A 1968 survey of Florida Junior College Journalism programs gathered information about the nature of courses offered and the credit granted for such courses. Of the 26 junior colleges in the state, 23 offered journalism instruction, with 14 presenting a basic course similar to that of the University of Florida. Although the University of Florida accepted only six units for transfer credit in the preprofessional journalism sequence, six colleges offered 10 or more credit hours, and one made available 26 credit hours. Such variation occurred primarily in the publications programs of the colleges. Recommendations derived from the findings included (1) development of minimum guidelines for the basic course, (2) establishment of a permanent interinstitutional curriculum committee to work with publications advisors, and (3) increased articulation among the junior colleges and between the junior colleges and the university.

CLEARINGHOUSE FOR JUNIOR COLLEGE
INFORMATION
This report grew out of the 1967 Annual Conference of the Florida Council of Junior College Publications Advisers, held at the Robert Meyer Motor Inn, Orlando, February 2-4.

At that conference, publications advisers from most Florida junior colleges met with Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Professor of English Education, Florida State University, Hugh Cunningham, Professor of Journalism and Communications, University of Florida, and John V. Webb, associate Professor of Journalism and Communications, University of Florida, to discuss mutual problems of journalism education.

One of these problems was junior college-university articulation. As a result of some of the questions raised and comments made at that meeting concerning the kinds of programs offered in the public junior colleges, Harry Copeland, the then newly elected President of FCJCPA, called for an inquiry into Florida Junior College curricula.

This report is presented in response to that request.
GOALS OF THE REPORT

The following goals were established to serve as guidelines for this study:

1) to determine what courses are being offered at the junior college level in Florida;
2) to determine the number of credit hours given for all courses offered;
3) to determine, if possible, what courses should be offered by Florida junior colleges;
4) to determine, if possible, suggested guidelines for the number of credit hours given each course;
5) to determine what is being done to improve the quality of content and the level of achievement in junior college journalism courses;
6) to determine, for presentation to the Council, recommendations for the improvement of the content and quality of journalism courses offered by the junior colleges of the state.
This report will attempt to answer some of the questions, but a word of caution need be noted. The evaluative process is a continuous process, one which is never complete. What we have here is "nought but a beginning."

AN INVENTORY OF COURSES OFFERED

In order to determine what journalistic courses are being offered in Florida junior colleges, an inventory was made of all courses listed in the latest available editions of each junior college catalog.

Catalog listings were preferred over a survey of actual courses offered because on many campuses, demand for a subject will vary from trimester to trimester. At St. Johns River Junior College, for example, a course in yearbook production is listed, but is not being offered during the 1967-68 academic year. On several campuses, too, some journalism courses are offered only during certain terms.

The inventory found all but three of Florida's 261 junior colleges offering journalism courses. Of the 23, fourteen offer a course comparable-on the basis of catalog descriptions-to the three credit hour "Survey of Communications" offered at the University of Florida. All but two junior colleges give three credits for successful completion of the course.

1 Orlando Junior College, although a private school, is included in these totals as a Council member. No information was available on journalism offerings at Valencia Junior College, Orlando.

Sixteen Florida junior colleges offer a course comparable to the University's "Writing for Mass Communications." All save one give three hours credit.

A subjective and perhaps arbitrary interpretation of catalog course descriptions was used to reduce the remainder of the junior college journalism course offerings to thirteen categories, in addition to the two already named. Courses offered, and the number of colleges offering each are:

There is a great disparity in the number of credit hours a student may earn in journalism courses in Florida junior colleges. Credits range from a low of zero at three schools to a high of 26 at Pensacola on the basis of courses listed in 1968 catalogs. St. Johns River Junior College is second in offerings with 22 hours, while North Florida at Madison is a close third with 21. Gulf Coast is a distant fourth with 14. Miami-Dade (12) and Chipola (10) are the only other colleges offering credits totaling in double figures. One Florida junior college offers a total of nine credit hours, four offer eight, four offer seven, six give six, and two offer only three credits. As mentioned previously, three offer no journalism courses for credit.

WHAT SHOULD BE OFFERED?

The wide variance in credit hours a student may earn in journalism while attending different junior colleges throughout the state naturally makes the adviser or administrator examining his program wonder who—if anyone—is right.

There is no simple answer to this question, and any attempts to answer it are fraught with variables. There are, however, several points which might be kept in mind.

