The adult basic education (ABE) programs currently conducted by non-governmental organizations in the United States, are reviewed in this document. Attention is focused on the significance of voluntary efforts in adult basic education programs; and strengths and weaknesses, gaps between needs and resources, and limiting factors are identified. Programs in all but ten states are examined from all or some of the following viewpoints: year established, form of management, geographical areas served, affiliation, program staff, desirable preparation for teaching ABE, volunteers as teachers, location of buildings, facilities and equipment, limiting factors in ABE, government funds, staff participation, and student characteristics. This is the first attempt to make a systematic assessment of ABE in the United States.

INTRODUCTION

The present study is a review of adult basic education programs currently conducted by non-governmental organizations in the United States. Although the major objective of the study was to compile a directory of non-governmental agencies directly or indirectly involved in adult basic education activities, its secondary purpose has been the accumulation of data that would shed light and help to focus attention on the significance of voluntary efforts in spreading literacy education throughout the country. The study has brought to light many strengths and weaknesses of existing programs, the gaps between needs and resources, and the factors which have limited the growth of adult basic education programs of non-governmental agencies.

Significance of the Study:

The study is significant for a number of reasons. It is the first attempt to make a systematic assessment in a field of specialization which has been largely neglected in the past. Some 300 agencies, almost 50% of those identified responded to the final questionnaire. An earlier survey by post-card indicated that there were at least 600 agencies making a sometime silent, yet steady contribution toward the elimination of illiteracy throughout the country.

This study has made it possible to bring this notable contribution within the focus of public attention. Even in professional circles such as the universities, colleges and at all governmental levels, very little was known concerning the extent of non-governmental involvement in adult basic education at the grass-roots level. This study has hopefully filled a gap and should facilitate scientific planning to eradicate illiteracy.

A second and more important reason for the significance of the study is that it was conducted at a time when there is increasing recognition concerning the role adult basic education programs can play in the War on Poverty. In fact, one of the main battlegrounds for the war on poverty is ignorance. Ignorance is both the cause and effect of much poverty. If the War on Poverty is to be won, the defenses against ignorance or lack of education must be strengthened. Here not only governmental activities are important, but also the efforts of people at the grass-roots level acting on a voluntary basis. It is gratifying to see that the adult basic education programs of non-governmental agencies are mainly directed toward meeting this objective.

In recent years, many urgent requests have been made from educators and other practitioners in the field of adult basic education for a listing or directory of organizations engaged in this important task. This study, therefore, partially fulfills this need and should be very helpful to many individuals and organizations throughout the United States. From the data and information gathered it is clear that these non-governmental organizations and agencies, are slowly but effectively contributing to the solution of the problem of illiteracy among adults. There is, however, still much to be learned about these programs and the undereducated or illiterate adults they now serve. It is hoped that this is the beginning of a much larger effort.

Some Major Findings:

The study reveals: That there were approximately 600 or more non-governmental agencies actively engaged in adult basic education programs, of whom 270 have been included in the directory. The interaction between government funded activities which have grown rapidly since the War on Poverty programs began in 1964 and non-governmental activities is obvious since findings show that at least one-third of the responding agencies were involved directly or were collaborating with government-sponsored, work-oriented programs, (see Table 13). The doubling of participating non-governmental agencies in the past five years demonstrated the growing importance of adult basic education as an organized service activity.

That although nearly half of the responding agencies were not more than five years old, 95% of these have a formalized pattern of organization, (see Table 2). The predominance of formalized structure suggests these agencies plan to have long-term involvement in adult basic education activities. That approximately 32% or one-third of the responding agencies had elected officers apparently indicates the process of democratic procedures involved in decision-making at the community level.

That there are more than half (55%) of the responding agencies with national affiliations which indicated that there is a dearth of State, and regional interaction in these activities. For long-term development, the identification and solution to problems peculiar to each region and State should be examined and discussed at local and regional levels.

That more than one-third, approximately 32% of the agencies indicated employing a full time staff for adult basic education activities; this indicated some commitment to long-term involvement in adult basic education programs.

That 66% of the responding agencies indicated the desirability of special teacher preparation through a degree in education or a related discipline, course work in adult education, and previous teaching experience. This clearly reveals that personnel administering and sponsoring programs of non-governmental agencies realized that literacy activities in the 1960's required approaches and attitudes different from the traditional concept of the 3r's as well as necessitated practical orientation to the more formalized pattern of course work at universities and colleges offering adult education programs of greater sophistication.

That 95% of the responding agencies accepted volunteers as teachers but that nearly one-fifth offered neither pre-service nor in-service training indicated the need for strengthening teacher-training programs in adult basic education at the grass-roots level!

