FOREWORD

With accelerated interest in the nongraded school, increasing numbers of teachers and administrators want to visit schools with such programs. Unfortunately, no ready listing has been available. This directory of schools with nongraded programs will fill part of this void.

However, a work of this type, by its very nature, must be partial. Each year new schools can be added to the roster of those which have adopted nongraded programs. Moreover, some schools who once had nongraded programs have discontinued them in favor of other organizational patterns. The directory must be used with this limitation clearly in mind.

Developing a directory of this size is a considerable undertaking and involves the work of many people. Chief among the contributors is the New York State Education Department. Their generous support of the larger investigation of the nongraded school at St. John's University facilitated the present work. If the work of one person had to be singled out for recognition, that person would be Mrs. Dorothy Jessop for she, more than any single individual, carried the responsibility for identifying and classifying schools with nongraded programs. To her I express my thanks. Also, the care and patience of Mrs. Frances Termine cannot go unrecognized. The difficulties inherent in preparing this work are apparent. Mrs. Termine completed this arduous job without complaint.

Space limitations demand that the list of contributors be kept at a minimum. There are many who contributed to this undertaking whose names do not appear in the list of credits, but their contribution is nonetheless deeply appreciated. Without their efforts the directory would never have been completed.
