational, and career development of the individual. Students acquire skills to foster relationships with self, others, the family, and the community.

LEARNING TO LEARN                    (Academic Development)

The development of academic and educational standards is an integral part of an individual's pursuit of life long learning. Being able to achieve educational success, identify and work toward goals, manage information, organize time, and locate resources are essential to this process.

The content standards for academic development guide the student to get the most out of each learning situation. The student experiences success and maximizes educational potential through effort and commitment to producing high quality work. Academic development includes desired learning goals that require the student to have a command of decision-making, problem-solving, goal-setting, critical thinking, logical reasoning, and interpersonal communication skills.

LEARNING TO WORK                    (Career Development)

The development of career standards is an integral part of an individual's pursuit of success in the world of work. Being able to develop the knowledge and skills to make realistic career plans, make a successful transition from school to work, achieve interdependence, and compete in a global economy are essential to this process.

The content standards for career development provide the foundation for the development of skills that assist students in making a successful transition from school to the world of work, and from job-to-job, across the life career span.

Student Standards Organized by Student Development Areas

Standards in the Learning to Live (Personal/Social Development) area provide the foundation for personal growth and enhance the academic and career development of the student in PreKindergarten through grade 12.

LEARNING TO LIVE
(Personal/Social Development)

- Students will understand and appreciate self.
- Students will understand and respect others.
- Students will understand and appreciate home and family.
- Students will develop a sense of community.
- Students will make decisions, set goals, and take actions.
- Students will develop safety and survival skills.

The Learning to Learn (Academic Development) area includes standards that require students in Pre-Kindergarten through grade 12 to have a command of decision-making, problem-solving, goal-setting, critical thinking, logical reasoning, and interpersonal communication skills.

Standards in this area guide the student to maximize each learning situation. The student experiences success and enhances educational potential through effort and commitment to producing high-quality work.

LEARNING TO LEARN
(Academic Development)

- Students will develop personal qualities that contribute to being an effective learner.
- Students will employ strategies to achieve school success.
- Students will understand the interrelationship of life in the school, home, community, and society.

Business and industry recognize the need for students to make successful transitions from school to work. Whether students choose to continue their education after high school or enter the work force, essential employment skills are necessary. The Learning to Work (Career Development) area includes standards that target a positive attitude toward work. This area emphasizes the development of skills which will enable students in PreKindergarten through grade 12 to make a successful transition from school to the world of work, and from job to job, across the life career span.

The National Career Development Guidelines, developed by the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee (NOICC), represent a national effort to develop guidelines for career development at all levels. The NOICC guidelines are a competency-based approach to planning quality career guidance and counseling programs. These guidelines are compatible with the National Standards for School Counseling Programs developed by the American School Counselor Association.

LEARNING TO WORK
(Career Development)

Students will understand the relationships among personal qualities, education and training, and the world of work.

Students will demonstrate decision-making, goal-setting, problem-solving and communication skills.

Students will explore careers and the connection of school to work.

Students will demonstrate a positive attitude toward work and the ability to work together.

Students will understand how community awareness relates to work.

The National Standards for School Counseling Programs, developed by the American School Counseling Association, have been incorporated with South Carolina's Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program, Student Standards Organized by Student Development Areas.

Guidelines for Evaluating a Comprehensive Developmental Guidance and Counseling Program

Rationale and Purpose

Evaluation is a critical component of a comprehensive developmental guidance and counseling program and ensures accountability. The purpose of evaluation is to determine the value of the program, its activities, and staff in order to make decisions or take actions regarding the future. The evaluation will measure the delivery of services (the process evaluation) and outcomes (product evaluation). This ongoing process provides information to ensure continuous improvement of the guidance program and gives direction to necessary changes.

Evaluation is a process that includes eight steps:

- stating the evaluation questions,
- determining the audiences/uses for the evaluation,
- gathering data to answer the questions,
- applying the predetermined standards,
- drawing conclusions,
- considering the context,
- making recommendations, and
- acting on the recommendations.

