INTRODUCTION

Effective evidence-based action requires getting the right data into the right hands at the right time to help make decisions. The Data Quality Campaign (2011) has provided suggestions to state education agencies for effectively using data within state longitudinal data systems. One suggestion is to identify “the variety of ways available data can be used and the types of analyses required to answer critical policy questions” (p. 2). In addition to answering policy questions, publicly available data sources have the potential to assist educators, policy makers, and other education stakeholders in Hawai‘i with making evidence-based decisions related to education policy, programming, and support. As such, this document provides guidance to education researchers on how to access publicly available data sources, the questions that can be supported by the data sources, and the limitations of the data sources in order to support the advancement of education research and evidence-based decisionmaking in Hawai‘i.

HAWAI‘I-SPECIFIC, PUBLICLY-AVAILABLE DATA SOURCES

To identify available sources of publicly available data specific to Hawai‘i, REL Pacific researchers solicited recommendations from 2013 Annual Hawaii Partnership for Educational Research Consortium (HPERC) Symposium attendees. REL Pacific researchers examined the list provided by the symposium attendees to identify data sources that were publicly available, Hawai‘i-specific, and address at least one of HPERC’s nine research priority areas (see Appendix A for the methods used to vet the data sources for inclusion in this document). The nine HPERC priority areas are listed below (HPERC, 2013):

- Teacher training
- Technology-supported curriculum/use of technology in the classroom
- English language learner services and support
- Teacher evaluation
- Graduation rate
- Model schools/best practices
- NCLB requirement waivers/redefining school success
- Instructional time
- Special education services.

The data sources included in this document are divided into state and national data sources. Of the 11 state data sources, the Hawaii State Department of Education maintains four, Kamehameha Schools houses three, and the University of Hawai‘i (UH) manages four. For the national data sources, the Department of Education maintains two data sources, Department of Health and Human Services houses two data sources, the Department of Labor maintains one data source, the National Science Foundation maintains one data source, and the U.S. Census Bureau houses one data source, totaling seven national data sources. In total, in-depth information on 18 publicly available, Hawai'i-specific data sources that can be used by education researchers to address at least one of HPERC's nine research priority areas is provided in this document (see Appendix B for a table of the state and national data sources and the respective appendices for each).<sup>1</sup>

Information on each of the 18 Hawai'i-specific, publicly available data sources is summarized in the following section and further detailed at the end of this document. The terms used throughout this document are defined in table 1.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>The list of data sources does not represent all publicly available, Hawai'i-specific data sources that may be available to education researchers. The data sources included are specific to HPERC's research priority areas.

<sup>3</sup> There may be additional variables for the data sources discussed in this document. Variables were excluded from the tables in this document if they did not relate to one of the HPERC priority areas. Please go to the specific data source to access all variables for that data source.

REL Pacific researchers did not collect or retrieve any data for this project. Instead, researchers collected information related to the existing data from the suggested data sources. Therefore, issues of data quality (i.e., accuracy, reliability, and timeliness) were not explored in this project.

State Data Sources

Hawaii State Department of Education (HIDOE)

Accountability Data Center

The Accountability Data Center (ADC), housed within HIDOE’s Systems Accountability Office, is an interactive web portal that presents accountability data to the education community in Hawai‘i, including educators, parents, policy makers, researchers, and community partners (State of Hawaii Department of Education, 2010). The data housed at ADC addresses two HPERC research priority areas: No Child Left Behind (NCLB) requirement waivers/redefining school success and graduation rate.

The data are available at the state, complex area, complex, and school levels within three “data panels” within the website: AYP & NCLB Status (adequate yearly progress and No Child Left Behind), Proficiency, and Map. The variables within the AYP & NCLB Status and Proficiency panels are included in Appendix C. In addition to the variables provided, within the AYP & NCLB Status panel at the school level, NCLB status can be tracked over time by subject. School-level data also include graduation and retention data.

The data encompass the 2002–03 academic year through the 2012–13 academic year. However, “prior to 2007, achievement results are not straightforwardly comparable with results from 2007 through the current year. This is due to changes in content and performance standards and assessments based on those standards” (State of Hawaii Department of Education, 2010, Welcome section, 4th para.). A limited data dictionary is provided that defines some variables within the “Help” function. Additionally, there is information within the “Help” function on how to navigate the web portal and the capability to search for a particular keyword. One limitation is that the data are unavailable for download into a Microsoft Excel file. Data are displayed directly on the website, with options to filter different graphs by factors such as level of data (e.g., school, complex, complex area, state), subgroup, grade, school year, etc. Manual entry of the data into a Microsoft Excel file or statistical software is necessary to conduct analysis.

Data are provided online at <http://arch.k12.hi.us/datacenter/adc.html>. Comments and questions can be emailed to arch\_mail@notes.k12.hi.us.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the ADC include:

- What are the math, reading, and science proficiency rates by subgroup<sup>4</sup> for the past five academic years across the state of Hawai'i?
- Over the past ten years, how many high schools met their graduation targets for at least seven of those ten years?

College and Career Readiness Indicators Reports

The College and Career Readiness Indicators Reports (CCRIs) have been produced for each high school through a partnership between Hawai'i P–20, the HIDOE, the UH, and Kamehameha Schools (Hawai'i P–20 Partnership for Education, 2013). Indicators within the reports are based on recommendations from College- and Career-Ready Accountability Systems<sup>5</sup> (Achieve, Inc., 2014). Indicators were also chosen based on data availability. The CCRIs address one HPERC research priority area: graduation rate.