That adult basic education classes conducted by the responding non-governmental agencies were primarily held in buildings occupied by them. The apparent small use of the public school buildings most likely reflected the fact that public school adult basic education programs are held in the public schools whereas non-governmental agencies usually carried the program where the clientele was or at least conducted classes in close proximity to a centrally located and easily accessible area.
A SURVEY OF ADULT BASIC EDUCATION ACTIVITIES OF NON-GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

I. Outline of the Study:

1. Definitions

   Adult Basic Education: Adult Basic Education means formal or informal literacy instruction for adults, 18 years and over, or for those who may not be able to perform their societal roles due to a language barrier, and having less than an elementary education. Emphasis on communication and computational skills such as reading, writing, speaking, listening, arithmetic, and using as content for teaching these skills such adult experiences as consumer buying practices, health and safety habits, relations with other members of the family and community, home-making and citizenship responsibilities.

   Non-Governmental Agencies: For this survey, Non-Governmental Agency means an agency, or organized group of people involved in providing adult basic education programs and whose basic support is not from public funds and is not generally recognized as a governmental agency.

   The focus of the study was on those non-governmental organizations engaged in adult basic education programs and their State, regional, county and local affiliates which were involved in adult basic education in the United States.

2. Purpose

   The main objectives of the study were to:

   a. Survey non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education programs.

   b. Compile a Directory of non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education programs. Describe in narrative the current activities in all the adult basic education programs surveyed by State and agencies. To provide the following information in the form of appendices:

(1) A selected bibliography of adult basic education instructional materials.

(2) Source bibliographies used in adult basic education.

(3) Publishers of instructional materials for use in adult basic education.

(4) Sources of suitable audio-visual aids.

(5) Annotated research studies in adult basic education.

(6) A listing of resource persons identified by respondents.

c. Begin the development of a central clearinghouse for adult basic education programs operating in cooperation with the following and other agencies.

(1) Adult Education Association of the USA

(2) Agency for International Development

(3) Food and Agricultural Organization - FAO

(4) International Labor Organization - ILO

(5) National Association of Public School Adult Education

(6) National University Extension Association

(7) Pan American Union Office, Bureau of Social Affairs, Washington, D.C.

(8) United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization

(9) United States Department of Agriculture

(10) United States Office, of Education, Adult Education Branch
Excluded from this study were adult basic education programs sponsored and inaugurated by governmental agencies such as the:

1. Public School adult basic education programs operated under Title II-B of the Economic Opportunity Act, State Departments of Education, or those under other government auspices.

2. Adult Basic Education Programs which are conducted under the auspices of State or federally financed colleges, universities, or related institutions of higher education.

The decision to include only non-governmental organizations was based on the following considerations:

1. The Adult Education Branch of the Office of Education in the past has supported studies pertaining to the extent and kind of public school adult education. 1/ A survey was conducted in 1959 to determine the involvement of State Departments of Education in adult education programs and to present information about services provided by them in the area of general adult education. 2/ A study made in 1961 was designed to identify the educational problems and issues involved in migration. The first of a series of studies in this area, this study was directed to one significant aspect of the problem, namely the education of the adult migrant. An experimental training program for the hard-core unemployed conducted at the Norfolk Division of Virginia State College under a contract with the Office of Education was presented in an interim report in 1964 and revealed un-skilled, hard-core unemployed people can in fact be trained.

II. Methodology: Survey Procedures:

1. Universe:

   The universe for this study was non-governmental agencies in the United States which were engaged in adult basic education programs as defined.

2. Identification of Sources:

   On October 11, 1965, an explanatory letter was sent along with an enclosed survey sheet to record names and addresses of non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education to 131 initial sources. During two additional mailings, a total of 400 resource persons was based on the following criteria:

   a. reputation in the field of adult education (previously known), b. achievement in adult basic education activities, c. current involvement in literacy education, d. publishers' lists, e. foundations, and f. related interest groups.

3. Development of the Questionnaire:

   A questionnaire was structured in early October, 1965, by Firoza Ahmed and which was discussed at length with the U.S. Office of Education staff, AEA and NAPSAE and other personnel. In the formulation of this questionnaire, the researcher studied the works of the Adult Education Branch of the Office of Education and related agencies. Of special mention are the studies, a. Adult Education Services of the State Department of Education; b. Training the Hard-Core Unemployed, and c. the Public School Adult Education Statistical Report.

4. Pretest:

A group of twelve literacy practitioners in the Greater Washington area selected on the basis of their knowledge of the field of adult basic education assisted in pre-testing the questionnaire. The researcher had personal interviews with each of the persons involved in the pretest.

5. Methodology of Mailout and Follow-up:

Following the identification of sources, letters were addressed to an additional 200 persons and organizations in two mailings. The initial mailings were made during the first two weeks of November, and the latter two mailings went out in the last two weeks of the same month.

