FOREWORD

The Cleveland Public Schools with the cooperation of the Ohio Department of Education have conducted a demonstration project in World and European History for the past two years. This project has been supported by funds that were appropriated through legislative action.

The Academically Talented World History and Advanced Placement European History courses were designed to provide enrichment and acceleration for a selected group of able pupils. The teachers' guides were developed by teachers and supervisors who were working with this program.

These guides are presented to the educators of Ohio as further evidence of our continued interest in providing for the gifted child. It is my hope that other schools throughout Ohio will benefit from these guides for enriched instruction.

E. E. HOLT
Superintendent of Public Instruction
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Division of Special Education is grateful to the members of the Social Studies Steering Committee of the Cleveland City Schools for their contributions to this publication. The committee included:

Administrators who provided inspiration, leadership, and guidance to the committee:
- Dr. William B. Levenson, Superintendent
- Mr. Alva R. Dittrick, Deputy Superintendent
- Dr. Harry B. Ritchie, Assistant Superintendent
- Mrs. Dorothy E. Norris, Directing Supervisor

Major Work Classes
- Mr. Clyde F. Varner, Social Studies Supervisor

The Directing Supervisor of the Division of Social Studies who coordinated the program and edited the teachers guides:
- Mr. Allen Y. King

The Projects Committee, composed of four teachers and a social studies supervisor who developed and prepared these teachers' guides:
- Mr. Everett F. Augspurger, Chairman
- Mr. Augustine Caliguere
- Mr. Howard J. Lawrence
- Mr. Edwin Naujoks
- Mr. Alien B. Richardson

To each of these people, we offer our sincere thanks and appreciation. We feel that their efforts produced a valuable addition to the enrichment of social studies in Ohio.

INTRODUCTION

Background

Several Cleveland high schools have had classes for academically talented pupils in World History and American History and Government for a number of years. James Ford Rhodes High School inaugurated a program in 1960 to prepare the more able students for the Advanced Placement test in American History. As a result of these classes, plans for the Academically Talented-Advanced Placement work in social studies in the Cleveland high schools were begun in the Spring of 1961.

The purposes of this program were (1) to meet the needs of and adequately challenge the potentials of those students in the secondary schools capable of completing an advanced program in social studies, and (2) to provide the course sequences needed for the implementation of this talent.

In the Academically Talented history classes, the students are expected to be creative, curious, persevering, capable of considerable independent study, and fully capable of profiting by unusual academic challenges.

The Advanced Placement courses strive to duplicate college courses in content; to develop in students a mastery of the facts and chronology of history; to acquaint them with documentary, analytical, historiographical, and interpretive materials, and to further develop the goals of the courses.

In both cases, special emphasis is placed on the development of techniques contributing to skill in the writing of papers and essay examinations. An attempt is made to gradually increase the length and difficulty of assigned papers and of essay examination questions. Pupil-teacher conferences are necessary to assist individual pupils in the development of skills in language usage and in the organization, selection, and presentation of relevant material. In the Advanced Placement classes, time is also devoted to the special preparation of the Advanced Placement students for the annual May examinations.

Suggestions for Using This Book

The primary suggestion for using this guide is to adapt the materials to meet the needs of your particular educational situation.
These guides provide materials for both acceleration and enrichment and should be helpful to all secondary social studies teachers. The user can develop his own combinations or modifications of the ideas and materials presented herein.

For your convenience, this booklet contains two guides separated by the colored divider. The tables of contents for the Academically Talented and Advanced Placement courses are found at the beginning of each guide. The unit table of contents, colored page, lists the pages and titles for each of the units of study. This organization will allow for ready reference to a given unit of study.

It is our hope that these guides can be adapted, modified, or used as written by secondary social studies teachers to assist in the improvement of their programs.

THE PROGRAM FOR TRAINING TALENT IN THE SOCIAL STUDIES

Academically talented students, because of their more acute perceptions and keener insight, should be trained to recognize and comprehend the attitudes and values of cultures other than their own.

The intellectual endowment of academically talented students permits them to acquire more than usual factual mastery of the social world around them. The content of their social studies education should be modified to provide them with greater knowledge of the present and of the historical past, both as an aid to understanding contemporary culture and as a discipline through which they may refine their judgments and enlarge their appreciations.

Intellectually gifted students are better prepared to deal with generalizations, abstractions, and relationships than less gifted youngsters; and their social studies instruction should correspondingly place greater emphasis on ideas, concepts, and theories than on mere factual content.

Social Studies For the Academically Talented Student
NEA and the National Council for the Social Studies
OBJECTIVES

1. To familiarize the pupil with the development of world civilization from the early beginnings to the present.

2. To introduce the pupil to the ideas, ideologies, and systems that have been important in the various world civilizations.

3. To develop in the pupil an understanding of and sympathy with certain values as acquired from a study of the world’s history.
   a. An appreciation of the worth of the individual and a realization of the dignity of man.
   b. An understanding of other times, other places, and other peoples.
   c. The development of perspective relative to the sources of modern society, emphasizing the similarity of problems of past and present and the successes and failures of earlier civilizations in their attempts to solve these problems.

4. To develop skills and abilities peculiar to historical scholarship.
   a. Ability to determine the relative importance of issues, events, conditions, and institutions and emphasize those of major significance.
   b. Ability to think critically with regard to controversial questions.
   c. Skill in writing on historical topics with concern for factual accuracy, clarity, logical organization, and effectiveness of expression.
   d. Skill in listening to an instructor—delivered lecture and in taking selective and meaningful notes.
   e. Skill in preparing papers on chosen historical topics with correct procedures in seeking reference materials, making annotations, using accepted forms, and developing specific ideas or points of view.
ORGANIZATION

The first semester of the course covers the history of man from prehistoric times through the pre-revolutionary era of European history in the late eighteenth century. The second semester carries the study from that point to the middle of the twentieth century.

While the basal textbook for this course is a standard high school world history text, pupils are required to make extensive use of other materials such as historical documents and the writings of numerous world historians providing differing interpretations of various aspects of world history. Pupils are expected to read extensively over a wide variety of topics.

Current events are also included since their study contributes to an improved understanding of the problems of the past.

Considerable use of essay type examinations is desirable in this course. Relatively simple objective and essay type tests are to be introduced in the first unit. In later units both the complexity and length of these tests are to be increased.

The ability to perform independent research and to communicate the findings in intelligent and effective writing is a skill that gifted persons need to develop. Research papers require students to enlarge their knowledge of a specialized area and provide exercise in historical method. The written paper should be a scholarly product of quality regardless of length. Experience has shown that two or three short papers of relatively limited scope serve better the development of research techniques than does a single long paper.