The consideration foremost in the minds of most advisors is probably a desire to offer whatever training is of most benefit to the students registered during any given trimester or quarter. It is necessary, therefore, to have approved and listed in the catalog a sufficient number of courses to provide ample opportunity for all students. To fail to offer a student the chance for gaining practical experience on a newspaper or yearbook staff simply to conform with a set of arbitrary guidelines would be clearly doing students a disservice.

On the other hand, if a student is allowed to spend a disproportionate amount of his time engaged in publications work for credit, he will probably fail to devote sufficient attention to courses in communications, humanities, the social sciences, and the natural sciences—courses urgently needed by the modern journalist in today's complex, rapidly changing society.

One other factor tends to limit the value of a large number of credits earned in journalism at a junior college. The University of Florida is the only public state college or university in the state at which juniors and seniors may pursue a broad program of upper level courses in journalism, broadcasting, or advertising. Further, the College of Journalism and Communications at the University of Florida will recognize only six hours of journalism credit (a survey course and a writing course) as part of the pre-professional sequence. Other journalism credits may be accepted as electives, but not as part of the pre-professional sequence.

Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Professor of English Education, and former dean of the School of Journalism at Florida State University, wrote on the danger of overloading the junior college student with journalism credits.

In "Florida Junior Colleges Explore Role of Journalism in Curriculum," Dr. Campbell comments:

The junior colleges properly have avoided offering professional curricula. For one thing, a professional newsman needs a better general education than a junior college can offer, for he should take advanced courses in liberal studies.

Obviously, it would be improper to ask a junior college student to take twenty-four semester hours in journalism, for to do so, he would have to handicap himself in getting even a minimum general education.

The junior college student who seeks a career in journalism should devote three-fourths of his time in junior college, perhaps more, to general education. He should complete a well-balanced program in communications, social sciences, natural sciences, and the humanities. Seldom will he have time for more than two journalism courses.
Some of Dr. Campbell's other remarks on journalism offerings in Florida junior colleges might also be cited here:

Today, both in high school and junior college, some journalism courses consist simply of putting out the paper. Such courses without enrichment, may with reason, receive the most critical scrutiny. Seldom are they to be preferred—if ever—to a basis course in mass communication and a thorough course in reporting and editing.

Every junior college wisely may offer an introductory course and a basic techniques course and sponsor two or more student publications, provided that it provides a teacher fully qualified to emphasize excellence.

Within a few years the quality of junior college student publications and courses should show significant improvement, provided that junior colleges avoid attempts to offer terminal programs of professional training.

Others, too, are concerned about the journalism curricula of junior colleges.

Lester G. Banz, assistant professor of journalism at the University of Iowa, writing in Journalism Quarterly (Spring, 1967, Vol. 44, No. 1, pp. 118-122), considered the question of credit earned for work on student publications the "stickiest" problem facing the professional four-year journalism school in evaluating the transcript of a junior college transfer.

Reporting on a survey he conducted in the fall of 1966, Benz pointed out that "of 337 junior colleges offering courses in journalism or publishing one or more student publications, 135 (40%) permit students to earn from one to three semester hours of credit in a single semester for work on publications, although enrollment in a journalism class is required in most instances." (p. 120)

Benz also comments on the extreme:

While the amount of credit a student may earn in a single semester is not unreasonably high, some schools permit a student to accumulate a disproportionate number of credits for publications work over a two-year period. Of those schools reporting total semesters hours of credit permitted for work on school newspapers, 18 allow 1-2 hours, 75 allow 3-6, 32 allow 7-10, and 28 more than 10 hours. One school reported allowing 21 semester hours of such credit and another said there was "no limit."

The Association for Education in Journalism has also taken note of the credit hour problem.

A resolution passed by the participants in the Junior College Session at the AEJ Annual Convention in Boulder, Colorado, at the end of August, 1967, stated:

that further development of junior college journalism curricula for students who plan to transfer to senior colleges or universities that offer freshman and/or sophomore level journalism courses be stimulated and advanced by:

a. coordination of journalism courses with those offered in the first two years of four-year colleges or universities in the region in order that, as a minimum, transfer credit in these particular courses may be facilitated, and

b. coordination of liberal arts course requirements to correspond generally with the liberal arts courses required of journalism majors (or pre-majors) in the regional four-year colleges or universities in order that transferring students may not fall behind in their degree programs, and

c. the development of from 6 to 12 semester hours, or the equivalent in quarter hours, of junior college journalism courses, taught by faculty persons with a minimum of 18 semester hours in journalism, or their equivalent, and coordinated where possible with senior college courses, and strengthened through standardized (though not necessarily uniform) course outlines and materials, teaching aids, and utilization of professional resources.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The question is then, what can we, as junior college publications advisers, do to improve the quality of educational training offered our students.