Following a 75 percent response to the first query, a second letter requesting clarification of the agency's status, role and function was developed. This query was in the form of a concisely worded survey postcard along with an explanatory covering letter giving instructions for completion of the card was mailed to agencies which were recorded from the responses to the initial query letter. A total of 513 responded of whom 270 were included in the Directory. Returns from 28 agencies arrived the last week of June and hence could not be included in the Directory.

6. Collaboration with National, State, Regional and City Agencies in the Adult Basic Education Survey:

Four major national organizations extended comprehensive support in gathering data from their affiliates and from other local community organizations. An internal agency-wide survey was conducted under the direction of the staff person in charge of education programs within each of the agencies. Survey forms, which were used in the study, were also used by three agencies namely, the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and AFL-CIO. The latter agency made a somewhat smaller survey of twelve selected affiliates. The coordinator of the Adult Basic Education Projects of the National Board of the YWCA conducted interviews and field visits in order to make the questionnaires as complete as possible. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the National Urban League gave invaluable assistance by making available names of as many volunteer-teachers and leaders who had participated in the agency's training workshops and institutes as well as names of key regional officers. These persons were individually contacted by personal letters and sent questionnaires.

Although national agencies assisted in conducting internal-agency-wide surveys, twenty-eight national, State, regional, metropolitan, and city agencies permitted the use of their membership and organizational directories in identifying sources of adult basic education.

Listed below are these agencies:

7. Limitations:

There was a low response to the initial query letter from organizations and agencies in the following States: Arizona, Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Rhode Island, and Wyoming.
About 250 agencies returned the survey post-card indicating their non-governmental status and involvement in adult basic education activities but failed to return the somewhat longer questionnaire.

This questionnaire was only approved in the last week of February, 1966. This allowed a period of only 2-3 weeks from the time the questionnaire was administered in March 1966 and the time during which a response could be expected. Hence, a systematic rigorous follow-up procedure could not be established.

III. Techniques of Analysis

1. Preparation and Use of Narratives

The descriptive narratives which appear in the directory of non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education activities, and which describe the structure and function of each agency, were prepared in the following manner:

For each returned questionnaire a two-section folder was prepared. These folders were filed by State and within each State by the alphabetical order of agency name. One section held the completed questionnaire and all correspondence with the agency; the other held the prepared narrative derived from the questionnaire, correspondence and descriptive material.

The material in the narrative was arranged under the following twelve selected headings which also were discussed with the same adult basic education practitioners.
and administrators who had pretested the questionnaire:

Name of Agency:
Director:
Established:
Major Goals:
Organization:
Staffing:
Location and Facilities:
Limiting Factors:
Funds:
Collaboration:
Plans:
Students:
The order of these headings corresponds to the order found in the questionnaire.

The narratives were arranged by headings so that any required information would be immediately accessible.

For each of these headings appropriate information and opinions of respondents were extracted, where possible, in their own words. Each topic was separated from adjacent topics by semicolons. Within each topic, commas were used to distinguish separate items.
Quotations expressing the opinions of those actually involved in non-governmental adult basic education programs were used when appropriate in order to present current opinions in these endeavors. Very few editorial changes have been made. In no case has the essential meaning of the response been changed. No special inferences were drawn from a qualitative analysis, nor was content analysis attempted.

2. Preparation and Presentation of Quantitative Tables

This section presents the major quantitative findings of the study. The data are organized in a series of tables each of which corresponds to a question included in the survey questionnaire form. The significance of the data in each table is discussed in each case.

Before explaining the tables, some general comments may be helpful. First, very few questionnaires were returned complete in every detail; in many cases certain information was not available. Therefore, as a methodology it was decided to present the quantitative results in the tables as percentages of agencies actually responding to each question or, where appropriate, as a sub-section of a question, rather than in actual numbers.
Second, the presence of an asterisk (*) in the table indicates those points in the survey where the respondents were encouraged to check several choices.

Third, the term "narrative" means a uniformly concise descriptive analysis of the responses to the questionnaire. Although this analysis was based on the entire questionnaire, as well from related correspondence with the agency, the primary task was to present an analysis of the responses to the open-ended questions.

Table 1, which is abstracted from Question II - 1 of the survey questionnaire, reveals most clearly, the rapid increase in voluntary adult basic education agencies in the five years from 1961 to 1965. In fact, of the 270 agencies which responded to this question, approximately one-half were established in this period. The interaction between government-funded activities which have grown rapidly since the inception of the War on Poverty programs in 1964, and non-governmental activities needs more detailed investigation, since it is obvious that the growth among non-governmental agencies is partly a reaction to reorganized governmental activity. It should be recalled that "non-governmental" refers to control and decision-making and not to the provision of financial support. The great increase in non-governmental agencies may have been stimulated by the increased availability of governmental funds, such as those from the Office of Economic Opportunity. (In this connection, see also Table 1.2.). The doubling of non-governmental agencies in five years demonstrates at least the growing importance of adult basic education as an organized service activity.

