1. Introduction

1.1 A Brief Introduction to the Author
Jane Austen (December 16, 1775 ~ July 18, 1817) is a British woman novelist. Six novels were published in Austin's whole life. Sense and Sensibility (1811) is her first, followed by successive published Pride and Prejudice (1813), Mansfield Garden (1814) and Emma (1815). Northanger Abbey and Persuasion (1818) Pride and Prejudice (1813) which is originally called first impression, is Austen's masterpiece. Through the description of marriage, it shows the life of British society at that time in frame. The stories are about Bennett’s daughter's marriages. Mr. Bentley moving from London falls in love with the gentle and the beautiful girl, Jane, that is the eldest daughter among Mr. Bennett’s daughters, and Mr. Bentley’s friend Darcy fell in love with the second daughter Elizabeth. As she believed with no consideration the young officers Wayne’s calumny, she had a prejudice against Darcy. After a series of interesting twists and turns, the misunderstanding finally was removed. At last, Mr. Darcy overcame the arrogance, with Elizabeth overcoming the prejudice against him, and the two people got married in the end.

1.2 The Definition of “Id, Ego and Super-ego”

“Id”: It is confined primarily to the instinct of survival and nature; the “id” is on behalf of the source of all the “drives”. The energy of Personal psychological function is from the instinct of the “life” and “death”, or the instinct of the “sex” or “invasion”. They are a part of the “id”. When they perform their functions, the “id” seeks how to release excitement and tension, then energy. It works in accordance with the pleasure principle, that is, it tends to pursue the happiness and avoid suffering. According to this mode of operation, the “id” seeks immediately to release the energy completely. The “id” can not stand any setbacks, and has no scruples. In a word, the “id” is excessive, impulsive, blind, irrational, non-social, selfish, and is to indulge in pleasure.

“Ego”: It is on behalf of reason and good will. The “id” chases after the pleasure, and the “super-ego” is in pursuit of the “perfect”, but the function of the “ego” is to satisfy the desire of the “id” and the requirement of the “super-ego” in accordance with reality principle. The “id” works according to the “happiness principle”, and the “ego” works according to the “reality principle”- the instinct is delayed until to meet the appropriate time, so most pleasure contains minimal pain and negative results. The “ego” is able to separate the desire from the fantasy, tolerate stress and compromise, and can change over time.

“Super-ego”: It can be regarded as the moral of the “ego”. Super-ego highlights two aspects; conscience and ego-ideal. The opposite of the “id” is the super-ego, that is, it is the branch of human psychology and moral function, and it contains those concepts we're working for and the expected guilty when we go against our code of ethics. This part of the structure of personality is based on community standards to control the behavior and to perform its functions, rewarding good behavior (Pride, self-love), and punishing the bad behavior (guilt, inferiority, accident). The super-ego plays the function in the primitive level, so it can not stand the test of reality relatively, that is, can not change one’s actions in different atmosphere.

2.1 The Background of the Family

In the early twentieth century and the late nineteenth century, the United Kingdom’s industry is still not very well-developed and agriculture and animal husbandry which accounts for the main location is overruled by the Aristocracy. In the poor class of the whole society, the vast number of people is suffering from a variety of class exploitation, particularly in the aspect of land-based. The majority of people due to the lack of land are being affected by cold and hunger, and the survivorship of the reality and the future are threatened seriously. In order to survive, in order to please the nobles, and letting the Aristocracy give them the right of life, in the card table, “Mr. Collins was employed in agreeing to every thing her Ladyship said, thanking her for every fish he won, and apologizing if he thought he won too many. Sir William did not say much. He was storing his memory with anecdotes and noble names.” The survival is everyone's first choice, especially for the people that are the poor and lack of materials. In other words, the will to live has been ingrained in everyone’s heart. The good personal qualities, the so-called rational understanding of things about the “id”, the ego-ideal, ect, and the “super-ego” are nearly meaningless at this time, but the will to live about the “id” still impose everything on the “ego”. Under the power of the “super-ego” at the same time, the “id” is so pitiful. In other words, the “id” is equivalent to the external environment, the “ego” equivalent to the rider, and the “super-ego” equivalent to the horse; so the rider has to choose the right direction by his rational ideas under the force of the “external environment and horse”. The background information of the middle-class families of Long bourn, Elizabeth's family, is that there is no brother, with only five sisters, father and mother; the father has nearly £ 2000 income only a year that is just enough to the family one year's expenditure, but "According to Will on the additional terms, this industry must be passed to male heirs, the Bennett’s couple had no sons, so that the industry should be inherited by a distant relative." For this reason, the additional terms pushes the five sisters to the Abyss; and in this kind of background, in order to live, the only choice of the five sisters is marriage. Therefore, Elizabeth and her sisters finally choose the “bread”, or choose a passage of romantic love, which let her get the achievement. At this time, the “id”, the “ego” and the “super-ego” intertwine with each other in conflict and contradiction for the innocent woman that Elizabeth.

