KEY FINDINGS

- 1. Black, white, and Hispanic parents all share similar views of their children's progress over the past school year. Roughly onethird of all school parents believe their children have progressed very well when it comes to academic, emotional, and social development.
- 2. In December, positive sentiment surrounding homeschooling slightly increased among Black and Hispanic parents. White parents saw a much larger increase in support of homeschooling.
- 3. Among Black and Hispanic parents, comfort levels with their children returning to school ticked down in December. However white parents' comfort continued to rise.
- 4. Black parents' interest in learning pods decreased slightly in December. By contrast, half of Hispanic parents said they were actively participating or interested in a learning pod.
- 5. Throughout 2021 Black parents expressed very high levels of support for education savings accounts (ESAs), school vouchers, and public charter schools. In December, Black parents showed higher support for charter schools compared to the previous month.

Methodology:

This poll was conducted between December 14-December 21, 2021 among a sample of 435 Black School Parents. The interviews were conducted online. Results based on the Black School Parents sample have a measure of precision of plus or minus 5.2 percentage points.

SURVEY PROFILE AND DEMOGRAPHICS

Roughly seven out of 10 Black parents would prefer having at least one day of school (per week) occur at home – much larger than the proportion of white parents.

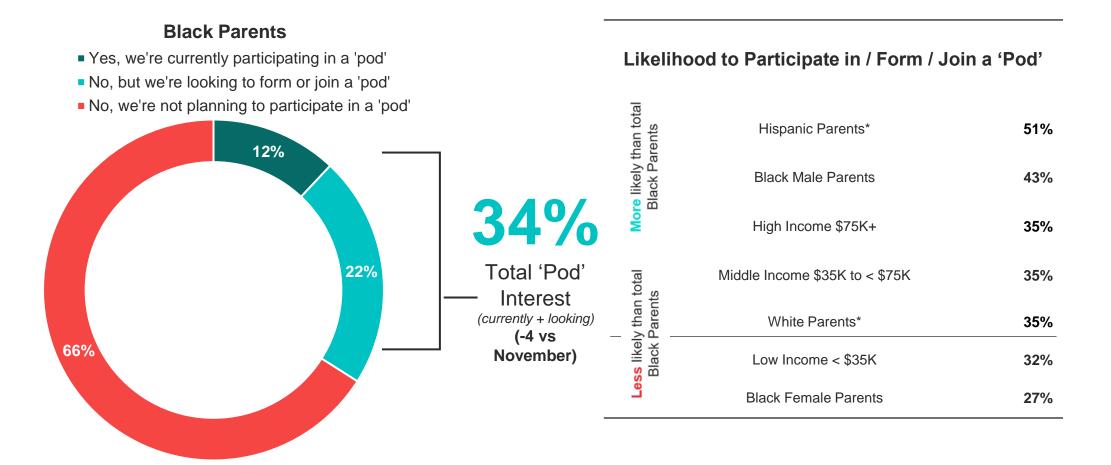

After the pandemic, if given the option, to what extent would you prefer schooling to be scheduled each week at home with a parent or tutor to provide the best education for your child?

MORNING CONSULT

Black parents' interest in learning pods decreased slightly in December. By contrast, half of Hispanic parents said they were actively participating or interested in a learning pod.

As a result of the coronavirus pandemic, are you currently participating in a 'pod' with other families?

Descriptions Used:

Charter Schools

Charter schools are public schools that have more control over their own budget, staff, and curriculum, and are exempt from many existing public school regulations.

School Vouchers

A school voucher system allows parents the option of sending their child to the school of their choice, whether that school is public or private, including both religious and non-religious schools. If this policy were adopted, tax dollars currently allocated to a school district would be allocated to parents in the form of a 'school voucher' to pay partial or full tuition for the child's school.

Education Savings Accounts

An "education savings account" in K–12 education – often called an ESA – establishes for parents a governmentauthorized savings account with restricted, but multiple uses for educational purposes. Parents can then use these funds to pay for: school tuition; tutoring; online education programs; therapies for students with special needs; textbooks or other instructional materials; or save for future college expenses.

Over the course of 2021, Black parents have shown high levels of support for ESAs when given a description.

An "education savings account" in K–12 education – often called an ESA – establishes for parents a government-authorized savings account with restricted, but multiple uses for educational purposes. Parents can then use these funds to pay for: school tuition; tutoring; online education programs; therapies for students with special needs; textbooks or other instructional materials; or save for future college expenses. In general, what is your opinion of an ESA system?

Somewhat Support Support

Support for ESAs remains high across various Black parent demographic groups as well as among white and Hispanic parents. Black special needs parents are more supportive of ESAs than non-special needs parents.
