Planned to provide management and training officials throughout the Federal Government with up-to-date information on agency operated training centers, this directory gives, for each center, the purpose, programs or courses offered, eligibility for attendance, and sources for further information. Ten regional centers of the Civil Service Commission are listed. Then follow: nine centers under the Department of Agriculture; one under the Civil Service Commission; six under the Department of Commerce; and others under Department of Defense; the District of Columbia; Health, Education and Welfare; Interior; Justice; Panama Canal Company; Post Office; Railroad Retirement Board; Small Business Administration; State; Transportation; and the Treasury—87 in all. There is an index of location by state and a subject index. (PT)

INTRODUCTION

Agency Training Centers for Federal Employees is published to provide management and training officials throughout the Federal Government with up-to-date information on agency operated training centers. It also provides information on the number and variety of programs offered at these centers and on the general characteristics of these valuable resources for the training of Federal civilian employees.

This directory is also intended to encourage closer cooperation between State or local governmental units and nearby Federal agencies with whom they share common training needs.

For the purposes of this directory, agency training centers are defined as having:

* A separate entity or identifiable organization,
* A specific budget allotment or fund control,
* A curriculum or series of courses offered on a continuing basis,
* A specific manpower ceiling or staff complement.

Among the reasons Federal agencies establish and operate their own training centers are the following:

(1) provide Federal employees with agency-oriented training programs on a continuing basis,
(2) provide necessary training for occupations unique to the Federal service,
(3) supplement training provided through other resources of the agency or through interagency or non-Government facilities,
(4) achieve economies by using agency equipment, facilities and staff, and by reducing tuition and travel costs and time away from the job.
(5) assist other agencies in meeting training needs by providing programs primarily for other agency personnel.
The use of this directory as a resource document meets part of the requirements of the Government Employees Training Act to search Government sources of training prior to using non-Government training resources. The other resource documents available for review for this purpose are the Interagency Training Programs Bulletins and Interagency Training Programs Calendars. If one of the courses offered by an agency center appears to meet another agency's need, a contact should be made to determine the specific nature and availability of the training. When appropriate, agencies should make every effort to share their training resources.

Agencies which do not have sufficient resources or trainees to justify establishing a center of their own, but believe that a center would be of value to them in meeting organizational needs, should explore the possibility of combining their resources with those of other agencies in order to establish jointly-operated training centers which would fulfill their similar training requirements.

Information and advice on establishing agency training centers may be obtained from Training Information and Resources Division, Bureau of Training, at the Civil Service Commission, 1900 E Street, NW., Washington, D. C. 20415. (202-632-5660) Assistance in setting up training centers in also given by Directors of Civil Service Commission Regional Training Centers listed on page

Room 301, Campus Bancroft Bldg.
Berkeley, California 94704

Phone: Area Code 415-841-5121
Purpose: The General Management Training Center conducts training in the Washington, D. C., area for career managers and staff specialists. Courses are given for each level--first line supervisors, middle managers, and executive personnel. In addition to meeting more generalized training needs, the Center offers courses which explore selected fields such as legislative operations and intergovernmental relations. Certain specialized courses are provided for scientists, engineers, and attorneys emphasizing subject areas not adequately satisfied through other sources of training.

Programs or Courses Offered:

Executives, Managers and Supervisors -

1. A series of six related courses starting with an introductory course for new supervisors and progressing to an advanced seminar for senior career executives. In addition to conducting these courses on an interagency basis, the Center trains agency instructors who conduct these courses for their own agencies.

2. A variety of training to keep executives and managers abreast of new developments and to provide them with knowledge in specialized substantive areas of responsibility such as management of America's water resources, Metropolitan problems and management of "grants" programs.

Scientists and Engineers -

Courses in science policy, management of science and engineering organizations, and in specialized areas such as contracting and information resources.

Attorneys and Hearing Examiners -

Courses to help orient those new to Government, keep others abreast of significant new developments, and provide those in management positions an opportunity to learn effective methods for meeting their responsibilities.

Who May Attend: All employees of Federal executive departments and agencies, independent regulatory agencies, the General Accounting Office, the Government Printing Office and the Library of Congress; employees of State and local governments; and Foreign Nationals sponsored by appropriate Federal agencies. To attend these courses, an employee must be nominated by his agency.

General Information: A brochure briefly describing the General Management Training Center and the 51 courses offered by it is available upon request. Likewise, announcements with more specific information on individual courses are available.

Who May Attend: Treasury personnel in the 1811 Series - Criminal Investigator who are nominated by their bureau. Eligibility of those from other sources (other Federal agencies, foreign, state or local governments) will be determined on a case basis. Attendance of non-Treasury personnel is on a space available basis.

General Information: As in the past, the school will accept candidates from outside of the Department. However, in view of the significant expansion of the Department’s enforcement activities, it is anticipated that such participation will be severely limited during the current year. Housing is not provided and must be arranged by the trainee.