The CCRIs are provided at the state and school levels, starting with the graduating class of 2009 through the graduating class of 2012. The variables within each CCRI are included in Appendix D. Technical reports are available for each year, and provide detailed information of the indicators and data sources. A limitation is that the data are unavailable for download into a Microsoft Excel file, and are displayed in PDF reports. Manual entry of the data into a Microsoft Excel file or statistical software is necessary to conduct analysis.

The CCRIs are provided by graduating class at <http://www.p20hawaii.org/resources/>. Comments and questions can be emailed to Jean Osumi, Hawai'i P–20 Partnerships for Education, at josumi@hawaii.edu.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the CCRIs include:

- What type of diploma do graduates from Hawai'i high schools typically obtain?
- Has the primary type of diploma obtained changed from 2009–2012?
- What is the rate of Advanced Placement exam success (e.g., scoring 3 of 5 or better) from 2009–2013?

Hawaii Public Schools Reports for IDEA Part B

The HIDOE provides public reports on various topics related to finances, schools, special education, and state-level legislation (Hawaii Department of Education Reports, n.d.). Special education reports are related to the requirements of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) Part B, which requires state education agencies to provide special education and related services to students from ages 3 to 20. The available IDEA Part B reports can inform HPERC's special education services research priority area. The reports contain information on assessment, child count, discipline, dispute resolution, educational environment, exiting, and personnel (Hawaii Public School Reports, n.d.).

The variables related to each report are provided in Appendix E. The data encompasses the 2007–2008 through 2012–2013 academic years. All data are at the state level. Detailed information about how the data were derived can be found within each report. The data are available for download into Microsoft Word files for each report by academic year.

The reports can be found by academic year at <http://hidoereports.k12.hi.us/IDEAPartB/Pages/default.aspx>. No contact information is provided on the Hawaii Public Schools Reports website.

Research questions that could be answered using the data within the IDEA Part B reports include:

- What is the change in percentages of students with disabilities who participated in the Hawaii State Assessment without accommodations from the 2008–2009 academic year to the 2012–2013 academic year?
- Do types of disabilities differ across race/ethnicity for children ages 6–21?

Strive HI Performance System

The Strive HI Performance System (Strive HI) emerged in response to the U.S. Department of Education’s decision to allow states to apply for waivers releasing them from selected requirements of NCLB. The Hawaii Department of Education’s NCLB waiver was approved by the U.S. Department of Education in May 2013. Strive HI tracks schools’ performance and progress and is used to customize rewards, supports, and interventions for school improvement (Hawaii State Department of Education, n.d.). Strive HI data addresses two HPERC research priority areas: NCLB requirement waivers/redefining school success and graduation rate.

Strive HI contains school-level data that can be aggregated to various levels (e.g., complex, school type). Strive HI provides information on school success, on-time graduation rates, college and career readiness, and student achievement gaps. Strive HI also includes unique features, such as the Strive HI Index and five Strive HI Steps<sup>6</sup>. The variables within Strive HI are included in Appendix F. Data are available for download into a Microsoft Excel file. The Strive HI Master Data File includes a tab that provides data descriptions and definitions of each variable.

Strive HI also includes an Interactive School Distribution site, which shows the distribution of schools by Strive HI Step. School distribution can be further sorted on this website by school level

<sup>6</sup> The Strive HI Index assigns schools a score between 0 and 400, and examines four components (each worth 100 points): Achievement, Growth, Readiness, and Achievement Gap. The index score then helps determine which of five Strive HI Steps a school is assigned: Recognition, Continuous Improvement, Focus, Priority, or Classification Not Determined. (Source: <http://www.hawaiipublicschools.org/VisionForSuccess/AdvancingEducation/StriveHIPerformanceSystem/Pages/Strive-HI-System-Index.aspx> and <http://www.hawaiipublicschools.org/VisionForSuccess/AdvancingEducation/StriveHIPerformanceSystem/Pages/home.aspx>)

(elementary, high, middle) and/or complex area. In addition, individual data points in the graphic provide detail on the school name, complex area, and reason for automatic classification into a particular Strive HI Step, if applicable. This site can be accessed at:
<http://www.hawaiipublicschools.org/VisionForSuccess/AdvancingEducation/StriveHIPerformanceSystem/Pages/home.aspx>.

Given that this is a new system, the data encompass only the 2010–11, 2011–12, and 2012–13 academic years. To preserve student privacy, data is suppressed for any school that has fewer than 10 students for a particular measure. Additionally, comparisons of Strive HI data to different data sources may be limited, due to the use of a specifically calculated new index. As explained in the Strive HI Master Data File, “The data presented in this report were created to calculate the Strive HI index. Due to situations specific to the calculation of an index, some of the data points may not match published data for similar measures. For this reason, please use caution when comparing these data to other data sets.”

The Strive HI Master Data File can be downloaded at:

<http://www.hawaiipublicschools.org/VisionForSuccess/AdvancingEducation/StriveHIPerformanceSystem/Pages/home.aspx>. The Strive HI Master Data File is located under Related Downloads along the right side of the screen. For further information or assistance, contact Lyndsay Pinkus, Hawaii State Department of Education, at 808-586-3448 or Lyndsay.Pinkus@hawaiidoe.org.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from Strive HI include:

- How do graduation rates for high-needs and non-high needs students vary across school performance factors such as school index score and Strive HI Step classification?
- What is the relationship between NCLB categories and Strive HI rankings/groupings?
- What is the relationship between chronic absenteeism and achievement gaps?
- What are the graduation rate gaps that exist by Strive HI grouping?