Map assignments for gifted pupils should involve not merely geographical identification and recognition but also interpretation.
MESSAGE TO THE STUDENT

You are now enrolled in an above-average World History course. You are, presumably, in the upper 15 or 20 per cent of the secondary school pupils of the United States. You have been placed in this course because of your ability to learn rapidly, to organize well, and to think logically. We expect you to be creative, curious, persevering, capable of considerable independent study, and fully capable of profiting by unusual academic challenges.

In this course you will be challenged to (1) develop habits of careful reading, critical thinking, good writing, scholarly analysis and research ability, (2) acquire a thorough knowledge of historical issues, (3) improve your ability to understand history in the making and its relationship to your community and the contemporary scene.

Finally, this course in World History may be a basis for the more advanced, more specialized, more detailed, more critical course in Advanced Placement European History through which you may earn college credit during your senior year in high school.

SUGGESTED COURSE RULES

1. Since this is a rigorous high school course designed for pupils of superior ability, they are expected to spend at least one hour outside of class preparing for each class period. Should they find themselves spending significantly more than that amount of time, they should discuss the situation with their teacher.

2. If they are unable to read an assignment before the class meets, they should notify their teacher as they enter the room. This situation is not expected to arise often. We expect to treat the students as adults. Adults have privileges to accompany their responsibilities.

3. Work must be submitted on time. Unless the student has an excuse, such as illness, his teacher will not accept late papers without a penalty.

4. Students are expected to contribute to class discussion.
5. Provision will be made to schedule conferences with the student to discuss his progress.

6. Each student is required to keep a loose leaf notebook (8½ x 11). This notebook will contain pertinent material obtained outside of class as well as class material.

7. Except for report cards, all work will be graded more severely than in regular classes. A student may receive a D on an examination or paper. This mark will mean that the instructor considered the paper D work by advanced standards. This mark will not necessarily mean that the student will receive a D on his report card.

8. All outside work is to be done in ink or typewritten.

9. Several short research papers will be required as the course progresses. Each student will find it to his advantage to purchase 3 x 5 bibliography cards and 5 x 8 note cards. Each student will use a manual giving necessary details on the format of a research paper. The manual used will be:

10. Examinations each consisting of an objective test and an essay test will be administered at frequent intervals.

Prehistoric Times
(5 days)

A Text—Chapters (Lessons 1, 2)

B. Major Topics
1. Origin of the earth
2. Origin of living organisms
3. The Ice Ages
4. Man and his ancestors
5. The Old Stone Age
6. The New Stone Age
7. Age of Metals
8. Development of writing and the calendar

C. Subjects for Collateral Reading (No encyclopedia)

It is suggested that a minimum of twenty-five pages of collateral reading be done on this unit.

1. Theories on the formation of the earth
2. Dinosaurs
3. Java man
4. Neanderthal man
5. Cro-Magnon man
6. Old Stone Age tools and weapons
7. New Stone Age tools and weapons
8. Religion of prehistoric man
9. Physical characteristics of the races of man
10. The invention and development of writing or

Reading from any of the books listed in the “Bibliography of General References” or in the “Recommended References” (Section H) in this unit.
The notes taken for collateral reading throughout the course may be used as the basis for panel discussions, brief papers, oral reports, or any other type of individual or group activity.

Three papers of approximately one thousand words each should be required for the first semester. These might be scheduled so as to reduce to a minimum extraordinary demands for time for marking. Notes taken for any of the collateral reading topics in any of the units may be used as the first step in the preparation of a paper and expanded as necessary to provide a satisfactory body of material.

D. Discussion Questions

Excellent discussion questions may be found under the heading “Applying History” on page 18 in the text.

E. Suggested Areas for Exploration

1. “Fire is the most basic of man’s discoveries.” Defend or refute this statement.
2. Compare Neanderthal man, Java man, and Cro-Magnon man.
3. Do you accept the literal definition of “homo sapiens”? Explain.
4. How does the story of early man illustrate the expression, “Necessity, the mother of invention”?

F. Map Studies

Orally indicate where these traces were located and discuss the significance of their location.

D. Discussion Questions

Excellent discussion questions may be found under the heading "Applying History" on pages 30, 37, 45, 54, 64, 76, 83, 90, 104, and 112 in the text.

E. Suggested Areas for Exploration

1. Compare the philosophy of the Egyptian religion at the time of the empire relative to immortality to modern religions.

2. The early rulers of Thebes built a dam at Aswan. What has been the recent significance of that location?

3. How does the early history of Mesopotamia illustrate the significance of geography in political history? Cite other examples.

4. Compare "Hammurabi's Code with present-day law. Do you consider it in any respects superior to present-day law? Why?

5. Compare the policies of the Assyrian rulers with those of the Persian rulers. What significance does this have for modern nations?

6. What advantage did their knowledge of the smelting of iron give the Hittites over their neighbors? Has predominance in the iron and steel industry served modern nations similarly?

7. Use the experience of the early Hindu communities to support the principle of free enterprise.

8. Analyze the teachings of Hinduism and Buddhism and compare them with the teachings of Christianity.

9. Continue the analysis of the effect of geography on history as related to the early Chinese.

10. Has Christianity had as much effect on the life and character of Christian nations as Confucianism had on the Chinese? Explain your answer.

11. What makes a battle decisive?
12. Compare Athenian democracy with American democracy. What features of Athenian democracy do you feel might be incorporated into our democracy? Justify your choices.

13. Socrates asked, “What is justice?” and “What is virtue?” How would you answer these questions?

14. What lessons are there for modern nations in the decline of the Greek city-states?

15. Did Alexander merit the epithet, “The Great”? Justify your answer.

16. The family unit played a vital role in the life of both early China and Rome. Discuss the significance of this to the history of these two countries and to modern nations.

17. Are the terms “republic” and “democracy” synonymous? Explain your answer.

18. Discuss slavery as a moral, social, and economic evil.

19. Your text says that many Romans justified Octavian’s seizure of dictatorial powers because it seemed to be the “only remedy for the strife-torn country.” This seems to support the adage, “The end justifies the means.” Do you accept this philosophy? Why or why not?

20. What is there in the history of the Roman Empire to support the values of a united Europe toward which many people today aspire?

21. Compare the “melting pot” which the Roman Empire was spoken of as being by your text with the concept as applied to the United States.

22. Which would you say was the one single greatest contribution of the ancient Greeks and Romans to our culture. Justify your choice.

F. Map Studies

1. “Egyptian Empire, 1450 B. C.,” page 27
   a. On a large outline map of the World draw a duplicate of this map.
   b. Explain the importance of the locations on the map which are significant in the history of ancient Egypt.

2. “Babylonian Empire about 2000 B.C.,” page 34
   a. On the same outline map as above draw a duplicate of this map.

   a. With penciled shading indicate on the same outline map as above the extent of the Persian Empire and with diagonal lines the Fertile Crescent.
   b. Explain the importance of the locations on the map which are significant in the period from 1500 to 500 B.C.