The first and most logical step would be to work together as a professional organization for the implementation of the resolutions passed at the Junior College Session of the AEJ Convention in Boulder, Colorado.

A suggestion for some first steps along these lines would be to adopt some minimum guidelines for a survey course in mass communications and a writing course designed to provide fundamental instruction and practice in writing for the mass media. These two courses would be equivalent to the University of Florida's "Survey of Communications" (JM 118) and "Writing for Mass Communications" (JM 201).

Textbooks currently in use at the University of Florida for these courses are:

JM 118:

J201:

The books listed here, of course, are not the only satisfactory texts for these courses—The Mass Media: Reporting, Writing, and Editing by William L. Rivers (New York: Harper & Row, Inc., 1964) is a text which comes to mind for use in a writing course—but great care should be exercised in selecting a journalism textbook.

A second recommendation for improving the journalism curricula of Florida junior colleges would be to establish a permanent curriculum committee to work with and for publications advisers in improving the quality and content of junior college journalism courses.

Further, this committee could be charged with the design of acceptable guidelines for the junior college equivalents of JM 118 and JM 201, working with university officials for the acceptance of other journalism courses as part of the pre-professional sequence, and working for the general improvement of journalism offerings throughout the state.

Such a curriculum committee, composed of representatives from each district, could also promote a better understanding of curriculum problems through seminars, workshops, or any number of programs aimed at raising the level of junior college journalism.

One such program, which could be a continuing project of the curriculum committee, would be a junior college--University of Florida articulation project. Publications advisers from different junior colleges in Florida could, through an effective articulation project, be constantly updating their knowledge of the latest developments in the field, as well as improving their awareness of what is being demanded of the students they are forwarding to the University.

Funding for these or any of these projects might be arranged through the Newspaper Fund, the Association for Education in Journalism, or various government grants for inservice teacher training.
A FINAL WORD

What is being done, then, is not enough. Much more curriculum work could be done by the Florida Council of Junior College Publications Advisers.

There is little reason why this organization cannot act as a vigorous change agent, working for the betterment of all the journalism programs in all of Florida's junior colleges. FCJCPA is small enough for intimate communication, yet large enough for bold, decisive action.

We can do much in moving toward the goal we hear so much about in Florida education today—providing quality education for all students.
APPENDIX

BREVARD JUNIOR COLLEGE (Cocoa)

JOUR 206--WRITING FOR MASS Communications  Credit: 3 hours
3 hours per week. A study of the techniques used in writing for mass communications, including instruction and practice in news gathering and news writing, feature writing, and in producing and marketing copy for mass communications media.

MIAMI-DADE JUNIOR COLLEGE

PRE-JOURNALISM
The Pre-Journalism program is designed for students who intend to enter the fields of journalism, broadcasting, and allied professions. The curriculum, while providing the introductory courses essential to the professional program, is broad enough to allow students to explore various areas of journalism and communications. Experience is received by work on the campus publications and through internships. Recommended electives include Economics, Psychology, History, Philosophy, Political Science, and Sociology.

JOU 101--INTRODUCTION TO JOURNALISM AND NEWSWRITING (Lecture, 3 hours)  Credit: 3 hours
An introductory course in journalism and newswriting designed to help the student to understand the function of a newspaper and the external forces which influence the news, to write acceptable news copy, to understand the mechanics of production and to transfer the principles of newswriting to other areas of communications.
JOU 111, 112, 113--JOURNALISM INTERNSHIP Each, 1 credit Qualified students will receive practical experience working with local or college communications media under the supervision of professional media specialists and the Journalism faculty. Students may register for two or three of these courses concurrently. Prerequisite: Enrollment in or completion of JOU 101 and special permission of the instructor.
(Laboratory, 3-6 hours)

