A COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN CHORAL DIRECTORS ASSOCIATION HAS PREPARED A SUGGESTED PROGRAM DESIGNED TO REFLECT THE HETEROGENEOUS INTERESTS OF JUNIOR COLLEGE STUDENTS AND TO SERVE ALL APPLICANTS, WHETHER THEY BE TRANSFER, TERMINAL, OR ADULT STUDENTS. THE ASSOCIATION GOALS ARE (1) TO OFFER A GRADED MUSIC CURRICULUM, (2) TO INSURE ADEQUATE FACULTY OF MUSIC EDUCATORS, (3) TO DEVELOP DISCRIMINATION IN THE CHOICE OF CHORAL LITERATURE, (4) TO PROVIDE AN ADEQUATE FESTIVAL PROGRAM, (5) TO RELATE THE CHORAL PROGRAM TO THE TOTAL MUSIC CURRICULUM AND TO THE COMMUNITY, AND (6) TO ARRANGE A VARYING CONCERT SCHEDULE. THE AREAS COVERED IN THE PROGRAM ARE (1) CHORAL ORGANIZATIONS, (2) RELATED CURRICULUM OFFERINGS, (3) TYPES OF CONCERTS BY AND FOR THE CHORAL CLASSES, (4) CHORAL MATERIALS, AND (5) THE FESTIVAL PROGRAM; (6) COMMUNITY SERVICES; (7) CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES WITHIN THE JUNIOR COLLEGE; AND (8) A DESCRIPTION OF AREAS FOR FURTHER STUDY. THE DOCUMENT ALSO INCLUDES A DESCRIPTION OF O'HIO COLLEGE'S "SCHOLA CANTORUM", OR SYMPHONIC CHOIR, A PARTIAL LIST OF REPERTORY MATERIALS FOR A JUNIOR COLLEGE CHOIR, AND SOME TYPICAL MATERIALS FOR PLANNING A CHOIR FESTIVAL. THIS PAPER WAS PRESENTED AT THE NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN CHORAL DIRECTORS ASSOCIATION (SLATTLE, MARCH 13-14, 1968). (MO)

The Community College

"The junior college could be compared with the 'tomboy' next door. She has been there unnoticed for a long time, but suddenly she grew up and became beautiful and popular." And now she is to be reckoned with.

Today there are over 800 junior colleges throughout the country with a million and a quarter students enrolled. Historians of this movement describe the junior college as the only type of educational institution which can truly be stamped "Made in America" and as such it holds a unique position in our educational picture.

Although it is probably true that the Community or Junior College has a "blurred" public image, that it tries to be all things to all men, the fact remains that it is the nation's fastest growing form of higher education. It is estimated that by 1985 the nation will have to double its higher education facilities and construct a thousand new colleges. The importance of the community college in such a picture cannot be overemphasized.

By virtue of its "Open Door Policy" the community college is compelled to react to heterogeneous interests, to admit practically all applicants, to design its curriculum for transfer, terminal and adult students. It is committed to a broad curriculum and diverse clientele; it must respond to local needs and it must be prepared to change rapidly as the environment demands. This flexibility is a necessary part of its strength if it is to fulfill its philosophy. Perhaps this is why it is the most elastic of all institutions of higher learning. The community college must, therefore, serve and meet the many faceted needs of the community which supports it.

It was the feeling of the ACDA Board that a committee should be organized to analyze and to draw up guidelines for the junior college choral program which would be in keeping with the growing importance and influence of this segment of higher education. Such a committee was actuated and the results of its thinking comprise the report which is now available.

It was the committee's objective to suggest a choral program which would reflect the heterogeneous interests of junior college students, with the awareness that it must serve all applicants whether they be transfer, terminal, or adult students. We trust that the envisioned guidelines will be accepted as just that—guidelines which must be susceptible of modification.
To quote Dr. Stuart Marsee, the president of El Camino College, "The junior college should be everywhere, but only with quality. It should not be a haven for the incompetent, the lazy or for those without potential. The student must perform!" This reflects the thinking of the committee: musical excellence, performance excellence, respect for the choral art are never ending concerns.

Music performed poorly does not serve the art form, the intent of the composer, the singer or the listener. Music education will never flourish at any level in an atmosphere of mediocrity or of apathy. Even in the face of the manifest problems inherent in the junior college—student turnover, open door policy, etc.—the choral conductor in the community college must serve his singers and the music with zeal and intelligent dedication so that Junior College Choral Music may make its rightful contribution to American Music Education.