Kamehameha Schools

Kamehameha Schools (KS) is an education system that serves more than 6,900 students of Hawaiian ancestry through K–12 campuses and 31 preschool sites statewide. In addition, they serve 40,000 learners annually through community collaborations, charter school support, and literacy enhancement programs for public school students (Kamehameha Schools, 1996–2014). Their research and evaluation department studies stakeholder-identified needs; results are posted on their online DataBoard (Kamehameha Schools, 2006).

The DataBoard includes the after-graduation plans for class of 2006 graduates, a Native Hawaiian educational attainment chart, and NCLB data for 2004. In addition, the DataBoard includes many reports that are not specific to schools; for example, a report on population estimates for Native Hawaiians by region. Data are available for download into a Microsoft Excel file.

The information can be found at <http://www.ksbe.edu/spi/databoard.php>. Questions about the data sources may be directed to the Strategic Planning and Implementation Group at spire@ksbe.edu.

After-Graduation Plan for KS Class of 2006

Kamehameha Schools provides a data source with information about the after-graduation plans for KS students. The data are provided at four levels: the Hawai'i Campus, the Kapalama Campus, the Maui Campus, and aggregated across campuses. This data source addresses one HPERC research priority area: graduation rate. The variables for the data source are included in Appendix G. There are two limitations to this data source: no data dictionary is provided and the data are limited to 2006.

Research questions that could be answered using the data include:

- What were the most common plans for high school graduates in 2006?
- Were there trends within or between regions (Hawai'i, international, mainland, or undecided) where students planned to be after graduation?

Native Hawaiian Educational Attainment Charts

Kamehameha Schools also hosts a data source with information about native Hawaiian educational attainment. The data are available at the state level. This data source addresses one HPERC research priority area: graduation rate. The variables for the data source are included in Appendix H. There are two limitations to this data source: no data dictionary is provided and it does not list a year or timeframe.

Research questions that could be answered using the data include:

- What is the relationship between age groups and educational attainment?
- Are some age groups more highly educated than others?
- Does one sex report higher educational attainment than another?

No Child Left Behind, 2004

This data source aligns with the HPERC research priority area of NCLB requirement waivers/redefining school success. The variables contained in this data source are included in Appendix I. The data are available at the school level. There are two limitations to this data source: no data dictionary is provided and the data are limited to 2004.

Researchers may use the data to answer questions such as:

- What is the relationship between the percentage of Hawaiians and NCLB status of schools?
- In what cities were schools with the NCLB status of "No Sanction" in 2004?

University of Hawai'i

Center on the Family Data Center

The Center on the Family Data Center (CFDC) operates within the University of Hawai'i's College of Tropical Agriculture and Human Resources. In addition to serving as the state grantee for Hawai'i KIDS COUNT, the CFDC contains child and family indicators, community profiles for more than 40 school complexes, indicators on Hawai'i's aging population, and general population data (Center on the Family, n.d.). The CFDC addresses three HPERC research priority areas: graduation rate, special education services, and English language learner services and support.<sup>7</sup>

The CFDC compiles data from national and state-level sources, including the U.S. Census Bureau, Hawaii State Department of Education, and additional departments/organizations within Hawai'i. Education-related data can be found within the child and family indicators section. The variables within the child and family indicators section are included in Appendix J.

The data years range from 1980 to 2012. However, some years of data are missing across the indicators and some levels of data are missing across the years. The CFDC provides definitions, data sources, and technical notes for indicators within the corresponding tables. Data are available for download into a Microsoft Excel file.

Data are provided online at http://uhfamily.hawaii.edu/cof\_data/home.aspx. Comments and questions can be emailed to cof@ctahr.hawaii.edu.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the CFDC include:

- What is the difference in percentages of high school vs. college graduates across counties?
- How does the percentage of adults with language barriers change by age bracket?
- What are the trends in the percentage of high school seniors with college plans, as opposed to further training plans, over time?

Hawai'i School Health Survey: Youth Risk Behavior Survey The Hawai'i Health Data Warehouse (HHDW) was created from a partnership between the Hawaii State Department of Health and the University of Hawai'i's John A. Burns School of Medicine. The HHDW provides data to health professionals and community health agencies. There are five data sources: Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance Systems, Hawaii Health Survey, Pregnancy Risk Assessment Monitoring System, Youth Risk Behavior Survey, and Hawaii Youth Tobacco Survey (Hawai'i Health Data Warehouse, 2010).

The Youth Risk Behavior Survey addresses HPERC's graduation rate research priority area through the collection of data related to student perceptions of the likelihood of completing high school and likelihood of completing a post high school program.

<sup>7</sup> The data housed in CFDC related to special education services and English language learner services and support refer to the populations who may seek out such services instead of actual services provided.

The data are available at the state- and county-levels within the “school” category under the Health Reports & Data tab of the HHDW website. The state-level data range from 2001 to 2011 while the county-level data are for 2011 only. The variables within the “school” category are provided in Appendix K. A limitation is that the data are unavailable for download into a Microsoft Excel file, and are displayed in PDF reports. Manual entry of the data into a Microsoft Excel file or statistical software is necessary to conduct analysis.