A more detailed reading of the narratives of the questionnaire revealed that agencies in existence prior to 1961 have found it worthwhile to continue their adult basic education operations and in certain cases to expand their area of concern to include as many broader facets of adult basic education as possible.

In Table 2, a formalized pattern of organization of those agencies engaged in adult basic education is quite evident, though nearly half of these agencies are not more than five years old. Only 5% of the responding agencies reported no formal organization (although some caution is necessary since informal groups are those most likely to be missed in the survey). The figure for informal organizations is probably underestimated.

The predominance of formalized structures suggests that these agencies plan to have long-term involvement in adult basic education activities. The fact that administrative and teaching staff(s) are very mobile (Table.5 shows that 35% of the responding agencies had full time program staffs and 95% used volunteers as teachers) would suggest that these agencies are building stable, long-term management structures within which adult basic education programs will occupy a significant position. Examples of such long-term plans for involvement in adult basic education are indicated in the activities of such organizations as the YWCA, the National Urban League, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA, American Association of University Women, and the Parents and Teachers Association, and the United Church Women of Christ in the USA.

That approximately one-third (32%) of the responding agencies had elected officers apparently indicates the process of democratic procedures involved in decision-making at the community level by community representatives. Whether these community representatives were drawn from the adult uneducated illiterate population itself was not determined but might be suggested as a very worthwhile topic for future investigation.

Table 3 shows that the majority of the responding agencies include cities, suburbs, or subdivisions. However, this does not preclude such agencies from serving a wider geographical area (each agency could respond to more than one item in this question). Also, the distinction between a Metropolitan area and city was not well defined. Separate and exclusive figures for participation within each geographical area were not obtained. Narratives indicate that agencies which serve at the national level were not usually involved directly in conducting classes for adult illiterates, but were more involved with coordination, fund raising and procurement, acquisition of facilities, teaching equipment, training of teachers, preparing instructional materials, inaugurating pilot projects, disseminating information, organizing national and regional conferences, representing the national agency at international meetings, and conducting research. Examples of such agencies were the National Federation of Settlement and Neighborhoods Centers, the United Community Funds and Councils of America, The National Council of Jewish Women, AFL-CIO, The Southern Baptist Convention, the National Catholic Community Service, American Friends Service Committee and the Women in Community Services (WICS) to name only a few.

The coordination between non-governmental agencies engaged in adult basic education activities at various levels is summarized in Table 4 which was prepared from Question II - 5.

The predominant finding was that there are more than half (55%) of these agencies with national affiliations. The comparative dearth of regional and State affiliations indicates that agencies at these levels were either not well-equipped to handle the special problems and demands of adult basic education, or that the national organizations could provide a wider range of supporting services, than regional and State affiliates. It may also be likely that local agencies in some instances may consider themselves to be well equipped themselves to conduct adult basic education activities or may not have known to whom to turn for consultation and help at the regional or State level. Much of the national affiliation appears to be through and with Federally-sponsored programs and funding agencies.
However, for long-term development, the identification of those problems peculiar to each region and State should lead to increased interaction at regional and State levels. In this way, the diverse problems of adult illiterates may be adequately met at the grass-roots level.

In Table 5, information is summarized concerning the pattern of staffing in the agencies involved in adult basic education activities. More than one-third, approximately, (35%) of the agencies responding to this question employed full-time staff, this indicated some commitment to long-term involvement in adult basic education programs.

Occasional staff, specialists, and consultants were frequently used for short-term adult basic education programs and some pilot projects. Many of the agencies as yet do not maintain full-time specialists in this field. This was further confirmed in the narrative statements.

Desirable preparation for teaching of adult basic education, presented in Table 6, which simply presents the current opinions of those actually involved in adult literacy programs in non-governmental agencies. Approximately one-fifth (22%) of those responding checked previous teaching experience as desirable; a similar percentage considered degree or course-work in adult education as desirable teaching preparation.

It was probably realized by those administering and sponsoring adult basic education programs that literacy activities in the 1960's required approaches and attitudes different from those emphasized in the formalized pattern of course-work at universities and colleges offering adult education programs. A few universities have already started exploring new approaches to the methodology of teaching adult illiterates. One such example is the University of New Mexico which organized a workshop from June 7-18, 1965, the objectives of which were as follows:

1. To help staff people understand and appreciate clearly the psychology of the under-educated adult, his learning problems, and the non-learning related problems of adults attending classes.

2. To help staff people understand and appreciate clearly the sociological aspects of teaching when social class conflicts are serious and when bridging the chasms across cultural differences and cultural practices in the classroom.