The committee wishes to acknowledge its indebtedness to Dr. Stuart E. Marsee, President of El Camino College, whose talk "The Kid Grew Up" was a basic reference source. Other materials referred to include:

American Association of Junior Colleges. (Brochure printed by A.A.J.C.) n.d.

II. Purpose of the Committee: To establish written guidelines for choral programs at the Junior College level which are in accord with ACDA goals, as follows:

A. To offer a graded choral curriculum

B. To insure adequate faculty of music educators, with course offerings to add to the overall music education of the singers in the choral program

C. To develop discrimination in the choice of choral literature

D. To provide an adequate festival program for the musical growth of both the conductors and the singers

E. To relate the choral program to the total music curriculum and to the life of the community

F. To arrange a varying concert schedule for both the singers and the listeners

III. Areas covered:

A. Choral organizations (minimal offerings):

1. Day program

   a. At least one group, open to all students without audition, reflecting the junior college "open door" policy

      This should serve as a training experience, feeding into the more advanced choral groups on the campus. Training should include vocal production, music fundamentals, score reading, basic choral techniques, experience with good, easy choral literature, and at least one public performance per semester on campus. This course offering may be implemented in either of two ways:

      1) SATB Chorus can answer this need where the balance between men and women is not an insurmountable problem.

      2) Men's or Women's Glee Clubs in a situation where this kind of organization would be more suitable

   b. An SATB semi-select choir, made up preferably of students with previous choral experience and who have some degree of sensitivity to choral techniques.

      Literature covered in this class should be first rate music from all style periods, both sacred and secular. The group should be considered a performing ensemble, on and off campus, and possibly out of the community area, (i.e. tours, festivals, exchange concerts, etc.).

   c. A third level, organized to meet the needs of the exceptionally talented singer, by audition only; probably a chamber choral ensemble, but again determined by the needs of the department concerned.
This group should be capable of much more difficult literature. Performance schedule for such a group can become extremely demanding as its choral excellence becomes appreciated on and off the campus. The inherent problem is that a heavy performance schedule could interfere with the student's other academic obligations. Discretion on the part of the conductor as he accepts concerts is of utmost importance.

2. Night program (minimal offering):

At least one SATB chorus, open to all adults in the community by audition. Repertoire should include at least one choral-orchestral work per semester, hopefully with the college community orchestra. Where there is not a college community orchestra available it is the feeling of the committee that the work should be performed with whatever forces are available. Performance schedule should include at least one concert per semester.

3. Possible additional choral offerings:

The committee feels that the above recommendations are minimal, that where additional choral ensembles can be populated they should, of course, be offered. For example:

a. Chamber ensemble for night students
b. Businessmen's chorus for night students
c. Mother Singer's chorus for night or day students
d. Jazz ensemble
e. Barbershop quartets for either day or night students, male or female

B. Related curriculum offerings

1. Class voice:

The committee feels that correct vocal production cannot be overemphasized in the choral situation. Therefore, all choristers should be urged to take advantage of the individual vocal training available in a voice class.

The choral conductor can no longer afford to ignore the importance of the vocal process in the choral situation as he has been known to do in the past. The time must come when the individual voice teacher should have no reason to exclude his singers from the choral situation.

2. Choral conducting and/or choral development:

Although, as an academic class, choral conducting cannot be transferred for credit to four year colleges, the class can benefit students and the community in the following ways:

a. It offers the opportunity for the adult choir director of the community to improve conducting techniques, score analysis, style concepts, choral techniques, rehearsal techniques, etc.
b. It whets the appetite of the lower division student interested in choral music as a possible vocation or avocation.

c. It is an efficient way in which to train the student conductor, thereby giving him valuable experience in front of a choir.

d. It acquaints the student with professional organizations such as MENC, ACDA, CGC, etc. and increases his awareness of choral activities throughout the country.

C. Types of concerts which should be offered by and for the choral classes:

1. At least two concerts on campus per year in which all groups participate, probably a winter and a spring concert.

2. On and off campus programs for service to the campus and to the community:
   a. Service clubs
   b. School assemblies, sings, rallies, games, etc.
   c. Professional organizations
   d. Church organizations, etc.

