

2018 Academic Credit for Prior Learning (ACPL) Report Update

ACPL: Advancing Success for Washington Adult Learners

Supporting adult learners as they complete their postsecondary certificates and degrees is essential to meeting our state's educational attainment goals and meeting the employment needs of students and Washington employers.<sup>1</sup> Students come to college with skills and knowledge acquired through work, military, and other experiences; awarding academic credit for prior learning is an important form of support for this population of students. Academic Credit for Prior Learning (ACPL) is awarded when a student's prior learning is assessed and found to be the equivalent of specific college course outcomes, and when awarding credit is consistent with the policies of the institution.<sup>2</sup>

Awarding academic credit for prior learning accomplishes the following:

- Honors students' knowledge and skills.
- Strengthens connections between work and college.
- Accelerates students' progress toward career pathways.
- Helps Washington meet the statewide educational attainment goal of at least 70 percent of Washington adults (ages 25-44) holding a postsecondary credential.

Significant progress has been made in several areas since 2011, when legislation was enacted to increase the number of students who receive academic credit for prior learning as well as the number and type of credits earned, ensuring that credit is awarded only for college course-level competencies. That progress has included establishing an ongoing workgroup, developing and sharing policies and practices, and monitoring progress in an annual legislative report.

2018 ACPL Notable Findings

For the second consecutive year, all 34 community and technical colleges, six public baccalaureate institutions, and ten Independent Colleges of Washington member institutions submitted data for the 2018 report.<sup>3</sup> Of these 49 institutions<sup>4</sup>, 42 had reported data in 2016, and 49 in 2017. This allows a limited three-year look at change over time in total number of ACPL credits awarded, and a more complete view in the two-year comparison.

2018 prior learning credits

During the 2017-18 academic year, Washington public and independent colleges awarded 56,313.5 ACPL credits that applied toward certificates or degrees. Approximately 2,927 students earned credits for prior learning.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The Washington State Legislature defines prior learning in RCW 28B.77.230, as "...knowledge and skills gained through work and life experience; through military training and experience; and through formal and informal education and training from in-state and out-of-state institutions including foreign institutions.

<sup>3</sup> Data from private career colleges were not collected for this report.

Total credit comparisons

In a three-year view of 42 colleges reporting, a trend emerges with a 20.7 percent increase.

Note: Comparison is limited to 42 institutions reporting all three years.
 Source: WSAC staff analysis of ACPL data collected from institutions (fall 2016, fall 2017, and fall 2018).

In a comparison of 49 colleges reporting in the last two years, the overall number of ACPL credits has had a slight dip of 8.2 percent (Figure 2). Examining ACPL credits by sector shows a more detailed view of change (Figure 3. See Appendix A for a three-year view of 42 institutions). While it is difficult to determine exact factors that might have caused these ACPL changes, internal and external factors correlated with ACPL do merit further research in the ACPL workgroup in 2019. While no significant policy changes have been reported by institutions, external factors may have a role. For example, the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges reports that enrollments in their sector have decreased every year since 2013, with over 10,000 fewer enrollments from 2015-2016 to 2017-2018. Enrolled veterans receiving benefits are often a strong proportion of students receiving ACPL, and SBCTC reports decreasing enrollment in this population mirroring the overall enrollment changes as the post-recession Washington job market has improved (see Appendix B).

Types of credit comparison

A detailed look at the types of prior learning credits over a two-year period provides a more nuanced comparison (Figure 4). While there has been a recent dip in the overall number of ACPL credits, statewide credit amounts in some categories of prior learning assessments have increased:

- Students receiving academic credits for prior learning increased in the assessment areas of College Level Exam Program (CLEP), Occupational Crosswalks (military and other), and Individual Industry Certifications.
- Credits awarded increased in the areas of DANTES Subject Standardized tests (DSST), CLEP, and Occupational Crosswalks.

Additional ACPL Updates

Steady advancement continues in all areas of the ACPL goals outlined in statute (see Appendix C). Effective practices, policies, and updated information on ACPL have been shared in a variety of ways this year, including the handbook updates, an email distribution list, and a webinar meeting.

ACPL workgroup meeting

WSAC convened a workgroup meeting via webinar in October 2018, which included 65 participants from the ACPL workgroup and interested practitioners. The meeting provided ACPL background, updated the workgroup on the data collection and report process, and sought comments, suggestions, and recommendations for the 2018 report, professional development, future workgroup goals, and potential projects.

Adult reengagement initiative highlight

WSAC has developed a statewide framework to reengage stopped-out adult learners in credential completion, and has highlighted ACPL as a best practice for adults in academic policy. At the Washington Adult Reengagement Summit hosted by WSAC in November 2018, national expert Joel Simon of the Council for Adult and Experiential Learning shared ACPL rationale and successes with the audience of almost 200 higher education leaders and practitioners.

Next Steps

Within a three-year trend of ACPL credit increases, the 2018 ACPL data survey finding of a two-year decrease in some types of ACPL credits merits further research by the ACPL Workgroup and stakeholders. It will be important to better understand any internal factors in institutions that may be influencing change, as well as external factors, such as veteran and adult student enrollment levels. WSAC has initiated conversations about the findings with sector leaders and the workgroup in order to gather more information, and will continue research in 2019.

ACPL Resources

- ACPL handbook: Updated in 2018, the handbook provides sample policies and examples of crosswalks and other assessment models.
- ACPL web page: This WSAC web page houses ACPL Workgroup meeting notes, workshop information, annual legislative reports, and the ACPL handbook.
- Adult Reengagement Initiative web page: As a policy tool related to adult learners' progress, ACPL fits in the WSAC Adult Reengagement Framework's completion component. This web page includes statistics, reports, resources, and 2018 Summit materials referenced in this report update.
- Updated policy links: Appendix D includes policy links for ACPL and military credit from all institutions.

Appendix C: Summary of Progress on ACPL Workgroup Goals

Summary		Progress
Goal 1	Increase number of students who receive academic credit for prior learning.	Ongoing.
Goal 2	Increase number and type of credits awarded.	Ongoing.
Goal 3	Develop transparent policies and practices.	Sample policies included in the ACPL handbook. All institutions submit links to ACPL and military credit policies annually.
Goal 4	Improve prior learning assessment practices.	Training and sharing of practices through ACPL workgroup meetings and workshops.
Goal 5	Create tools to develop faculty and staff expertise and to share exemplary policies and practices.	ACPL handbook updates, annual workshop, and online resources available on the WSAC web page.
Goal 6	Develop articulation agreements when patterns of credit for prior learning are identified for particular programs and pathways.	Select crosswalks available in handbook.
Goal 7	Develop outcome measures to track progress on the goals outlined in this section.	Progress on Goals 1-6 will continue to be monitored through annual ACPL report updates. ACPL Workgroup in 2017 determined that there were too many variables to create statewide numeric outcome goals.*

* For example, institutions with a higher percentage of student veterans might be expected to award higher levels of ACPL. Also, as economic changes occur, institutions may enroll more or fewer older students with previous on-the-job training and experience, which might equate to more or less ACPL credit awarded through assessments of portfolios.

About the Washington Student Achievement Council

The Washington Student Achievement Council is committed to increasing educational opportunities and attainment in Washington. The Council has three main functions:

- Lead statewide strategic planning to increase educational attainment.
- Administer programs that help people access and pay for college.
- Advocate for the economic, social, and civic benefits of higher education.

The Council has nine members. Four members represent each of Washington's major education sectors: four-year public baccalaureates, four-year private colleges, public community and technical colleges, and K-12 public schools. Five are citizen members, including one current student.