2.2 The Need of the Survival of Elizabeth

2.2.1 Her Pursuit for the Material

The survival instinct derives from pairs of material; and the survival of depression is from the society where is turbulent, and from the torture of the disease. However, the more important factor is depended on the means of subsistence. Elizabeth, who is born in the middle-class family which is located in the town called Long bourn, seems have not to worry about the problem of the survival, and in the future, she will have seemingly good living condition. According to this point, her id has surpassed and gone directly. It shows that she can choose everything rationally, have not to worry about the problem of the survival, and in the future, she will have seemly good living condition.

2.2.2 The Sustenance of Her Spirit

“Source devoting much anxiety to seek a way of venting is due to the potential direct inhibitory effect of the fate of[5], a depression in of the survival of people will have to find ways to release, but the way Elizabeth chooses is marriage, so that she can seek a greater spiritual sustenance, and make the pressure of the survival find a new way out in the future.

So in the future of extreme shortage of supplies, in order to survive, the only way out for Elizabeth is to get married, but this marriage is not only with emphasis on “physical needs” and “security needs”. If so, Elizabeth’s refusal to the Corserine priest’s offer dose not seems to be reasonable in. She established the pursuit of the love at a higher level. That is said she has overcome the limitation of id and ego and gone directly in to the state of super-ego.

Therefore, Elizabeth can marry a husband who shares love with her in emotion and physically wealthy so that she do not take account of problem of “the survival”, then the pent-up feeling of in such a life, she will have greatly sustenance, and finally the “physical needs” about the “id” will be resolved. Through the development of the story, Mr. Darcy is better served this kind of role in this story. As Elizabeth said: “I love him, he is not proud, I was wrong before, entirely wrong about him.” So, this shows what Elizabeth chases after is the sustenance of the spirit.

Therefore, the instinct in the “id” is embodied vividly. The character is under pressure of id, with the id finding a new way out under the limitation of super-ego. This will make the three intertwined in the conflict and contradiction. In addition to this, Elizabeth does not accept the first offer of Mr. Darcy once again proved that in Elizabeth’s consciousness, the desire to get the advanced needs is so strong. The judgment that Elizabeth makes to Mr. Darcy is true, completely coming from her own feelings, and will not be changed because of Mr. Darcy’s property, his social status and the living materials. However, Darcy’s disgust for her family and relatives anomalies her when he proposed to her for the first time. Elizabeth thinks that Darcy is in fact to “violate her” “insult her”, so that she can not go to make comprises, regardless of dignity and promise this marriage. In the subconscious of Elizabeth, the need to “love”, the desire to the ultra-high aspirations once again makes the “id”, the “ego”, the “super-ego” intertwined with each other in the conflict and contradiction.