3. Involvement in the festival program for choral ensembles from other junior colleges, probably in the spring

4. Sponsorship of university or professional groups on the campus to stimulate further interest in choral music

5. Sponsorship of high school choral festivals on the campus to assist in better articulation with the high schools

D. Choral materials

1. Criteria for selection of literature
   a. The music must have intrinsic musical value and must be settings of worthy texts.
   b. Some of the music should be challenging to the singers without being totally insurmountable, while other selections should be simple—usable as "pace changers".
   c. The music must offer the singers a balanced fare. It should include:
      1) Literature from all style periods
      2) Literature both sacred and secular
      3) Literature with varied sonorities, i.e., a cappella, choral—orchestral, accompaniments by piano, organ, and/or small groups of instruments.
      4) Literature with varying tempi, moods and textures

* See Appendix A
5) Literature in foreign languages
6) Literature by composers of diverse nationalities
7) Literature from varied nations and cultures: folk material, etc.
8) Literature from the American musical theater
9) Literature generally classified as "novelty" material

2. Methods for the discovery of "fresh" literature
   a. The choral conductor may be on the mailing lists of all major publishers in order to receive:
      1) Complimentary new releases
      2) Catalogues of available scores
   b. He may be on the mailing lists of all local music houses in order to receive:
      1) Organized and graded lists of material
      2) Notification of reading sessions sponsored by the music houses
   c. He may attend choral concerts and festivals at which time he can evaluate the literature new to him.
   d. He may attend university or professionally sponsored clinics, summer workshops, summer or winter courses where he will likely be exposed to unfamiliar literature.
   e. He may belong to several professional organizations—MENC, ACDA, CCG, and existent local organizations—whose publications disseminate lists of new material.
   f. He may commission works by local composers.
   g. He may make frequent trips to the music houses to peruse new material.
   h. He may exchange, by mail, concert programs and concert tapes with choral conductors in other sections of the country.

3. Function of selected literature
   a. To serve as a tool for the music education of the singers, i.e.:
      1) The music perused need not always be performed; some should regularly be used to upgrade the score reading skills of the singer.
      2) The music should be presented within its historical context: style period concepts, performance practices, etc.
      3) The music should be a vehicle for teaching score analysis, harmonic analysis, ear training, and sight singing.
4) The foreign texts must be translated and all texts must be thoroughly understood by the singer before he can emotionally or intellectually understand the music.

b. To be integrated into interesting and varied concert presentations appropriate to diversified audiences both on and off campus

E. The Festival Program

1. The values of the festival program

The festival program has done more to upgrade the level of performance and the choice of literature than perhaps any other one activity. Participation in such an event allows opportunity to sing for and sing with other junior college choirs, thus giving both singers and conductors the chance to evaluate their own level of achievement. Exposure of all in attendance to the thinking and artistry of a guest conductor of national renown has proved to be of inestimable value.

2. The philosophy reflected in this report can also be found in the NIMAC Manual, 1965:

"It is recognized that there are certain educational experiences of value which can be secured by music students through activities outside the confines of their own school ... It is maintained:

a. "That there are unique educational benefits to be found in music activities involving students from more than one school.

b. "That among these benefits are opportunities to play and sing music they could not attempt in their own school, the chance to evaluate themselves in comparison to their peers, and the opportunity to perform for or under the direction of musicians of national standing.

c. "That interscholastic music activities can and should exist for the contribution they can make to the whole program of music education in the individual schools.

d. "That cooperation with school administrators and the various state activities commissions and associations is essential in planning interscholastic music activities so that the total educational program of the schools is advanced.

e. "That directors, adjudicators, and clinicians associated with interscholastic music activities have the same responsibility to students and to school patrons as do certificated teachers.

f. "That every effort should be made to make these extracurricular activities available to all by keeping fees and expenses to a minimum.

g. "That care must be taken to make certain that students are not exploited, by nature of the event in which they are to participate, by the number of activities that take them from their home schools, or by the distances they are required to travel."
3. The organization of a festival program

Because the Junior College Festival Program in the Los Angeles basin appears to be one of the most vigorous in the country, its organization and operation serve as the example used in this report.

a. Three separate festivals have been organized to accommodate the 20 or 30 choirs and the 15 to 20 chamber ensembles wishing to participate.

b. Two choir festivals are held on two separate campuses because of the number of choirs interested.

1) Two adjudicators are selected for each festival to make written comments on the performance of each choir.