JOU 201--SURVEY OF MASS COMMUNICATIONS Credit: 3 hours
An introduction to the media of mass communications, with special emphasis on the standard printed media, radio, television, and films. A study of their requirements and their responsibilities to the public. (lecture, 3 hours)

JOU 202--WRITING FOR THE MASS MEDIA Credit: 3 hours
A pre-professional course designed to provide fundamental instruction in writing as a basis for all college programs in journalism, advertising, or communications. This course may not be taken as a substitute for the Communications series. (Lecture, 3 hours)

NORTH FLORIDA JUNIOR COLLEGE (Madison)

JRN 102--INTRODUCTION TO MASS MEDIA Credit: 3 hours
Survey of press, radio, advertising, and public relations.
Role of mass communications in a democracy; career opportunities. Limited emphasis on techniques of writing.

JRN 103--JOURNALISTIC PRODUCTION Credit: 3 hours

stories. Prerequisite: JRN 102.
JRN 203--JOURNALISTIC PRODUCTION  Credit: 3 hours
2 hours lecture plus 2 hours laboratory. Basic course for superior students as means of obtaining practical experience over and above that offered in this college. Work may be on campus or area publications. Prerequisite: JRN 103 and consent of instructor.

JRN 205--COMMUNITY JOURNALISM  Credit: 3 hours
Individual attention to the student's particular background and plans. Editorial and business problems of newspaper and radio on local level. Instruction covers organization, operation and policy of revenue departments with some attention given to advertising, copyreading, headlining, make-up and circulation of newspapers.

JRN 207--INTRODUCTION TO ADVERTISING  Credit: 3 hours
Role of advertising in society, marketing, and communications.
Some emphasis given to creative aspects in the use of tools of advertising.

JRN 208--BASIC PHOTOGRAPHY  Credit: 3 hours 2 hours lecture plus 2 hours laboratory. Basic course for an understanding of photography in modern mass communications and proficiency in taking, processing, and editing pictures.

OKALOOSA-WALTON JUNIOR COLLEGE (Valparaiso)

No journalism courses listed in 1968 catalog.
ORLANDO JUNIOR COLLEGE

JOURNALISM 101--INTRODUCTION TO JOURNALISM Credit: 3 hours Lecture and laboratory to acquaint the student with the basic facts of journalistic activity, including some historical background, types of publications, and journalistic practices. An introduction to the profession of journalism and to the theory and practice of writing news. Work on one of the student publications--newspaper, yearbook, or literary magazine--required and correlated with the classroom activities. Prerequisite: English 101. Corequisite:
English 102 and Typing 101 or ability to type.

JOURNALISM 102--NEWS REPORTING Credit: 3 hours

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

COLLEGE OF JOURNALISM AND COMMUNICATIONS

The curricula in the College of Journalism and Communications lead to the degrees of Bachelor of Science in Journalism, Broadcasting, or Advertising.

The College stresses a broad background in liberal arts and sciences--history, political science, economics, literature, psychology, sociology and physical sciences--which is essential to those entering journalism, broadcasting, advertising, public relations, and allied professions.

In this College the student spends about three-fourths of his time on general background courses to gain an informed acquaintance with the major areas of human knowledge. The remaining one-fourth involves the development of professional techniques in relation to this background knowledge.

Students gain practical experience in the University's radio and television stations, on the school's laboratory newspaper, on student publications, through the summer internship programs, and on the local daily newspaper, The Gainesville Sun.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

To be eligible for admission to the College of Journalism and Communications, students must have fulfilled the following requirements: (1) Earned 96 quarter hours of acceptable college credit with a minimum 2.0 (C) grade average; (2) completed the Comprehensive Courses of the University College or their equivalents; (3) completed the pre-professional and general education courses listed under "Undergraduate Curriculum."

All students must be able to type.

A Committee on Admissions will consider applications from students who do not meet the minimum requirements.

Transfer Students

Admission to the College normally is at the end of two years of study, whether the student has attended University College or a Junior College. Junior College students are urged to complete the program of general education as required by the Junior College. These students normally will be credited with having fulfilled the general education requirements of the College.

For the pre-professional courses, Junior College students may offer substitutes. Deficiencies may be made up after admission to the College.

Students applying for transfer from other colleges and universities will have their transcripts evaluated by the Registrar and the College.

REQUIREMENTS FOR DEGREE

The professional courses are concentrated in the Upper Division, where the curricula are divided into major programs.