Counselors and the counseling program play a vital role in assisting teachers and other staff in the integration of school guidance objectives with other instructional goals and objectives. Therefore, the evaluation should be a collaborative effort among all those involved in the program. Evaluation activities enable counselors and others to

- determine the impact of the guidance program on students, faculty, parents, and school climate;
- identify accomplished goals;
- identify effective components of the program;
- eliminate or improve less effective components of the program;
- adapt and refine the guidance program and implementation process;
- identify consequences of the program (both positive and negative);
- identify other areas that need to be addressed;
- establish goals for the counselors' professional development;
- determine staffing needs and workload adjustments;
- determine additional resources required to adequately carry forward the program;
- provide accountability information to educators and the community.

Basis of the Evaluation

The program definition and design provides clear standards for evaluation of both the program and the staff. The program definition identifies the students, persons, and groups served by the program; identifies the competencies acquired as a result of participation in the program; and describes the organization of the program delivery system. The definition also dictates the appropriate roles for the school counselor, as well as the job description particulars for carrying out each counselor's specific responsibilities. The design outlines the program's structure and priorities including the identification of students' primary outcomes to be achieved, and the establishment of weightings for resource allocation.

Questions to Be Answered Through Evaluation

In this section, four categories of evaluation questions are suggested as a minimum number for evaluating the effectiveness of the comprehensive guidance program.

1. Have effective program improvements been made?
2. Does the program meet and/or exceed the program standards?
3. Have students become competent in the high-priority content areas?
4. Are counselors performing their roles?

At the local level, additional questions may be generated.

Considerations for answering the four categories of questions in evaluating the comprehensive guidance program and the school counselor staff are provided below.

1. Have effective program improvements been made?

Program improvement identifies the objectives and strategies to be accomplished through implementation of a list of tasks within an expressed timeline. It provides a basis for determining whether the objectives and the timelines were met. Further, it supports judgments as to the effectiveness of the improvements in attaining goals and provides the basis for the next set of program improvements.

As a result of designing program improvements, new expectations for counselor performance emerge. These expectations form the basis for the setting of professional growth goals by school counselors. Similar to program improvement plans, professional growth plans establish the objectives for developing specific skills or knowledge, identify the strategies for attaining the objectives, and specify the time lines.

2. Does the program meet and/or exceed the program standards?

A fully implemented and supported guidance program will have a measurable impact on students, parents, faculty, and the school climate. Data collection and analysis will describe the level of implementation of the program, the effectiveness of the guidance program, and the level of goal attainment.

The program standards can be categorized into two types: (a) qualitative design standards and (b) quantitative design standards. Examples of qualitative design standards for each component of the guidance program are:

- Guidance Curriculum: The specific curriculum standards to be emphasized, the specific competencies to be developed, and the age-appropriate outcomes to be reached by students.
- Responsive Services: The systematic and timely response to requests from students.
- Individual Planning: The listing of activities that facilitate individual planning at all grade levels.
- System Support: The listing of activities and programs that best meet the school community's needs and use the counselors' professional skills.

Examples of quantitative design standards are the same for each component of the guidance program. The standards are expressed in terms of (a) the numbers of students/staff/parents served by each program component, (b) the percentage of counselor time allocated to each component, and (c) the amount of time counselors use each of their professional competencies.

A data-gathering process is indicated in order to ascertain whether the program standards have been met. Assessment by pre-activity versus post-activity comparisons, short answer questionnaires, essays, improved attendance, scores and grades, and improved student behaviors provides quantitative data. Attitude surveys, verbal feedback, parent and teacher observations, case studies, and checklists provide qualitative data about the impact of the program.

Data to demonstrate implementation of the guidance curriculum activities might include information about the guidance curriculum schedule, the number of students and classes that received services, and the demonstrated standards achieved by the students.

Responsive services performed by the counselor may include a tally of students seen individually and in groups, the kinds of concerns they had, and the number of referrals to other agencies and alternative programs. The number of parent consultations and the kinds of concerns also should be collected. Information regarding client satisfaction and time lapse between request and follow-through is useful in determining the optimum student/counselor ratio.

Individual planning can be demonstrated by listing the types of information and activities provided for each grade level, and the student plans and/or schedules that result from those activities.

System support can be demonstrated by a listing of involvement in school-wide or district-wide activities; the number of clients served; the kinds of consultation provided and level of satisfaction; and the individual professional development plan developed by the counselor.