2) One of the two adjudicators also serves as a guest conductor for the 12 minutes of required music which he has chosen. These selections are made available to the individual choirs well in advance of the event. When each choir performs individually, the guest conductor requests to hear a portion of the music from the required list. This procedure has generally ensured note readiness, thereby taking maximum advantage of the talents of the guest conductor.

3) The festivals are held in May on two successive Fridays, beginning at 3:00 P.M. and ending approximately 10:00 P.M. Dinner is served between the afternoon and evening sessions.

c. The chamber music festival was organized to accommodate to the growing interest in music suitable for the small vocal ensemble.

1) Membership in each group must not exceed 20 singers.

2) In all other respects, the chamber music festival is organized in much the same manner as the choir festivals.

F. Community Services in the State of California

1. Definition

The State of California has authorized the use of tax money for the maintenance of community service programs in the two year colleges. These community service offerings are above and beyond the normal classroom curriculum. Increasingly the 81 community colleges in the state have been utilizing these tax funds for enriching the educational life of the communities. New positions have been created on campuses for the administering of such programs. It takes very little imagination to see the limitless possibilities for the choral art under these auspices.

2. Types of offerings feasible under community services

a. Community choirs

b. Classes for credit or non-credit
1) Voice, opera workshops

2) Choral conducting, rehearsal techniques, etc.

3) Choral history, Sacred music history, Hymnology, etc.

4) Church choir organization, etc.

c. Workshops of short duration in any of the above areas

d. Concerts by university or professional choral groups

e. Church choir festivals

f. High school festivals

g. Junior college festivals

3. Royal Stanton, De Anza College, has evolved a Schola Cantorum under Community Services. The following report by Mr. Stanton explains the organization, repertoire and evaluation of his program, which could serve as a model for other communities.
An account of the founding of the Schola was contained in the program of the debut concert of November 13, 1964, from which the following is taken:

The Schola Cantorum, a symphonic choir of about 140 experienced singers, was first conceived early in 1964 as the answer to a growing need in the Bay Area's cultural scene. Conversations between Royal Stanton, Chairman of Foothill College's Fine Arts Division, and friends interested in his experience with a highly successful Schola Cantorum in Long Beach and with Foothill's widely acclaimed Skyline Chorale brought into focus the fact that no permanent group capable of presenting great choral works existed locally. These friends, most of whom were themselves performers, organized a steering committee, and enlisting the aid of Foothill College's Office of Community Services and Fine Arts Division set out to satisfy the need for such a group.

The committee's efforts led, in August, 1964, to an announcement by the Office that plans for formation of a Foothill District Schola Cantorum to be directed by Mr. Stanton were under way. A small brochure was sent to persons on the College mailing list stating that auditions for the adults-only chorus would be held during the first two weeks of September, with the first rehearsal scheduled for September 21. This initial brochure announced that the Schola was being formed in response to requests that the College help provide an outlet for the many trained choral singers in the Peninsula area. Particular emphasis was to be placed on performing regular concerts of the very best choral repertoire. From the beginning it was planned that at least one major work with orchestra be included in each concert, as well as selections from the vast repertoire of a cappella music available.

Well over 200 persons responded to the invitation to audition. Each applicant was tested for voice quality, accuracy and control, rhythmic acuity and aural memory, and sight reading. A choir of 125 was selected, more than 30 others were placed on a waiting list, and with the first rehearsal in Foothill's new Choral Building, the Schola Cantorum became a reality.

The Schola is now entering its Fourth Concert Season, and interest in the group continues to mount. This is seen in expanding audiences and particularly in the steady stream of requests to audition. Current membership (September, 1967) stands at 145, with 8 alternates. Since the most recent auditions closed on September 10 (at which time 41 persons were heard for 16 places available) a list of interested persons has again started to grow who wish to be notified of the next auditions, probably in Spring, 1968.
At the beginning of this season the balance was 86 women and 59 men. Members are drawn from many professions and occupations, with a high proportion of advanced degrees represented, especially among the men.

The Schola is managed by the Schola Board, and is this season affiliated with the newly-formed Campus-Community Concert Guild, which also serves two orchestral organizations formed under the banner of the Community Services Office, the Master Sinfonia of 35 players, and the Nova Vista Symphony, of 85 pieces. Dues of $10 per year are assessed in the Schola, and fairly rigid attendance regulations are included in the group's constitution and enforced by the organization. Rehearsals are held Monday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m., with the necessary extra orchestra rehearsals expected of all members before the concerts. The Season at present includes four concerts a year, spaced to occur approximately in October, January, March and June.