4. "Ancient India," page 50
   a. Make a free hand map duplicating this one, with the locations indicated.
   b. Be prepared to write an explanation of the significance of the places on this map.

5. "Ancient China," page 59
   a. Be prepared to write briefly concerning the significance in Chinese history of each of the dynasties indicated on this map.

   a. On a wall map locate the places where the ancient Greeks made early settlements.

7. "Ancient Greece, 480 B.C.," page 75
   a. Be prepared to write briefly on the significance of the following places in Greek history:
      (1) Sparta

Excellent discussion questions may be found under the heading “Applying History” on pages 122, 129, 137, 143, 150, 158, 168, 181, 186, 192, and 206 in the text.

E. Suggested Areas for Discussion

1. What lessons are there in the fall of the Roman Empire to modern nations?
2. What are the factors which differentiate a barbarian society from a civilized society?
3. How do you account for the rapid spread of Christianity throughout the Roman Empire?
4. Analyze the statement, “Times of trouble have often been marked by great spiritual advances” as to validity and the explanation for it.
5. Evaluate Charlemagne’s influence on history.
6. Justify the use of the phrase “the terrible ninth and tenth centuries”.
7. As you have studied various empires and kings, has there been any evidence that those who were most religious were most successful? Explain.
8. Why has the codification of law always been considered a major achievement in the history of a nation?
9. Compare the teachings of Islam to those of other modern religions.
10. Explain the meaning of the statement, “One hour of justice is worth more than seventy hours of prayer.”
11. How do you account for the fact that Indian civilization was not as seriously affected by the barbarian invasions as was western Europe?
12. Were invasions of foreigners a boon or detriment to India? Justify your answer.
13. Has gunpowder been more a boon or detriment to civilization? Justify your answer.
14. Compare the effect of foreign invasions on India and on China.
15. What do you consider the greatest achievement of feudalism? Its greatest weakness? Why?
16. Compare medieval tournaments and jousts with modern sporting events. Were they more or less ethical? Justify your answer.
17. Was the institution of serfdom more or less evil than slavery? Justify your answer.
18. Compare the manorial system with share cropping as it exists in the United States.
19. Compare the conflict of medieval towns and feudal lords with the conflict between rural and urban areas today.
20. The emergence of the middle class was one of the most significant developments of the late Middle Ages. Why?
21. Explain how the church came to control so many functions which we normally assume to be government responsibilities. What is the significance of this in current controversies over governmental authority.
22. The Inquisition was one of many examples in history of religious “purges”. How have religious leaders justified such action?
23. Do you believe reason or authority to be the better means of proving a point? Why? In what areas of thought is reason most frequently used? In what areas, authority?
24. What is the significance of the fact that, in practically all early civilizations, structures related to religion were the outstanding examples of the architecture of the period? Do you believe that the premise of this question is true?

F. Map Studies

1. “Barbarian Invasions into the Roman Empire,” page 120
   a. Be prepared to trace the various invasions of the barbarians on a wall map of Europe.

Reading of any of the books listed in Section H of this unit or in the "Bibliography of General References."

Three papers of approximately one thousand words each should be required for the second semester. These might be scheduled so as to reduce to a minimum extraordinary demands for time for marking. Notes taken for any of the collateral reading topics listed under C may be used as the first step in the preparation of a paper and expanded as necessary to provide a satisfactory body of material.

D. Discussion Questions

Excellent discussion questions may be found under the heading "Applying History" on pages 331, 338, 346, 355, 366, 380, 390, 400, and 412 in the text.

E. Suggested Areas for Exploration

1. Your author analyzes the effect that the War of Austrian Succession and the Seven Years' War had on the internal affairs of France. Similarly analyze the effect these two conflicts had on the internal affairs of the other countries involved.

2. How does the French Revolution illustrate the struggle over separation of church and state?

3. Is your author's harsh indictment of the Jacobins fully justified? Support your opinion.

4. Do your views of the meaning of "Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity" differ from those of the French revolutionists? How?

5. What characteristics of bad government can be pointed out in the various regimes that ruled France from 1715 to 1799?

6. Was the Napoleonic Code sufficiently important to justify Napoleon's statement, "I shall go down to posterity with my code in my hand"? Support your conclusion.

7. Why does your author put the word "new" in quotation marks in describing the phrase "the principle of compensation"?

8. Compare the meaning of the term "liberalism" as used by the middle class reformers of the early nineteenth century with your concept of the term as you believe it is used today.

9. It is stated that the early factories were generally located where sources of power and raw materials were near at hand. Discuss this as a factor in the location of the major industrial centers of modern Europe and the United States.
10. Discuss the statement, "His (George Stephenson's) locomotive, The Rocket, was soon "flying" over the smooth iron rails at thirty miles an hour, despite predictions that the human body could not endure such speed," in view of more recent developments.

11. Contrast humanists and humanitarians.

12. Account for the relatively slow growth of the cooperative movement in the United States as contrasted with its rapid growth in certain countries in Europe.

13. Explain the meaning of the steps of the scientific method.

D. Discussion Questions

Excellent discussion questions may be found under the heading “Applying History” on pages 424, 441, 450, 468, 475, 485, in the text.

E. Suggested Areas for Exploration

1. How does the acceptance of the British government as a very “progressive” one during the eighteenth century illustrate the relativity of terminology?
2. Draw parallels between the “rotten boroughs” in England and similar situations existent today.
4. Why was the Dreyfus Case a key to many of the “sore spots” in the political and social structure of France at that time?
5. What is your understanding of “cheap money”? What groups generally favor it and what groups generally oppose it? Why?
6. Has the two party system proven itself to be the basis of a strong government? Defend your answer. Contrast with (a) one-party and (b) multiple party systems.
7. Evaluate proportional representation as a possible democratic device to be adopted in the United States.
8. Why would a country prefer to have a democratic limited monarchy rather than a democratic republic?
9. Contrast the characters and methods of Mazzini, Cavour, and Garibaldi.

48
10. How does the history of Italy in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries demonstrate that colonial empire is not an unmixed blessing to the empire-building nation?

11. Trace the devices employed by Otto von Bismarck in achieving German unity. Prove or disprove that they succeeded not because of themselves but because of circumstances and personalities existent at the time which helped assure their success.

12. Is the abandonment by the German people of the democratic struggle at the outbreak of World War I an isolated case, or has this occurred elsewhere? Explain.

13. If you had been a newspaper columnist in England at the time of the Crimean War would you have condemned or justified it? How?

14. How did the Congress of Berlin sow the seed of future war?

15. Discuss the use of "scapegoats" in history particularly with reference to the persecution of the Jews in Russia under Alexander III and Germany under Hitler. Cite other examples of "scapegoats."

16. Some have said that had Czar Nicholas II pursued a different course of action the whole history of the world from 1917 on would have been altered. Do you agree? Support your answer.