3. To help staff people understand and appreciate clearly the problems that were sure to arise in the area of methods and materials.

4. Finally, staff people needed direction and suggestions about the new State programs, provisions for implementing them, and confidence in moving into a new, presently unexplored area of education for most of the staff personnel involved.
As the above mentioned objectives indicate the problems in inaugurating adult basic education programs are indeed numerous and require above all a concerted effort from the universities, State departments of education, public schools and non-governmental agencies in planning long-term programs directed toward meeting the literacy needs of the country.

The use and training of volunteers as teachers in adult basic education is summarized in Table 7. Ninety-five percent of the respondents accepted volunteers as teachers; nearly one-fifth (6% plus 13%) offered neither pre-service nor in-service training. These figures indicate the need for strengthening teacher-training programs in adult basic education. However, about one-fifth of those which responded to this question offered either pre-service or in-service training. The Laubach Literacy Foundation and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference among a few others mentioned in the narratives were greatly involved in conducting training activities for teachers of adult basic education programs.

Data on the physical facilities used in current non-governmental adult basic education programs are presented in Table 8. Briefly, the majority of classes were held in buildings occupied by the voluntary organizations; these in turn, were mainly located in residential suburban areas. The apparent small use of public school buildings most likely reflected non-governmental character of the agencies surveyed and the fact that most public school programs in adult basic education do take place in the public schools.

Data in Table 9 indicates that classroom facilities, office space, and work training area were donated by the majority of responding agencies. On the other hand, specialized teaching equipment, instructional materials, and mobile units were usually purchased (whether at the agencies' or students' expense was not determined). There would seem to be need, therefore, to provide funds for equipment rather than for classroom space if funds are made available to these agencies. This need for equipment and materials is again reflected in Table II in which the predominant current difficulty mentioned is in the area of materials and teaching aids.
Table 10 indicates the percentage of responding agencies and their relative concern about factors which may have limited the development of their adult basic education programs. From the data available in the table, we can conclude that the majority of the non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education were of the opinion that:

1. Funds are an important limiting factor in their efforts;
2. Lack of personnel to recruit students is a major concern;
3. There is less concern over the question of qualified teachers;
4. Support at organizational level is not a major concern;
5. Teacher training funds or personnel for teacher training are of moderate concern (there is a broad spread of opinion on this issue);
6. Support by national agencies was not a major concern (although from Table 4, 55% of the responding agencies had national affiliation);
7. Information concerning adult basic education needs of the community is of some concern (again a diversity of opinion) to some of the agencies;
8. The interest of the local school board was of some concern, with a wide divergence of opinion.
9. Lack of suitable instructional materials were limiting factors of great concern to only a small number of the agencies.
10. Transportation of pupils was predominantly of little concern.

Analyzing the data in the table one can see that the factors of greatest concern and which have limited the development of adult basic education programs of non-governmental agencies, in the opinions of agencies themselves were (1) lack of funds, and (2) lack of personnel to recruit students. The factors of least concern (1) were support by national agencies, and (2) support at organizational level.

An analysis of Table 11 shows that lack of instructional materials was the major source of current difficulties in non-governmental adult basic education programs. Also as indicated earlier by Table 4, tools, equipment, instructional materials and teaching aids were usually agency-purchased while Table 10 indicates that the shortage of funds was of the greatest concern on an overall basis. Hence, it can be suggested that the greatest current limitation in these programs is the lack of funds for teaching materials and equipment.

A total of 264 agencies responded to this question. Of these, 29% (61) received some government funds, and of these 61 agencies, 90% obtained the majority of their funds for continuing adult basic education activities from government sources (State and Federal). No government funds were received by 71% or 203 of the non-government agencies responding.

In Table 13, the participation of agencies and their staff in Office of Economic Opportunity Programs is summarized. About one-third of the responding agencies were involved directly or collaborating with government work-oriented-literacy programs. While at least, one-third of the responding agencies were aware of the Office of Economic Opportunity programs, however, they apparently did not wish to relinquish sponsorship and control of these programs even though they may be funded from government sources (see Table 12).

Table 14 indicates student characteristics. Since the question was not completely answered by most agencies or others indicated that as an agency policy student records were not made public, the total number of participants, reported, 36,100 was probably an underestimate, a more accurate estimate would be closer to 75,000. Because of lack of more definitive data other participant findings have been reported as percentages.

An analysis of the data shows that about as many non-white students participated in the reported non-governmental adult basic education programs as did white students. Since the non-white population of the USA is estimated at 10% of the total, it can be estimated that the rate of participation of the non-white population (in comparison to the total population) is five to six times higher than for the white population.