The Foothill District supplies funds which buy some of the music used, including all rentals and orchestrations, and pay for professional soloists. Most members have expressed the wish to buy their personal copies of the major works performed.

Orchestras are formed in various ways. The Master Sinfonia, directed by John Mortarotti, forms the nucleus of the Orchestra of the Schola Cantorum; for most of the concerts (which are done in addition to the Sinfonia's own season) they are paid, as are the extra players needed to fill out the orchestra. Some concerts have been billed as "joint concerts," where no one has been paid. In addition, the opening concerts of the Third and Fourth Concert Seasons have been done in conjunction with the Peninsula Symphony, a semi-professional group of 18 years standing in the community, conducted by Aaron Sten, with no relation whatsoever to the Foothill District.

The fiscal support provided by the District includes salaries for the conductor and accompanist, funds for music, rentals, instrumental rental, royalties and performance fees, soloists, orchestra members, printing of programs and publicity, and miscellaneous supplies. Box office receipts in the seasons already completed have averaged between one-third and one-half of the total expenses; there is some indication that this percentage may increase this year.

In an attempt to assess the strengths and weaknesses of the venture to date I offer the following:

STRENGTHS, REASONS FOR SUCCESSFUL GROWTH:

1. The communities served their nature and interests. It is an area with a very high concentration of extensively-educated persons: Stanford, Stanford Research Institute, numerous aero-space industries, etc., all of which keeps a flowing stream of high-caliber citizenry in the area.

2. Purposely high standards. Many members have expressed a thought something in the vein of "it's good to have something it's tough to get into."

3. College and Community Service sponsorship. This provides a place, a major portion of the support, and an aegis under which to work; a certain status, it you will, comes ready-made. The College benefits, too.

4. The resolve to continue to improve the quality both of the music chosen for performance, and the actual performance standards themselves. While some "pot-boilers" have been done in the process of getting established and wooing audiences, there is more and more resistance to use of this material, as the composition of the Fourth Season clearly suggests.

WEAKNESSES, NEEDS:

1. Wider publicity and audience recognition. It is a distressing fact that many potentially-interested persons simply don't know we exist, in spite of all our performances and publicity. Naturally the College channels cannot match the efforts of a professional publicizing effort expected of a San Francisco Symphony or like group. But the formation of the Campus-Community Concert Guild is aimed to engage wider public interest in promotion, and hopefully will help.

2. Professional business management. An immediate aim will be to expand the budget to include payment of a permanent Business Manager, so that some of this work may be taken off the members and the Community Services Office.
G. Inherent challenges and opportunities within the community college

1. The student population

a. Virtually any high school graduate is admitted; thus, the level of scholarship is extremely uneven.

b. The best talent is attracted by university and college scholarships in four year institutions. Generally, it is not found in the community college.

c. A high rate of student turnover is due to any one or a combination of the following:

1) All students live off campus

2) Many students are self supporting

3) Some students are married with family obligations

4) The student body is heterogenous (age groups, interests, abilities)

5) The students vary in degree of self direction and self discipline; since many are searching for areas of interest, they often drop classes shortly after they have enrolled.

6) Male students are affected by the draft

2. The faculty

a. The faculty varies from those experts in the trades to PH. D.'s in the academic community.

b. All are expected to teach, not to publish or to do research.

c. The fairly high rate of turnover is due to one or a combination of the following:

1) The prestige factor

2) The uneven caliber of the student body

3) Chances for professional advancement

4) Teaching loads, salaries, etc.

3. The choral conductor's challenges

a. A fluid clientele—virtually a new choral group each semester

b. Many students with only average intelligence, some lacking direction, often searching for vocations or avocations

c. Predominantly only average musical talent; few declared music majors

d. Fewer men as the draft siphens off high school students before they get to college
4. The choral conductor's opportunities

a. To vitalize the choral offerings so as

1) To help the student find direction, perhaps into music education, by personal attention, patient but challenging instruction and personal influence.

2) To aid the student to believe in his personal worth by making him feel a part of something important, socially and musically.