F. Map Studies

1. "Unification of Italy," page 457

E. Suggested Areas for Exploration

1. Was there any validity to the explanation given for imperialism that it was “the white man’s burden” to civilize “his little brown brothers”? Substantiate your answer.
2. The authors of the textbook list a number of criticisms of imperialism. Evaluate each of them.
3. Define enlightened imperialism. Do you feel enlightened imperialism was a positive value to the natives of the areas involved? Justify your conclusion.
4. In what respects was Africa the “Dark Continent” when the imperialist venture began? Have the events since changed this situation? Explain your conclusion.
5. Were the Chinese justified in their attitude toward European encroachment?
6. What factors explain Japan's more rapid westernization than that of China?

7. Evaluate British policies in India prior to Indian independence.

8. On what occasions had Britain proved itself "ever suspicious of Russian designs?"

9. How did the United States display a unique attitude among imperialist nations in its actions at the conclusion of the Spanish American War?

10. Explain so-called "dollar diplomacy" and trace its use as an American policy.

11. Analyze the reasons for the long and bitter struggle between Ireland and England. Was Ireland or England the more unreasonable? Support your conclusion.

12. On the basis of your author's analysis of the advantages and disadvantages of imperialism to the nations who pursued the policy, which, in your judgment, outweighs the other—advantages or disadvantages? Why?

13. Pacifists have been accused of being "starry-eyed idealists". Do you agree? Why?

14. Some have attempted to place the blame for World War I on a single country. If this were possible, what country would you so castigate? Why?

15. The failure of the Russian armies was one of the most important aspects of World War I. Why?

16. Evaluate the author's list of the beneficial results of World War I.

17. The author describes Woodrow Wilson as "scholarly, idealistic." What proved to be the significance of these characteristics of Mr. Wilson in the aftermath of the war?

18. Evaluate the failure of the United States to enter the League of Nations.

19. The author terms World War I "a futile conflict." Do you agree? Why?

20. Explain "passive resistance." Evaluate its effectiveness as a policy to gain the goals of an individual, a group, or a nation.

21. Collective farming as instituted by the communist government in Russia has been one of its most serious failures and that of other countries who have adopted it. Why?
22. Analyze Russian foreign policy on the basis of the saying, "The more things change, the more they remain the same."

23. Communism and Fascism are both forms of totalitarianism. What are their points of similarity and dissimilarity?

24. What were the major weaknesses and the major strengths of Mussolini's policies?

25. Were the Germans justified in their feeling about the Treaty of Versailles? Substantiate your answer.

26. What clues to Adolf Hitler's role as the Nazi dictator of Germany can be found in his life and career up to 1933?

27. What is a reactionary? Explain how reactionaries were responsible for much of the debacle of the post-World War I period.

28. How were the western democracies, in turn, responsible also for the situation?

29. What is appeasement? It was a basic facet of Britain's foreign policy in the post-World War I period. What was the result?

30. How was the ineffectiveness of the League of Nations demonstrated prior to its collapse?

31. Evaluate Franklin D. Roosevelt's policies in regard to World War II from the invasion of Poland until our entry into the war.

32. One of the most important decisions ever made by an American President was Truman's decision to drop the atomic bomb. Justify his decision.

33. In what respects is the United Nations an improvement over the League of Nations?

34. Was the criticism of the agreements made at the Yalta conference justified?

35. Many historians consider the Truman Doctrine one of the most adroit acts of statesmanship in recent U.S. history. Do you agree? Support your answer.

36. The Korean War is one of the most controversial events in our recent history? On what counts? What is your opinion?

37. Is it to the best interests of the United States of America that a United States of Europe be created? Support your answer.
38. Explain the "sin of nationalism" from the Communist point of view.

39. Nehru's neutrality in the current world controversies has been sharply criticized by many Americans. What is your opinion on this issue?

40. Evaluate American policy regarding Egypt in the period following World War II.

In drafting a syllabus for the Advanced Placement Examination in European History, the committee had the following situation in mind. The committee felt that, however much the introductory course in European history may vary from college to college, there exists a common level of quality and approach which all would agree is the desired characteristic of such courses. Therefore, the committee has not attempted to outline a particular course for the schools but rather to define the level of approach, coverage, and kind of materials which any course proposing to qualify students for college credit should comprehend. It is recommended that the school course be taken in the student's senior year, although in some instances it may be taken in the junior year or spread over the junior and senior years. Some schools may be able to set up a special course or an advanced section of a regular course; others may find it possible only to make extra and guided work available to the most promising students.

Course
The level and scope of an advanced course are indicated by three aspects of European history study which the examination will cover.

First, the examination will test whether the student has an adequate knowledge of the general narrative of European history from 1450 to 1939 as set out in any mature college textbook.

Second, the student's specific and intensive knowledge of whichever one of the following four periods of European history he has selected as his period of concentration will be tested. Under each period the committee has suggested a series of topics to be covered, more as an indication of the scope and intensity of the treatment desired than as an effort at an irreducible minimum. Although one period must be chosen by each student as his period of concentration, he will also be tested on his understanding of the relationship of this period to the general narrative of European history. As is suggested, he should be aware of and will be tested on the Middle Ages as a prologue to modern European history.

The prologue and four periods, with suggested topics, are:

Prologue: The legacy of the Middle Ages
1. The developing social hierarchy: the manorial economy, the estates and their functional interrelations, capitalism in the Middle Ages, aristocracy and the rising middle class.

2. The universal church: the hierarchy, orthodoxy and heresy.

3. Feudal monarchy, law, and representative government.

4. The medieval mind: the universities, rationalism and experimental science, art and architecture.

1450-1660

1. Renaissance in Italy and the North; individualism, secularization, the new learning, and art.

2. The Protestant revolution: its theological, political, economic, and social aspects; the counter-reformation and militant Protestantism.

3. Expansion in Europe and overseas.

4. The price revolution and mercantilism.

5. The emergence of the modern state; the English Civil War.

1660-1789

2. The scientific revolution and the Enlightenment.

3. The enlightened despots and the bureaucratic state.

4. Constitutional developments and the cabinet system in Great Britain.

5. The age of Louis XIV and the ancient regime in France and in Europe.

6. The balance of power in Europe and overseas.

7. The early phases of the agricultural and industrial revolutions.

1789-1870

1. The French Revolution, Napoleon and the French imperium.

2. The Concert of Europe.

3. Romanticism, liberalism, the conservative reaction.

4. The revolutions of 1848: the impact on liberal nationalism.

5. Unification movements.

7. Socialism: Utopian and Marxian.

8. The industrial transformation of Europe.

72
1870-1938

1. Competitive nationalism and imperialism, prewar diplomacy and the alliance system.
2. Science and society.
3. The capitalism of the large firm.
4. Socialism and the social service state.
5. The First World War, the collapse of the established order, and the postwar search for security.
6. Totalitarian revolutions in Russia, Italy, and Germany.
7. The world-wide depression and its impact on the political, social, and economic order.
8. The genesis of the Second World War.