Data can be found within the HHDW website at <http://www.hhdw.org/>. Comments and questions can be sent via email to profiles@hhdw.org or by phone to 808-946-5899.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the HHDW include:

- To what extent are Native Hawaiian students likely to report that they will complete high school for each county?
- What is the difference between males and females in their reported likelihood of completing high school for each county?

Institutional Research and Analysis Office

The Institutional Research and Analysis Office (IRAO) compiles data across all campuses within the University of Hawai‘i system, including information on student demographics, enrollment, course registration, graduation and retention rates, remedial course completion and success, financial aid, and degree types earned. The IRAO provides data tables and reports. Data within the IRAO are categorized into eight categories: student enrollment information, applications processed, course registration information, initiatives, degrees and certificates awarded, faculty/staff, financial aid information, and other reports/initiatives (University of Hawai‘i System, n.d.). The IRAO category of degrees and certificates awarded addresses one HPERC research priority area: graduation rate.

Data are available at three levels: the entire UH system, UH community college system and individual campuses (UH Mānoa, UH Hilo, UH West Oahu, - and the seven individual community college campuses). The variables within the degrees and certificates awarded category are included in Appendix L. The data encompass the 2008–2009 academic year through the 2012–13 academic year

A data dictionary is available and can be accessed with a university login. However, definitions, methods or context are included for selected data elements within the corresponding table. One limitation is that the data are inconsistently available for download into a Microsoft Excel file, and are sometimes displayed only in PDF reports or as static tables directly on the website. If data are not available for download into Excel, manual entry of the data into a Microsoft Excel file or statistical software is necessary to conduct analysis.

Data can be downloaded directly online at:

<https://www.hawaii.edu/institutionalresearch/home.action>. Questions about the data within the IRAO can be emailed to iro-mail@lists.hawaii.edu.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the IRAO include:

- What is the difference in graduation and persistence rates based on participation in remedial coursework?
- How do full-time, part-time and transfer students vary in their time to degree, based on type of degree pursued?

KIDS COUNT Data Center

KIDS COUNT is a project funded by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, and provides access to data that can inform conversations on improving child and family well-being. In Hawai'i, the University of Hawai'i Center on the Family serves as the grantee for the state KIDS COUNT organization. The KIDS COUNT Data Center houses data for specific indicators on topics including demographics, economic well-being, education, family and community, health, and safety and risky behaviors. Data are drawn from national-level sources, such as the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey, as well as Hawai'i-specific state-level departments (The Annie E. Casey Foundation, 2014). The data address two of HPERC's research priority areas: English language learner services and support and graduation rate.

The data within the KIDS COUNT Data Center are available at the national, state, city, county and congressional district levels. The variables within the education topic are included in Appendix M and categorized by the six education indicators that include Hawai'i-specific data. Definitions and original sources for individual indicator data are provided within each indicator.

The Hawai'i-specific data ranges from 1988 to 2013. The data are inconsistently available for download into a Microsoft Excel file; in some cases, a link to download raw data is available above the indicator name, next to Tools.

To view the data within an indicator or download data through the KIDS COUNT Data Center, visit the following URL: <http://datacenter.kidscount.org/>. For further information or assistance, contact Ivette Rodriguez Stern, KIDS COUNT Project Director, at 808-956-3760 or istern@hawaii.edu.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the KIDS COUNT Data Center include:

- How do the trends in percentages of ELL and non-ELL 4th grade students in Hawai'i with below-proficient reading scores compare to trends at the national level?
- How has the percentage of Asian and Pacific Islander teenagers ages 16 to 19 who are not in school and are not high school graduates changed in the last 10 years?

National Data Sources

Department of Education

State Education Data Profiles (Common Core of Data)

The National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) within the Department of Education collects data about public schools, public school districts, and state education agencies through the Common Core of Data (CCD) program. The homepage for the CCD can be found at <https://nces.ed.gov/ccd/>. Within the CCD, there are State Education Data Profiles, which provide information on elementary and secondary education characteristics, elementary and secondary education finance, postsecondary education, demographics, public libraries, and assessment scores. State Education Data Profiles can be found at <https://nces.ed.gov/programs/stateprofiles/index.asp>.

The State Education Data Profiles address three HPERC priority areas: special education services, English language learner services and support, and graduation rate. All data are available at the state and country levels. Data can be compared across up to four states, and can also be compared to the U.S. national average. Data for Hawai'i ranges from 2000 to 2012; however, some years of data are missing across all variables. Data for Hawai'i are located at the following link: <https://nces.ed.gov/programs/stateprofiles/sresult.asp?mode=short&s1=15>

After selecting an individual state or states from the homepage, the full list of variables within each section can be viewed by selecting “expand data listing.” The data are available for download into Excel files, and are also displayed in bar graph form on the website. These graphs can be generated online to reflect data for the state(s) selected for comparison.

The variables provided in this data source are listed in Appendix N. Comments and questions can be submitted online at the following link: <https://nces.ed.gov/help/webmail/>. For questions on restricted-use data license, Jesse Rine at NCES can be contacted at (202) 502-7311.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the State Education Data Profiles include:

- How does the number of students in Hawai'i with Individualized Education Programs and with Limited English Proficiency/ELL status compare to the U.S. national average?
- What is the difference in percentages of degrees/certificates awarded in Hawai'i by level (Associate's, Bachelor's, Master's, Doctor's) and ethnicity, compared to percentages from the U.S. national average?