3. The Expression of Elizabeth’s “Ego”

3.1 Feelings of Frustration

If external things make a person get hurt, he or she is bound to be afraid of the external things emotionally. Mr. Bingley who is born in aristocracy rents the Niger Longurn, which is the symbol of wealth. That is simply incredible for the poor. As Mrs. Bennett said: “I do not believe Mr. Darcy is better served this kind of role in this story. As Elizabeth said: “I love him, he is not proud, I was wrong before, entirely wrong about him.” So, this shows what Elizabeth chases after is the sustenance of the spirit.

with him I believe it does not often happen. The world is blinded by his fortune and consequence, or frightened by his high and imposing manners, and sees him only as he chases to be seen” and Elizabeth that is so clever, can’t be aware what Wicham says is a complete lie. She is governed to totally by Wicham, so she is led by Wickham. Perhaps the self-repression allows Elizabeth to produce a super-emotional impulse, making her totally be. “Mr.Wickham in terms of character, the appearance, demeanor, the status, is far more than them.” Her good quality, is deceived by the lies from outside. A temporary psychological care seems to have been obtained sustenance. Lie is a lie. After all, in Mr. Darcy's letter "of what he has particularly accused me, I am ignorant; but of the truth of what I shall relate, I can summon more than one witness of undoubted veracity. Mr. Wickham is the son of a very respectable man, who had for many years the management of all the Pemberley estates you may imagine what I felt and how I acted. Regard for my sister's credit and feelings prevented any public exposure, but I wrote to Mr. Wickham, who left the place immediately, and Mrs.Younge was of course removed from her charge. Mr. Wickham’s chief object was unquestionably my sister's fortune, which is thirty thousand pounds; but I cannot help supposing that the hope of revenging himself on me was a strong inducement.” Of course, after reading, the main character, Elizabeth can not trust it. With a good nature, she dose not know whom she can believe. At that moment, ego and super-ego once again intertwine with each other in conflict and contradiction. The ego forces Elizabeth to consciously testify what Mr.Darcy has said under the pressure of super-ego. The result is that all the lies Wicham says have been recognized. At this time, Elizabeth begins to realize, that, Mr. Darcy has been admirng her, but because of the compulsion of the consciousness of the “instinct”, it makes “himself” get in trouble. As Freud said, “I succumbed to an overly strong desire to seek pleasure, and thus do some things against their conscience, and then my conscience punish me with a painful blame and let me feel shame of that this behavior shame.” This is super-ego. In this case, Elizabeth began to judge Mr.Darcy again through her rational point of view. The “ego” has been relieved slightly at this time and it entered the super-ego state.

4. The Expression of Elizabeth’s “Super-ego”

4.1 Accepting the Offer

As the owner of the Pemberley that is a promise estate industry, Mr. Darcy wins the crowd's attention from the very beginning: his burly stature, the delicate features, and noble manners. Therefore, less than five minutes when he arrives at the scene, all the people have a legend of his annual income of ten thousand pounds. Gentlemen praise him for a man of striking, the ladies thinking he is more handsome than Mr.Bingley. People have been looking at him with eyes of love for almost half of the night. Such a gentleman who enjoys popular confidence is naturally proud, and he is also eligible for pride. However, that is, such an elegant gentleman, because of the sexual impulses of the “id”, and the rational analysis of the “ego”, with the consciousness of the “super-ego”, he designs to pour out love to Elizabeth. However the expression hurts Elizabeth’s feelings and he is blamed by her. This have a sense of inferiority in front of his loved one, which result in fearing of love for being full of misgivings, afraid to let go in pursuit of true love.

Loving at first sight of Mr. Darcy, Elizabeth has a prejudice because of Darcy's arrogant attitude and it makes each other’s emotion reach impasse. The realization of the ego-ideal is often driven by the “id”, and is limited by the “super-ego”. As Freud said, “the ego is driven by the id, and is constrained by the super-ego, and is excluded by the reality, for struggling for the economic task that is not completed, so that it can guide all kinds of power and influence to achieve harmony”. [3] The character Elizabeth is in pursuit of love, “which is engaged in fierce struggle in her heart, and is finished although there are under the rapid sublimation effect and the agreement”.[4] Super-consciousness, forces her re-evaluate this gentleman. Therefore, after realizing the lies of Wicham, the understanding to Mr.Darcy and the super-consciousness of the love to him take shape instantly, “if I love you little, we can talk more” “It is a coincidence, your answer always makes sense, I also understand the reason why this happens, and admit this answer”, for this reason, Darcy's second suitor is accepted logically.