Third and equally important, the examination will test the student’s ability to see the facts of history in context; distinguish causes, results, and significance; read historical materials in a discriminating way and write effectively; and to weigh evidence and reach conclusions on the basis of facts, not prejudice.

In offering this syllabus it is the intent of the committee to encourage a high degree of flexibility. A mature textbook may well be the basis for an advanced course in school, which should be, however, considerably more than a textbook course. Some teachers may want students to read extensively in general historical books, special studies, biographies, or primary works; others may prefer to have them do intensive work in historical problems, documents, or questions of historical interpretations; still others may wish to concentrate for several weeks on special topics.

Courses should include some lecturing, the essay type of examination, the use and interpretation of maps, training in writing research papers, and guidance in note-taking.

Experience so far has shown that different kinds of courses do prepare students successfully for the European history examination. Intensive concentration for much of the year in one of the periods or in one country, or courses arranged largely around materials in the history of ideas have in their different ways proved satisfactory.

College Entrance Examination Board
Advanced Placement Programs Course Descriptions
OBJECTIVES

1. To familiarize the pupil with the development of western civilizations from the Middle Ages to the present time.

2. To develop the pupil's understanding and analytical judgment of the ideas, ideologies, and systems that have developed in modern Western Civilization.

3. To afford each pupil an opportunity to make a thorough and concentrated individualized study of one of the five major periods of European history from the Middle Ages to the present.

4. To develop in the pupil an understanding of and sympathy with certain values as acquired from a study of the world's history.
   a. An appreciation of the worth of the individual and a realization of the dignity of man.
   b. An understanding of other times, other places, and other people.
   c. The development of perspective relative to the sources of modern society, emphasizing the similarity of problems of past and present and the successes and failures of earlier civilizations in their attempts to solve these problems.

5. To develop skills and abilities peculiar to historical scholarship.
   a. Ability to determine the relative importance of issues, events, conditions, and institutions and emphasize those of major significance.
   b. Ability to think critically with regard to controversial questions.
   c. Skill in writing on historical topics with concern for factual accuracy, clarity, logical organization, and effectiveness of expression.
   d. Skill in listening to an instructor-delivered lecture and in taking selective and meaningful notes.
   e. Skill in preparing papers on chosen historical topics with correct procedures in seeking reference materials, making annotations, using accepted forms, and developing specific ideas or points of view.
ORGANIZATION

The first semester of the course begins with a brief summary of ancient history establishing the foundations of Western civilization. This is followed by a survey of the Middle Ages to determine the roots of modern European institutions. The remainder of the first semester is devoted to the history of Europe from the Renaissance through the pre-revolutionary era of the late eighteenth century. The second semester carries the story from that point to 1939.

A college textbook is the basis of this course. Pupils, however, are required to make extensive use of other materials such as historical documents and the writings of a number of European historians providing differing interpretations of various aspects of European history.

Current problems are generally dealt with as they can interlock into historical events and contribute to an improved understanding of the problems of the past.

Extensive use of the essay type examination is made in this course. Building upon the experience gained in the AT course, the complexity of the questions and the length of answers required are gradually increased throughout the school year, so that the student at the end of the course is familiar with the writing of answers requiring a full forty minute class period.

However, the objective type test is in no sense to be discarded or disregarded. This type of test can be used advantageously to measure the student's acquisition of factual material and of some basic skills, and it is easily scored. On the other hand, it does not readily lend itself to the measurement of some of the higher order of learnings sought in college-level work. To some extent this condition may be remedied by further research.

The Advanced Placement Examination, taken at the end of the course by those desiring to earn college credit, includes questions of both types. Examples of objective tests used in some of these examinations in the past may be found in Social Education, November, 1961, Volume XXV, number 7, pp. 335 ff. Copies of the essay questions of previous examinations may be purchased.
directly from the College Board Advanced Placement Examinations, Box 592, Princeton, New Jersey.

The abilities to perform independent research and to communicate the findings in intelligent and effective writing are among those which gifted persons need to develop. Research papers require students to enlarge their knowledge of a specialized area and provide exercise in historical method. The written paper should be a scholarly product of quality regardless of length. Experience has shown that two or three short papers of relatively limited scope serve better the development of research techniques than does a single long paper.

Map assignments for gifted pupils should involve not merely geographical identification and recognition but also interpretation.
MESSAGE TO THE STUDENT

You are enrolled in a college-level course in European History. This course will make extensive and advanced demands on the student, demands which approximate those of an introductory college course. The student is expected to achieve a mastery of the facts and chronology of European History, from the Middle Ages to the middle of the twentieth century, as presented in a standard college textbook. The textbook used in this course is Palmer's A History of the Modern World. Additional topic readings will be required of the student to acquaint him with the major documents, historians, and interpretations of European History.

Each student will also read extensively in a variety of works as he concentrates his studies on one area recommended by the College Entrance Examination Board's Committee on European History. Also, the student is expected to develop an ability to deal analytically and critically with the materials studied, and a reasonable facility in both the oral and written expression of ideas. Most meetings of the class will be devoted to discussion; some will be given over to reports; in others, the instructor will lecture.

In May of next year students enrolled in this course will be expected to take the Advanced Placement examination, a three-hour objective and essay test, drawn up and graded by committees of school and university teachers. If you pass this examination with a creditable mark—and we expect you to do so—the examiners will recommend to the college of your choice that you be given credit for the college survey course in European History and placement in advanced history courses. Many, but not all, colleges give both placement and credit; some give only placement; others do not acknowledge the Advanced Placement program at all. If you fail to pass this examination, you will have had still what is far more important, an interesting and challenging opportunity to develop your abilities far beyond the level you might have attained in a less demanding class.
SUGGESTED COURSE RULES

1. Since this is a college level course, students are expected to spend at least one hour outside of class preparing for each class period. Those who find themselves spending significantly more than that much time should discuss the situation with their teacher.

2. Students who are unable to read an assignment before the class meets should notify the teacher as they enter the room. This situation is not expected to arise often. He will not call on you for recitation during the class hour. Students will be treated as adults. Adults have privileges to accompany their responsibilities.

3. Work must be submitted on time. Unless the student has an excuse, such as sickness, the teacher will not accept late papers without a penalty.

4. Each student is expected to do his own work independently. The submission of a paper, map exercise, examination, or quiz attests that the writer has not received help from anyone else.

5. Except for report cards, all work will be graded on a college level. A student may receive a D on an examination paper. This mark will mean that the instructor considered the paper D work by university standards. This mark will not necessarily mean that the student will receive a D on his report card.

6. Students are expected to contribute to class discussion.

7. Each student is expected to keep a loose leaf notebook (8½ x11). This notebook should contain class notes, map exercises, notes taken from your supplementary readings, essays, corrected examinations, reports and other pertinent materials.