Civil Rights Data Collection

The Department of Education gathers information for the Civil Rights Data Collection (CRDC) to measure education access and equity data from public schools. The homepage for Civil Rights Data Collection reports, tables, and state and national estimations can be found at <http://ocrdata.ed.gov>.

This website includes the following three sub-sections, which are discussed below as three separate data sources: 2009-10 & 2011-12 District or School Reports, Detailed Data Tables, and State and National Estimations. A general limitation across datasets is the potential errors in reporting from districts.

While all data discussed in the sub-sections below are publicly available online, a data request form can also be completed to obtain access to suppressed data from the 2009-10 and 2011-12 surveys. This data would be provided to users in “flat-file” form. The request form can be downloaded at the following link: <http://ocrdata.ed.gov/RequestFlatFile>. This form can be submitted via email to ocrdata@ed.gov, or by mail to the address below:

Further information on the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) can be obtained by contacting the Customer Service Office at 1-800-421-3481, 1-877-521-2172 TTY<sup>8</sup>, or via email at OCR@ed.gov.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the Civil Rights Data Collection include:

- What is the difference in student performance in Algebra I for students with and without LEP or disability status?
- How does school type (Title 1 classification, charter school, etc.) relate to percentage of high school completers, from 2000 to 2011?
- How does the percentage of time spent in the classroom vary for students with different types of disabilities?

2009-10 & 2011-12 District or School Reports

The District or School Reports provide summaries of school/district characteristics or membership (including enrollment and student characteristics), staffing and finance, pathways to college and career readiness, and discipline, bullying or harassment information. Data are available at the school and district levels for 2009-10 and 2011-2012. This data source addresses three HPERC research priority areas: special education services, English language learner services and support, and graduation rate. The variables provided in this data source are listed in Appendix O.

The District or School Reports can be accessed either through clicking the “Quick Access” link on the homepage, or selecting “School & District Search” in the menu on the left side of the homepage. Two tabs at the top of the search page allow users to either “find schools” or “find districts.” Searches can be narrowed by state, OCR Regional Office, and survey year (either 2009 or 2011). Searches can also be filtered using the Additional Search Options, which appear below the basic search fields; these options can be viewed by selecting “click to expand.” Additional Search

Options include school (or district) and membership metrics (including enrollment), college and career readiness, staffing and finance, and discipline-related filters.

Initial search results, which include district and school names, gender, race/ethnicity, LEP, IDEA and 504 status, are available for download into Excel files. Additional data are displayed directly online in chart, graph and table form, and can be viewed by clicking on the individual district or school names within the search-generated table. The district link directs users to a page on the “LEA Summary of Selected Facts,” and school name directs users to a page called “Summary of Selected Facts.” The content of these summary pages can only be viewed and filtered online, and is not available for download into Excel. Within the summary pages, there are boxes on the right with additional information (e.g., Additional Profile Facts Available, Additional Pathways to College and Career Readiness Facts). The data in these boxes can be viewed interchangeably in chart or table form, as well as in either counts or percentages.

Detailed Data Tables

The Detailed Data Tables present information on student demographics, Advanced Placement course and test participation, athletics, bullying and harassment, completion and retention, course enrollment, student disabilities, discipline, school finance, single-sex classes, staff, and testing. Data are available at the school and district levels for 2000, 2004, 2006, 2009 and 2011. This data source addresses three HPERC research priority areas: special education services, English language learner services and support, and graduation rate. The variables provided in this data source are listed in Appendix P.

These data tables can be accessed either through clicking the “Quick Access” link on the homepage, or selecting “Custom Charts & Detailed Data Tables” on the left side of the homepage. The search page then provides the option to “search for schools” or “search for districts.” Searches can be narrowed by state or survey year. Searches can also be filtered by Additional Search Options, which appear below the basic search fields; these options can be viewed by clicking the plus sign next to “Additional Search Options.” Additional Search Options include filtering by grade levels served, school type, or services/programs provided.

When viewing search results, further information can be accessed in two ways: clicking on the “profile” link next to a school or district name, or selecting one of the topics under the “Choose Your Data” box on the right side of the page. The content of the school or district profiles can only be exported to an HTML or PDF, and is not available for download into Excel. However, tables for the topics under “Choose Your Data” are available for download into Excel files, and can be viewed and exported in counts, percentages, or both counts and percentages. The tables in this section can also be manipulated to remove particular subgroups, by clicking the red “X” icon next to a subgroup label (e.g., LEP, Race/Ethnicity).

State and National Estimations

State and National Estimations provide demographic information on course enrollment, AP exam participation and performance, discipline, retention, LEP and IDEA status, and algebra course performance. This data source addresses three HPERC research priority areas: special education services, English language learner services and support, and graduation rate. The variables provided in this data source are listed in Appendix Q.

State and National Estimations data can be accessed either through clicking the “Quick Access” link on the homepage, or selecting “State and National Estimations” on the left side of the homepage. Data are available at the state and national levels, and estimations are provided for 2000, 2004, 2006, and 2009-10. Data are available for download into Excel files.

Data notes for the 2009-10 State and National Estimations can be found at http://ocrdata.ed.gov/StateNationalEstimations/Projections\_2009\_10. For earlier years, documentation on the state and national estimate data can be obtained by request.

Department of Health and Human Services

The Data Resource Center for Child and Adolescent Health within the Department of Health and Human Services houses survey data gathered through the National Survey of Children with Special Health Care Needs (NS-CSHCN) and the National Survey of Children’s Health (NSCH). The homepage for Data Resource Center for Child and Adolescent Health can be found at <http://childhealthdata.org/home>.

The data for the NS-CSHCN and NSCH can be viewed within the “Browse the Data” tab of the website by selecting “Browse by Survey & Topic.” First, the particular survey, a year the particular survey was administered, and state of interest (e.g., Hawai‘i) are selected. Then, a survey section of interest is selected to review specific survey items and indicators. Once a survey item or indicator of interest is selected, results for that item will be provided. The variable name within the survey, survey item number, notes about the item, and additional information is provided for each survey item and indicator by clicking on the “details” link within the results web page.

The data are displayed directly in graphical and table form on the website, and are available for download into PDF files; however, they are unavailable for download into Excel files. Manual entry of the data into a Microsoft Excel file or statistical software is necessary to conduct analysis. For detailed information, the NS-CSHCN and NSCH codebooks for each year are provided under “Survey Methods and Documentation” within the “Learn About the Surveys” tab of the website <http://childhealthdata.org/learn/methods#Manuals>.

Data sets can also be obtained by completing a request form<sup>9</sup> and submitting it to Child and Adolescent Health Measurement Initiative. After receiving, completing, and submitting a Data Use Agreement, the request will be process in five business days. Additional information can be found at <http://www.childhealthdata.org/help/dataset#2>.

The Data Resource Center for Child and Adolescent Health provides a glossary of terms within the “Get Help” tab within the website. Additionally, there are video tutorials with information on how to navigate the website. Questions can be entered into a web form that will be answered within two to three business days by Data Resource Center for Child and Adolescent Health staff. More information can be found at <http://childhealthdata.org/home>.

National Survey of Children with Special Health Care Needs

The National Survey of Children with Special Health Care Needs (NS-CSHCN) examines children with special healthcare needs and consists of questions related to child mental and physical health, child development and disability, family health status, care coordination, and health care screening, accessibility, insurance and services.

The NS-CSHCN has three versions aligned to the year(s) it was administered: 2001<sup>10</sup>, 2005–2006, and 2009–2010. Within the NS-CSHCN, there are “survey sections” that vary across the three years of available data. The 2005–2006 and 2009–2010 NS-CSHCN versions include the following: health and functional status, access to care, care coordination, family centered care and shared decision making, transition issues, developmental screening, health insurance, adequacy of health care coverage, impact on the family, ADD/ADHD questions, and family composition and income. The 2009–2010 survey also includes section on initial screening for special needs (The Child and Adolescent Health Measurement Initiative, 2012). Only three survey sections contain education-related items: health and functional status, access to care, and care coordination. The NS-CSHCN data addresses two of HPERC’s research priority areas: English language learner services and support and special education services.

The variables contained in this data source are provided in Appendix R. Data are statewide estimates based on statewide samples and do not represent a census. A limitation of the data is that some survey items vary across the years, which limits the ability to look at the data over time.

Research questions that could be answered by the NS-CSHCN data include:

- On average, how many school days were missed due to illness for children ages 6–17 with an emotional, behavioral, or developmental issue in 2005–2006 and 2009–2010?
- What was the level of satisfaction with communication of child’s doctors with his/her school by race/ethnicity in 2005–06 compared to 2009–10?

National Survey of Children's Health

The National Survey of Children’s Health (NSCH) is a more general survey in that it examines all children and consists of questions related to child mental and physical health, child development and disability, family and neighborhood environment, and health care accessibility, insurance and services. The NS-CSHCN and NSCH complement one another in that the subgroups derived from the NS-CSHCN can be applied to NSCH data to compare children with special healthcare needs to children without special healthcare needs.

<sup>10</sup> The 2001 version does not include education-related survey items. Thus, it is not included in this document.

The NSCH has three versions aligned to the year(s) it was administered: 2003, 2007, and 2011–2012. Within all versions of the NSCH, there are “survey sections” that include demographics, health and functional status, health insurance coverage, health care access and utilization, medical home, early childhood, middle childhood and adolescence, family functioning, parental health, and neighborhood and community characteristics (The Child and Adolescent Health Measurement Initiative, 2012). Seven of the ten sections contain education-related items. The NSCH data addresses two of HPERC’s research priority areas: English language learner services and support and special education services.

The variables contained in this data source are provided in Appendix S. Data are statewide estimates based on statewide samples and do not represent a census. A limitation of the data is that some survey items vary across the years, which limits the ability to look at the data over time.

Research questions that can be answered by the NSCH data source include:

- How does family structure relate to parent-rated severity of a child’s learning disability in 2011–2012?
- Are there differences across races/ethnicities in terms of how a child’s special healthcare needs, medical or behavioral concern(s) have interfered with school attendance?

Department of Labor

Special Tabulations of U.S. Census Data – Limited English Proficiency

The Department of Labor funded the aggregation of 2000<sup>11</sup> U.S. Census data relating to limited English proficient populations. The results are intended to be a planning resource for One Stop Career Centers<sup>12</sup> and other employment and training service centers. Although the information does not describe services and support, it does describe the populations who may seek out such services (U.S. Department of Labor, 2010). The data address one HPERC research priority area: English language learner services and support.

Data are provided at the state-, county-, and city-levels. The data source variables are provided in Appendix T. The data can be downloaded into a zip file. The zip file contains five Microsoft Excel files. Within each file are tabs for additional information, including a data dictionary.

