ABSTRACT    Based on Ken Kesey's novel "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," this lesson plan presents activities designed to help students understand that all works of art lend themselves to critical reviews; critical reviews consist of opinions and support for the opinions; and a critical review may compare and contrast a work in one medium to the same work in another medium. The main activity of the lesson involves students writing a critical review of the film based on the novel using the compare/contrast format. It includes objectives, materials, procedures, adaptations, discussion questions, evaluation methods, extension activities, annotations of suggested readings and web links, vocabulary, and related academic standards and benchmarks addressed in the lesson plan. The lesson plan also contains a description of a video clip related to the lesson, comprehension questions related to the video clip, and answers to those comprehension questions. (RS)
TITLE OF LESSON PLAN:
One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest

LENGTH OF LESSON: Two class periods

GRADE LEVEL: 9-12

SUBJECT AREA: Literature

OBJECTIVES: Students will understand the following:

1. All works of art lend themselves to critical reviews.

2. Critical reviews consist of opinions and support for the opinions.

3. A critical review may compare and contrast a work in one medium to the same work in another medium.

MATERIALS:
For this lesson, you will need:

The novel One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest

The video release of the 1975 movie One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest, directed by Milos Foreman and starring Jack Nicholson and Louise Fletcher

PROCEDURE:

1. After students have finished reading One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest and you have conducted your final lesson on the work as a novel, initiate a general class discussion about novels that have been made into movies. Give students an opportunity to vent their opinions about when movies are more effective than novels and when movies do not capture the essence of a novel. Introduce the project of comparing and contrasting the movie version of One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest to the novel.

2. Show the video One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest in parts as best fits your class schedule, giving students a chance between parts to discuss differences from and similarities to the written source of the video.
3. Ask students to tell what they know about critical reviews in general. Help them realize the following:

- A reviewer may write about literature, movies, plays, exhibits of artwork, television shows, concerts, and other forms of art.
- Reviews appear in many venues: they are published in newspapers and magazines, orally delivered on television and radio, and can be found online.

4. Consider teaching or reviewing with your students that a review can have three parts:

- A summary or description of the work under review with a general statement of the reviewer's opinion about the work
- An evaluation of specific elements (for a movie, the elements include, among others, plot, script, acting, directing, camera work, scenery and costumes, and special effects)
- A conclusion that recommends the reader experience the work of art—or not

5. Add to the preceding that in reviewing a movie based on a novel, the reviewer may comment throughout the review on the success or failure of the adaptation. Remind students of the organizational options when writing a comparison-contrast:

- The block method, in which the writer gives all the information about one item (the movie) and then all the information about the other item (the novel)
- The alternating method, in which the writer focuses on one feature—say, humor—of each item before going on to focus on another feature—say, narrative technique

You may also remind students of the transitions that help a reader in a piece of comparison-contrast writing:

also although however likewise
on the contrary
similarly

6. Advise students to apply the writing process to their reviews—going through prewriting (perhaps using a chart to collect notes about the movie), drafting (selecting a tone), and revising (making sure enough details support each generalization; replacing vague words such as good, poor, weak, and strong).

ADAPTATIONS:

If you have studied the novel with younger students, you may opt to show students one scene from the movie so that as a class you can compare and contrast it to the corresponding scene in the novel.
DISCUSSION QUESTIONS:

1. The main conflict in One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest is described in three different ways: as the struggle of the “sane individual vs. a crazy institution,” “man vs. machine,” and “a primeval, wild, unsocialized, anti-family form of masculinity vs. asexual women, institutions, and society that want to tame it.” Discuss how these views differ from one another. Choose the theme that you think most accurately describes the conflict in the book and explain why.

2. Compare Ken Kesey's concept of the Combine—as demonstrated by President Eisenhower's policies, and corporate America's views on an efficient, well-organized, and compliant society—with Chief Bromden's concept of the Combine—an all-powerful, all-seeing secret group in the mental hospital, which watches and controls everything.

3. During the mid-1960s Kesey and his group, the Merry Pranksters, referred to those in their counterculture as being “on the bus.” Describe what you think it means to be “on the us.” Is this concept different in the late-1990s than it was in the mid-1960s? Who and what in today's world are “on the bus” or “off the bus?”

4. Kesey states that One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest helps the reader to “question reality” by “tearing away the fabric of what we've been told is reality and showing us something that is far more real.” Do you agree with Kesey's analysis of his book? Select a scene or two that does or does not effectively accomplish this.

5. Describe Chief Bromden. Why do you think that Kesey chose him to be the narrator of the book?

6. The Merry Pranksters and the Grateful Dead epitomize the rebellious generation of the 1960s. Is there a contemporary equivalent to this phenomenon? Why or why not?

EVALUATION:

You can evaluate students' reviews using the following three-point rubric:

- Three points: very well organized and highly coherent review; more than enough examples to support overall opinion of the movie; no errors in grammar, usage, and mechanics

- Two points: well-organized and coherent review; enough examples to support overall opinion of the movie; some errors in grammar, usage, and mechanics

- One point: weakly organized review, lacking coherence in parts; not enough examples to support overall opinion of the movie; many errors in grammar, usage, and mechanics

You can ask your students to contribute to the assessment rubric by determining a minimum number of examples to be included to support the writer's overall opinion of the movie.
EXTENSION:

Nurse Ratched's Perspective

One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest is written from Chief Bromden's point of view. Have students choose a scene from the book, such as one of the group meetings or a confrontation between Nurse Ratched and McMurphy, and ask them to rewrite the scene from Nurse Ratched's point of view.

Treatments for Mental Health Patients

Instruct students to select and research a mental disorder—its causes, symptoms, and treatments. Possible disorders to research include the following:

- Clinical depression
- Manic depression (bipolar disorder)
- Schizophrenia
- Obsessive-compulsive disorder
- Multiple personalities disorder

Students should compare today's treatments to those presented in One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest. Ask students to present their findings orally and to use visual aids in their presentations.

VOCABULARY:

combine
A combination especially of business or political interests. Also, a harvesting machine that heads, threshes, and cleans grain while moving over a field.
Context:
In Chief Bromden's mind, the world is run by an all-powerful, all-seeing secret group—the Combine.

existentialism
A philosophical movement embracing diverse doctrines but centering on analysis of individual existence in an unfathomable universe and the plight of the individual who must assume ultimate responsibility for his acts of free will without any certain knowledge of what is right or wrong or good or bad.
Context:
The Merry Pranksters and the hippies had some ideas of what existentialism was about.

lobotomy
Surgical severance of nerve fibers connecting the frontal lobes to the thalamus for the relief of some mental disorders.
Context:
Lobotomy—the ultimate horror in Psychiatry. During one procedure common in the 1940s, a long tool, very much like an ice pick, was driven through the top of the eye sockets into the brain, into the frontal lobes, and then wiggled about to disconnect the cellular wiring.

psychotic
Affected with a fundamental mental derangement characterized by defective or lost contact with reality.
Context:
Releasing mental patients from hospitals led to the bizarre phenomenon of having the street full of psychotic, untreated people.
schizophrenia
A psychotic disorder characterized by loss of contact with the environment, by noticeable deterioration in the level of functioning in everyday life, and by disintegration of personality expressed as disorder of feeling, thought (as in hallucinations and delusions), and conduct.

Context:
Both schizophrenia and LSD impair the brain's ability to distinguish whether impulses are coming from outside—out there in reality—or from inside—from the workings of one's own mind.