8. All outside work is to be done in ink or typewritten.

9. Provision will be made to schedule conferences with each student to discuss his progress.
10. Several short research papers will be required as the course progresses. Each student will find it to his advantage to purchase 3x5 bibliography cards and 5x8 note cards.

Each student will use a manual giving necessary details on the format of a research paper. The manual used will be:

D. Suggested Areas of Exploration (These may be used as the basis of discussion or research papers or essay questions.)
1. Why is modern civilization considered to be formed by the expansion of ideas, institutions, and industries which originated in Europe?
2. Why have the Greeks proved to be as gifted a people as mankind has ever produced?
3. What made it possible for the civilized world of the ancient West to enjoy generations of internal peace in the Roman Empire?
4. Why is it difficult to exaggerate the importance of Christianity? What new sense of life and unity did it bring to humanity?
E. Map Studies

1. Study the physical map of Europe and accompanying caption on pp. 5-7 in the text.
   a. What distinctive topographical features of Europe can you describe?
   b. On an outline map of Europe draw the approximate boundaries of the Roman Empire at its height (See page 15.)
   c. Be able to locate each of the following places:

D. Suggested Areas of Exploration

1. Why is modern Europe considered to have emerged in the 500 years from the 5th to the 10th centuries?

2. What were the major factors for the disintegration of the Roman Empire in the West after the 5th century A.D.?

3. Describe the three types of civilization which confronted each other across the Mediterranean about A.D. 700—Byzantine, Arabic, Western.

4. Why was it possible for the Christian Church to maintain a tie with the civilized past in the so-called “Dark Ages”?

5. How did Charlemagne temporarily unite the West about 800 A.D.?

D. Suggested Areas of Exploration

(Chapter IX)

1. What role did a rising aristocracy and a rising bourgeoisie play in bringing about the Revolution?
2. How much of a factor was the financial collapse of the government in precipitating the French Revolution?
3. How much legal authority did the body of men who took the Tennis Court Oath have to assume sovereign power?
4. Why did the King, in the dispute raging between nobles and commons, choose the nobles, although it was traditional for the King to oppose feudalism?
5. Why did the peasants desire to destroy the manorial system?
6. What did the Declaration of Rights of Man and Citizen affirm?
7. What effect did the Revolution have on the thinking of the people in Europe?
8. What was the famous if on which the Declaration of Pillnitz rested?
9. Why did the Girondists favor international revolution?
10. When war came, why did the people come to the aid of the revolution but not the revolutionary government?
11. What was the purpose of the convention which Robespierre helped to organize?
12. Why did the French people first support and then turn against the “Reign of Terror”?
13. Which class was triumphant after Thermidor?
14. Who were the enemies of the Directory on both the right and the left?
15. Why did Bonaparte seem to be the answer to many?
16. After 1799, while no longer revolutionary at home, why was France revolutionary outside its borders?

(Chapter X)

1. Why may the Treaty of Tilsit be considered the high point of Napoleon’s success?
2. Why did Napoleon believe in the unity of European civilization?
3. Would you agree with Napoleon that he was a great reformer and a man of the Enlightenment?
4. Against whom was the national awakening in Germany directed?
5. Why did the Allies begin to fear and distrust each other as they came closer to defeating Napoleon?
6. What were the weak and strong points of the Peace of Vienna?
7. In what ways was the United States affected by the developments of the Napoleonic period?

(Chapter XI)

1. What is meant by the term the Industrial Revolution? In what respects is it a continuing movement?
2. What conditions made it possible for England to initiate the machine age?
3. How were the working people in England affected by the Industrial Revolution?
4. What were the effects of the combined forces of industrialization and the French Revolution after 1815?
5. Describe the political forces which after 1815 were driving Europe toward a future still unknown.
6. How did the right and the left regard each other during the Metternich era?
7. Why did the Congress of Vienna fail to make progress after 1815 toward establishing an international order?
8. What effect did 1830 have on the future of liberalism?
9. What gains did the working man receive from the revolution of 1830?

(Chapter XII)
1. Was the revolution of 1848 a failure?
2. Why is the failure to produce a democratic Germany one of the overshadowing facts of modern times?
3. Why did the revolution come too late for Germany?
4. What unintended consequences of the revolution of 1848 were among the most far-reaching?
5. Why may Louis Napoleon be considered as an omen of the 1920's and the 1930's?

E. Map Studies

(Chapter IX)
1. Study the map on p. 368, "The French Republic and Its Satellites." What direct annexations had the Republic made? List the chief satellite republics. What did the Treaty of Campo Formio provide with respect to the German states?

(Chapter X)
1. On the basis of the maps on pp. 304-5 and 390-1, indicate on an outline map of Europe the boundaries of France in 1792. On the same map show at the height of Napoleon's power about 1810 the boundaries of (a) The French Empire, (b) The Grand Empire and its constituent parts, (c) the states allied with Napoleon. Indicate also the location of the most important battles of the Napoleonic era.
2. Using the map on pp. 304-5 and 414-15 as guides, on an outline map of Europe, show the European boundaries set by the Congress of Vienna in 1815. How do they compare with the boundaries in 1792.
3. Study the maps on pp. 199, 213 and 221: (a) What was meant by the Polish-Saxon question at the Congress of Vienna and (b) what effect did the peace settlement of 1815 have upon the boundaries of both Prussia and Russia?

a. Be able to locate each of the following places:

1. Turkey
2. Spain
3. Danube River
4. Finland
5. Poland

D. Suggested Areas of Exploration

(Chapter XIII)

1. In what respect was 19th century nationalism a kind of secular faith?

2. Describe the way in which the history of Europe, long inter-connected with that of the rest of the world, became merged with it entirely by the early 20th century?

3. How in the late 19th century did the history of the United States reflect that of the European world?

4. Describe the Canadian idea which was applied to the world-wide problem of colonialism.

5. In what way had the Europeans, in opening Japan, opened up more than they had anticipated?

6. For what aspects of Western civilization did other peoples feel a need and which they hoped to fill without losing their own spiritual independence?

7. Which aspects of Western civilization became the common ground for the interdependent world-wide civilization that emerged at the close of the 19th century?

8. Between 1850 and 1870, the revolutionized world had become an arena in which certain mighty beings, called nations or powers, were to act. Comment.

(Chapter XIV)

9. Would you agree that the essence of civilized life doubtless exists in the intangibles? Are these intangibles always agreed upon by persons or different cultures or ideologies?

10. Why was it possible in the 19th century economy for so few people to exercise so much economic power?

11. Before 1914, why did it seem that liberal, constitutional, and democratic government must some day emerge everywhere?

12. In the half century preceding World War I, what role had natural science played in developing an unqualified faith in the future of mankind?
13. Why, after 1860, was religion more threatened than ever before in the past?