There are two limitations of the data source. One limitation is that the data are derived from the 2000 U.S. Census data. Another limitation is that the educational attainment data is limited to the attainment of people over 18 years old.

To access the data, visit the following website and select the link for Hawai‘i:

<http://www.doleta.gov/reports/censusdata/download.cfm>. For more information, contact the U.S.

<sup>11</sup> The data source does not include 2010 U.S. Census data. The website was last updated on January 07, 2010.

Department of Labor at the Frances Perkins Building (200 Constitution Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20210) or call 1-877-US2JOBS (1-877-872-5627).

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the Special Tabulations include:

- For those who are limited English proficient, what is the educational attainment level and primary language spoken by county?
- How many linguistically isolated households speak Pacific Island languages?

National Science Foundation

Science and Engineering Indicators 2014 State Data Tool

The Science and Engineering Indicators (SEI) State Data Tool is prepared by the National Science Foundation's National Center for Science and Engineering Statistics under the guidance of the National Science Board. The SEI provides information on the scope, quality, and strength of the science and engineering field and can be used to inform policy related to the field (National Science Foundation, 2014). The SEI addresses one HPERC research priority area: NCLB requirement waivers/redefining school success.

A group of indicators or single indicators can be viewed across states or across years for a particular state. Indicator groups include: elementary and secondary education, higher education, workforce, financial research and development inputs, and science and technology in the economy. The elementary and secondary education indicators comprise mathematics, science, school expenditures, and high school advanced placement exams. The higher education indicators relate to the attainment of Bachelor's degrees, science and engineering degrees, and natural sciences and engineering degrees, as well as state funding and university charges. The work force indicators include degrees and occupations as well as scientists, engineers, and technicians in the workforce.

The variables related to single indicators within the elementary and secondary education and higher education groups are provided in Appendix U. The Hawai'i-specific data are available from 1990 to 2010. All data are at the state level, and include census and survey-based data. More guidance on the types of data in this source and the associated standard errors can be found in the Technical Notes document at <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/seind14/content/chapter-8/sei-2014-state-data-tool-tech-notes.pdf>. Sources of data are noted in the Excel spreadsheets found in the following link, which may help users to determine whether the available data is census or sample data: <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/seind14/index.cfm/state-data/download.htm>.

The data are provided online within the SEI State Data Tool at <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/seind14/index.cfm/state-data>. Answers to questions can be found at <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/seind14/index.cfm/state-data/help.htm> or asked to the author, Jeri Mulrow, Program Director, Information and Technology Services Program at the National Center for Science and Engineering within the National Science Foundation at jmulrow@nsf.gov.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the SEI include:

- What is the average 4th grade mathematics score on the 2011 National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) in Hawai'i as compared to other states with similar demographics?
- What is the average 8th grade science score on the 2011 National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) in Hawai'i as compared to other states with similar demographics?
- Has the percent of bachelor's degrees in natural sciences and engineering conferred increased over time?

U.S. Census

2008-2012 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates

The American Community Survey (ACS) is administered by the U.S. Census Bureau to sampled housing units and group quarters on a monthly basis to generate annually updated data (U.S. Census Bureau, 2009). ACS results are used for planning of community investments and services. The ACS includes questions about age, sex, race, family and relationships, income and benefits, health insurance, education, veteran status, disabilities, work, transportation, housing, and living costs.

The ACS data are single-year, three-year, or five-year estimates from data collected over a period of time instead of a single time point. The three-year and five-year estimates are beneficial to geographic areas with smaller populations and small population subgroups (e.g., Native Hawaiian) because the data are more statistically more reliable (U.S. Census Bureau, 2008). Given this, the 2008–2012 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates data are included in this document, specifically those data related to education. The ACS addresses one HPERC research priority area: graduation rate.

Data are available at the following levels: state, zip code, county, county subdivision, census tract, congressional district, school district, urban area and metropolitan area. Data that are specific to Hawai'i can be obtained by using the advanced search function and selecting “state” under the geographies option. Hawai'i can be selected as the state and will be seen in the selections box in the upper left corner of the page. To obtain data specific to education, the ‘people’ selection under the topics option will provide a list of topic filters. The ‘education’ selection offers more specific filters: educational attainment, field of degree, school enrollment, and school type. When “educational attainment” is selected, a list of tables is provided. There are three ‘Selected Social Characteristics in the United States’ tables: 2012 ACS one-year estimates, 2012 ACS three-year estimates, and 2012 ACS five-year estimates. Given that five-year estimates are more reliable for smaller populations, the 2012 ACS five-year estimates table should be selected. A download action is provided so that data can be downloaded into the format most useful to the user; this includes the option to download data as a Microsoft Excel file.

The variables within the 2012 ACS five-year estimates table for selected social characteristics in the United States are included in Appendix V. One limitation of the data is the use of the 2000 census boundaries. Therefore, the estimates of urban and rural population, housing units, and characteristics may not be aligned with the 2010 census boundaries. Further, data for urban and rural areas may not reflect ongoing urbanization.

Data are provided online within the American Fact Finder at <http://factfinder2.census.gov/faces/nav/jsf/pages/index.xhtml>. Information and definitions of response categories can be found at https://www.census.gov/acs/www/Downloads/data\_documentation/SubjectDefinitions/2012\_ACSSubjectDefinitions.pdf. Answers to questions about the ACS data may be found at <https://ask.census.gov/>.

Research questions that could be answered using the data from the ACS include:

- What is the level of educational attainment for adults by Hawai'i county subdivisions?
- What are the different levels of educational attainment for adults within each Hawai'i metropolitan area?