Elizabeth's family background is similar to Charlotte’s family, her “physical needs” (survival needs) and the "security needs" should be the same as Charlotte that is urgent to be met. However, she has not thought simply marriage as sources of access to food, clothing and security. She was very seriously declined Collins's proposal of marriage, giving up a great opportunity to meet her "physical needs" and "security needs". This shows that, in Elizabeth's consciousness, her need for a rank level is different from the general one. Her concept of values is different from the other people’s concept which is to tend to worship different substances, highlighting the need for higher levels which is the spiritual one. This has a very obvious noble nature: “people with such values will become martyrs for their pursuit of an ideal or value because they can give up everything”.[6] Elizabeth rejects Darcy’s marriage proposal for the first time. It once again proves that in her consciousness, how strongly the desire to meet the advanced needs is! The judgment that is to re-judge Darcy is entirely out of Elizabeth’s own personal feeling. It will not be changed because of his property, the status of the material which can give her the satisfaction. When Darcy reveals a marriage proposal to her, he despises her relatives, the family’ which, makes her very objectionable. Elizabeth thinks that Darcy is in fact to "violate" her, "insult" her. Her strong "self-esteem needs", which makes her not go to make compromises, and promise that marriage regardless of dignity.

4.2 Happy Marriage

“My feeling and hope is still the same, but as long as you never mentioned a word I would, if, in any case, if you change your mind, I must tell you that you have captured my soul and body, I love ... ... I love you! From now, I do not want to separate with you!” when Elizabeth agrees to Darcy's second marriage proposal, his “love needs” and “self-esteem needs” have been met. The ego changes into the super-ego and then the ego-ideal is also achieved. The love she has accepted a mature love, and her love is built on the mutual understanding, care, responsibility and respect. In her more contact with Darcy, she gradually realizes that “he is the most suitable man for her in all aspects. Even if his views, his temper, are not as same as hers, they must be able to call her bed of roses.” In addition, everything that Darcy does about Lydia is enough to make him deserve respect in dealing with different things. Finally, Elizabeth has a powerful speech with Lady Catherine for the lady obstructs Elizabeth to be with Mr. Darcy, “your nephew is a gentleman, I am a gentleman’s daughter, we are all well-matched”. This also proves that she is satisfied with “self-esteem needs” in love. Because the real love “is to maintain their dignity and individuality under the premise of the behavior of emotional exchange,” “Love acknowledges the value of their own and keeps one's own dignity and individuality.” The character Elizabeth sticks to her outlook in life, values, love. The overcoming of id, the satisfaction of ego, and the realization of super-ego intermingling with each other which makes the protagonist Elizabeth acceded to the final, happy marriage.

5. Conclusion

Such comments in French historian Andre Bierjiai’s family history are about the eighteenth and nineteenth-century England Marriage: “Love in the realities of marriage is doomed to be a compromise to reality and gets its power, in the fictional literature”. The combination of Darcy and Elizabeth is gave an obvious literary idealistic style. It is not difficult to find that their emotional entanglements are occurred between the “love need” and “self-esteem” from Humanistic Psychology, and eventually, love harvests its fruit from mutual respect –marriage. Although the “ego” seems pitiful under the harsh conditions of the “id” and under the abusive practices of the super-ego seems pitiful, but the awareness of the “id” that is the need to survive, and super-consciousness of love, finally has to be reflected through rationality and the good quality. “Physiological needs” and “spiritual needs” eventually make the two protagonists be in love for all seasons.

Therefore, on the road of pursuing love, we must strengthen our faith, and do not make impulsive decision just because of money, fame and fortune, etc. we should persist in uphold the search for true love. If the other side has some of the shortcomings which you can not tolerate, and he can not change, you should give up resolutely. Of course, you should cherish each other, not because you can not change the decision, but because the happiness is to be managed by yourself.