14. What was the basic principle of the classical liberal?

15. How did France and other nations show that man’s approach to problems is not always rational?

16. How did the lack of rationalism affect the attitudes of parties or nations with conflicting interests?

17. Contrast the views of the old and new liberals.

E. Map Studies

(Chapter XIII)

1. Based upon the maps beginning on pp. 415 and 515 in your text, show on an outline map of Europe the separate political divisions of Italy in 1815 before unification. On the same map indicate the year in which each of these states became part of the united Italy.

2. Using the same outline map as above and with maps on p. 523, 528-9, and 199 as a basis, (a) show the boundaries of the German Empire at the creation in 1871, (b) indicate the stages or dates by which the major states became part of the Empire, (c) shade the areas forming the Kingdom in Prussia in 1871.

3. Compare the map of Europe in 1871 (pp. 414-415) with that of 1923 (pp. 700-1). Explain this statement: “The map of Europe from 1871 to 1918 was the simplest it has ever been before or since.”

4. Study the map on page 515, “Nation Building”. What developments were taking place in the four areas shown?

(Chapter XIV)

1. On an outline map of Europe, draw the boundary lines dividing the inner and outer zones of Europe in the years 1871-1914 as they are described on pages 557-8 in your text.

D. Suggested Areas of Exploration

(Chapter XV)

1. In the 20th century, what ideas which they learned from Europe did non-European and subject peoples begin to assert? What effect did their position have on broadening European history into the history of the world?
2. Was imperialism totally unworthy? What major factor makes it seem so?
3. Evaluate the role of American imperialism with respect to Latin America?
4. Why are the results of imperialism in China about 1900 an excellent example of why the term “imperialism” came to be held in abomination by so many of the world’s people?

5. How did the Japanese victory over Russia (1904-05) put an end to Europe’s world supremacy?

(Chapter XVI)

6. Why did Europe in 1914 instead of continuing towards a higher plateau, full of benign progress and more abundant civilization stumble into disaster?

7. Comment on the statement that the alliance system was only a system of deeper trouble. Show conflict between an international economy and a national political system.

8. Describe the basic changes that European society was forced into by World War I which proved more lasting than the war itself.

9. During World War I, why was freedom of thought discarded in Europe by a society which had respected it for half a century?

10. Describe the basic ideas and objectives which Wilson desired to accomplish.

11. Why was there thought to be something sinister about peace conferences of the past?

12. Why was it felt that treaties had long been wrongly based on a politics of power and desire to maintain a balance of power?

13. To what extent did nationalism triumph at the Paris peace conference?

14. Why was the World War I a bitter victory for democracy?

15. What progress toward the solution for the basic problems of modern civilization, industrialism and nationalism, economic security and international stability was made as a result of World War I?

(Chapter XVII)

16. What sense of economic participation has the average man felt in the U.S.S.R.?

17. Why were the socialists the most hated foes of the communists?

18. In what ways has the U.S.S.R. exerted its greatest influence on the world?
19. Why were the so-called "backward" peoples, especially in Asia, particularly impressed by the achievements of the U.S.S.R.?

(Chapter XVIII)

20. Explain the following statement: from the formal close of the first World War in 1919 to the outbreak of the second World War in 1939, the world made a dizzy passage from confidence to disillusionment and from hope to fear.

21. Why is imperialism considered an aspect of capitalism in Marxist-Leninist ideology? To what extent is the U.S.S.R. itself imperialistic?

22. Why did nationalism in Asia shade off into socialism and the denunciation of capitalistic exploitation?

23. Which "ism" overshadowed all others in the post-war situation in Asia after 1919?

24. What aspects of Marxism exert a strong appeal in India?

25. Describe effects of the great depression on the spirit of the people. To what new and disturbing political ideas did the people turn?

(Chapter XIX)

26. In the 1920's, people had believed that the 20th century was realizing all those goals summed up in the idea of progress. Why did they now begin to fear that progress was a phantom?

27. Describe the nightmare of the 1930's ushered in by the great depression.

28. How did conditions accompanying the great depression affect existing political institutions?

29. Explain the term "deficit financing." Was it necessary?

30. Why could no one be neutral about Roosevelt and the New Deal?

31. How do conditions of waging modern war lead to concentration of governmental power?

32. Was totalitarianism an escape from the realities of class conflict? Why did democracies admit that they suffered from internal class problems?

33. In Nazi and Fascist ethics, why was war a noble thing and the love of peace a sign of decadence? What was the Soviet attitude toward war?

(Chapter XX)

34. Comment on the following statement: The human world has been in a grip of a cataclysm since 1914.

35. What was the attitude of the Soviet Union toward its allies during the war? What contributions did the allies make to the Soviet war effort?

36. How would you defend the agreements made by the British and American representatives at the Yalta Conference? Why have the “concessions” made to the Soviet Union there since been criticized?

37. Why did native nationalists in Asia show a willingness to accept communist leadership?

38. What was the reaction of Americans to the security program in the United States?

39. Comment on the following statement: Broadly speaking, the second World War created no wholly new problems for mankind, but it greatly aggravated certain basic problems that had troubled the world for over a century.

40. In the post-World War II period, why were scientists so embarrassed, so aroused, over moral and social issues? Why had science misfired?

41. Do you agree that Americans spend more time trying to correct the lack of economic security than the Soviets do in trying to correct the lack of freedom?

42. How has the development of atomic weapons affected relations among major powers? among small nations? between major powers and small nations?

E. Map Studies

(Chapter XV)

1. Study the map on page 633, “The Dissolution of the Ottoman Empire”. What successive stages may be observed in the territorial disintegration of the Ottoman Empire? What had happened to the empire by 1914? by 1923?

2. Referring to page 643 in your text, on an outline map of Africa, show the recognized holdings of the European powers by 1914. Draw arrows indicating the direction of expansionist pressure of the Germans, the French, and the British about 1898.
a. Be able to locate the following places:

(1) Mediterranean
(2) Sahara
(3) Gold Coast
(4) Ivory Coast
(5) Slave Coast
(6) Nile River
(7) Congo River
(8) Victoria Falls
(9) Zanzibar
(10) Congo Free State
(11) Ethiopia
(12) Liberia
(13) Nigeria
(14) Uganda
(15) Angola
(16) Mozambique
(17) Somaliland
(18) Eritrea
(19) Red Sea
(20) German East Africa
(21) Dakar
(22) Gulf of Aden
(23) Lake Chad

(26) Fashoda State
(27) Cape Colony
(28) Natal
(29) Orange Free State
(30) Cape of Good Hope
(31) Libya

3. Referring to pages 650-1 in your text, on an outline map of Asia, show the expansion by 1914 of the foreign powers in Asia. What gains, territorial and non-territorial, had been made by each of the major powers by 1914?

a. Be able to locate the following places on a map:

(1) Amur River
(2) Indo-China
(3) Mongolia
(4) Tibet
(5) Peking
(6) Manchuria
(7) Nanking