Analysis of the data further revealed that agencies such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Urban League, and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which responded to the questionnaire, indicated a vigorous commitment to programs of a general adult basic education nature primarily for their predominantly non-white clientele. However, other agencies such as the Southern Baptist Convention, the United Church Women of Christ, the National Catholic Community Services, The National Council of Jewish Women, Laubach Literac, Inc., the National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA to name only a few of the national organizations, were also engaged in serving the non-white population in major areas of adult basic education such as training of teachers, sponsoring literacy classes, preparing instructional materials inaugurating pilot projects, fund raising, providing supportive services such as volunteer-teachers, classroom and office facilities, recruiting students, donating audio-visual equipment, desks, instructional materials, providing baby-sitting services and facilities, transportation, and locating job opportunities that would provide some means of livelihood during a student's training period.

3. Preparation and Use of Appendices.

The following appendices have been included in the Directory as a preliminary guide to those engaged in adult basic education programs.

APPENDIX I

1. Selected Annotated Bibliography on Texts and Systems

This material was prepared by reviewing currently available instructional materials sent by publishers while the survey was in progress, from bibliographies on adult basic education and from check-lists used at the Instructional Materials Center,

APPENDIX II

2. Source Bibliographies for the Adult Basic Education Study

A circular letter was sent to 50 selected universities, libraries, research centers, Armed Forces Institutes, State Departments of Literacy Council, and Correctional Institutions requesting bibliographies which were being used in their adult basic education programs. Twenty-seven had responded by the time this study was completed. These bibliographies were examined and annotated in cases where materials were available, and a source listing of bibliographies was prepared for users guidance.

APPENDIX III

3. Publishers of Instructional Materials in Adult Basic Education

A circular letter was sent to about 125 publishers, of whom approximately 50 had responded by the time this study was completed. Adult basic education materials were sent by them, both upon request and voluntarily. This listing should help those seeking new materials for building adult basic education libraries for agency use.

APPENDIX IV

4. Sources of Audio-Visual Aids for Adult Basic Education Programs

These were obtained from catalogues and review materials sent by publishers and obtained from the Instructional Materials Center, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C.
APPENDIX V

5. Annotated Research Studies in Adult Basic Education

Material for this appendix was obtained partly from the Curriculum Development and Research Section of the Adult Education Branch of the Office of Education and from studies in adult basic education conducted elsewhere. This listing should be of particular use to those agencies, administrators and teachers primarily interested in assisting in or conducting research in adult basic education.

APPENDIX VI

6. Listing of Resource Persons in Adult Basic Education Programs

This preliminary listing of resource persons was obtained from Question 20 which is as follows:

Please give the name, address and area of specialization of persons who are either in your vicinity or elsewhere whom you consider to be exceptionally qualified by educational background and experience, and currently active in some aspect of adult literacy education.

It therefore contains only the names of those resource persons identified by respondents, and is not suggested as being complete or definitive. However, it is hoped that it may reveal some of the talents available at the grass-roots level in adult basic education programs of non-governmental agencies.
Some Goals and Procedures for the Organization and Development Future Research Activity

The survey of non-governmental agencies engaged in adult basic education activities has revealed the necessity for further inquiry and examination of literacy programs in the United States. This effort has also pointed to the desirability of suggesting that appropriate agency staff personnel should undertake the following types of activities in order to utilize existing information as a point of departure for their future efforts:

1. To continue to identify non-governmental agencies and programs involved in adult basic education activities.

2. To develop a classification of non-governmental agencies in terms of special interest and procedures of operation.

3. To conduct in depth examination of the following kinds of concerns: a) What is the extent of cooperation and interdependence between governmental and non-governmental agencies engaged in adult basic education? b) What has been the effect of Title I-B on the role and function of non-governmental agencies? Has the passage of the Act increased or decreased participation, and at what levels? What is the quality of instruction offered by non-governmental agencies? To what extent do people who learn to read and write in such programs continue to go on to elementary or high school certification? (d) What kinds of supportive services are provided by non-governmental agencies to public school adult basic education programs?

4. To develop preliminary evaluation procedures for adult basic education programs; to encourage and promote continuous evaluation of non-governmental adult basic education activities.

5. To obtain descriptive literature relating to history, structure, programs of non-governmental adult basic education agencies; to develop a library of resource information in the form of bulletins, pamphlets, surveys and other related data to support the administration of clearing house or other services.
6. To promote communication and encourage mutually helpful interaction in the dissemination of information on problems of common concern.

7. To locate and abstract research projects of non-governmental agencies involved in adult basic education activities; to prepare and annotate bibliographies and listing in the following areas:
   a) systems and methods of instruction; (b) textbook materials, (c) teacher education, d) source bibliographies, (e) publishers' listing, f) sources of audio-visual aids, (g) resource persons and specialists engaged in adult basic education activities at the grassroots level, by State.

8. To review significant features of the more sophisticated programs in adult basic education; to make comparative studies of literacy activities by State; to conduct "before" and "after" attitudinal studies of participants.