3) To stabilize the choral ensembles by making the choral experience meaningful—by "selling" the choral art in all its aspects: music of great composers, texts which reflect the history of human thought, social experiences which relate the individual to his society, and emotional and spiritual experiences which can come to the singer, the conductor and the listener when all aspects of the choral experience come together with dedication and devotion.

b. To strive for a better articulation with the high schools; to acquaint the local choral conductors with the opportunities available to them and to their singers at the community college.

c. To explore and develop a meaningful community services program which will meet the choral needs of the area through choral offerings, course offerings, and workshops of all descriptions.

d. To accept enthusiastically the role of the community college, its importance and its potential in higher education.

e. To teach with pride at this level, even in the face of the challenges, through the medium of music, knowing that the community college student needs the college and that possibly because of it, he may begin to sense his ultimate potential as a human being.
IV. Areas for further study

A. A more thorough exploration of each of the areas covered in this report

B. A more thorough study of ways to articulate with the high schools in the district with these goals in mind:
   1. To acquaint the high school students with the college choral program
   2. To attract singers to the junior college choral program

C. An exploration of the organization of effective community services on all California campuses, with the aim of instigating and assisting in the development of such programs in other states

D. Studies to initiate more creativity in the choral program might include:
   1. More awareness of, and assistance in, a correlated humanities program
   2. More team teaching with, and assistance from, the voice faculty, the music history faculty, the instrumental conductors, the art, drama, dance, literature and foreign language faculties
   3. More teacher exchanges and visitations among community colleges
   4. More combined college events—concerts, workshops, etc.
   5. More field trips with the choral ensembles, i.e., a major university's choral rehearsal, high caliber choral concerts in the area, etc.
   6. More visitations to the campus by choral leaders in the community and from the universities to stimulate interest in choral music and to acquaint singers with the opportunities available to them in the vocational field or in the university program
   7. More use of worthy compositions by local composers—students, faculty, community
   8. More use of appropriate audio visual materials

E. An analysis of the community college choral conductor's responsibility to his singers and his audiences in the area of program planning and repertoire selection—to what degree does he "entertain", to what degree does he educate?

F. A study to explore further the efficacy of choral music and its place as a real force in our troubled society in order to help eradicate social tensions.

APPENDIX B

February 14, 1968

Dear Choral Conductor:

The proposed Junior College Choir Festival which is to be held at El Camino College, May 3, 1968, has had a gratifying response. Thirteen choirs are currently planning to be in attendance. The Festival will begin at 3:00 P.M. and conclude at approximately 10:00 P.M., with a break for dinner.

In our new auditorium we can boast 2,600 seats, balcony included. Parents and friends of festival singers are therefore urged to be in attendance for all or part of the event.

Our two adjudicators are: Dr. J. Russell Bodley, Professor of Music, University of the Pacific, Stockton, California; Dr. Elaine Brown from Singing City, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Dr. Brown has been asked to conduct the required numbers. We sincerely hope that since we are bringing her at considerable expense to SSCJCMEA you will prepare your students with a great deal of care. As has been customary in the past, it will be her prerogative to request of each choir a performance of a portion or all of the required music to insure its preparation! The required numbers are:

1. Lieto Godea (In English) Giovanni Gaurielli
2. Der Abend (In German) Johannes Brahms
3. Symphony of Psalms (Third movement) Igor Stravinsky

A dinner will be served in our cafeteria for $2.25 a plate. The registration fee for each singer will again be $1.00.

Since there will be thirteen choirs in attendance, each choir will be allowed twelve (12) minutes of singing time. Please plan and time your music to stay within the limits. To quote last year's bulletin: "We won't blow a whistle, but we'll have a sniper zeroed in on the offending conductor."

As you are aware, the educational value of the festival, in large measure, comes from our groups hearing other groups of like ilk. Please, therefore, plan to have your singers hear the entire festival. This is perhaps the one time during the year when we can truly share our common joys and problems. We learn as much from each other as we do from the visiting guest conductor and the written comments, so do plan to spend the afternoon and evening with us.
Mr. Douglas Lawrence, a new member of our El Camino College music faculty, has kindly consented to act as Festival Chairman; therefore, all future communications, fees, application forms, questions, etc., should be directed to him at the college address listed on the letterhead. From his office will come a final bulletin with last minute instructions, directions, maps, schedule, etc., to be in the mail by April 21.

IT IS IMPERATIVE THAT THE UNCLOSED QUESTIONNAIRE REACH US, WITH FEES ON OR BEFORE APRIL 3rd. TO INSURE THE SUCCESS OF THE FESTIVAL, THIS DEADLINE MUST BE MET.

Please make all checks payable to the SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA JUNIOR COLLEGE MUSIC EDUCATORS ASSOCIATION.

We are looking forward to being your host.