3. Have students become competent in the high priority content areas?

Evaluating student competency development in a guidance program is critical to keeping the program efforts on target and efficient while making the best use of the resources available. Effective evaluation should include needs assessment and development of standards and competencies by grade level, and objectives for specific activities.

Methods of Data Generation

The measurement of students' learning in a guidance program can be done both quantitatively and/or qualitatively. Data can be gathered both formally and informally. The measurement technique must be appropriate to the objective being measured.

Learning Domain	The Measurement Technique
Cognitive	Tests: objective, true-false, multiple choice, matching, short answers, essays, academic grades
Affective	Structured reaction questionnaires, open-ended questions, ratings, checklists, rankings, multiple choice, inventories, art work, attitude surveys

Other methods that can be used to gather multifaceted data about student growth include case studies, pretest-post-test comparisons, participant-nonparticipant (control group) comparisons, goal-attainment scaling, and follow-up studies.

4. Are counselors performing their roles?

The quality of the guidance program is inextricably linked with the performance of the school counselor. Therefore, counselor performance evaluation is critical to the improvement and maintenance of the comprehensive guidance program. The comprehensive guidance program framework also includes standards for the counselor's job performance, expressed in the roles of the professional school counselor and in each counselor's specific job description in the local program.

Using the counselor's job description as a guide, a relevant performance evaluation system and instrument should be used. School counselors should be appropriately supervised. Whenever possible, evaluations of school counselors' performance should be the responsibility of certified counselors or someone specifically trained in school counselor supervision and evaluation.

The goal of performance evaluation is for each staff member to reach optimum competence in using their professional skills. Delineating these skills and using them as indicators of quality performance are critical to meaningful counselor evaluation. Based on the standards and on observable and measurable behaviors, counselors' performance is rated from: Needs Improvement, Satisfactory, or Exceptionally Well Done.

As with the other kinds of evaluation, the purpose of a counselor performance evaluation system and the evaluation instrument is to provide the data and the vehicle for drawing conclusions and making decisions/recommendations/plans. A primary use of a counselor performance evaluation is to identify competencies that are strong and those that need strengthening for each counselor, with the latter becoming targets for professional growth plans.

A counselor performance evaluation is based on roles and related competencies needed to implement a comprehensive guidance program. The evaluation instrument used should be tailored to fit the local guidance program and designated roles and responsibilities of the counselors.

Outline for counselor performance evaluation:

- State the evaluation question.
- Determine the audience and uses for the evaluation.
- Gather data to answer the questions.
- Apply predetermined standards.
- Draw conclusions.
- Consider the context.
- Make recommendations.
- Act on recommendations to address performance improvement.

Audience/Uses for the Evaluation

Once questions to be answered by the evaluation have been developed, the next step in the evaluation process is to determine who will receive the evaluation results and who will use the evaluation results.

The evaluation results should be reported to:

- those who have been recipients of the program such as students, parents, and teachers;
- those who have implemented the program such as counselors and guidance program managers;
- those who have administered or set policy such as administrators, superintendents, school board members;
- those who have supported the program, either financially or personally such as taxpayers, volunteers, and community groups.

Evaluation results should be used to make further program improvements. Counselors and administrators will use the results to make modifications to the program and to compare the implemented program with the program standards. Administrators and policymakers will utilize the evaluation to make decisions about the content, quality, and effectiveness of the services and to allocate financial and staffing resources for the program. They also will utilize the information to describe the program to the community or to seek the community's support for program improvements.

Conclusion

In summary, evaluation is a process of program renewal that begins with the development of questions to be answered by the evaluation and ends with making and acting on the recommendations generated by the findings. An evaluation

- is based on explicitly stated standards;
- uses data to answer the evaluation questions;
- draws conclusions after analyzing the data and the context in which the data was gathered;
- answers questions about the effectiveness of the whole guidance program and of the four individual components of the program;
- provides the basis for making decisions about future program improvements and directions.