SUMMARY

Access to the right data can help to inform effective, evidence-based decisions in education policy and practice. This document is intended to help education stakeholders in Hawai'i better understand the data that are publicly available and specific to Hawai'i. This document provides information that can inform the use of the Hawai'i-specific, publicly available data:

- The 16 state and national data sources provide data related to HPERC's research priority areas. Using this data, education stakeholders can answer questions related to 4 of HPERC's 9 research priority areas: English language learner services and support, graduation rate, NCLB requirement waivers and redefining school success, and special education services. For example, stakeholders can ask about the percent of students with disabilities who participated in the Hawaii State Assessment with and without accommodations. Currently, the publicly available, Hawai'i-specific data identified in this document do not allow for examination of five of HPERC's nine priority areas: teacher training, technology-supported curriculum/use of technology in the classroom, teacher evaluation, model schools/best practices, and instructional time.
- Access to the publicly available data varies by data source. A thorough review of the information provided in this document as well as on the data source website is necessary prior to data analysis to ensure a thorough understanding of the data, including but not limited to the sample and data collection methods. This thorough understanding will help researchers determine the type(s) of analyses that may (and may not) be conducted using this data.
- Limitations of some data sources include a lack of a data dictionary, inability to download the data into Microsoft Excel file(s), and variability of data within a data source in terms of subgroups included and type of data available. Most data sources have a data dictionary. A data dictionary is important for evidence-based decision making so stakeholders can be assured of their understanding of the data they are using. For those data sources without a data dictionary, the Common Education Data Standards (CEDS) framework<sup>13</sup> can be used to support the standardization of data elements and data dictionaries in order to support sharing, reporting, and transfer of data across educational settings. Manual data entry into a Microsoft Excel file or other statistical software is needed for data sources that do not have this capability. Data within some data sources vary across years and level of data. Given these limitations, it is critical to reiterate the importance of a thorough understanding of the data prior to analysis.

A data source that is expected to launch in August 2014 is the Hawai'i Data Exchange Partnership (Hawai'i DXP). The Hawai'i DXP is a comprehensive longitudinal data system that links information across state agencies from infancy through early childhood education to K-12 and postsecondary education to the workforce. Hawai'i DXP will help guide decision making and policies to improve learner and workforce outcomes. Additional information is provided online at <http://www.hawaiidxp.org/>.

NEXT STEPS

Once education stakeholders have an understanding of the data that they can access and the limitations of data sources, data analysis can occur to connect data results to policy and practice. Thus, the next steps are to determine “the types of analyses required to answer critical policy questions” and ensure “access to staff and/or consultants who have the appropriate skill sets and tools to conduct the required analyses” (Data Quality Campaign, 2011, p. 2); these are presented in Box 1. HPERC and REL Pacific will explore ways in which further support can be provided to education researchers in Hawai'i to use publicly available data sources to deepen a collective understanding of Hawai'i's learners.

Box I. Key Steps in Using and Analyzing Data

The Data Quality Campaign (2011) has provided suggestions to state education agencies for effectively using data within state longitudinal data systems. Once education stakeholders have an understanding of the data that they can access and the limitations of data sources, data analysis can occur to connect data results to policy and practice. This document addresses the first action recommended by the Data Quality Campaign:

- “Identifying the variety of ways available data can be used.”

Next steps in this process are:

- Determining “the types of analyses required to answer critical questions,” and
- “Ensuring access to staff and/or consultants who have the appropriate skill sets and tools to conduct the required analyses.”

APPENDIX A: METHODOLOGY

The following tasks were undertaken in the development of this document

1. REL Pacific researchers obtained an initial list of publicly available data sources through a discussion at the 2013 Annual HPERC Symposium. Symposium attendees (including members of the Department of Education, university faculty and staff, researchers, and graduate students) were provided with examples of publicly available, Hawai'i-specific data sources compiled by the Hawaii Department of Education, and asked to generate suggestions for additional data resources to build upon this list. Attendees' lists were shared via an online discussion forum, and access to the lists was provided to REL Pacific researchers by HPERC for further review following the symposium.
2. REL Pacific researchers reviewed each suggested source and filled in a matrix to indicate if information was publicly available, Hawai'i-specific, and contained raw data. Suggested resources with information that was not publicly available were noted and a description of the data request process was described. Hawai'i-specific information indicated whether the suggested resource content was available at the state level or other levels within the state of Hawaii. For example, if information was available about the United States, but not about Hawaii, the suggested resource was categorized as "not Hawaii-specific." Data sources indicated whether raw data was available on the suggested resources' website. In instances where reports were available but not the raw information, this is indicated in the data source information. Hyperlinks to each suggested resource were included. Additionally, researchers noted which HPERC research priority areas were addressed by the suggested resource. HPERC research priority areas included:
  - Teacher training
  - Technology-supported curriculum/use of technology in the classroom
  - English language learner services and support
  - Teacher evaluations
  - Graduation rates
  - Model schools/best practices
  - No Child Left Behind requirement waivers/redefining school success
  - Instructional time
  - Special education services

Each suggested resource was reviewed and the matrix indicated whether information about each HPERC priority area was presented.

3. REL Pacific researchers did not collect or retrieve any data for this project. Instead, researchers collected information related to the existing suggested resources. Therefore, issues of data quality (i.e., accuracy, reliability, and timeliness) were not explored in this project.