9. To edit an Adult Basic Education Newsletter of Non-Governmental Agencies.

10. To maintain a classified clipping file of information pertaining to adult basic education activities by State.
ADULT LITERACY PROJECT OF THE ALABAMA YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
309 N. 23rd. STREET, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA 35203

DIRECTOR: Ethel Gibson

ESTABLISHED: 1903.

MAJOR PURPOSE: "To use group work methods in meeting educational, recreation and leisure time needs of the community."

ORGANIZATION: Incorporated with appointed and elected officers, executive staff; county and city served; national affiliation.

STAFFING: A staff member is in charge of adult basic education activities; agency has twelve full time workers of whom one is paid, eight volunteer-teachers are engaged in various adult basic education activities, one consultant is employed for short term projects; agency considers special teacher preparation desirable to teach/lead literacy classes; previous teaching experience at the college level is recommended; teacher certification is not required; agencies experience is that formal college preparation is more desirable than vocational training for effective instruction in literacy activities; in-service training is provided through classroom instruction and observation; teachers considered most effective in classroom instruction have been those who are "warm hearted, understanding, able to generate interest among the students, regardless of age, educational background or station in life."

LOCATION AND FACILITIES: Facilities of the YWCA are utilized; classroom and office space are donated; instructional materials are both agency purchased and loaned.

LIMITING FACTORS: Information concerning adult basic education needs of the community and interest of the local school board are agency's major concerns; other factors such as personnel to recruit students, qualified teachers, support at organizational level, personnel for teacher training, national agencies' support, instructional materials and transportation of pupils are of lesser concern at the present time.

FUNDS: Private sources.

COLLABORATION: None with Office of Economic Opportunity indicated; agencies work locally with and through other non-governmental agencies; educational television presented a thirteen-week series on literacy.
PLANS: To continue existing literacy activities.

STUDENTS: Total: 926,714 women, 170 non-white, 366 are employed on a full time basis, 18 are seeking employment, 298 are seeking employment.
ALABAMA FEDERATION OF WOMEN CLUBS
206 SECOND STREET, N.W., FORT PAYNE, ALABAMA

DIRECTOR: Mrs. W. M. Beck, Sr. (State Chairman)

ESTABLISHED: 1959.

MAJOR GOALS: "To reach every adult non-reader in our State and give them the opportunity to attend one of our basic adult education schools."

ORGANIZATION: Elected officers, incorporated, Literacy Chairman appointed by Board of Director; State county, city served, national, regional; State and international affiliation.

STAFFING: A staff member of the agency is in charge of adult basic education programs; all workers both full-time and part-time are volunteers, special teacher preparation considered desirable through in-service training, degree in education, previous teaching experience considered desirable at the elementary, secondary and college levels, selected course work in adult education; patience, compassion, and understanding are important; much depends on a dedicated teacher; a combination of both formal college preparation as well as vocational training considered desirable; week-end seminars provide both pre-service as well as in-service training; residential workshop and self-study encouraged during in-service training.

LOCATION AND FACILITIES: Suburb, residential areas, rural areas; schools, YWCA, Red Cross and Library used; Classroom and work space are loaned, instructional materials are agency purchased, loaned, and donated.

LIMITING FACTORS: Funds, personnel to recruit, organizational support, teacher training personnel, national agencies support, general community information, interest of local school board, instructional materials, and transportation of pupils are major concerns.

FUNDS: As of 1966 literacy program is being funded through government sources.

COLLABORATION: Public Schools Title II B, Volunteers in VISTA.

PLANS: Continue to co-operate with the State Department of Education; to double State appropriations. "We would like to cover every area in the State by the fall term. For 1965-66 we have conducted 454 classes in 54 school systems with a total of 7,647 students attending classes."
STUDENTS: Total 7,647; non-white about 50 per cent.
LITERACY PROJECT OF THE COMMITTEE ON VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE, KIWANIS CLUB
POST OFFICE BOX 443 ALEXANDER CITY, ALABAMA 35010

DIRECTOR: Tom Radney, President

ESTABLISHED: James L. Coley, Chairman, Vocational Guidance Committee 1965

MAJOR GOALS: To teach reading, writing English to the adult illiterate population in the city.

ORGANIZATION: Elected officers; city, neighborhood served; national, State, regional affiliation.

STAFFING: An agency member is in charge of adult basic education programming: agency's work dependent on volunteer-teachers; first year three trained-teachers were employed; occasional consultants assisted; agency provides public hearing, writes editorials, gives frequent radio talks and spot announcements, institutes conferences with public school personnel, undertakes consultations with prospective teachers, conducts conferences with community leadership serving in consultative capacity of initiate, plan and implement program of adult basic education in the city.