Those specializing in the News-Editorial, Public Relations, or Technical Journalism fields will take the appropriate sequence in the Bachelor of Science in Journalism program. Students interested in radio and television will register for the program leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Advertising; work in this program includes both the printed and audiovisual media.

Students wishing to specialize in more than one field may earn a second degree in this school by completion of an additional 45 credits of work, with the necessary qualitative and residence requirements.

The minimum requirement for graduation is 96 quarter credits, in which the student must earn an average of C (2.0) or better and an average grade of C or better in all professional courses.
REQUIREMENTS FOR DEGREE

Students who fail to attain a 2.0 average in any quarter will be placed on probation by this College for the following quarter. A student placed on probation by this College must make a C average in all work attempted and a C or better in each professional course while enrolled for at least 12 credits. Failure to meet terms of the probation means the student may not continue work in this College.

Twenty-two of the student's elective credit hours in any sequence offered by the College are to be chosen from outside the College of Journalism and Communications. The student and his counselor shall select these credit hours either from two areas, one of at least 13 hours and one of at least 9 hours, or from one area of 22 hours. These elective courses are to be in addition to the required courses.

Of the 96 credits required for admission to the College, and the 96 credits required for graduation, no more than 60 credits may be in courses designated ADV, BR, or JM.

GRADUATION WITH HONORS

Students who have received an honor point average of 3.2 or higher in all work taken while registered in the Upper Division may graduate with Honors.

Students who have received an honor point average of 3.5 or higher in all work taken while registered in the Upper Division will be invited to write an undergraduate honors paper and present it to the Honors Examining Committee of the College during the trimester in which they will graduate. The Committee will examine them on the general field of the paper and on their preparedness in other areas. Recommendation for graduation with High Honors will be based on the paper and on the oral examination.

Transfer students who have earned at least 45 credits in the upper division at this University may be recommended for graduation with Honors or High Honors. Their standing in all courses at midquarter before graduation will be taken into consideration.
ASSISTANTSHIPS

Financial assistance is available through student and graduate assistantships in this school. Information may be obtained from the Director of the College.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

Agricultural Journalism: A special program leading to a Bachelor of Science degree with emphasis on agricultural journalism is available. Interested students should consult with the Director of the College of Journalism and Communications and with the Dean of the College of Agriculture. Agriculture students seeking a single course in handling agricultural publicity for newspapers, magazines, and radio-television are advised to register for JM 420.

Journalism for Teachers: Special training and supervised research are available for Journalism teachers and others interested in work at the high school level. Students seeking state certification in Journalism should consult with the Director of the College.

Television for Teachers: The College offers instruction in the use of television production techniques and their utilization in informational and educational programs.

PROFESSIONAL AND HONORARY ORGANIZATIONS

Six national professional and honorary fraternities select members from undergraduates in the College of Journalism and Communications: Sigma Delta Chi, men in journalism; Theta Sigma Phi, women in journalism; Alpha Delta Sigma, men in advertising; Gamma Alpha Chi, women in advertising; Alpha Epsilon Rho, men and women in broadcasting and Kappa Tau Alpha, scholastic honorary for men and women.

PROFESSIONAL AND HONORARY ORGANIZATIONS

The Florida Public Relations Association, an affiliate of the Public Relations Society of America, endorses the Student Public Relations Organization.

The College of Journalism and Communications is a member of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism, International Newspaper Advertising Executives, Inc., the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, the National Society for the Study of Communications, the University Film Producers Association, the Radio Advertising Bureau and the Television Bureau of Advertising.

The College has a close relationship with the Florida Press Association. This association of Florida's newspapers has set up its state headquarters in Gainesville in order to be near and work with the faculty and students of the College. A member of the faculty of the College has served as secretary-manager of the association since 1952.

Consultant to the Florida Scholastic Press Association is a member of the faculty of the College of Journalism and Communications. Summer institutes and workshops in television and for high school journalists are held in the school's air-conditioned quarters.

NATIONAL STANDING OF COLLEGE

The College of Journalism and Communications at the University of Florida is the only such school in Florida accredited by the American Council on Education for Journalism. The curricula, faculty, facilities, and alumni achievement are evaluated regularly by the American Council on Education for Journalism, whose membership includes the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the National Editorial Association, the Inland Press Association, and the National Association of Broadcasters, as well as journalism educators.