Accountability Instruments Counselors Can Use

Accountability instruments must be chosen carefully with consideration for the type of accountability data that will be produced. School counselors have a variety of choices:

- Surveys are data collection tools to solicit answers to questions from participants. A survey can ask questions or take measurements. Surveys may be done with parents, teachers, school staff, and community members. They may be school-oriented or for the use of the professional association. Surveys are classified by the method of gathering information: personal interview, telephone interview, mail questionnaire, panel or a combination of methods.
- Qualitative Questionnaires are used to measure a participant's opinion after an activity or intervention, such as a series of group counseling sessions. Qualitative research seems to obtain information about the quality of a program or service. Questionnaires vary in length and format and may include open-ended questions.
- Case Studies constitute a brief description of a particular counseling case, interventions used and results obtained. It is important to maintain the confidentiality of student names and particular details which might identify the student. Case studies assist school counselors to improve their counseling techniques and to serve as examples of school counselors' effectiveness.
- Behavioral Observations are planned in advance and usually refer to behaviors that can be observed and are most likely counted. Informal observations may consist of a running account of what a particular student is doing in class. Formal behavioral observations may be made by using a checklist and looking for particular behaviors that will qualify a student for a special program.
- Needs Assessments are conducted to determine specific needs, in terms of school counseling programs and services.
- Self-Audit is a specialized needs assessment where an audit is used as a self-appraisal instrument to determine strengths and weaknesses. The American School Counselor Association has prepared three self-audits (available at ASCA headquarters) for elementary, middle, and secondary school levels.
- Experimental (Quantitative) research designs include many variations of pre-test and post-test assessments where a cause or independent variable is present in the study. This type of research is used effectively to measure change as a result of counseling in areas such as classroom behavioral interventions, small group interventions and individual counseling interventions.
- Biographical or Portfolio Data may be collected during an interview, from a written form or from student work samples. School counselors use this type of data to write college and scholarship recommendations.

Accountability Data

School counselors gather data from many sources to use in evaluating the effectiveness of counseling programs. Accountability data is often used by school counselors on a daily basis. Some practical and accessible sources of accountability data include:

- School Counselor Logs are used to record data on the amount of time spent in a variety of guidance and counseling activities.
- School Counselor Record Forms provide data on types of counseling interventions and referrals.
- Appointment Sheets indicate the number of students seen on a daily basis and the length of time for each appointment.
- Student Profiles show student progress toward achieving standard, graduation, or college requirements; career/life planning; and student activities.
- Student Records such as student transcripts and cumulative folders include grades, test scores, health data and sometimes teacher reports.
- Standard Test Scores indicate student achievement in relation to local, state and national norms.
- Student Assessment Portfolios provide samples of student work and major projects undertaken for course or graduation requirements.
- Anecdotal Records are brief comments on a particular counseling case.

Needs Assessment

A needs assessment instrument is a locally developed survey intended to provide information for evaluation or change of the guidance program. A properly developed instrument allows the community, parents, students, and staff to give feedback to program managers or department supervisors as to the degree they need and/or value various components of the total guidance program and services.

The results may be used to establish priority, eliminate or create services as suggested by the needs analysis. They may be used to emphasize different components at different levels.

An additional benefit of the needs analysis or assessment process is one of informing the population we serve regarding the scope of our services. Many are surprised and enlightened by the items appearing on the survey as they did not associate that service with the guidance department.

Some cautions in developing a needs assessment:

1. Include only items that you are willing to deliver.
2. Use statistically acceptable means of sampling.
3. Solicit help if needed to analyze results and make conclusions from the data that are statistically valid.
4. Keep surveys simple to understand and complete to promote a high return rate.
5. Use a five-point rating scale to help differentiate opinion. Provide self-addressed, stamped envelopes for return.
6. Make sure the needs assessment instrument is designed to give you the types of information needed for change.
7. Pilot the instrument with a small sample to test it for accuracy and comprehension.
8. If the population is small, try to assess everyone. If under 500, try for at least a 20 percent return.
9. Consider use of computer or scan scoring of data.
10. Make sure all communications are attractive and professional in appearance.

A sample follows that may serve as the core of a needs assessment for your district or school. In addition to the comments and cautions listed above, you should take particular care to consider this to be the basic model, without adornment. School districts and/or schools may want, or even need, to include additional items to adequately assess their particular situation.

Be cautious in development so that a needs assessment will not “lock you in” to a specific service delivery option (i.e., curriculum, night program, consultation, etc.).