LOCATION AND FACILITIES: City served; local community facilities utilized; classroom, office space are used; text books and related teaching aids are agency purchased and distributed free of cost to those attending adult basic education classes.

LIMITING FACTORS: Funds, teachers.

FUNDS: Greater funding from private sources; four agency members spent 800 manhours, $1,200, and travelled 1200 miles in getting the project off the ground; Office of Economic Opportunity assisted to continue the project.

COLLABORATION: Office of Economic Opportunity.

PLANS: To continue existing adult basic education activities; to provide information to the public; to organize follow-up on those adults who have graduated from adult basic education classes.

STUDENTS: Total 97.
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE
21 FRANKLIN STREET, SELMA, ALABAMA 36701

DIRECTOR: Mrs. Shirley Mesher

ESTABLISHED: 1965, January

MAJOR GOALS: Preparing staff; county, State, city served; regional and national affiliations.

STAFFING: A staff member is in charge of adult basic education programs; agency's entire work is dependent on volunteers, two to three consultants are employed for short term projects; operational expenses are provided for the workers; considers special teacher preparation desirable to teach adult basic education classes through in-service training; teacher certification not required; agency provides pre-service and in-service training through community council experience and residential workshop; teachers must have a good reputation and be willing to give services free.

LOCATION AND FACILITIES: Suburb and rural areas served; church, private homes are used; classroom space is loaned by a private home owner.

LIMITING FACTORS: Personnel to recruit students, qualified teachers, support at organization level are of great concern; difficulty currently being faced is that of transportation of pupils.

FUNDS: Private sources.

COLLABORATION: With other community organizations.

PLANS: "To continue in the direction we are heading in projects of adult basic education, voting, social security and problems related to acquiring first class citizenship."

STUDENTS: Total 358: 200 females, 250 are 40 years and over, 195 are from Public Assistance rolls out of whom 125 women, 50 are full time employed, 105 are employed part-time, 103 are seeking employment.
TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, ALABAMA 36088
AN EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM FOR SEASONALLY EMPLOYED AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

DIRECTOR: Dr. G. T. Dowdy

ESTABLISHED: 1881.

MAJOR GOALS: Promotion of Education

ORGANIZATION: Incorporated, national, State, county, city, regional, neighborhood, international areas served.

STAFFING: A staff member is in charge of adult basic education programs. Volunteers are not used as teachers in this program; 166 full-time paid workers; three others are paid and employed on a part-time basis; six professional workers are paid and employed as consultants, occasional staff, for short term projects, special preparation considered desirable; degree in education or a degree in a related discipline previous teaching experience; at least a four year earned college degree is required for all teachers.

LOCATION FACILITIES: Suburbs of city, rural areas; schools, YWCA and Red Cross facilities, community and neighborhood centers used; classroom space rented, workshop, office space are donated, instructional materials are agency purchased.

LIMITING FACTORS: Transportation of pupils is of some concern.

FUNDS: Funds to continue operation of literacy programs are derived from government sources.

COLLABORATION: Office of Economic Opportunity's Adult Basic Education Program and Consumer and Buyers' education.

PLANS: To conduct adult basic education activities in other rural and suburban communities.

SOCIAL SETTLEMENT ASSOCIATION OF OMAHA
4860 Q STREET, OMAHA, NEBRASKA 68117

DIRECTOR: Gladys L. Knapp

ESTABLISHED: April, 1908.

MAJOR GOALS: "Rendering community services through Settlement House based on neighborhood approach. Major emphasis on the needs of the individual within the family and community setting, services include counselling and referrals."

ORGANIZATION: A national affiliate.

STAFFING: Agency employs six full-time paid, and five part-time workers, and also one occasional paid consultant; considers in-service training, degree in education and previous teaching experience as desirable qualifications, but allows the Settlement certain amount of flexibility in the matter; does not require teacher certification as a pre-requisite; considers formal college preparation a matter of choice depending on program objectives; makes use of volunteers and institutes; provides in-service training to teacher volunteers, mostly of workshop and conference nature; regards sincerity, liking for people, patience, understanding and common sense as useful traits for teachers.

LOCATION AND FACILITIES: Both urban and rural areas falling within the range of the Settlement House and other neighborhood agencies, uses purchased, loaned and rented space for classroom work, and donated space for office work.

LIMITING FACTORS: Agency's three main concerns are a) difficulty in recruiting personnel, b) shortage of funds, and c) transportation for pupils; concerned about the apathy of the local school board; experiencing great difficulty in terms of location of teaching facilities from the point of view of students' convenience.

FUNDS: Adult Basic Education program financed by the public school.

COLLABORATION: Job Corps and public schools - adult basic education under II B.

PLANS: Nothing very specific except maintenance of the existing program.

STUDENTS: Total 18: all white.