(11) Shanghai
(12) Yangtze
(13) Vladivostok
(14) Burma
(15) Korea
(16) Port Arthur
(17) Trans-Siberian R.R.
(18) Tokyo
(19) Persia
(20) Shantung Peninsula

4. Study the map on page 656. Why can it be said that the area of northeast China and adjoining regions has long been one of the world's trouble zones? What reasons would there be for the interest of both Russia and Japan in the area? Of what significant value was this area in the years before the first World War? In the years since the second World War?
(Chapter XVI)

1. Be able to locate each of the following:
   (1) Alsace                  (13) Serbia
   (2) Lorraine               (14) Bosnia
   (3) Berlin                 (15) Herzegovina
   (4) Triple Alliance        (16) Austro-Hungary Empire
   (5) Dual Alliance          Empire
   (6) Triple Entente         (17) Croatia

   (8) Ottoman Empire         (19) Bulgaria
   (9) Constantinople         (20) Greece
   (10) Adriatic Sea          (21) Crete
   (11) Black Sea             (22) Sarajevo
   (12) Rumania               (23) North Sea

2. What does the map on page 671 reveal about the nature of the land fighting in First World War?
   a. Be able to locate each of the following places:
      (1) Switzerland           (14) Tyrol
      (2) Belgium               (15) Trieste
      (3) East Prussia          (16) Ukraine
      (4) Marne River           (17) Dardanelles
      (5) English Channel       (18) Bosporus
      (6) London                (19) Sea of Marmara
      (7) North Sea             (20) Serbia
      (8) Rotterdam             (21) Verdun
      (9) Copenhagen            (22) St. Petersburg
      (10) Norway               (23) Brest-Litovsk
      (11) Gibraltar            (24) Baltic States
      (12) Ireland              (25) Chateau-Thierry
      (13) Jutland              (26) Argonne

3. The maps on pages 700-1, 528-9, and 437 ii: the text may be used as the basis for an outline map of Europe on which you show the political boundaries of Europe in 1923 including the terms of the Peace of Paris of 1919 and other postwar settlements. How does the map of Europe differ now from that of Europe in 1914? How closely does it now conform to the distribution of language groups in Europe?

a. Be able to locate each of the following places:

   (1) Baltic States  (10) Russia

(13) Peking
(14) Hong Kong
(15) Singapore
(16) Japan
(17) Nanking
(18) Manchuria
(19) Mukden
(20) Korea

(Chapter XIX)

1. Consult the map on pp. 700-1. Can you locate the trouble zones of the 1930's?

(Chapter XX)

1. Study the map on pp. 4-5, "Europe, 1942." Which areas had been incorporated into Hitler's "Empire" since 1938? Which states were allied with Germany in the war? Occupied by the Axis? At war against the Axis?

a. Be able to locate each of the following places:

(1) Poland
(2) Germany
(3) Estonia
(4) Latvia
(5) Lithuania
(6) Leningrad
(7) Norway
(8) Denmark
(9) Netherlands
(10) Belgium

- (24) Nagasaki
- (25) Casablanca
- (26) Cairo
- (27) Teheran
- (28) Yalta
- (29) Potsdam
- (30) Dairen

3. On an outline map of Europe, indicate the major political boundaries of Europe in 1955. Use the information from the maps on pages 222, 730-1 and front end papers. Show also: (a) Russian territorial expansion in Eastern and Central Europe during and after the second World War; (b) changes in the Polish-German border in the same years. Which of the new Russian areas were Russian in the years before the first World War? Which were not? Which European areas and states have been in the Soviet sphere of influence since the second World War?

4. Study the map on pp. 852-3. “The World, 1955” and the papers at the back of the book. What major political changes have taken place in the world since the second World War? Which areas of the World map have been in the Soviet sphere of influence since the second World War?

SEMINAR—INDIVIDUALIZED STUDY—REVIEW
(13-15 days)

Since a major purpose of the student in enrolling in the AP European History course is that of establishing his eligibility for college credit on the basis of achievement on the Advanced Placement Examination, there is need to bear in mind the three aspects of European history study which the examination will cover:

"First, the examination will test whether the student has an adequate knowledge of the general narrative of European history from 1450 to 1939 ........."

"Second, the student's specific and intensive knowledge of whichever one of the following four periods of European History he has selected as his period of concentration will be tested ........."

(a) 1450-1600 (b) 1660-1789 (c) 1789-1870 (d) 1870-1939

(For specific topics to be covered for each of these periods see pages 1-3.)

"Third and equally important, the examination will test the student's ability to see the facts of history in context; distinguish causes, results, and significance; read historical materials in a discriminating way and write effectively; and to weigh evidence and reach conclusions on the basis of facts, not prejudice ...."

In order that students might be able to prepare adequately for this examination the time allocated to the study of the two major units included in the second semester's work has been held to approximately fourteen weeks. Since the Advanced Placement Examination is usually held during the third week of May, it is suggested that during the final week of April the class might well begin a period of intensive preparation.

The type of classroom activities scheduled during this period should vary, depending upon the needs and interests of individual students as reflected in their choices of periods of concentration. Seminars, with students electing the same period of concentration assuming responsibility for review activities relating to that period, might well be in order. There should also be much individual work with student's papers relating to their particular periods of concentration. Intensive review activities should be provided even for those periods of concentration not selected by any members of the class. Finally, the activities of this preparation period should emphasize the development of the various abilities described under the third aspect of European history study as outlined above. In short, these thirteen to fifteen days should be used to enable each student to achieve his best possible mark on the examination.
BASIC LIBRARY
for the
INTRODUCTION OF AT-AP WORLD-EUROPEAN HISTORY
in
SENIOR HIGH SCHOOLS

A substantial part of the cost incidental to the introduction of a special course in World History for Academically Talented pupils and an Advanced Placement European History Course is represented by the outlay necessary for the purchase of adequate supplementary reading materials.

These materials include:

(A) Basal textbooks
(B) Supplementary General or Period Accounts
(C) Books of General Reference
(D) Collections of Historical Readings
(E) Materials Dealing with Issues in Historical Interpretation
(F) Specialized Topics and Accounts

The use of paperbacks offers some help in reducing the cost of these materials. However, if such books are to be subjected to extensive use over a period of several semesters, schools would be well advised to rebind them with "hard" or cloth covers before issuing them to pupils. Some paperbacks, those costing less than one dollar, are so inexpensive that schools may wish to encourage pupils to purchase their own individual copies.

The number of copies of each title needed will depend upon the size of the class. In general, each pupil should be provided with a copy of the basal text. For books of general reference—atlases, dictionaries, and encyclopedias—one copy might well meet the needs of an entire class. Of those titles in which readings are to be assigned to all members of the class, there should be a minimum of one copy for each three pupils—a class of twelve would require at least four copies. Such books might be placed on reserved shelves in the school library according to the following code:
