These guidelines discuss general concerns of second language instruction and problems related to the teaching of specific languages. Included are materials for use with average and superior students. The modern language program is discussed in terms of objectives, scope, and sequence. French, Spanish, German, and Russian sections cover the scope of a four year sequence, cultural education, and source materials. A section on general principles considers the nature, philosophy, and methodology of language learning, as well as the language teacher and department chairman. Other sections deal with audiovisual aids and the evaluation of tests and textbooks. A source directory and guideline evaluation sheet are also included. (AF)

PREFACE

Rather than cast a rigid mold which no teacher dare break, these GUIDELINES, prepared by committee members of the Diocesan Classical-Modern Language Teachers' Association, are intended to serve or guide modern language teachers and modern language departments as they determine their own teaching goals and methodology for their respective classes or schools.

Methods, and even scope, are determined not by a single factor but by a variety of factors. Some teachers find one method more productive of results than another. Some can produce best results by a combination of methods. The same may be said of textbooks, though a good teacher can adapt his methods to the needs of his pupils regardless of the text he uses. The varying abilities and interests of students will be a potent factor in determining the scope of the language course. This outline contains material for the average learner in addition to enrichment activities for the superior student.
INQUIRY SHEET FOR LANGUAGE TEACHER'S EVALUATION OF THESE GUIDELINES

The Curriculum Committee is aware that language represents a continuous growth process. Even as these GUIDELINES go to print, changes are evolving in the significance and content of language, and in methodology. Hence the Committee hopes that these GUIDELINES, far from wasting away in a stuffed filing cabinet, will serve the dedicated and creative language teacher to develop and implement a language course which will meet the needs of the students in his own class.

An inquiry sheet is included herein so that teachers may evaluate the GUIDELINES in order to continue to assist teachers and language departments in their efforts to update the modern language programs in their own schools and in schools throughout the entire diocese. Teachers are urged to send their evaluations, comments, questions, and suggestions to the Curriculum Coordinator, 5103 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, 44103. Your remarks will be appreciated and submitted to the curriculum committee's summer workshop for further study.

Chapter I

General Principles
A. THE NATURE OF LANGUAGE LEARNING

Language is a system of arbitrary vocal symbols by which members of a given culture communicate with each other. Although listening, speaking, reading, and writing are all involved, the essence of language is speech. Since language is basically a set of speaking habits, learning a language is largely a matter of habit formation produced through repetition and overlearning to the point of automatic behavior. Once speaking habits have developed sufficiently, writing which represents a derived and secondary reduction of the spoken word may be introduced.

It must be understood, however, that language learning is not merely a process of rote learning or repetition of words and sentences. The ability to understand and to manipulate words and sentences, even in children, implies some awareness of the lexical and syntactic contribution of component words to the total meaning of the pattern. Even though second-language learning requires overlearning of the basic structural patterns of the language, this verbal activity must be accompanied by an understanding of the changes in meaning which accompany pattern manipulation.

Finally, the four language skills coupled with a developing understanding and capacity to manipulate words and sentences will be coordinated or "orchestrated into the symphony" which is the language experience. But the symphony comes at a later stage, after perfection of single notes, chords, simple melodies, etc. Just as a music student learns musical patterns, learns to appreciate symphonies, which are complexes of musical patterns when he listens to a symphony or reads symphonic music, learns himself to speak the musical language, and even further to compose or write music; so too the student of a modern foreign language should perfect his language skills to become a master of the target language.
B. THE PHILOSOPHY OF MODERN LANGUAGE STUDY

Learning a foreign language is an educational experience. By acquiring even a limited skill, which may or may not be retained, the individual finds himself personally breaking the barriers of a single speech and a single culture, experiencing another culture first-hand in the symbols through which it expresses its realities.1

Basic to an understanding of modern language study is an appreciation of the significance of a liberal education and the place of language study in the perspective of such an education. Whether or not the language learner will have occasion to employ the skill he is learning in actual communication with persons of another culture, the experience of that culture through its language and ideally through its literature will be a source of personal enrichment.

The concept of a liberal education is paramount to an understanding of modern language study, but the socio-political implications of second language learning must not be minimized. In the socio-political sphere, intelligent communication is essential to any efforts towards world peace and economic well-being. Knowledge of language is essential to the achievement of world solidarity, for it is the indispensable means of communication — of entering into and participating in another's community.

Technological advances in methods of communication and transportation have occasioned frequent contacts of people of differering cultures. In view of such progress, the goals of foreign language teaching must necessarily be expanded beyond the traditional concepts of the acquisition of reading and writing skills, and even of comprehension and speech, to a penetration into the culture of the people whose language is being studied.

These expanded goals of foreign language teaching should develop in the student a positive attitude toward speakers of other languages. They should help him to understand better the nature, multiplicity, dignity and importance of other cultures.
Moreover, a developing awareness of differences among cultures should foster in the student a more enlightened perspective and an appreciation of his own American culture.¹

¹Robert Lado, Language Teaching (New York: McGraw-Hill,
C. METHODOLOGY

If technological changes have altered the understanding of goals, advances in linguistic science, as well as the invention and mass production of recording and viewing equipment, have altered contemporary methodology. It is imperative that language instruction adapt to the learner as well as to the needs of society. "The language teacher cannot ignore the results of linguistics, the psychology of human learning, the age and education of the pupils, or the personality and capacity of the individual student."1 Furthermore, he must recognize the need for an audio-lingual approach in language teaching.

Since language is mainly speech, the greater amount of time in the first level should be spent in listening and speaking. Activities of this period include dialogue learning, dialogue adaptation, structure drills, and practice of dialogues and skills. The student should memorize basic conversational sentences as accurately as possible. These give him models which aid further learning. Dr. Lado contends that "conversational dialogues are preferable to poetry or formal prose because conversations show a greater range of the basic constructions of the language in matter-of-fact context."2 Structures are taught through the dialogues followed by oral drills, or "pattern practices." Thus grammar is learned by analogy rather than by analysis.

1Ibid., p. 8.

In this phase the teacher's role as a model for imitation is crucial. Recordings of native speakers are desirable to reinforce learning and to accustom the student to various voices. The use of a language laboratory will facilitate language learning in so far as it provides the student with an opportunity to overlearn what he has begun to assimilate in the classroom. The language laboratory, however, is not a substitute for the teacher.

Only a minimum of vocabulary should be introduced in the early weeks. Its purpose is primarily to aid in learning the sound system and the structures.

Reading and writing should be introduced only after the student has learned the sound system. In the beginning stages the student reads and writes only what he has already learned to speak. As the student progresses, reading and writing receive more stress.
D. THE DEPARTMENT CHAIRMAN

The chairman or coordinator of the Language Department holds the key to the effectiveness of the GUIDELINES. He has the duty to reorient the school administration, the teachers, and the parents as to the purposes, methods, materials, and expected outcomes of the program.

Together with the department members, he must establish a practical progressive syllabus, or update the existing one. While supervising the teachers' adherence to the prescribed program through classroom visitations and conferences, he should, nevertheless, encourage creativity.

Staff meetings should be held at least once a month to share ideas and experiences, to evaluate existing materials and methods, and to discuss problems. Enthusiastic leadership on the part of the chairman will stimulate fruitful discussion.

In the hiring of personnel, the principal should consult the chairman. In selecting language teachers, both must consider the needs of the new audio-lingual programs. Therefore, they should evaluate prospective teachers in terms of audio-lingual proficiency, knowledge of the foreign culture, and methodology.

In scheduling classes the chairman should confer with the principal to insure proper distribution of students and teachers. Special consideration must be given to the beginning classes which require the greatest methodological proficiency, as well as near-native accent.

The chairman, to an increasingly important degree, is responsible for the professional enrichment of his language staff. He must be aware of the opportunities available through national and state agencies, as well as local in-service training programs. He should also consider the possibilities at his own command which include: (1) arranging for his teachers to observe experts in language teaching in his own and other schools; (2) making available in the department library the latest professional publications on language teaching; (3) encouraging the reading of these publications and a sharing of ideas; and (4) recommending and facilitating attendance at regional and national conferences.

The chairman must be well informed of current trends and changes in testing procedures. He should be familiar with organizations and agencies such as Educational Testing Service.

In schools of large enrollment, the coordinator may be assisted by divisional chairmen representing the various languages taught. In every case, the chairman, whether divisional or general, should be personable, enthusiastic, and thoroughly convinced of the importance of language teaching.
E. THE MODERN LANGUAGE TEACHER

The teacher of modern foreign languages must be qualified in addition to being certified. The qualified teacher should possess language competency, cultural background, and techniques specific to the teaching of the target language.

Language competency includes the four skills: understanding, speaking, reading, and writing. Mere knowledge about a language is inadequate; the teacher must be thoroughly at home in the target language. He must be a model of imitation to his students, fluent not only in the free use of significant sounds, syntactical construction, and general vocabulary, but also in many of the details of pronunciation and idiomatic expression of acceptable native speech and writing. Competency in reading and writing should parallel that in understanding and speaking. In order to understand the particular problems that will arise in the target language, the teacher should have a proficient knowledge of the linguistic structure of English.

There is an intimate relationship between the language to be taught and its culture. Traditions, beliefs, and values which are expressed by language are culturally established. Therefore, the teacher should have a knowledge of the history, geography, mode of living, and the achievements of the people.

The language teacher must be familiar with current trends; with techniques of testing aptitude, achievement and proficiency; and with statistical data of these testing programs. He must strive to perfect his competency by reading pertinent books and journals, by attending conferences, professional and cultural meetings, and by making his membership in professional societies meaningful. He should further his study by attending courses or by participating in workshops and institutes.

NOTE: Individual language teachers will find a reliable gauge to their own professional competency through comparison with the standards proposed by the Modern Language Association and endorsed by eighteen professional language organizations.
QUALIFICATIONS FOR SECONDARY-SCHOOL TEACHERS OF MODERN FOREIGN LANGUAGES
(PREPARED BY THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA)

1. AURAL UNDERSTANDING

Minimal—The ability to get the sense of what an educated native says when he is enunciating carefully and speaking simply on a general subject.

Good—The ability to understand conversation at average tempo, lectures, and news broadcasts.

Superior—The ability to follow closely and with ease all types of standard speech, such as rapid or group conversation, plays, and movies.

Test—These abilities can be tested by dictations, by the Listening Comprehension Tests of the College Entrance Examination Board—thus far developed for French, German, and Spanish—or by similar tests for these and other languages, with an extension in range and difficulty for the superior level.

2. SPEAKING

Minimal—The ability to talk on prepared topics (e.g., for classroom situations) without obvious faltering, and to use the common expressions needed for getting around in the foreign country, speaking with a pronunciation readily understandable to a native.

Good—The ability to talk with a native without making glaring mistakes, and with a command of vocabulary and syntax sufficient to express one’s thoughts in sustained conversation. This implies speech at normal speed with good pronunciation and intonation.

Superior—The ability to approximate native speech in vocabulary, intonation, and pronunciation (e.g., the ability to exchange ideas and to be at ease in social situations).

Test—For the present, this ability has to be tested by interview or by a recorded set of questions with a blank disc or tape for recording answers.

3. READING

Minimal—The ability to grasp directly (e.g., without translating) the meaning of simple, non-technical prose, except for an occasional word.

Good—The ability to read with immediate comprehension prose and verse of average difficulty and mature content.

Superior—The ability to read, almost as easily as in English, material of considerable difficulty, such as essays and literary criticism.

Test—These abilities can be tested by a graded series of timed reading passages, with comprehension questions and multiple-choice or free-response answers.

4. WRITING

Minimal—The ability to write correctly sentences or paragraphs such as would be developed orally for classroom situations, and the ability to write a short simple letter.

Good—The ability to write a simple "free composition" with clarity and correctness in vocabulary, idiom, and syntax.

Superior—The ability to write on a variety of subjects with idiomatic naturalness, ease of expression, and some feeling for the style of the language.

Test—These abilities can be tested by multiple-choice syntax items, dictations, translation of English sentences or paragraphs, and a controlled letter or free composition.

5. LANGUAGE ANALYSIS

Minimal—A working command of the sound patterns and grammar patterns of the foreign language, and a knowledge of its main differences from English.

Good—A basic knowledge of the historical development and present characteristics of the language, and an awareness of the difference between the language as spoken and as written.

Superior—Ability to apply knowledge of descriptive, comparative, and historical linguistics to the language-teaching situation.

Test—Such information and insight can be tested for levels 1 and 2 by multiple-choice and free-response items on pronunciation, intonation patterns, and syntax; for levels 2 and 3, items on philology and descriptive linguistics.
6. CULTURE

Minimal—An awareness of language as an essential element among the learned and shared experiences that combine to form a particular culture, and a rudimentary knowledge of the geography, history, literature, art, social customs, and contemporary civilization of the foreign people.

Good—Firsthand knowledge of some literary masterpieces, an understanding of the principal ways in which the foreign culture resembles and differs from our own, and possession of an organized body of information on the foreign people and their civilization.

Superior—An enlightened understanding of the foreign people and their culture, achieved through personal contact, preferably by travel and residence abroad; through study of systematic descriptions of the foreign culture; and through study of literature and the arts.

Text—Such information and insight can be tested by multiple-choice literary and cultural acquaintance tests for levels 1 and 2; for level 3, written comments on passages of prose or poetry that discuss or reveal significant aspects of the foreign culture.

7. PROFESSIONAL PREPARATION

Minimal—Some knowledge of effective methods and techniques of language teaching.

Good—The ability to apply knowledge of methods and techniques to the teaching situation (e.g., audio-visual techniques) and to relate one's teaching of the language to other areas of the curriculum.

Superior—A mastery of recognized teaching methods, and ability to experiment with and evaluate new methods and techniques.

Text—Such knowledge and ability can be tested by multiple-choice answers to questions on pedagogy and language-teaching methods, plus written comment on language-teaching situations.

Chapter II
The Modern Foreign Language Program
A. OBJECTIVES

Learning a foreign language will always have an element of unfinished business about it, since by nature, language involves the acquisition and internalization of a set of language skills and a progressive experience in the knowledge and understanding of a foreign nation. Both of these areas are capable of almost constant refining and enlarging.

Within the area of the secondary school experience, presupposing a possible four-year program or a minimal sequence of three years in any given language, a student is expected to achieve these general goals:

1. Skill objectives—a progressive control of the fundamental language skills to the point of:

   a. Understanding a native speaker at average tempo, on topics of general interest, both in conversation and in a sustained presentation such as a lecture, radio program, or film.

   b. Speaking idiomatically and correctly at normal speed on general topics with a native, and summarizing or answering questions on the content of conversations or sustained presentations.

   c. Reading and comprehending without translation material of average difficulty and comprehending more difficult works with the aid of a glossary or dictionary.

   d. Writing correctly, as directed, what can be understood and spoken, as well as composing freely letters and informal essays on topics of general interest without glaring mistakes.

2. Non-skill objectives—the progressive acquisition of a body of knowledge which will make possible:

   a. An understanding of the history, geography, culture, literature, and art of the nation whose language is being studied as well as its unique contributions to world culture and civilization.

b. A positive attitude toward speakers of other languages and a growing insight into American culture and the English language produced by contact with the traditions and values of a foreign culture and the phonology, morphology and syntax of its language.

c. An insight into the basic unities found within the multiplicity of world cultures, and a willingness to employ acquired language skills not only for personal enrichment, but to better serve America's national well-being and to strengthen attitudes of peace and understanding among the nations and peoples of the world.
B. STATEMENT OF SCOPE

In formulating the outline of course content, the committee presumes a minimal three-year sequence taught by an audio-lingual method. Teachers using a traditional textbook will have to make the necessary adaptations.

Because of the variety of textbooks it is feasible to give here only a general outline which will indicate the material to be mastered; it is assumed that other forms will be introduced as incidental learnings without detailed analysis of grammatical structure. Mastery of the content means verbal control. Complete verbal control of second-year grammar is not expected until reinforcement can occur in third-year work.

To guide the teacher, especially the beginner, the content is outlined for a school year rather than for a level. It is expected, therefore, that the use of a particular textbook or set of materials may extend over more than one year. The audio-lingual approach necessarily requires a slower progression in the early stages.
C. SEQUENCE

Authorities in the field of modern language instruction are increasingly insistent that the sequence of language study be extended beyond the traditional two years now offered in many secondary schools. Dr. William Riley Parker in The National Interest and Foreign Languages urges "four or five years of sound study."¹ James B. Conant in The American High School Today indicates that school boards "should be ready to offer a third and fourth year of a foreign language, no matter how few students enroll."²

A two-year sequence should be considered essentially inadequate; a three-to-four sequence, minimal; and a six-to-ten-year sequence, ideal. Within the secondary school system itself, a student should be permitted a two-year sequence only if he has already completed at least one year of study in another foreign language and will continue that study to a projected three-to-four-year sequence. Ordinarily, students should not be permitted to begin the study of two modern foreign languages simultaneously. Because the modern and the classical languages represent two distinct disciplines and approaches, however, it is possible for a student to start one modern and one classical language.

If a language sequence extends from the elementary school to the secondary school level, provision must be made for continuity in learning. The problem of articulation can be met by considering the length of time required for language learning in terms of levels, rather than in terms of "years" or courses. The time required for the completion of Level I would depend upon the age and capacity of the learner, and the number of teacher-student contact hours provided for in the individual school curriculum. Realizing the need for a FLES program in the Cleveland diocesan school system, the Committee recommends the following steps to effective articulation:

1. Conferences between FLES instructors and secondary school instructors of the foreign language in order to coordinate course materials.

2. A testing program that would identify those incoming students ready for advanced courses.

3. The development in the secondary school program of a system of tracks, whereby students who have pursued Level I before entering high school would be properly placed.

SECTION I: SCOPE FOR FRENCH I

French I begins with about six weeks of intensive work on the active and interdependent skills of listening and speaking. Reading and writing skills should grow directly out of the listening-speaking experiences.

In spelling out a time allotment for the four basic skills, Nelson Brooks offers the following suggestion:

In general, home assignments are geared to language activities which students can engage in without compounding errors or manufacturing language. Using the first class day to explain in English the aims, the objectives, and the methods of the audio-lingual approach to language learning is a wise teacher investment.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

The beginner needs to hear much more in the target language than he is expected to reproduce orally. High quality models for imitation are needed, including a variety of native speakers.

Ordinarily listening materials are presented at normal speed. Special problems may be isolated for slower word or phrase practice. Once mastered, these should be reinserted into context at normal speed.

Listening experiences are frequently joined to speaking activities but they need not be. Beginning students can engage in all of these predominantly listening activities:

a. Reinforcement of basic dialogs by tape or record
b. Pattern drills presented by the teacher or taped
c. All new materials introduced orally by the teacher: dialogs, structure drills, vocabulary development, cultural materials, songs
d. Pronunciation exercises
e. Following a series of directions requiring only an action response

f. Responding to oral materials by a "yes-no" or single-word answer

g. Selecting by letter or number the best answer from multiple-choice answers to oral questions

h. Selecting the best of several possible rejoinders to a given statement or question

i. Songs or short poems

j. Tapes or records which now accompany several of the language magazines written for students

k. Teacher monologs on some facet of French culture or current topic of interest given at the beginning of class

Meanings for many of these listening activities can be supplied by equivalencies, situational context, gesture, visual aids, dramatization, paraphrasing in the foreign language, synonyms, or as a last resort, by a word of English.

2. Speaking

Speech flows directly from listening. It begins with the simplest form, repetition of a model utterance, and moves gradually into responses involving structure changes, replacements, and completions.

Much classroom speech in beginning French is choral in nature, starting with the entire class, then breaking down into smaller group responses, and finally to the individual response.

Intonation patterns, stress, liaison, and the linking of final consonants with initial vowels are all first learned functionally. Later they are reinforced by the presentation of simple rules.

In general, the beginning student should seldom be asked to say what he has not first heard. Longer sentences are best handled by starting with the end of the sentence and working backwards to the beginning. The following are suggested speaking activities for French I:

a. Memorizing dialogs or basic text materials
b. Pattern drills of all types

c. Answering questions based on dialogs, pictures, maps, reading materials, or materials presented orally by the teacher

d. Singing and praying

e. Oral reading practice

f. Poems and proverbs

g. Exchange of social amenities in the classroom

h. Describing orally, while actually demonstrating, a series of related actions, e.g., writing a letter

i. Asking questions of the teacher or another student

j. Brief monologs of a personal nature pertaining to the student's family, home, school life, etc.

3. Conversation

Conversation experiences most appropriate for beginners should have built-in controls to forestall the manufacture of language. Such activities might include:

a. Question-answer exchanges

b. Supplying appropriate rejoinders for a given situation

c. Word games involving classified vocabulary and patterned responses

d. Chain-drill questions and answers

e. Conversation based on directions given by the teacher

f. Inserting a change of vocabulary items into a dialog already memorized

g. Dramatizations

h. Role playing based on situations found in the basic text of the lesson

i. Composing and presenting original dialogs

Allowing each student to choose a name in French, either the equivalent of his real name or a new one, will add atmosphere to the classroom situation and prevent the intrusion of English sounds in conversational activities.

4. Related Problems

Vocabulary growth, pronunciation, and the use of English are all problems related to the development of the audio-lingual skills. They are treated individually below:

a. Vocabulary

First-year French students are expected to work within an area of about 500 words of active vocabulary. This is learned in context and includes a high ratio of the so-called function words of the language. At this early stage a purposeful sacrifice of vocabulary is made in favor of structure mastery.

Among the items which one should expect to find in the beginning language course are the following:

1) High frequency words and expressions needed for polite exchanges, introductions and acknowledgments
2) Words needed for asking directions, telling time, and commenting on the weather
3) Numbers, days of the week, months, and seasons
4) Common idioms with avoir and faire
5) Nouns identifying objects pertaining to the classroom, family, home, food and clothing

b. Pronunciation

French pronunciation involves the mastery of thirty-seven sounds. There are no real "English equivalents."

In the beginning, those sounds which differ most from the English, e.g., the nasal vowels and the French r and w, will need special emphasis. Simple non-technical directions for tongue and lip positions should be provided.

Special emphasis should be given to the following points:

1) Open syllabication and vowel dominance
2) Energetic articulation of consonants
3) An even stress, with slightly greater stress on the last syllable, or the second last syllable when a word ends in an unpronounced e.

4) Falling and rising intonation patterns which differ from English.

In the early part of the year, some time should be systematically devoted to pronunciation exercises which concentrate on one particular phoneme or group of phonemes. Minimal pairs or contrast drills are excellent for sharpening auditory discrimination.

Tapes or records make good reinforcement aids, particularly because recorded voices remain constant and vibrant. They also afford the variety of models needed by the pupil as he tries to acquire the sound system of the target language.

In general, correction of wrong pronunciation should be prompt, but not so prompt as to interrupt a student in the middle of a given utterance. Pronunciation problems should be handled as they arise, regardless of the actual learning at hand. Within the area of first-year vocabulary and structure, an accurate pronunciation and moderately correct intonation should be attained.

c. Use of English

English should never be an accepted means of communication between students in the class or between the teacher and the class. It may legitimately be used, however, in all of the following instances:

1) To identify an area of meaning when other means of doing so prove insufficient

2) To give directions

3) To give equivalencies

4) To summarize some complicated structure item

5) To enable the student to do outside readings of a cultural nature during the audio-lingual phase when other types of assignments are unable to be utilized

6) To convey meaning in "translation" types of pattern drills which center on some structure point in the French which differs in a marked way from English structure.
B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. Initial procedures for teaching reading:
   At this point, reading activities are guided and controlled by the teacher, intensive in nature, and limited in scope. Reading is aimed at comprehension without translation.

   The purposeful delay of reading materials for a period of about six weeks initially allows the ear to guide the eye. This is especially necessary in French where there is such a poor correspondence between sound and spelling. The following procedure is recommended for early reading practice:

   1) An oral review of the materials to be read without their visual representation

   2) One or more model readings done by the teacher with students following visually

   3) One or more readings with pauses for choral imitation

   4) Teacher and students read the text together without pauses

   5) Individual students read

b. Criteria for selecting and using reading materials:
   Materials practiced in class in this way may be assigned for multiple rereadings at home without too much danger of mispronunciations being multiplied. As the year progresses, the time lapse between hearing and seeing is gradually lessened. The amount of oral class drill needed to insure fluency and good pronunciation also drops.

   Throughout the year, specialized reading drills designed to associate various written symbols with a specific phoneme of the French language can be utilized. Examples for these drills are best drawn from words or phrases already known audio-lingually.

   Apart from supplementary materials, which can be introduced in the second semester, the student is not expected to read printed materials with which he is not already acquainted. Supplementary reading materials in the foreign language should possess the following characteristics:
1) Be simpler in language content than the text reading materials

2) Be geared psychologically and artistically to the age level of the group

3) Be authentic in content

4) Be of a sufficient variety to fit individual needs and tastes

5) Be well illustrated

Student periodicals, adaptations of literary works, simple folk stories, informational reading of a cultural or current nature, even foreign-language comic books, might be included. Giving extra credit for outside reading helps to stimulate and retain interest.

2. Writing

Copying familiar materials and frequent short dictations on prepared materials aids in establishing sound-letter correspondences. In copying materials, the student should learn to look at the sentence, say it aloud, write it down, and then check it against the text.

Beginning students are expected to write from dictation only what they have learned to say and read. Dictation procedures might include:

a. A first reading of the entire passage at normal speed

b. A breakdown into smaller breath groups with choral repetition before writing each phrase

c. A reading in full for silent correction at normal speed

d. Immediate correction, either at the board or by means of an overhead projection with a brief teacher explanation of "trouble spots"

e. All punctuation marks should be given in French

At times, lines for dictation may be drawn from pattern drills assigned for oral study at home. Some written exercises requiring the student to make minimal structure changes in given materials are desirable on this level.
3. Related Learnings

The teaching of syllabification, punctuation and accent marks continues during the entire first year. French names should always be used to identify both punctuation and orthographic signs.

a. Syllabification:
1) A single consonant between vowels always belongs to the following syllable
2) Two consonants, the second of which is l or r, except rl or lr, both belong to the following syllable
3) Other combinations of consonants representing two or more sounds are divided

b. Punctuation marks:
1) . le point
2) , la virgule
3) ; le point-virgule
4) ? le point d'interrogation
5) ! le point d'exclamation
6) : les deux points
7) << >> les guillemets, m. (used to denote quoted materials and titles)
8) ... les points de suspension
9) ( ) les parenthèses, f. (used at the end of a sentence to denote secondary importance)
10) -- le tiret (commonly denotes a change of speaker)
11) / \ les crochets, m.
12) { l'accolade, f.
13) * l'astérisque, m.

c. Orthographic signs:
1) è accent aigu
2) é accent grave
3) è accent circonflexe
4) ê le tremà
5) , la cedille (only under c)
6) ' l'apostrophe
7) - le trait d'union

d. Capitalization

Rule: for capitalization in French are the same as those for English with the following exceptions. In French, capitals are omitted in all of the following instances:

1) Day of the week
2) Months of the year
3) First person singular personal pronoun
4) Proper adjectives
5) Names of languages

C. Structure

The outline below spells out in some detail the amount of language structure a teacher should strive to handle in the beginning year of language study. It is in no way intended to indicate the order which will be followed. Normally, teachers will follow the structure, content, and order incorporated in the text at hand. For this reason, various additions or deletions in content may occur. This should not disturb anyone following an integrated textbook series.

d. Questions introduced by _combin de, comment, où, pourquoi, quel_

Under ordinary circumstances, a teacher using the audio-lingual approach in French will teach fewer language structures and less vocabulary in both the first and second year than was ordinarily attempted with other methods. This gap is closed by level three and becomes less and less significant in view of trends toward enforced longer sequences of language study.
SECTION II: SCOPE FOR FRENCH II

The first several weeks of the French II course will need to be devoted to reviewing the audio-lingual skills developed in French I, as well as to reviewing the vocabulary and structure items already learned. Some new materials should be interspersed so that students have a sense of moving forward.

Emphasis on skill development shifts. The audio-lingual skills still dominate, but reading is given considerably more time. The time devoted to writing increases proportionately. Nelson Brooks suggests the following time allotment for language skills during the second year:

- Listening: 30 per cent
- Speaking: 20 per cent
- Reading: 40 per cent
- Writing: 10 per cent

A gradual freeing from controls established in French I takes place. New language structures form a large part of second-year study, but no attempt is made to complete all structure items.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

   Listening comprehension should move gradually from the sentence level to the paragraph level with the student being asked to give back the major ideas heard.

   New materials are modeled fewer times. Presentation remains at normal colloquial speed. Vocabulary found in listening comprehension exercises should invite full attention, yet not be so difficult as to be discouraging.

   Pattern drills, dialogs, and/or the basic reading text still form the bulk of listening materials. These continue to be supplemented by recorded songs, poems, and student periodical materials.

2. Speaking

   Most speaking activities of French I continue with oral drills jumping from single structure changes to multiple structure changes. Completion type drills grow in length. Answers to questions are expected to be longer, freer, and of greater variety.
a. Types of speaking activities which assume greater importance at this level are:

1) Answering questions based on reading materials
2) Memorization of poetry or short monologues for class presentation
3) Longer sequences of directed conversation
4) Individual oral responses to pattern practice drills prepared as home assignments
5) Free descriptions of pictures, charts, cartoons, maps, drawings, and posters
6) Personal opinion reactions appropriate to the situation
7) Student dramatizations, tape recordings, and individual oral reading

b. Some speaking activities which decrease in the proportionate amount of class time allotted to them are:

1) Oral drills on structures and basic text materials
2) Choral reading practice
3) Singing, pronunciation drills, and reading drills
4) Cued-response type of answers

As the year progresses, students should be encouraged to find several acceptable ways of expressing the same idea, answering a given question, or describing an item or event.

3. Conversation

Conversation becomes less controlled although some dialog learning will continue during the first part of the year. Role playing and dramatization of dialogs with student-made vocabulary changes are recommended.

Questions based on the basic text should generally be answered on the sentence level. These should be both specific and personal in nature. They form a great bulk of the conversational activity on this level.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading
While reading becomes more and more extensive, some intensive reading practice continues. The amount of oral presentation by the teacher decreases. Choral repetition is used only for the more difficult sections.

Some ways in which the teacher can prepare the student for home reading assignments are:

a. Give a short summary of the reading content in French

b. Point out cultural items or ideas which differ from the English, and/or connect the material to be read with some aspect of the student's life

c. Eliminate major vocabulary and idiomatic difficulties; these can be listed briefly at the board for explanation

d. If the reading is part of a sequence, connect it with previous readings

e. If these are not already given, supply guide questions of a specific nature

f. Teach the student how to make use of the glosses provided, to be alert for cognates, and encourage him to make intelligent guesses for meaning based on context; the dictionary should be a last resort

g. Insist on oral and multiple rereadings at home

When discussing reading assignments from the previous day, books remain closed. Students should be asked to give the main ideas orally before discussion on the specific guide questions begins. They should try to use new vocabulary items and idioms in original phrases or sentences.

Some supplementary reading should be required. The five guidelines given in French I for the selection of these materials still hold. The teacher can do much to encourage reading interest by placing a few current periodicals, e.g., Paris Match and Marie Claire, one or two foreign-language dictionaries, and a few French reference works in the classroom itself, within easy sight and reach of the student.

2. Writing

Writing in French II builds on the copy work and prepared dictation foundations laid in the first year. Gradually the student is expected to move from sentence manipulation to paragraph manipulation. Writing practice should be based on materials practiced orally or read, preferably both.

Some writing activities proper to this level of skill development include:

a. Copying parts of the basic text or structure drill materials both with and without changes

b. Dictation based on textbook passages, not always prepared in advance, or on dialogs with some change in order and/or structure permitted

c. Writing answers to questions based on a memorized dialog

d. Answering a series of questions in which the question itself provides the needed vocabulary and structure elements

e. Writing answers which have just been given orally

f. Constructing new sentences from given vocabulary following the structure pattern provided

g. Rewriting paragraphs with simple changes made in person, number, or verb tense

h. Building paragraphs through recombining and rewording the answers to reading guide questions

i. Providing new vocabulary for a given paragraph structure to show a difference in person, occasion, time, season, or point of view

j. Expanding a skeleton dialog

k. Changing narrative to dialog, and vice-versa

l. Completing sentences or paragraphs from which words have been deleted

m. Using a given list of vocabulary items, in their given order, to write original sentences

n. Writing down a composition composed orally by the entire class

o. Simple letter writing to encourage French "pen pals"

In testing writing, the teacher should use the same types of exercises as were used in practice.
C. STRUCTURE

New structure items continue to be introduced orally. Initial drill is still done in class. As the year progresses, more and more of the responsibility for oral mastery of the structure can be placed on the student. To encourage real mastery of assigned materials, an oral or written check should automatically follow up study assignments.

New structure learnings for French II include:

1. Article
   a. Used with nouns of weight, measure, and quantity
   b. Use and omission with geographical divisions
   c. Omission with names of languages after parler and en
   d. Omission with predicate nouns denoting class, nationality, and profession after être

2. Nouns
   a. Irregular plurals
   b. Plurals of compound nouns
   c. Change in meaning with gender change
   d. Endings which frequently indicate masculine gender:
      -er, -ment, -ier, -er, -age, -eme
   e. Endings which frequently indicate feminine gender:
      -ion, -â, -â, -aison, -are, -esse, -ette, -ense, -trice, -ude, -ure

3. Pronouns
   a. Disjunctive pronouns
   b. Interrogative pronouns: qu'est-ce qui, qu'est-ce que
   c. Relative pronouns: dont, ce qui, ce que, lequel
   d. Demonstrative pronouns
   e. Indefinite pronouns: aucun, chacun, personne, quelqu'un, rien, tout
   f. Y, en
   g. Reflexive pronouns
   h. Position of several object pronouns

4. Adjectives
   a. Indefinite adjectives: aucun, chaque, nul, quelque, tel, tout
   b. Change in meaning according to placement
   c. Demonstrative adjectives
   d. Regular comparisons
   e. Irregular comparisons as met in context
   f. Use of past participles as predicate adjectives
5. Adverbs
   a. Position in simple and compound tenses
   b. Formation from feminine adjectives
   c. Irregular comparison of bien, mal, peu, beaucoup
   d. Adverbs of quantity

6. Verb structures
   a. Future
   b. Imperfect
   c. Conditional
   d. Reflexive verbs
   e. Present of the subjunctive
   f. Irregular verbs and their past participles as met in basic text
   g. Infinitives: with whole negatives preceding; with a preposition as a substitute for the subjunctive
   h. Present participles
   i. Verbs with orthographic changes
   j. Agreement of past participles with preceding direct objects

7. Prepositions
   a. Use of à and de after verbs and infinitives met in context
   b. Use of à, de, en, au, aux with geographical places met in context
   c. En with the present participle
   d. Depuis with present and imperfect tenses
   e. De after rien, quelque chose, and a superlative

8. Conjunctions
   a. Que
   b. Future with quand and dès que
   c. Common conjunctions governing the subjunctive

Items given above which are not covered in the second year can be taught in French III. The group's ability will determine how rapidly structures can be taken. Thoroughness should not be sacrificed for quantity.
SECTION III: SCOPE FOR FRENCH III

Reading is the major activity and skill to be developed this year. Class participation shows a greater integration of language skills. Speech is more rapid, and utterances are longer. Vocabulary growth is approached systematically. Nelson Brooks suggests the following time allotment:

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

In addition to basic text and pattern drill listening exercises, taped narratives on cultural or current topics, both familiar and unfamiliar, are helpful. The teacher motivates multiple relistenings by follow-up activities or speaking devices such as:

a. Oral completions or summaries

b. Discussion of vocabulary, key ideas, or difficult phrases jotted down during a second listening

c. Restatement of content in another person or tense

2. Speaking

At this level, tempo increases, as well as the length and the complexity of both questions and answers. Some speaking activities, independent of those which flow from listening activities, as given above, include:

a. Continued use of songs, memorization of poetry and monologs, acting out short dramatic skits or dialogs

b. Brief oral reports on a cultural topic, preferably one which the speaker can also illustrate; class members ask simple questions

c. Retelling a short narrative or story by impersonating a character in the reading

d. Retelling a selection narrated by the teacher with a change in person, number, or verb tense Choral work in class is still appropriate in French III. The teacher must be alert to reinforce pronunciation or intonation where weaknesses exist.

3. Conversation

Conversation grows out of reading and becomes less guided. Topics include appointments, activities proper to a given place, e.g., a theatre or the library, and exchange of opinion; expressing emotional reactions of sympathy, joy or regret; and the social amenities of leavetaking. Conversation shifts gradually from objects to ideas.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

A breakthrough to extensive reading occurs in this year, with occasional intensive reading on some passages of special importance or interest. Class time is used for discussing the significant ideas contained in the assigned passages. Daily reading assignments and a variety in type of materials used are recommended.

Readings should provide authentic cultural information and/or have some literary merit. Contemporary fiction and non-fiction, e.g., geography, history, or science; short stories; abridged and adapted prose selections; poetry; selections from the New Testament; and current periodical literature can be used. Emphasis remains on reading skill development, not literary criticism.

Activities in the third year which will aid in developing both comprehension and speed are:

a. Prereading preparation similar to that detailed for French II, though not quite so extensive

b. Broader reading guide questions requiring idea answers rather than factual responses

c. Brief written or oral summaries or the formulation of questions by the students, based on the home reading assignment

d. Occasional short, timed, silent reading periods, followed by oral questions

Throughout the third year, emphasis remains on quality of performance, not quantity. Vocabulary growth is encouraged by specific word study exercises. Some supplementary reading and the use of a small foreign-language dictionary should be required.
2. Writing

Models and limited controls are needed for third-year writing which remains a logical outcome of audio-lingual and reading experiences. Dictation; free substitution exercises; paragraph rewriting with changes in style, person, number, or verb tense; and sentence and dialog-expansion type exercises are continued. These are longer and of greater difficulty than in French II.

Appropriate new activities include:

a. Adding to a given first sentence, followed by a series of vocabulary cues, one additional sentence for each cue

b. Combining several dialogs into a story

c. Summarizing two, three, or even four sentences into one, without adding or omitting information

d. Responding in writing to a series of oral or written directions

e. Writing completions to oral or written sentences based on passages heard twice

f. Summarizing a section of the reading material within a 100-125 word limit

g. Writing a letter in which the questions to be answered are supplied

h. Constructing the other side of a given conversation sequence

Let the teacher BEWARE! Over challenging a student's ability to write creatively forces him to think in English. Oral discussion, preliminary to a writing assignment, can generally forestall errors most likely to occur.

Written work should be corrected by the teacher or by the student under the teacher's direction. Differences in written and oral style should be pointed out as they are met or needed.

C. STRUCTURE

The presentation of basic French grammar orally and by means of structure or pattern practice drills is completed in third year. New language learnings should incorporate, review, and reinforce the elements studied previously. The value of an integrated text book series will be most obvious in this regard.

1. Articles
   a. With titles
   b. With modified proper nouns

2. Nouns
   a. Exclusively masculine gender, e.g., un guide
   b. Exclusively feminine gender, e.g., la victime
   c. Masculine or feminine gender, e.g., un camarade, une camarade

3. Pronouns
   a. Possessive pronouns
   b. Stress pronouns with même
   c. Neuter le d. Relative pronoun où
   e. Impersonal il
   f. Interrogative pronouns: à qui; de qui; complex forms of que, qui, and quoi

4. Adjectives
   a. Superlatives
   b. Comparisons of equality and inequality
   c. Adjectives used as adverbs, e.g., grand, bas, gross, etc.
   d. Irregular feminine forms: -enne, -onne, -euse, -rice

5. Adverbs
   a. Use of tout and tout à fait as adverbs before an adjective
   b. Adverbs of time, place, and degree
   c. Même and surtout in subordinations
   d. Mais si
   e. Adverbs plus est-ce que

6. Verb structures
   a. Subjunctive: review of present; use of imperfect, perfect
   b. Past perfect
   c. Future perfect
   d. Conditional perfect
   e. Passé simple
   f. Passé surcomposé
   g. Past infinitives
h. Passive voice, use of pronominal verbs to replace passive voice
i. Laisser plus infinitive; faire plus infinitive
j. Infinitives as subjects and objects
k. Inversion of pronoun subjects and verbs other than for questions
l. Inversion of noun subjects and verbs for balance, rhythm, and style
m. Irregular verbs as found in the basic text

7. Prepositions

    a. Possessive À

At the end of third-year French, the student should know well what he knows. If his own text does not provide a synthesis of French grammar for reference purposes, a paperback purchase is recommended.
SECTION IV: SCOPE FOR FRENCH IV

Skill building is highly integrated by fourth-year French. Cultural materials predominate. Intimate knowledge of a few recognized masterpieces is preferred to an overview of French literary history. The danger on level four consists in asking "too much, too soon."

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

The following procedures, involving listening, speaking, and/or conversation, are recommended for the further development of audio-lingual skills on level four:

1. Poetry, songs, dialogs, pattern practices of all kinds, and continued guided discussions based on reading assignments

2. Recordings of the works studied, made by native speakers, to enhance appreciation of literature and reinforce the listening skill

3. Short oral reports on the salient features of contemporary French civilization given by individual students, followed by questions from the class

4. Lectures given by the teacher, or by an outside speaker, on a topic geared to the maturity of the class

5. Preparation and presentation of plays and/or assembly programs

6. Newspaper or magazine articles read aloud, followed by class questions or comments

7. Acting out activities of a cultural nature, e.g., a French family at dinner; dramatizing or paraphrasing materials being read

In general, those situations and topics of conversation which one might most easily encounter in free speech with a native are favored.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

Reading is the most important part of the fourth-year course. The reading program should combine a sampling of materials on different subjects, cultural and civilization information, and literary materials of recognized value. Current cultural content may be culled from periodicals, newspapers and recent books. A few types of literary works should be studied in depth; e.g., a short story, a play, a short novel, some poetry. Recent authors are preferred, and at least one modern writer should be included.

Some reading guidelines for the teacher include:

a. Treat cultural and vocabulary items beforehand so that the work can be more easily understood and appreciated
b. Give some time to the study of style, theme and characterization
c. Supplement in-depth study of literary works with periodicals and books on the same topic or related matter
d. Teach students how to skim for facts and how to read critically
e. Give special preparation when literature from an earlier period is used to clarify cultural meanings of the period
f. Use oral readings and/or professional recordings for fuller appreciation of literature and/or poetry

By the end of the fourth year, students can be expected to do liberated reading from popular French periodicals and newspapers, and from some modern writers.

2. Writing

Students continue to use the forms of writing emphasized in the third year. Growth and development are along the following lines:

a. Writing exercises move from single paragraph length to multiple paragraph length
b. Letter writing assumes greater importance, note taking is learned
c. Writing guide questions become progressively more and more general until a free topic based on a reading selection can be assigned
d. Précis or résumés, written reports covering cultural, historical, literary or biographical topics are possible.

The teacher must remember that at this level he is teaching writing as a communication skill, not as a vehicle for creative literary expression. True translation is a specialized skill, and as such, has no real place in fourth-year writing. Now and then, however, the translation of a short passage into good English style is permissible.

C. STRUCTURE

All major structure items should have been taught and reviewed in French III. Structure on this level deals with fine distinctions in usage and provides further review. The time devoted to word study is enlarged. Idioms are emphasized. Again, the value of an integrated four-year course is evident.
SECTION V: FRENCH CULTURE

A. ROLE OF THE TEACHER

In its broadest sense, culture is the sum of all the learned and shared elements that characterize a specific language community. Every contact with language, therefore, is an encounter with culture and the language teacher has no choice. He must teach culture or he will end up teaching meaningless symbols.

In the first two years of language study, culture is learned in terms of the language itself. In later years, the language becomes the basis for further study of the culture. It is during this first stage that the teacher plays the key role. He creates the "cultural island" in the classroom by means of maps, posters, pictures, magazines, books, clippings, calendars, cartoons, recordings, songs, and authentic cultural articles from France.

The teacher, too, interprets the cultural implications attached to the words and actions presented in the dialog or textbook content, culls and brings to class current sources of information on present-day France, arranges to celebrate French holidays, teaches short proverbs and poems, encourages or assigns outside reading in English on various aspects of French culture. He gives insights needed on verbal taboos or etiquette requirements, and points out differences which exist in daily life in France from pets and hobbies to parks and sidewalks.

Judiciously he must choose those audio-visual aids, whether they be maps, slides, pictures, filmstrips, records, or motion pictures, which deal with the real and the authentic in French culture, highlighting people and attitudes and ideals as well as merely factual information.

B. FRENCH CULTURE VALUES

Studying a culture implies learning its set of values and its patterns of belief and behavior. Some basic positive values held by the majority of the French people, together with ways in which these are manifested in a Frenchman's personal relationships and social institutions, are given below. Some awareness of these is needed if one intends to penetrate beneath the surface of French culture.
1. Family Life and Education

   Values: The sanctity of the home is maintained, devotion and sacrifice are expected, a close family unity exists, respect is required.

   Reflected in: amount of time spent in the home; family meals; rare invitations to strangers; helpfulness in school, professional or personal problems; respectful speech and actions.

2. Education

   Values: Education is highly regarded, educated people are respected, honor students are esteemed.

   Reflected in: help given to young people in their studies, celebrations at scholastic success, disapproval of those who do not work to ability, free schooling, scholarships, high educational standards, minimal cost of university study.

3. Ethics and Personal Relations

   Values: Delicacy and gentleness are expected, unselfishness is admired.

4. Beauty, Art, and Esthetics

   Values: Good taste is essential, artistic appreciation is expected, esthetic sensitivity is developed and artistic knowledge and talent are valued.

   Reflected in: standards used in judging others, e.g., one's standards of criticism, interest in and general knowledge of works or art; state support of theaters and theater groups; widely publicized museum showings; local opera houses; cultural content of radio and TV programs.

5. General Knowledge

   Values: Knowledge and sound reasoning are admired.

   Reflected in: respect for hard work of an intellectual nature; tendency to discuss ideas in depth; frequent use of reference materials; lack of tolerance for the superficial; compulsory school attendance; deficient students required to stay for remedial help; higher students must "defend a thesis;" prominent lecturers available to the public; the Institut de France and its academies promote research and set standards in cultural areas.

6. General Conduct

Values: Courtesy and good taste are expected.

Reflected in: lack of tolerance for loud talking, careless table manners, and lateness; handshake exchanges on meeting and leavetaking; high regard shown by a gentleman's kissing of a lady's hand on meeting and leavetaking; a man walks to the left of the person to whom he wishes to show deference; careful attention to appropriate dress and makeup.

7. Respect for French Heritage

Values: French civilization is highly prized.

Reflected in: respect for their great historical past; belief in the civilizing role of France; trips and outings to monuments or areas of cultural importance; constant reference to the contributions of great men of the past; preservation of historic monuments and homes of famous persons; festivals at historic spots; recognition of cultural contributions by the Legion of Honor; yearly drama, music, and film festivals at well-known places.

8. Language

Values: Language is highly regarded and the good use of language is expected.

Reflected in: loss of respect for those who consistently make errors in speech, respect for those who speak French well, admiration of good penmanship, the study of French as the most important subject in the elementary and secondary curriculum, the role of the Académie Française to guard language purity and evolution, more than 700 literary prizes awarded annually, academic students required to study two foreign languages for seven and five-year sequences before their baccalaureate exam.
It is against this background of basic beliefs and behavior patterns that any study of French history, geography, daily life, and achievements in the fine arts should be placed.

C. CULTURAL CONTENT

To avoid a "hit-skip" approach in teaching the body of knowledge related to French culture, some systematic approach is needed. Themes I and II of the following outline constitute appropriate cultural topics for the first three years of language study. They may be assigned for outside reading or classroom reports and should generally be covered as the topics arise or as student interests direct. In some classes, some details may well be omitted.

Topic I of Theme III, "French Contributions to Civilization" is suggested for fourth-year French. Only a six-year sequence in language study will offer sufficient time for the entire outline with a normal class.

E. PRAYERS IN FRENCH

Because culture includes patterned ways of talking, thinking, and feeling, man's mode of expressing himself in the presence of his Creator is a most intimate part of his culture.

The following pages include some suggested prayers and ejaculations which may be taught and prayed throughout the years of French study. Prayers should not be introduced in a haphazard fashion. They deserve the same care given to the teaching of a dialog or narrative. This is especially true during the first year when all prayers are learned audio-lingually before students see their written form.

During the course of the first year, the Sign of the Cross, the Hail Mary, the Our Father, the Glory Be To the Father, the Angel of God, and some selected ejaculations may be taught. When the entire class is able to use a given prayer with ease, and in an obviously meaningful way, a new prayer can be introduced. Occasionally prayers learned should be reused so as not to be forgotten.
LE SIGNE DE LA CROIX

LA SAINTE MARIE

Je vous salue, Marie, pleine de grâce; le Seigneur est avec vous; vous êtes bénie entre toutes les femmes, et Jésus, le fruit de vos entrailles, est bénit. Sainte Marie, mère de Dieu, priez pour nous, pauvres pécheurs, maintenant et à l'heure de notre mort. Ainsi soit-il.

LE NOTRE PÈRE

Notre Père, qui êtes aux cieux, que votre nom soit sanctifié; que votre règne arrive; que votre volonté soit faite sur la terre comme au ciel. Donnez-nous, aujourd'hui, notre pain de chaque jour; pardonnez-nous nos offenses, comme nous pardonnons à ceux qui nous ont offensés; et ne nous laissez pas succomber à la tentation; mais délivrez-nous du mal. Ainsi soit-il.

GLOIRE AU PÈRE

PRIÈRE À L'ANGE GARIDIEN

Ange de Dieu, qui êtes mon gardien et à qui j'ai été confié par la bonté divine, daignez m'éclairer, me garder, me diriger et me gouverner. Ainsi soit-il.

SYMBOLE DES APOTRES

Je crois en Dieu, le Père tout-puissant, Créateur du ciel et de la terre; et en Jésus-Christ, son Fils unique, Notre Seigneur, qui a été conçu du Saint-Esprit, est né de la Vierge Marie; a souffert sous Ponce Pilate, a été crucifié, est mort, a été enseveli; est descendu aux enfers; le troisième jour est ressuscité des morts; est monté aux cieux, est assis à la droite de Dieu le Père tout-puissant, d'où il viendra juger les vivants et les morts. Je crois au Saint-Esprit; la sainte Église catholique, la communion des Saints; la rémission des péchés, la résurrection de la chair; la vie éternelle. Amen.
PRIERE A LA SAINTE VIERGE

Souvenez-vous, ô très miséricordieuse Vierge Marie, qu'on n'a jamais entendu dire qu'aucun de ceux qui ont eu recours à votre protection, lors votre assistance et réclamé votre secours, ait été abandonné. Animé d'une pareille confiance, ô Vierge des Vierges, ô ma Mère, je cours vers vous, et gémisant sous le poids de mes pêchés, je me prosterne à vos pieds. Ô Mère du Verbe Incarné, ne méprisez pas mes prières, mais écoutez-les favorablement et daignez les exaucer. Ainsi soit-il.

PRIERE A SAINT JOSEPH

Saint Joseph, Père et Protecteur des Vierges, gardien fidèle à qui Dieu confia Jésus, l'innocence même, et Marie, la Vierge des Vierges, je vous en supplie et vous conjure, par Jésus et Marie, par ce double dépôt qui vous fut si cher, faites que préservé de toute souillure, pur d'esprit et de cœur, et chaste de corps, je serve constamment Jésus et Marie dans une chasteté parfaite. Amen.

ACTE DE FOI

Mon Dieu, je crois fermement toutes les vérités que vous avez révélées et que vous nous enseigner par votre Eglise, parce que vous ne pouvez ni vous tromper, ni nous tromper. Ainsi soit-il.

ACTE D'ESPERANCE

Mon Dieu, j'espère avec une ferme confiance que vous me donnerez, par les mérites de Jésus-Christ, votre grâce en ce monde, et, si j'observe vos commandements, le bonheur éternel dans l'autre; parce que vous me l'avez promis, et que vous êtes souverainement fidèle dans vos promesses. Ainsi soit-il.

ACTE DE CONTRITION

Mon Dieu, j'ai un très grand regret de vous avoir offensé, parce que vous êtes infiniment bon, infiniment aimable, et que le péché vous déplait; je prends la ferme résolution, avec le secours de votre sainte grâce, de ne plus vous offenser et de faire pénitence. Amen.

JE SUIS LA LUMIERE

Je suis la Lumière, et vous ne me voyez pas
Je suis la Route, et vous ne me suivez pas
Je suis la Vérité, et vous ne me croyez pas
Je suis la "ie, et vous ne me cherchez pas
Je suis votre Chef, et vous ne m'obéissez pas
Je suis votre Dieu, et vous ne me priez pas
Si vous êtes malheureux, ne me le reprochez pas.

INVOCATIONS A MARIE

Ame de Marie, sanctifiez-moi, Cœur de Marie, enflammmez-moi,
Mains de Marie, soutenez-moi, Yeux immaculés de Marie, regardez-moi,
Lèvres de Marie, parlez-moi, Douleurs de Marie, fortifiez-moi,
O douce Marie, écoutez-moi,
Dans le Cœur de Jésus, cachez-moi,
Ne permettez pas que je m'éloigne de vous,
Contre mes ennemies, défendez-moi,
A l'heure de ma mort, appelez-moi,
A mon cher Jésus, conduisez-moi,
Pour l'adorer et l'aimer avec vous
Pendant les siècles des siècles...
Ainsi soit-il.

INVOCATIONS INDULGENCIEES

Jésus, doux et humble de cœur, rendez mon cœur semblable au Vôtre.
Cœur Sacré de Jésus, j'ai confiance en vous.
O Marie, conçue sans péché, priez pour nous qui avons recours à vous.
Cœur Immaculé de Marie, priez pour nous.
O Très Sainte Trinité, je vous adore habitant par votre grâce en mon âme.
O Cœur d'amour, je mets toute ma confiance en vous car je crains tout de ma faiblesse mais j'espère tout de vos bontés.
Cœur Eucharistique de Jésus, augmente en nous la foi, l'espé-rance et la charité.
Doux Cœur de Jésus, soyez mon amour.
Mon Dieu, faites l'unité des esprits dans la vérité et l'union des cœurs dans la charité.
Cœur agonisant de Jésus, ayez pitié des mourants.
Donnez-leur (lui) Seigneur, le repos éternel, et faites luire sur elles (lui, elle) la lumière qui ne s’était jamais.

Que les âmes des fidèles défunts reposent en paix par la miséricorde de Dieu. Ainsi soit-il.

Tout pour vous, ô Coeur sacré de Jésus.

Loué et remercié soit à tous moments le très saint et très divin Sacrement.

Doux Coeur de Marie, soyez mon salut.

Cœur Eucharistique de Jésus qui brûlez d’amour pour nous, enflammez nos cœurs d’amour pour vous.

F. PROVERBS

Every culture has its proverbs, indicative of its peoples’ way of talking, thinking, and feeling. They give an insight into a new culture and should be introduced with this in mind.

During the first year proverbs are taught audio-lingually. A few proverbs, learned with understanding and good pronunciation, will be of more benefit to the student than a notebook full of misunderstood phrases.

Qui veut la fin veut les moyens.
La parole est d’argent; le silence est d’or.
Vouloir, c’est pouvoir.
On connaît les amis au besoin.
Qui se ressemble, s’assemble.
Paris ne s’est pas fait en un jour.
Il n’y a pas de petites économies.

Qui ne dit mot, consent.
Les affaires sont les affaires.
Nul bien sans peine.
Qui aime bien, châtie bien.
La raison du plus fort est toujours la meilleure.
Il faut que jeunesse se passe.
Bon chien chasse de race.
A l'oeuvre on connait l'artisan.
Qui donne vite donne deux fois.
Au royaume des aveugles les borgnes sont rois.
Qui m'aime me suive.
Aux grâces maux les grâces remèdes.
Quand le vin est tiré, il faut le boire.
Tel père, tel fils.
Chacun son métier, les vaches seront bien gardées.
Comme on fait son lit on se couche.
De deux maux il faut choisir le moindre.
Il ne faut pas courir deux lieues à la fois.
Noblesse oblige.
Qui va à la chasse perd sa place.
C'est en forgeant qu'on devient forgeron.
La fortune est aveugle.
On perd tout en voulant trop gagner.
Ce sont toujours les cordonniers les plus mal chaussés.
L'exception confirme la règle.
Contentement passe richesse.
Petit à petit l'oiseau fait son nid.

Si jeunesse savait et si vieillesse pouvait!
La sauce fait manger le poisson.
L'homme propose et Dieu dispose.
L'eau va toujours à la rivière.
A cœur vaillant rien d'impossible.
Un malheur n'arrive jamais seul.
Les grandes douleurs sont muettes.
Au danger on connaît les braves.
Une hirondelle ne fait pas le printemps.
On ne peut contenter tout le monde et son père.
Qui veut trop prouver ne prouve rien.
On n'a rien pour rien.
Tout ce qui brille n'est pas or.
Il y a fagot et fagot.
L'enfer même est pavé de bonnes intentions.
Le cœur a ses raisons que la raison ne connaît pas.
On ne fait pas l'omelette sans casser des œufs.
Ce n'est pas sous les jours fête.
Quand on n'a pas de tête, il faut avoir des jambes.
Ce qui est fait est fait.
Avec des "si" on mettrait
Paris dans une bouteille.

La colère est mauvaise conseillère.

Nécessité fait loi.

La faim fait sortir le loup du bois.

Le mieux est parfois l'ennemi du bien.

L'excès, en tout, est un défaut.

La nuit, tous les chats sont gris.

Qui va lentement, va sûrement.

Quand on n'a pas ce que l'on aime, il faut aimer ce que l'on a.

Il faut faire feu qui colore.

Pauvreté n'est pas vice.

Impossible n'est pas français.

On ne prend pas les mouches avec du vinaigre.

Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.

Charbonnier est maître chez lui.

Il ne faut pas juger les gens sur la mine.

Il faut savoir obéir pour savoir commander.

On ne peut être à la fois juge et partie.

Qui sème le vent, récolte la tempête.

Toute vérité n'est pas bonne dire.

La critique est aisée et l'art
est difficile.

Tant qu'il y a de la vie, il
y a de l'espoir.

A beau mentir qui vient de loin.

Il n'est pire eau que l'eau qui dort.

Il n'y a que la vérité qui blesse.

La caque sent toujours le hareng.

Au chant, on connaît l'oiseau.

Le temps est un grand maître.

Le temps perdu ne se rattrape jamais.

Loin des yeux, loin du cœur.

Aide-toi, le ciel t'aidera.

Le chemin le plus long est souvent le plus court.

L'oisiveté est la mère de tous les vices.

Tout est bien qui finit bien.

Pas de nouvelles, bonnes nouvelles.

La poule qui chante c'est la poule qui pond.

Il n'y a que le premier pas qui compte.

Tout nouveau, tout beau.

3. Three types of printed materials are desirable: exercise books, reference books, and selected readings.

It is against this background that the teacher is expected to make a selection of materials best suited to his own needs. In some cases, this may mean crossing the line from one series to another. Starred (*) materials have the recommendation of the Educational Research Council of Greater Cleveland in their 1966 SEQUENTIAL PROGRAMS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGE FOR A RESTRUCTURED CURRICULUM. Specific items to be considered when making a textbook evaluation are found in Chapter VIII of this guide.

To facilitate listing, the initial code established in point 2 above will be used to indicate that such aids are available with a specific text. It does not indicate that these meet the quality description following particular items. Listing is alphabetical by publisher.

Chapter IV
German
SECTION I. SCOPE FOR GERMAN I

A minimum of four to six weeks of listening and speaking practice, prior to the introduction of the printed word, is essential to the development of the four basic skills. In keeping with the audio-lingual approach the major portion of class time during the first year will be devoted to training in the listening-speaking skills:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Skill</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Listening</td>
<td>50 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speaking</td>
<td>30 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reading</td>
<td>15 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing</td>
<td>5 per cent</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Although grammatical concepts and vocabulary are developed more slowly in an audio-lingual approach, students should attain a reasonable mastery of the skills, structures, and common idioms and vocabulary presented in this outline.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

   In the early phase of language learning students will function much more frequently as hearers rather than speakers. The teacher, therefore, should make use of well-planned listening activities such as:

   a. Patterns presented by native speakers on tape or disc
   b. Patterns presented by the teacher
   c. Basic dialogs
   d. Variations of the basic dialogs
   e. Simple songs
   f. Drills introduced during presentation of other materials
   g. Audio-discrimination drills including minimal pairs of meaningful words or nonsense syllables

2. Speaking

   Since there is a natural affinity between hearing and speaking, listening activities in the early phase will limit what the student says. Speaking activities will, in most instances, involve listening. The teacher should make use of well-planned lingual activities which will facilitate progress in automatic responses, as well as accuracy in pronunciation.

a. Some suggested speaking activities are:

1) Repeating pattern drills presented on discs or tapes by native speakers and by the teacher
2) Practicing patterns with cues supplied by the teacher, discs, or tapes
3) Practicing patterns with cues supplied by students
4) Practicing patterns in chain variations
5) Responding orally to visual cues
6) Memorizing and reciting dialogs and simple poems
7) Singing simple songs

b. Phonology

3. Conversation

a. To equate speaking with conversation in the development of audio-lingual skills may lead to a misunderstanding. Speaking skills generally involve mere repetition and memorization; whereas conversation always involves an exchange between two or more people.

b. From the first day, German should be the language of the classroom. While the teacher may find it necessary to make brief explanations in English, he should not permit the students to use English.

c. Students must learn to manipulate structures meaningfully. It is the teacher's responsibility to see that the students do not merely recite patterns mechanically without comprehension. Meaningful conversations will provide opportunities to use the basic structures in situations other than mere recitation of sentences and dialogs, or answering of teacher-initiated questions.

d. At times, students should be permitted to make up their own sentences and ask their own questions, using only the structures and vocabulary with which they are familiar. In the second semester, they should be permitted to introduce a new noun if they wish, provided they are able to explain the noun to the class in German or by means of a picture or drawing.
4. Use of English

English should never be an accepted means of communication between students in the class or between the teacher and the class. It may legitimately be used, however, in all of the following instances:

a. To identify an area of meaning when other means of doing so prove insufficient

b. To give directions

c. To give equivalencies

d. To summarize some complicated structure item

e. To enable the student to do outside readings of a cultural nature during the audio-lingual phase when other types of assignments are unable to be utilized

f. To convey meaning in "translation" types of pattern drills which center on some structure point in the German which differs in a marked way from English structure

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. During the first semester, reading experience should consist of the same material which the student has practiced, over-learned or memorized previous to seeing it in print. This material may include:

1) Dialogs
2) Basic sentences
3) Accompanying drills for dialogs and basic sentences
4) Specific drills for sound-letter correspondences

b. During the second semester the reading materials should consist of:

1) All the above reading experiences
2) Selections especially written for reading practice (using only known lexical and grammatical items)
3) Recombinations of dialogs and drills
4) Answering questions based on recombination reading materials
5) Singing simple songs from song sheets
6) Practicing word recognition
7) Arranging scrambled words in complete sentences (never employing English)

c. Supplementary reading

In the beginning, especially when the audio-lingual foundation is being laid, supplementary reading may be done in English. Such reading enriches the student's concept of the land, the people, their ways, and their accomplishments. In addition, the student will be motivated to devote more efforts to the study of the language and ultimately to accomplish such reading in the German language itself.

2. Writing

a. The writing program in the early stages should be such that it will aid students to gain firm mechanical control of the way the sounds of the target language appear on paper. Writing exercises may include:

1) Dictation of the basic patterns which the students have learned to say
2) Copying of dialogs
3) Copying drill exercises from text
4) Writing sentences in response to an oral or written cue
5) Making some structure changes such as changing verbs from present to present perfect, changing nouns to pronouns, singulœrs to plurals, etc.
6) Writing in missing elements in pre-structured prose

C. STRUCTURE

Grammar is acquired by imitation and repetition, by using the German in natural situations—hence via functional rather than through formal analysis. By the second semester, however, attention should be given (functionally) to grammar to effect in the student's mind a logical approach to the mastery of the language.
The following grammatical points are to be treated:

1. Verbs
   a. Present tense – weak verbs
   b. Present perfect – weak verbs
   c. Present and present perfect of some strong verbs
   d. Formation of past participle
   e. Present and present perfect tenses of separable and inseparable verbs
   f. Present and perfect (present) tenses of haben, sein and werden
   g. Present tense of modals
   h. Imperatives

2. Pronouns
   a. Personal
   b. Relative
   c. Declension forms

3. Articles

4. Adjectives

5. Adverbs

6. Nouns: declension forms

7. Prepositions
   a. With dative
   b. With accusative
   c. With dative and accusative

8. Word Order

9. Plurals

10. Conjunctions

11. Capitalization

12. Punctuation

D. COMMON SPEECH PATTERNS AND VOCABULARY

1. Everyday speech exchanges
   a. Introductions

   b. Greetings, expressions of courtesy
c. Time of day
d. Weather
e. Asking directions

2. Vocabulary for everyday use
   a. Days of the week, months of the year
   b. Numbers
   c. Classroom objects
   d. Common nouns identifying food, clothing, the family, relatives
   e. Grammatical terms
   f. Other frequently used words found in the text and used in conversation

3. Idioms
SECTION II. SCOPE FOR GERMAN II

The first three or four weeks should be spent in a review of German I; however, in order to maintain interest, the teacher may introduce a very limited amount of new material. There should be continued intensive practice in the listening-speaking skills. More emphasis should be given to the reading skill. Nelson Brooks suggests the following time allotment for the four basic skills:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Skill</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Listening</td>
<td>30%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speaking</td>

As in the first year, new structures, vocabulary, and idioms will be introduced in context.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

During the first semester the student should continue to hear new dialogs, narratives and sentences before he sees them. Throughout the year he should be involved in intensive listening activities such as: pattern drills, dialogs, audio-discrimination drills, and songs suited to his level of comprehension.

2. Speaking

   a. Speaking activities will be closely associated with the listening activities presented in the above paragraph. In addition, students should have opportunities to "be teacher" by engaging in activities such as: supplying cues for pattern drills, asking questions (from text) based on narratives, and conducting some spelling drills.

   b. Pronunciation and intonation. While good accurate speech habits should be firmly fixed during the first year, they can through lack of proper performance in the language quickly degenerate into lazy habits careless of pronunciation and intonation. The teacher, therefore, should be vigilant at all times, but especially during choral response drills and singing.
3. Conversation

   a. Dialogs and conversational sequences should be emphasized in the beginning of the year; however, a higher level of linguistic competency is expected.

   b. Topics of conversation should be expanded to include social activities. Reading materials may be the source of new audio-lingual and conversational experiences. Questions of a personal nature related to the subject of the reading are recommended. The instructor who uses questions wisely is beginning to lay the foundation for free dialog.

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

   a. Reading experiences should consist of:

      1) Some dialogs (early in the year)
      2) Basic sentences
      3) Simple reading selections such as fables, anecdotes, biographies, simple essays, poems, etc.
      4) Specific drills accompanying dialogs, basic sentences and reading selections
      5) An introduction to German literature

   b. Graded German readings which include history, biography, and science are designed to introduce new elements of structure and especially vocabulary. By the time the student has completed German II, he should control a vocabulary of about 2000 words.

   c. Students may begin to read German newspapers and magazines. All readings should be developed, discussed, and reviewed orally in class.

2. Writing

   Writing techniques of the first year should be expanded to include more difficult forms. All written exercises should be based on material which has been practiced orally and/or read. The writing program may include the following activities:

   a. Taking dictation of familiar material

   b. Writing exercises requiring the manipulation of structural points
c. Writing answers to oral questions or rejoinders to statements practiced in class

d. Constructing sentences following a model and using controlled vocabulary

e. Constructing sentences using a group of words in the order given

f. Rewriting a paragraph in a different person or tense

g. Changing a dialog to a narrative and vice versa

h. Filling in a skeleton of a dialog or narrative

C. STRUCTURE

1. Verbs
   a. Completion of conjugation forms
   b. Completion of separable and inseparable verb forms
   c. Passive voice
   d. Substitutes for the passive
   e. Subjunctive mood
   f. Completa modal forms
   g. Reflexive

2. Pronouns
   a. Demonstrative
   b. Indefinite
   c. Intensive
   d. Interrogative

3. Adjectives
   a. Weak, strong, mixed declensions
   b. Comparison
   c. Use of ordinal numbers

4. Adverbs: comparison

5. Nouns
   a. Plural forms
   b. Formation of abstract nouns from adjectives, adverbs

6. Prepositions
   a. With genitive
   b. Contractions
   c. Combined with da wo and dar wor

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

The teacher should present selected tapes which record speech at average speed. When he himself speaks, it should be at average speed and with a vocabulary which will not only be within the reach of the student but will also foster his complete attention and further enhance the listening skill.

2. Speaking

The speed of speech is now greatly increased; there should by now be a greater exchange in dialog. Topics should include longer questions and answers. Now responses from individuals are preferred to choral answering.

3. Conversation

Relatively free conversation may be arrived at by:

a. Prepared dialog

b. Pattern practice

c. Controlled dialog

Oral practice can include memorization of poetry, dramatizations of scenes from plays, oral reports on items of class interest and on those subjects which employ high frequency expressions.

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. Translation is not an objective here. The student is to read, with pleasure, and gather by direct association between the printed word and its meaning. Reading progresses with the mastery of words and structure. One new word in thirty-five is considered a proper pace. What a student reads with direct association, however, is more valuable than volumes poorly understood.

b. Readings should include selections from novels, poetry, biography, history, and the newspapers. Class time may be used to discuss significant ideas found in the selected works. The study of cultural materials and literary works is supplemented by a variety of reading from German magazines and pamphlets. Sports, current events, and advertisements may be among the topics.

c. Reading at this level increases in tempo. Some attention should be given to the art of reading rapidly for comprehension.

2. Writing

a. Writing includes dictation of recombinations of familiar patterns.

b. Controlled composition is introduced, such as résumés, summaries, etc.

c. Sentence completion and construction exercises are useful.

d. The student may be introduced to paragraph and letter writing.

e. Imitation of model passages continues.

C. STRUCTURE

The teacher should plan drills and reading materials so that all the areas of structure are seen in context. In selecting such materials, the teacher should consider the literary as well as the grammatical value.
SECTION IV. SCOPE FOR GERMAN IV

Emphasis is on reading and writing skills. Audio-lingual activities will integrate closely with reading. The students have more freedom in all language activities.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

Listening comprehension practice includes longer items, presented in novel situations. A library of tape materials can produce a variety of speaking manners. Outside speakers should be invited.

2. Speaking

Students may be asked to discuss their reading among themselves with few controls. Discussion may deal with style and literary merit. Masterpieces as well as some recent works may be sampled. Stress should be put on conversation involving situations a student might encounter with a native.

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. Reading selections which offer a combination of cultural information and literary merit may be assigned from German newspapers, magazines, and books.

b. Some attention should be given to the study of style, theme, and characterization relative to German literature.

c. The student should be taught to read critically. A play, a biography, short historical accounts, non-fiction selections, and poems may be assigned for oral reports.

d. The reading items should include written varieties of contemporary German language.

e. The actual reading can be assigned as homework, with some usage of reading parts aloud in the classroom. This helps to preserve the phonetic control.

2. Writing

a. Exercises may be longer—several paragraphs instead of one.
b. There is now free composition, the writing of résumés from something printed, and the finalizing of notes taken from listening to a taped account. This skill is an outcome of listening, speaking, and reading experiences.

c. Letter writing continues.

d. Translations may now be included. Clarity, effectiveness, and good idiomatic English should be demanded in such translations.

e. Cultural topics may serve several purposes, in addition to providing a stimulus for writing.
SECTION V. GERMAN CULTURE (KULTURKUNDE)

INTRODUCTION. Language itself is a manifestation of culture. The use of Du and Sie is one example of a cultural pattern different from the English use of you. Even though non-linguistic patterns of culture are part of the total process of language learning, the ideal approach to teaching German culture is to integrate it as much as possible with the language itself. In assigning topics, however, the teacher may be forced to compromise the ideal in order to take advantage of the individual student's interest.

Still, the student should be assigned a topic which suits his interest and capitalizes on either the learning of the language or the assimilation of the culture. (It is worth repeating: the ideal is both!)

A. The culture of Germany, Austria, and Switzerland should be an integral part of the German course, dominating the atmosphere of the classroom. Industry, thoroughness, scientific precision are some attributes which the classroom "cultural island" should nurture.

B. History, government, economy, social customs, literature, art, music, science, education, family relationships, and division of labor are important topics of the German culture. These items should include similarities to and differences from the culture of the United States. The present state of German culture should not be overlooked.

1. In the early levels, units dealing with geography, history, customs, music, and science should be presented. If these aspects are not part of a text, they may be presented via a cultural reader.

2. In the advanced stages, there should be emphasis on:
   a. Contributions of the German people to Western Civilization.
   b. German in the English language (Hand, Arm, Buch).
   c. German influences on English and American authors (Coleridge, Longfellow, Emerson, Whitman, etc.)
   d. Contributions of the German culture to the American culture.

3. Other cultural avenues are: songs, dances, concerts, museums, folklore festivals, national holidays, religious customs, food, clothing, recreation, transportation, currency.
C. The list below offers topics which may be used for oral and written reports:

3. Literature: Goethe, Lessing, Heine, Grimm, Kafka, Mann, Werfel, Hesse, Rilke.

4. Art: Dürer, Holbein, Grunewald.

5. Science: Helmholtz, Roengten, Ohm, Diesel, Ehrlich, Koch, Bunsen, von Braun.

N. B.: For helpful suggestions in the teaching of culture, please refer to Chapter VI, Section V (Spanish Culture), particularly the following topics: "How and When to Teach Culture" (pp.183-84), "Individual or Group Activities" (pp.186-87), and "What to teach in Culture" (pp.187-88).

Chapter v
Russian
SECTION I: SCOPE FOR RUSSIAN I

The objectives of this course are to introduce the student to the phonology, elementary forms, structural patterns, and basic syntax of the Russian language. The audio-visual aids, language laboratory or tapes and discs, charts, maps, and pictures will facilitate the presentation of pronunciation drills, pattern exercises, vocabulary, and basic dialogs. Selected materials in English for outside reading should be used to extend the student's knowledge of Russian history, civilization, and culture.

The following proportions of class time are suggested for learning the basic skills:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Skill</th>
<th>Time Allotment</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Listening</td>
<td>40 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speaking</td>
<td>30 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reading</td>
<td>20 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing</td>
<td>10 per cent</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

These skills are listed in the order in which they should be presented to the student. The allotment of time points out also the emphasis placed upon a skill for a certain level of instruction. Careful planning and lesson presentation will aid the gradual transition from one skill to another. This will also help the early acquisition of all skills and develop an understanding of their importance for language learning.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS\(^1\)

1. Listening

Specific objective: ability to understand an educated native speaker when he is speaking carefully on a subject appropriate to the age level.

Since the recommended audio-lingual approach is based on the learning of the basic skills among which the listening has priority in presentation and class time allotment, the teacher should as early as possible identify the hearing and articulating problems some students might have. In such instances, remedial individual drills should be assigned.

Carefully selected drills presented by the teacher and reproduced on tapes or discs will introduce the student to the Russian sound system and patterns of speech.

\(^1\)Treatment of audio-lingual and reading and writing skills is based on the SEQUENTIAL PROGRAMS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGE FOR A RESTRUCTURED CURRICULUM, Educational Research Council of Greater Cleveland, 1966.
The suggested learning activities for the development of the speaking skill are:

a. Audio-discrimination and pronunciation drills
b. Patterns presented by the teacher
c. Patterns presented by native speakers on tapes or discs
d. Basic dialogs
e. Variations of the basic dialogs
f. Listening to teacher's discussion on culture-based topics
g. Listening to drills introduced as needed during the presentation of other materials
h. Listening to narration accompanying pictures, filmstrips, or movies which present authentic situations
i. Listening to presentations of songs and poetry

2. Speaking

Specific objective: ability to repeat brief, meaningful utterances; to read simple passages aloud; to answer short, direct questions; and to describe simple situations—all appropriate to the age level of the student and understandable to a native speaker.

Since the listening and speaking skills are mutually related, the speaking activities in the early phase will follow closely the activities suggested for the development of listening skill. At first the students will listen to materials presented by the teacher or mechanically reproduced, and then they will imitate the sounds, repeat the pattern drills, and learn the basic structure of the language.

a. The suggested learning activities for the development of the speaking skill are:

1) Choral and individual repeating of patterns presented by the teacher
2) Choral and individual repeating of patterns presented by native speakers on tapes or discs
3) Practicing and memorizing the basic dialogs and poems
4) Practicing the variations of the basic dialogs
5) Practicing patterns with cues supplied by students
6) Practicing patterns in chain variations
7) Describing orally pictures and familiar objects and activities
8) Restating a brief incident after hearing and repeating
9) Reciting from memory dialogs and poems
10) Restating previously learned dialogs in narrative form
11) Participating in word games
12) Singing and memorizing songs under teacher guidance

b. Pronunciation

The role of pronunciation is extremely important for the formation of good linguistic habits. The acquisition of correct pronunciation will facilitate the listening comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing.

The differences in sound formation, stress, and intonation between English and Russian should not only be clearly understood, but thoroughly practiced in the early stage of language study. To achieve best results, in addition to pronunciation drills, songs and memorization of proverbs and poems are suggested.

The following basic elements of the Russian sound system should be mastered:

1) Stress
2) Intonation in questions and statements
3) Stressed and unstressed vowels
4) Reduction of unstressed O, Э, Я
5) Hard and soft vowels
6) Hard (plain) and soft (palatalized) consonants
7) Voiced and voiceless consonants
8) Alternation of voiced and voiceless consonants
9) Vowel mutation after Г, К, Х, Ж, Ч, Ш, Щ, Ц
c. Conversation

The memorization of a dialog provides the student not only with understanding of a conversation and the ability to recite it from memory, but also helps him to learn by heart the parts of the dialog which present lexical and structural patterns on which other drills are formed. Learning these drills, the student expands his ability to construct numerous sentences by analogy.

The conversation during the early phase of language learning consists essentially in stimulating the student to produce these same patterns and learned sentences in new contexts.

It is obvious that many students have difficulty in this area, because of the small lexical and structural inventory they possess. Therefore, in order to prevent the conversation from breaking down, it seems advisable that the teacher at all times knows exactly what the student can produce grammatically and lexically, and presents the stimuli in such a manner that only the known constructions fit.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

Specific objective: ability to understand the meaning of simple prose appropriate to the age level.

Although the need to postpone the use of printed or written materials until the students have mastered the introductory units only by listening and speaking is recognized, since the Russian language uses the Cyrillic alphabet and the Russian program in many schools is only offered in a two-year sequence, it seems advisable to introduce reading and writing earlier than in other modern foreign language classes.

a. Cyrillic alphabet

In order to facilitate the learning of the thirty-three letters of the Russian alphabet in print and writing, the texts usually present the letters in six groups (three groups consisting of five letters each, and the remaining three groups having six letters each). Since the order of the letters presented in a group          as well as the order of the groups is alphabetical, the students should memorize the letters as they appear in a group. Thus they will easily remember the order of letters in the alphabet which will become helpful when trying to locate a word in the dictionary. The essential learnings are:

1) Russian names of the letters of the alphabet
2) Russian letters and their sound values

b. The suggested learning activities for the development of the reading skills are:

1) Silent reading of previously learned dialogs while listening to teacher, tape or disc
2) Silent reading of narrative prose while listening to teacher, tape, or disc
3) Silent reading of poetry while listening to teacher, tape, or disc
4) Reading aloud previously learned dialogs and variations
5) Reading narrative prose aloud
6) Reading poetry aloud
7) Reading questions and answers based on pre-learned materials
8) Singing from song sheets
9) Reading aloud at home to prepare the assignment

2. Writing

Specific objective: ability to spell and write sentences and short paragraphs appropriate to the age level without glaring errors.

a. Cyrillic alphabet in writing

As soon as the students have learned the Russian alphabet in print, they may begin practising to write the letters. At first, the presentation of letters will follow the suggestion already mentioned to master the characters of each of the six groups in alphabetic order. Later, handwriting exercises should include ample practice in "linking the letters" and mastering those letters that do not look like their corresponding characters in print.
b. The suggested learning activities for the development of the writing skill are:

1) Copying of letters and handwriting drills
2) Dictation of letters and handwriting drills
3) Copying of sentences and dialogs
4) Writing words, sentences, and dialogs from dictation by teacher
5) Completing, transforming, and expanding sentences based on familiar material
6) Completing exercises in workbook
7) Writing descriptions of pictures and familiar objects and activities
8) Writing short, controlled paragraphs, compositions, and letters

3. Special Skills Related to Reading and Writing Russian

c. Orthography (capitalization, syllabification, punctuation)

1 MINIMUM WORD LIST FOR FIRST YEAR RUSSIAN prepared by the Russian Committee, Independent Schools Board, Baltimore, 1961.
SECTION II. SCOPE FOR RUSSIAN II.

This course presents an intensive review of previous learning and a development of greater facility in listening comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing. In addition to textbook and audio-lingual materials providing oral, reading, and writing drills and exercises, sustained conversation is practiced and Graded Russian Readers are introduced. Reading of selective literary masterpieces provides suitable topics for conversation and discussion, and stimulates the study of an outline of Russian literature. Obviously, if the Russian program is offered in a four year sequence, there will be much more time for graded readings as well as for the outline of literature. Nevertheless, even in a two year sequence the students should get acquainted with an outline of Russian literature and read a few short stories and plays in the original. The Russian II student is also introduced to the writing of brief compositions based mainly on vocabulary and idiomatic expressions previously studied in class.

The following distribution of class time devoted to the four basic skills is recommended:

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

Specific objective: ability to understand conversation of average tempo and sustained presentations, including lectures, radio programs, and short films. To communicate effectively as a speaker in conversation with a native.

In order to develop the listening comprehension skill, the students should continue to listen to new dialogs, sentences, and narratives before seeing them in print. The learning activities are about the same as already mentioned for level one, but in addition to listening to dialogs, pattern drills, and songs, the students have more opportunity to practice their listening comprehension on longer narratives and basic sentences.

2. Speaking

Specific objective: ability to summarize orally and to answer questions on the content of conversations and presentations which have been heard.
a. The speaking activities will again follow closely the activities suggested for the development of the listening skill and provide the student with ample opportunity to practice orally all materials previously heard. The study of basic sentences and narratives and their oral presentation will gradually extend the learning of vocabulary and idiomatic expressions, while the practice of the pattern drills will develop the understanding and usage of Russian structures.

b. Pronunciation

In order to strengthen accurate speech habits, at the beginning of the course a review of pronunciation and intonation rules is suggested. Immediate and continuous correction of the student's pronunciation in class will prevent the student from becoming lax or slipping back into bad habits.

c. Conversation

The conversation exercises, based in their form on previously learned structure drills and in their content on dialogs or narratives already studied, should at first be controlled to a degree, so that the student will not be tempted to use incorrect constructions. They consist of the free replacement and completion drills, and of the conversation build-up with the three related parts: directed dialog, rejoinders, and conversation stimulus. These oral drills are steps in the process of leading the student to say something on his own, to produce a new sentence, or to respond to a question.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

Specific objective: ability to read (with glossaries in Russian or with a Russian dictionary) prose of average difficulty, including selected short stories and plays.

a. Readings (oral and silent) should consist of:

1) Dialogs
2) Basic sentences
3) Pattern drills
4) Reading selections from the textbook and those assigned for private study from Graded Russian Readers

131
b. All readings should be introduced, discussed, and reviewed in class. They will provide excellent conversation topics.

2. Writing

Specific objective: ability to write directed compositions, resumes, and letters, and to use varied paraphrasing techniques with reasonable clarity and correctness as limited by morphology and syntax thus far studied.

Suggested activities for practicing the writing skill are:

a. Taking dictation of familiar material
b. Writing sentences using the given words
c. Rewriting sentences by changing the singular to plural, or present to future
d. Rewriting sentences by making the changes required by the cue
e. Constructing sentences following a model and using controlled vocabulary
f. Writing answers to oral questions or rejoinders to statements practiced in class
g. Rewriting a paragraph in a different person or tense
h. Changing a dialog to a narrative or a narrative to a dialog
i. Writing brief letters, resumes, and compositions using vocabulary and idiomatic expressions previously learned

7. Conjunctions (Meanings and use in sentence as included in texts)

8. Particles: -н будь, -то, -же, -ка, ведь

D. VOCABULARY

During the second year the student is expected to increase his active vocabulary to approximately 900 words. Analysis and study of roots, collecting of words related in meaning, grouping by similarity in structure and form, or similar approaches will aid the student to gain a growing control over the inflection and the structuring of the words.

1MINIMUM WORD LIST FOR SECOND YEAR RUSSIAN prepared by the Russian Committee, Independent Schools Board, Baltimore, 1962.
SECTION III. SCOPE FOR RUSSIAN III AND IV.

Comprehensive presentation of all commonly used structural forms along with copious pattern drills will aid the student to master the four language skills and apply them with more confidence. More than before the emphasis is placed upon reading. In addition to regular reading assignments a few literary masterpieces should be studied each year for their intrinsic value and appreciation. Compositions should consist of the writing of resumes, rewriting a passage already studied, or writing on a topic specifically indicated and discussed orally in class. In general, the program for level IV differs little from level III, but the content is more complex, the reading material is more difficult, and the students have more freedom in all language activities.

The following proportions of class time are recommended to be devoted to the four skills:

A. AUDIOLINGUAL SKILLS

The students are expected to achieve a higher degree of competence in listening comprehension and speaking. A wider range and increasing difficulty of materials (recordings, films, literary masterpieces, articles from newspapers and magazines) should extend the learning of vocabulary, expand recognition of cultural achievements, and provide suitable topics for conversation and composition.

1. Listening

Specific objective: ability to understand with reasonable ease rapid standard speech, including classroom discussions, radio programs, recorded plays, and full-length films.

Listening activities should include:

a. Basic sentences

b. Pattern drills

c. Selections on tape or disc especially prepared for the development of listening comprehension

d. Recordings of works studied, made by native speakers
e. Lectures given by the teacher or a guest on a topic geared to the maturity of the class
f. Short oral reports made by students in simple Russian
g. Poetry readings
h. Songs

2. Speaking

Specific objective: ability to speak approximating native speech in intonation and pronunciation in a variety of situations, including sustained presentations and classroom discussions of literature.

a. Suggested speaking activities:
   1) Basic sentences
   2) Pattern drills
   3) Oral reports on prepared topics
   4) Discussions of readings previously studied
   5) Dramatizations
   6) Recitations of poetry

b. Conversation

Some topics of conversation will present ideas or life situations, others will be based on reading selections. The amount of controlled conversation will vary with the amount of structure and vocabulary the students have mastered and with their ability to manipulate the learned structures in new contexts.

B. READING AND WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

Specific objective: ability to read with reasonable ease and with minimal use of lexical aids non-fiction, including magazines and newspapers, and literary materials including selected classics.

Although the basic objective in the reading program is to have the student develop his ability to read the foreign language with understanding, it is advisable to include gradually the literary appreciation of reading selections. Keeping in mind the limits of the student's experience with the language and individual interest, the teacher should suggest such reading materials (short stories, excerpts from novels, biography, poetry, and articles from periodicals) that would provide both enjoyment and linguistic growth.

2. Writing

Specific objective: ability to write summaries of oral discussions and compositions on topics of interest with appropriate choice of idioms and without glaring mistakes in morphology and syntax.

Writing drills of various types following the presentation of grammatical structures should provide written practice in the accurate manipulation of linguistic patterns and lead toward greater freedom of expression. Specific directions, cues, or models should be given for compositions, so that the result may be authentic language rather than a translation from English. While the emphasis in writing was previously on sentence structure, it should be placed now on paragraph construction.

a. At first, the students will continue with writing exercises as those they have practiced earlier:

1) Dictation
2) Sentence completion
3) Constructing sentences following a model and using controlled vocabulary

b. Later, more advanced writing assignments should be practiced like:

1) Resumes or summaries

E. VOCABULARY

An increase of the active vocabulary for about 2000 words is expected each year. The method of approach in learning new lexical items (word and idiomatic expressions) will be the same as the one used in earlier instruction, but the student is now expected to develop greater skill in determining the meaning of the new words from the context.
SECTION IV. RUSSIAN CULTURE

Of many definitions pertaining to culture, two seem most applicable when used in reference with teaching a foreign language. In their simplest forms, one means way of life, the other refinement. The social scientist will probably have more use of the first concept, the humanist of the second, but the foreign language teacher should use it in both areas of reference.

Since the classroom activities are conducted in Russian, the student's principal contact with the Russian culture is in terms of the language itself. Due to the limited knowledge of the language, the beginning student will more readily get acquainted with culture as a way of life than with the concept of culture as refinement of thought, mores, institutions, and arts. Although these two concepts complement each other, we shall discuss them in the order they will be presented in the class.

Russian culture as a way of life

By learning how the native speaker describes the world around him, the student becomes aware of certain cultural differences. He learns how people greet one another, how they introduce strangers, and how they take leave of one another. He becomes aware of how age differences and degrees of intimacy are expressed in language.

In the dialogs and in the reading passages, important and significant cultural items, both linguistic and nonlinguistic, should be interpreted. A display of pictures, maps, periodicals, books, and other realia that are authentic, representative, and currently important as well as selected Russian songs recorded on tape or disc will develop the student's interest and illustrate the cultural information presented by the teacher.

Nelson Brooks suggests numerous topics suitable for discussion and learning of patterns of culture in the language classroom.\(^1\)

A few of these topics are as follows:

WRITTEN AND SPOKEN LANGUAGE. Aside from richness of vocabulary and complexity of structure, what are the commonest areas of differences between spoken language and writing?

FOLKLORE. What myths, stories, traditions, legends, customs, and beliefs are universally found among the common people?

DISCIPLINE. What are the norms of discipline in the home, in school, in public places, in the military, in pastimes and in ceremonies.

FESTIVALS. What days of the calendar year are officially designated as national festivals? What are the central themes of these occasions and what is the manner of their celebration?

GAMES. What are the most popular games that are played outdoors? indoors? by the young? by adults?

TELEPHONE. What phrases and procedures are conventional in the use of the telephone? What is the role of the private telephone in the home? Where are public telephones to be found and how is the service paid for?

KEEPING WARM AND COOL. What changes in clothing, heating, ventilation, food, and drink are made because of variations in temperature?

SPORTS. What organized and professional sports are the most popular and the most generally presented for the public?

LEARNING IN SCHOOL. What course of study is usual for an individual of a given age and academic orientation when compared with that of a student in similar circumstances in the United States?

CONTRAStS IN TOWN AND COUNTRY LIFE. What are some of the notable differences in dwellings, clothing, manners, shopping facilities, and public utilities, when life in town is compared with life in the country?

Russian culture as "refinement"

The study of a foreign language and the ability to use it should include as a goal the development of cultural understandings and appreciations of the highest achievements in sciences, arts, and humanities. While the spoken Russian enables us to communicate and exchange ideas with native speakers, the reading of Russian literature in the original, especially the reading of some of the great masterpieces of Russian fiction, provides an excellent opportunity to learn how to understand the character, the way of life, and the ideas and ideals of the people.

The national need and the shortage of qualified people have often been quoted as the two most important reasons for studying Russian. Among the more enduring reasons for this study, the world-wide significance of Russian culture has a prominent position. For this, it is sufficient to mention the literary works of Pushkin, Gogol, Turgenev, Tolstoy, Dostoyevsky, Sholokov, and Pasternak; or the contributions in philosophy by Soloviev, Florensky, and Berdyaev; or the musical compositions of Glinka, Tschaikovsky, Mussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakov; or Stanislavsky's work in theatrical arts; or the achievements in science made by Lobachevsky, Mendeleyev, and Mechnikov. In years following the Second Vatican Ecumenical Council, even a busy teacher should find time to consult some standard work on Russian philosophy. According to professor N. O. Lossky one of the characteristic features of Russian philosophy is "sobornost" (cathedralness) which in his definition means "a combination of unity and freedom of many persons on the basis of common love for God and for all absolute values" which is important "not only for the life of the church but also for solving many problems in the spirit of synthesis between individualism and universalism."¹

The studies in Russian language and literature as well as the learning of related subjects will enable both the teacher and the student to understand more completely the Slavic world, and the research of the main streams of Russian philosophy will produce an adequate knowledge of the mind and soul of the Slavic peoples which is important for common understanding and durable peace. If the world tensions of today cannot be solved by an agreement between the East and the West concerning disarmament and nuclear tests, perhaps tomorrow aided by these studies we shall agree with Mihail Vasilievic Lomonosov² who made the following remark: "Charles V, the Roman Emperor (1519-1556), used to say that it is fitting to speak Spanish to God, French to companions, German to enemies, Italian to ladies. But, if he would have been competent in Russian, he would without doubt have added this language as suitable for speaking to all, because he would have found in it the beauty of Spanish, the gaiety of French, the strength of German, the charm of Italian, and in addition to it the abundance and great brevity of Greek and Latin."

A. PRAYERS (MOLITVY)

Since the Slavic peoples of the Byzantine Rite use as the language of the Church Old Slavonic, the prayers below are in that language. The Latinic transcription is used for easier learning.

Chapter VI
Spanish
SECTION I. SCOPE FOR SPANISH I

A minimum of four to six weeks of listening and speaking practice, prior to the introduction of the printed word, is essential to the development of the four basic skills. In keeping with the audio-lingual approach the major portion of class time during the first year will be devoted to training in the listening-speaking skills:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Skill</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Listening</td>
<td>50 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speaking</td>
<td>30 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reading</td>
<td>15 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing</td>
<td>5 per cent</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Although grammatical concepts and vocabulary are developed more slowly in an audio-lingual approach, students should attain a reasonable mastery of the skills, structures, and common idioms and vocabulary presented in this outline.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

In the early phase of language learning students will function much more frequently as hearers rather than speakers. The teacher, therefore, should make use of well-planned listening activities such as:

a. Patterns presented by native speakers on tape or disc
b. Patterns presented by the teacher
c. Basic dialogs
d. Variations of the basic dialogs
e. Simple songs
f. Drills introduced during presentation of other materials
g. Audio-discrimination drills including minimal pairs of meaningful words or nonsense syllables

2. Speaking

Since there is a natural affinity between hearing and speaking, listening activities in the early phase will limit what the student says. Speaking activities will, in most instances, involve listening. The teacher should make use of well-planned lingual activities which will facilitate progress in automatic responses, as well as accuracy in pronunciation.
a. Some suggested speaking activities are:

1) Repeating pattern drills presented on discs or tapes by native speakers and by the teacher.

2) Practicing patterns with cues supplied by the teacher, discs, or tapes

3) Practicing patterns with cues supplied by students

4) Practicing patterns in chain variations

5) Responding orally to visual cues

6) Memorizing and reciting dialogs and simple poems

7) Singing simple songs

b. Pronunciation

Both the Castilian and Latin-American pronunciations are correct. Because of local usage and the proximity of Latin America, however, it would seem advisable to teach the Latin-American pronunciation. Nevertheless, students should be aware of the basic differences between the two pronunciations.

In order to achieve an accurate pronunciation, students must strive to master the basic elements of the Spanish sound system. These include:

1) Strong vowels a, e, o and weak vowels u, i

2) Vowel combinations which form diphthongs and triphthongs

3) Silent u, after g, and q

4) Characteristically Spanish consonants - initial r, rr, ll, n, ch

5) The sound of s and g with a, o, u, caudro, guapo

6) Use of gu and qu before e or i, e.g., guerra, guitarra, quito, quemo

7) The silent h, e.g., hambre; j pronounced as h, e.g., jamón

8) Consonants which approximate English pronunciation

9) Consonants ñ, t, b, v in initial and intervocalic positions
c. Intonation

1) Simple declarative sentences
2) Questions with interrogative words, e.g., questions answered with "yes" or "no" require the rising inflection as in English; other types of questions require answers with variations of the falling inflection.

3. Conversation

a. To equate speaking with conversation in the development of audio-lingual skills may lead to a misunderstanding. Speaking skills generally involve mere repetition and memorization; whereas conversation always involves an exchange between two or more people.

b. From the first day, Spanish should be the language of the classroom. While the teacher may find it necessary to make brief explanations in English, he should not permit the students to use English.

c. Some conversation is possible at all levels. Even during the first week the teacher should model simple questions such as "¿Cómo estás?" and "¿Cómo se llama esa chica?" He should encourage the students to ask these questions of each other during the class period. As they memorize basic sentences and dialogs they will increase their store of model structures.

d. Students must learn to manipulate structures meaningfully. It is the teacher's responsibility to see that the students do not merely recite patterns mechanically without comprehension. Meaningful conversations will provide opportunities to use the basic structures in situations other than mere recitation of sentences and dialogs, or answering of teacher-initiated questions.

e. At times, students should be permitted to make up their own sentences and ask their own questions, using only the structures and vocabulary with which they are familiar. In the second semester, they should be permitted to introduce a new noun if they wish, provided they are able to explain the noun to the class in Spanish or by means of a picture or drawing.

4. Use of English

English should never be an accepted means of communication between students in the class or between the teacher and the class. It may legitimately be used, however, in all of the following instances:

a. To identify an area of meaning when other means of doing so prove insufficient

b. To give directions

c. To give equivalencies

d. To summarize some complicated structure item

e. To enable the student to do outside readings of a cultural nature during the audio-lingual phase when other types of assignments are unable to be utilized

f. To convey meaning in "translation" types of pattern drills which center on some structure point in the Spanish which differs in a marked way from English structure

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. During the first semester, reading experience should consist of the same material which the student has practiced, over-learned or memorized previous to seeing it in print. This material may include:

1) Dialogs
2) Basic sentences
3) Accompanying drills for dialogs and basic sentences
4) Specific drills for sound-letter correspondences

b. During the second semester the reading materials should consist of:

1) All the above reading experiences
2) Selections especially written for reading practice (using only known lexical and grammatical items)
3) Recombinations of dialogs and drills
4) Answering questions based on recombination reading materials
5) Singing simple songs from song sheets
6) Practicing word recognition
7) Arranging scrambled words in complete sentences (never employing English)

2. Writing

a. The writing program in the early stages should be such that it will aid students to gain firm mechanical control of the way the sounds of the target language appear on paper. Writing exercises may include:

1) Dictation of the basic patterns which the students have learned to say
2) Copying of dialogues
3) Copying drill exercises from text
4) Writing sentences in response to an oral or written cue
5) Making some structure changes such as changing verbs from present to present perfect, changing nouns to pronouns, singualrs to plurals, etc.
6) Writing in missing elements in pre-structured prose
7) Some limited self-expression such as sentence completion involving a written choice of answers or a brief composition based on simple guide questions (N.B. The student should not have to invent language; therefore, free composition will be minimal)

b. Accentuation

1) Words ending in a vowel or n or s stress the next to the last syllable.
2) Words ending in consonants excepting n or s stress the last syllable.
3) Words which do not follow the above rules require the written accent.
4) The written accent is also used to differentiate the parts of speech, e.g., el, el, sl, sl
c. Syllabification

1) Two consonants are separated with the exception of \( rr, ll \), and \( ch \)

2) Two consonants are not separated when the second is \( l \) or \( r \), except \( lr, nr, sr, rl, sl, tl \)

3) When vowels and consonants alternate, the syllable ends in a vowel.

4) When there are more than two consecutive consonants, the last consonant joins the following vowel.

5) Because the combination of strong and weak vowels often presents difficulty in syllabification, the following generalizations may be helpful:

   a) One strong vowel = one syllable
   b) One weak vowel = one syllable
   c) Two strong vowels = two syllables
   d) Two weak vowels = one syllable
   e) One weak vowel and one strong vowel = one syllable.

d. Peculiarities in punctuation

1) The dash in common usage instead of quotation marks in conversation

2) An inverted question mark preceding a question

3) An inverted exclamation mark preceding an exclamation

4) The comma for the decimal point in numbers; the period in place of the comma, \( e.g., \) English $6,932.32; \) Spanish $6,932,32

e. Capitalization

1) Small letters instead of capitals for days of the week and names of the months. (In some instances, there seems to be a trend toward more capitalization.)

2) Small letters for names of languages and adjectives of nationality

3) Personal titles, except when abbreviated
C. STRUCTURE

15. Idioms and vocabulary of the text in use
SECTION II. SCOPE FOR SPANISH II

The first three or four weeks should be spent in a review of Spanish I; however, in order to maintain interest, the teacher may introduce a very limited amount of new material. There should be continued intensive practice in the listening-speaking skills. More emphasis should be given to the reading skill. Nelson Brooks suggests the following time allotment for the four basic skills:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Skills</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Listening</td>
<td>30 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speaking</td>
<td>20 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reading</td>
<td>40 per cent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing</td>
<td>10 per cent</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

As in the first year, new structures, vocabulary, and idioms will be introduced in context.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

During the first semester the student should continue to hear new dialogs, narratives and sentences before he sees them. Throughout the year he should be involved in intensive listening activities such as: pattern drills, dialogs, audio-discrimination drills, and songs suited to his level of comprehension.

2. Speaking

   a. Speaking activities will be closely associated with the listening activities presented in the above paragraph. In addition, students should have opportunities to "be teacher" by engaging in activities such as: supplying cues for pattern drills, asking questions (from text) based on narratives, and conducting some spelling drills.

   b. Pronunciation and intonation. While good accurate speech habits should be firmly fixed during the first year, they can through lack of proper performance in the language quickly degenerate into lazy habits careless of pronunciation and intonation. The teacher, therefore, should be vigilant at all times, but especially during choral response drills and singing.

3. Conversation

   a. Dialogs and conversational sequences should be emphasized in the beginning of the year; however, a higher level of linguistic competency is expected.
b. Topics of conversation should be expanded to include social activities. Reading materials may be the source of new audio-lingual and conversational experiences. Questions of a personal nature related to the subject of the reading are recommended. The instructor who uses questions wisely is beginning to lay the foundation for free dialog.

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

a. Reading experiences should consist of:

1) Some dialogs (early in the year)
2) Basic sentences
3) Reading selections
4) Specific drills accompanying dialogs, basic sentences and reading selections

b. Reading selections should consist of contrived readings; i.e., readings designed to introduce new elements of structure and especially vocabulary. By the time students have completed Spanish II they should control a vocabulary of about 2000 words.

c. Students may begin to read foreign newspapers and magazines. All readings should be developed, discussed, and reviewed orally in class.

2. Writing

Writing techniques of the first year should be expanded to include more difficult forms. All written exercises should be based on material which has been practiced orally and/or read. The writing program may include the following activities:

a. Taking dictation of familiar material

b. Writing exercises requiring the manipulation of structural points

c. Writing answers to oral questions or rejoinders to statements practiced in class

d. Constructing sentences following a model and using controlled vocabulary

e. Constructing sentences using a group of words in the order given
f. Rewriting a paragraph in a different person or tense
g. Changing a dialog to a narrative and vice versa
h. Filling in the skeleton of a dialog or narrative

C. STRUCTURE

1. Articles
   a. With nouns used in a general sense
   b. Neuter lo before the masculine form of an adjective with the force of an abstract noun

2. Nouns with diminutive suffixes

3. Pronouns
   a. Double pronoun objects - Use of se for lo and les
   b. Reflexive pronouns
   c. Relatives
      1) Quien, quienes
      2) el (la, los, las) que
      3) el (la) cual, los (las) cuales

4. Adjectives
   a. Regular and irregular comparison of adjectives
   b. Absolute superlative suffix:
   c. Use of tanto...como, tan...como
   d. Use of adjective as noun:
   e. Long form of possessives

5. Regular and irregular comparison of adverbs

6. Verbs
   a. Tenses: future, imperfect, preterit, conditional, pluperfect, present and imperfect subjunctive*

b. Past participle
   1) Used as an adjective
   2) Used in compound tenses

c. Reflexive verbs

d. The se construction (mock passive)

e. Formal and familiar commands

f. Radical-changing and orthographic-changing verbs

*By the end of the second year students should have a reasonable amount of oral proficiency in most forms of the indicative mood. The teacher will need to provide added oral practice in the third year, especially in the preterit, the conditional and the future. The teacher may or may not introduce the subjunctive. Much will depend upon the potential of the class. In any case, the subjunctive mood should be drilled and reviewed throughout most of the third year.
SECTION III. SCOPE FOR SPANISH III

The third year may be characterized by an increased speed of speech and a wider variety and greater difficulty of material used. More time should be devoted to the reading skill. Nelson Brooks suggests the following time allotment for the four basic skills:

- Listening: 20 per cent
- Speaking: 20 per cent
- Reading: 40 per cent
- Writing: 20 per cent

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

Listening activities should include:
   a. Basic sentences which develop new structures
   b. Pattern drills which provide practice in the new structures and vocabulary
   c. Some narratives involving the new structures and/or vocabulary
   d. Selections on tape or disc especially prepared for the development of listening comprehension
   e. Selected songs

2. Speaking

Speaking activities should include all of the activities listed above except for the listening comprehension selections. Speaking experience at this level may also include oral reports, poetry readings, and short dramatizations. As in the second year, the teacher must be alert so that students do not become careless about pronunciation and intonation.

3. Conversation

Topics of conversation should include ideas as well as functional situations. Textbook selections should stimulate conversation. Oral reports may also be a source of material for conversation. Some topics conducive to conversation are Una película que he visto, Un libro que he leído, Carreras futuras, Un héroe favorito, Un deporte. No matter what the topic of conversation, the teacher should realize that conversation will be only relatively free, as genuinely free conversation is rarely attainable on the secondary level.

It is suggested that at this level the foreign scene be the locale for all conversational topics unless the subject is related to a definite experience in the life of the pupil.

B. READING-WRITING SKILLS

1. Reading

The reading at this level increases in tempo and difficulty. Students must begin to expand their 2000 word vocabulary so that toward the end of Spanish IV they will control a vocabulary of about 5000 words.

Reading materials may include short stories and plays, and short novels (preferably literary). These materials may form the basis for audio-lingual activities such as oral discussion, dramatizations, and paraphrasing exercises.

Students may begin to read foreign magazines and newspapers other than the student magazines and newspapers to which they may have been introduced in Spanish II.

2. Writing

a. Teachers should continue to guide writing, since the students are still limited in their knowledge of the structures and vocabulary of the language. At this point, students should begin to distinguish written style from the spoken language. Writing experiences of Spanish II should be continued and expanded. These exercises include:

1) Dictation
2) Grammatical manipulation
3) Sentence completion

b. Paragraph writing should be an important part of the course. Some examples of controlled paragraph writing are:

1) Directed narration (Teacher sets up a situation; the when, the what, the where, etc.)
2) Cued narration (Teacher gives first sentence followed by a series of cues on which to build other sentences)
3) Fill-in exercise
4) Answering questions and then combining and/or summarizing answers

5) Rewriting a dialog as a letter or narrative and vice versa

C. STRUCTURE

1. Articles
   a. Use with nouns to express possession
   b. Use as a noun to express possession
   c. Use with an infinitive to form a verbal noun
   d. Use with the noun as in nosotros los alumnos
   e. Use before titles
   f. Omission with identification with a class

2. Nouns in augmentative forms

3. Pronouns
   a. Indirect object pronoun of reference
   b. Redundant use of indirect and direct object pronoun esto, eso, aquello
   c. Indefinites: alguno, ninguno
   d. Possessives (complete)
   e. Reciprocals

4. Adjectives
   a. Common adjectives whose meanings change with their position
   b. Indefinites: alguno, ninguno, cualquiera

5. Nominalized adverbs, e.g., lo peor, lo mejor

6. Verbs
   a. Additional uses of the present subjunctive
   b. Additional radical-changing verbs and irregular verbs
c. The imperfect subjunctive; all forms and uses*

d. Use of ojalá

e. Passive voice

f. Future perfect of probability

g. Conditional perfect of probability

h. Contrary-to-fact conditions

i. Uses of deber

j. Indirect commands

7. Prepositions

a. Distinctive uses of por and para

b. Por and de with passive voice

*These structural items may have been introduced in second year, but it is highly improbable that the majority of students will have oral control of the subjunctive. By the end of the third year students should have a reasonable control of all the standard patterns of the linguistic structure, including the subjunctive.
SECTION IV. SPANISH IV

The program for Spanish IV will continue more extensively and intensively the outline of Spanish III. The time allotment should be similar to that of the third year with emphasis on the reading skill. Audio-lingual activities should integrate closely with reading.

A. AUDIO-LINGUAL SKILLS

1. Listening

Some suggested listening activities which will integrate automatically with reading are:

   a. Recordings of works studied, made by native speakers
   b. Short oral reports given by students in simple Spanish
   c. Lectures given by the teacher or a guest on a topic geared to the maturity of the class
   d. Poetry readings
   e. Songs

2. Speaking

An increased speed and faster tempo should be encouraged, but good pronunciation and intonation patterns should never be sacrificed for speed.

Speaking experiences which should continue through the fourth year are:

   a. Pattern practices
   b. Oral reports on prepared topics
   c. Dramatizations
   d. Memorization of poetry

3. Conversation

   a. Most speaking experiences in Spanish IV will take the form of conversation. The amount of controlled conversation will vary with the amount of structure and vocabulary the students have mastered and with their ability to manipulate variations of structures in different contexts.

   b. The objective during this year should be to enable students to speak to a native in terms of Spanish cultural patterns.
Oral reports which emphasize contemporary culture may be utilized for this purpose; they may be followed by specific questions prepared by the student (possibly following a teacher prepared guide.)
SECTION V. SPANISH CULTURE

The language teacher cannot teach language without at the same time teaching the culture of that language because every contact with language is an encounter with culture.

Since culture may be defined as the patterned ways of acting, talking, thinking and feeling peculiar to a specific language community, the teacher who disregards the culture of the target language is teaching meaningless symbols or foreign symbols to which an American concept is attached. The "why" of a way of life is as important as the facts which describe it; therefore, the cultural material, like the linguistic elements, should be an integrated part of the language program.

Since the development of the four basic skills constitutes the major portion of the language program, teachers may well ask several questions regarding the teaching of culture: How do I teach culture? When do I teach it? What should I teach?

A. How and when to teach culture

There are various ways of teaching culture. It may be presented:
1. through the target language which is ideal; 2. through the use of audio-visual aids; 3. through individual or group activities; 4. through an over-all view in the native language.

1. The target language

a. Since the student's control of the target language in the early stages is inadequate a systematic treatment of the culture in that language would be next to impossible. There are, however, three things which the teacher may do in the target language in the beginning program:

1) Clarify specific cultural items as they occur in structural presentations: e.g., El almuerzo as contrasted with the American lunch; the contrast of seasons, e.g., Summer here means winter in Argentina and school for the students; the American formal "How do you do" and the Spanish "I'm pleased to meet you."

2) Clarify elementary meaning units in the culture: e.g., pierna is a human leg while pata is an animal leg; cuello means neck of a human while pescuezo means neck of an animal; jugar means to play but one does not jugar el piano.

3) Make use of elementary patterns to teach specific cultural items as an integrated part of the lesson: e.g.,

b. Once students have achieved some control of the language, the teacher may present cultural content through the target language in a more systematic manner and in more comprehensive assignments. The point at which the teacher may begin this systematic approach will depend upon the ability of the class. Some few classes may be ready for simple presentations during the first year. The teacher should initiate simple culture lessons in the language as soon as possible.

2. Audio-visual aids

a. Some audio-visual aids which may be used even in the first weeks of class are: (1) maps; (2) color slides; (3) pictures; and (4) filmstrips.

1) Maps

In the early stages students can use maps to recall and to learn in Spanish certain geographical concepts which are or should be a part of their previously acquired knowledge. This use of previous knowledge now presented in the target culture environment is one way of helping the student to develop the self-confidence which is so essential especially in learning to speak the language. Questions for map drill should be very simple, such as: ¿Dónde queda (está) el Amazonas?; ¿Cuál es la capital de Colombia?; ¿Quién es Cantinflas? ¿Es actor? ¿Descubridor? ¿Matador?

2) Color slides

Even in the early stages the teacher may use slides. She may for example, show a slide of a typical street in Burgos and supply the following information. Burgos queda en España al norte. Esta casa (points) es de estilo español. She may then ask questions such as ¿Dónde queda Burgos? ¿Es ésta una casa de estilo español?

3) Pictures

Pictures may be used in the same way as slides. However, there is such a wealth of pictures available that care is needed in selection. Pictures must: a) avoid false cliches. A picture of a Mexican in a sombrero playing his guitar for a sweet señorita does not offer an authentic concept of Mexican culture; b) avoid illustrating the target culture in terms of the native culture.

4) Filmstrips

The above points are applicable to filmstrips which are not accompanied by records. Filmstrips with records should be considered with the motion picture.

b. As the student progresses in the target language the following aids may be added: filmstrips with records, motion pictures, and records.

1) Filmstrips and motion pictures

Selected filmstrips and motion pictures should deal with every day living. They should be ones which were filmed in the setting of the target culture. They should not be considered if they depict the atypical or the unusual. Movies or filmstrips which depict Spanish culture as a gay combination of siestas, bull-fights, and guitars is atypical.

It should be noted that the motion picture is an excellent medium for teaching culture because the motion picture has certain educational advantages which other audio-visual aids do not possess. These are:

a) The motion picture holds attention better because of contrasts of light and dark and the double impact of sight and sound.

b) Motion, sound, and color heighten reality.

c) The motion picture extends widely the horizon of the student.

d) It provides a common experience for all students. Everyone can get something from a film.

e) Better than any other medium the motion picture teaches attitudes, interests and ideals.¹

2) Records

During the first year records may be used to teach authentic Spanish folk songs. The songs should be the simpler ones and within the students' vocabulary range. It may be advisable to teach just one stanza during the first year so that the vocabulary will not be a big problem. Some simple songs are: De los cuatro muleros, Ya se van los pastores, and Corrocorco.

It is not advisable to present literary selections on record during the first or even the second year.

3. Individual or group activities

Cultural activities may be provided for students in many areas. Though they are valid learning experiences they must be used with discretion so that no one activity will usurp too much class time. Following is a list of cultural activities involving curricular and/or extra-curricular experiences:

a. Preparing bulletin board displays of current events, authors, artists, paintings, heroes, ads from magazines

b. Exhibiting souvenirs and other realia from Spanish countries

c. Securing pen pals from Spanish-speaking countries

d. Making field trips to art museums

e. Initiating art projects such as collecting prints or pictures, dressing dolls in the native dress, making puppets for a puppet show in Spanish

f. Collecting stamps

g. Making a notebook of proverbs

h. Making or filling in maps pointing out specific products, land configurations, capitals, rivers, etc.

i. Celebrating important holidays and festivals such as Christmas, Easter, Pan-American Day, El Dos de Mayo

j. Dining at a Spanish restaurant

k. Publishing a class or department newspaper
1. Organizing a Spanish Club

m. Learning Spanish dances and songs

n. Participating in games and skits

o. Subscribing to Spanish newspapers and magazines

p. Collecting and trying out Spanish recipes

q. Inviting guest lecturers to class; e.g. a history teacher, art or music teacher, a Spanish exchange student

4. An over-all view in the native language

An initial over-all view of the target culture can probably be obtained more quickly through the native language of the student than through the target language. While this method is the least advisable of the suggested methods, it may be utilized to some advantage in the beginning stages. Since during the pre-reading period no students in Spanish have written homework and some do not have oral (depending upon accessibility of records) they may develop the attitude that Spanish is an easy no-homework course. Written homework may come as a shock, even for the more conscientious students, because they will not have made provision for it in their homework schedule. It is recommended, therefore, that during the pre-reading period students be held responsible for some outside reading in English in specified cultural areas. This reading could be gathered in the form of an area-study notebook.

B. What to teach in culture

Culture should highlight people not facts. Therefore, in presenting even the most elementary geographical facts such as ¿Cuál es la capital de Chile?, the teacher should strive to center these facts around people. For example, if there is an exchange student in the school the teacher should invite him in and ask him to point out his country on the map. If his country is Chile then the above question would be relevant. If there is no exchange student or other resource person available, then the teacher should find a good color slide or picture containing people in a Spanish culture in a particular country. The teacher should strive to avoid teaching isolated facts about culture just as he avoids teaching isolated vocabulary.

1. Who are they?

2. What are their outstanding characteristics?

3. What have they done? Great achievements are more than facts. e.g. The Declaration of Independence is more than a historical document. Gibraltar is more than a rock.

4. Where are they located?

5. What are their religious beliefs, form of government, educational system?

C. What sequence to follow

Because Spanish culture includes not only Spain, but also Central and South America and Mexico, the teacher must decide what areas, geographical or cultural, he should include each year for study. The following culture content is by no means all-inclusive. The teacher will want to add or omit items depending upon the class, the textbook and other circumstances. The material is divided into four years for convenience rather than for sequence, although it would seem that the recommended content for Spanish I could lend itself to the target language very early. Suggested items for Spanish I are accompanied by questions which might be used in presenting the material in the target language.

Spanish I: Geography of Central and South America and Mexico Geography of Spain Importance of the Spanish language

The geography of each country might include the following:

1. Location: ¿Dónde queda (está) El Salvador?
2. Boundaries: ¿Cuáles son los límites del Perú?
3. Surface configurations: ¿Hay montañas en Chile? ¿Es el Perú un país de desiertos?
4. Climate: ¿Qué tiempo hace ahora en Buenos Aires?
5. Rivers: ¿Cuál es el río más grande de Sudamérica?

1Lado, op. cit., pp. 152-153.
6. Monuments of historical and religious significance: ¿Dónde está el Cristo de los Andes?

7. Mountains: ¿Dónde están los Pirineos?

8. Principal cities: ¿Es importante la ciudad de Acapulco?

9. Principal products: ¿Cuál es el producto más importante de Bolivia?

10. Capital cities: ¿Cuál es la capital de España?

11. Principal regions or subdivisions: ¿Es Aragón una región o una ciudad de España?

Spanish II: Life and customs of Central and South America and Mexico
Life and customs of Spain

The life and customs of each country might include the following:

1. Houses and apartments
   a. Types of construction, rooms, walls, gardens
   b. Streets and residential areas

2. Family life

3. Education

4. Recreation

5. Type of work
   a. Industrial
   b. Agricultural
   c. Professional

6. Foods

7. Social customs
   a. Important holidays
   b. Fairs
   c. Folk dances

8. Transportation and communication

9. Monetary system

10. Metric system

11. Religion
Spanish III: Highlights of Spanish Literature
Aspects of Spanish Civilization

Highlights of Spanish Literature might include the following:

1. Important poets
2. Important novelists, essayists, and playwrights
3. Outstanding movements of literature
4. Major literary prizes

Spanish civilization topics might include the following:

1. History
   a. Outstanding events
   b. Great personalities
2. Government
   a. Form of national government
   b. Community participation
3. Language
   a. Latin origins
   b. Influence of the other regions
4. Painting, Sculpture, Architecture
   a. Outstanding men
   b. Important schools (classic, romantic, etc.)
5. Music
   a. Outstanding composers
   b. Famous conductors and performers

Spanish IV: Highlights of Latin American Literature
Aspects of Latin American Civilization

Since the scope of Latin American literature and civilization is too vast to cover in detail according to country, the teacher should select only the most significant items for emphasis, following the outline for Spanish III.
D. Prayers in Spanish

Because culture includes patterned ways of talking, thinking, and feeling, man's mode of expressing himself in the presence of the Divine Creator is a most intimate part of his culture.

Included in the following pages are some suggested prayers and ejaculations which are familiar to the Spanish as well as to the American culture.

It is suggested that the Our Father and the Hail Mary, plus some selected ejaculations be taught during the first year.

Prayers should not be introduced in a haphazard fashion. They should be taught with the same care and planning as is a dialog or a narrative. This is especially true during the first year.

E. Proverbs

Every culture has its proverbs. Sometimes the proverbs appear in several cultures. Cervantes' Don Quixote contains many proverbs which the author gathered from among the Spanish peasants. Two common ones are Murder will out, and A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Since proverbs are sayings which have been used by many persons for a long time, they are indeed representative of man's way of talking, thinking, and feeling.

Proverbs, too, must be introduced with great care. They should be taught audio-lingually during the first year if they are taught at all. A few proverbs learned with understanding and with good pronunciation will be of much more benefit to the student than a notebook of misunderstood phrases.

F. Common idioms and expressions

Idioms, too, are a part of man's culture. The Spanish language possesses a high frequency of idioms and idiomatic expressions. Most of the common expressions will be introduced with structural content during the course of the three or four year program. Some common idioms and expressions are listed on the following pages. They may be used with the discretion of the teacher.
Prayers in Spanish

EL PADRE NUESTRO

Padre nuestro, que estás en los cielos -- santificado seas el tu nombre; -- venga a nos el tu reino, -- hágase tu voluntad, así en la tierra como en el cielo. -- El pan nuestro de cada día dánoslo hoy, -- y perdónanos nuestras deudas, así como nosotros perdonamos a nuestros deudores, -- y no nos déjes caer en la tentación, -- más líbranos del mal. Amén.

EL AVE MARIA

Dios te salve, María, -- llena eres de gracia, -- el Señor es contigo, -- bendita eres entre todas las mujeres, -- y bendito es el fruto de tu vientre, Jesús. -- Santa María -- Madre de Dios, -- ruega por nosotros pecadores, -- ahora -- y en la hora de nuestra muerte. Amén.

Chapter VII

Multi-Media
There is now a wide variety of audio-visual aids available for use in the school or college, so that it is no longer a question of looking for devices, but rather of being guided in making a wise selection.

The audio-visual devices available for the foreign language teacher may be grouped as follows:

A. VISUAL MEDIA
   1. Flat materials: pictures, the blackboard, flash cards, charts, maps, flannel board, bulletin board
   2. Three-dimensional: puppets, dolls, models
   3. Projected Materials: slides, film strips, motion pictures, television

B. AUDITORY MEDIA
   1. Tape recorder and tapes
   2. Record player and discs
   3. Radio
   4. Motion pictures with sound
   5. Television
   6. The Language Lab

C. PROGRAMED LEARNING

A. VISUAL MEDIA

Any visual method in language teaching is bound to be misleading, unless we realize that visual stimuli bear no necessary relation to language. They can be attached to almost any language and to many structures of the same language. A scientific approach to language teaching is almost forced to depend primarily on the structure of the language. Visual aids must remain aids.

1. Flat Materials

   a. Pictures

   We sometimes erroneously assume that pictures have the same meaning everywhere in the world. This is false. Pictures are culture-bound in at least two ways: (1) the objects and people in the pictures have different functions and connotations in different cultures. (2) Experience in understanding pictures varies from culture to culture. The convention by which a balloon above the picture of a person can mean speech, a dream, or a thought, is a cultural convention.
Pictures can be used effectively to teach language and cultural content. They have often been used to elicit conversation on various topics. This use of pictures without control of the grammatical structures to be taught, may be considered vocabulary rehearsing. More productive is the use of pictures to practice the language structures systematically. In this approach the sentence patterns are selected beforehand. A model is given or elicited, and then series of pictures provide substitution elements that the student incorporates in the sentence-pattern he is practicing.

Pictures can be used to provide systematic cultural experience necessary for a full understanding and use of the language. Again, the use of pictures will differ according to whether it is topic-centered or structure-centered.

Selection of pictures and the order of presentation can best be made on the basis of the second culture, and the ways in which it is different from the first. Merely to show pictures of a child's birthday party in the United States to small children in India will not constitute a meaningful experience for them.

b. The Blackboard

The blackboard has been rightly termed the most versatile visual aid. Its use should be deliberately planned, leaving informal recourse to the blackboard only for unexpected problems encountered during the teaching of the lesson.

Begin with a clean slate. If the material on the board has no relation to the lesson, the associations thus established will interfere with the desired learning.

Write an attention pointer when new material is taught. This is not a full explanation, but merely a hint as to where to look for the crucial point in the lesson or exercise. A brief outline of the lesson can profitably be written on a corner of the board to guide the students in listening.

Secondary teachers and even college teachers or lecturers could improve lessons by using colored chalk effectively. Excellent use of the blackboard can be made for memorization of a text. The material is written on the board before class time, is read through by the teacher and students and repeated until the students read smoothly. The teacher then erases some of the nouns and leads the class in reading everything, including the erased words. Additional readings follow, with more and more material erased, until the class repeats the text, looking at the blackboard where the text appeared previously.
a. Flash Cards

Properly designed and used, flash cards can be very helpful in teaching and studying a language, whether it be vocabulary study or pronunciation practice and the symbols of a phonetic alphabet, or structural forms.

d. Charts and Maps

Wall charts of many types and maps have great advantages for oral practice. They keep the attention of the whole class on the same stimulus, and they can be used repeatedly in full daylight, while other aids require electric connections, darkening of rooms, special equipment, etc. Two types of charts are particularly effective for language teaching: mimicry-memorization conversation charts, and pattern-practice charts. Mimicry-memorization charts are very effective in the first step of learning a second language. A dialogue containing key examples is memorized. This dialogue can be illustrated by a single picture on a wall chart or by a series of pictures. The dialogue is recalled by looking at the chart and successively concentrating on the point of each next sentence. Placing numbers on the chart to indicate the sequence of the points elicititing sentences is a further mnemonic device.

The pattern-practice chart provides substitutions with a given structure pattern in order to practice the same pattern with a variety of elements. A series of line drawings of some twelve figures which show the permanence of word-to-picture associations can be a pattern-practice chart, e.g.:

Teacher - It's a train. Student - It's a train.
It's a ship.
It's an orange.

The same chart can be used to practice the question-pattern, e.g.:

Teacher - Is it a train? Student - Yes, it is.
Is it a ship? No, it isn't (Pointing to the wrong picture) It's a train.

More complex patterns and sequences of patterns can be practiced speedily with the same chart, e.g.:

Teacher - He didn't want the orange; he wanted the watch. Student - He didn't want the orange; he wanted the watch.

Later, the student gives the statements as the teacher points to the pictures.
e. The Flannel Board

The flannel board consists of a piece of flannel stretched over a piece of heavy cardboard or plywood. Any picture, clipping, or light flat object will adhere to the surface with a slight pressure of the hand. With a little ingenuity complete diagrams or scenes can be built up, since any lightweight material will stick to the board. Vocabulary can be taught by placing cutouts representing animals, articles of clothing, furniture, transportation, etc., on the flannel board.

f. The Bulletin Board

If carefully planned and skillfully managed, the bulletin board becomes a wonderful device for motivation, for teaching, and for maintaining interest. It should not consist of a disconnected jumble of pictures, clippings, and news items, but should be related to the classwork. Primarily, many of the items will be in the foreign language. However, news items in English treating important current events also will be included. The endeavor should be to present what is significant, timely, and interesting. The clippings and pictures may be contributed by various members of the class. Students may alternate in taking care of the bulletin board, or a committee may be assigned for the entire term.

If one theme is being treated, e.g., "Christmas in France," "Holy Week in Spain," "The October Festival in Munich," or "The Saturnalia," a neatly lettered caption should be placed at the top. For special events and anniversaries of great men the idea of a single theme is especially desirable.

2. Three-dimensional Objects: puppets, dolls, models

These ordinarily are made by the students at home or in the art lab. They may also be purchased as souvenirs. Class time is needed for teaching the language.

3. Projected Materials

a. Slides and Slide Projectors

Slides are relatively easy to make with one's own camera or are readily obtainable commercially on subjects and places of general interest. They can show cultural subjects in full color and provide the stimulus for controlled speaking practice or free conversation.
The light power of the bulb in a slide projector is an important consideration, especially if the room cannot be darkened completely, or if semi-darkness is preferred to permit the students to take notes. Standard acceptable power is 500 to 750 watts.

b. Film Strips

Film strips can be very useful, whether used alone for informal conversation with the aid of the teacher or when coupled with a tape recording or a record. For teaching literature and culture they are very effective.

c. Opaque Projector

The chief advantage of the opaque projector is that any material can be shown as it is: a photograph, a chart, a paragraph, the page of a book. All that is needed is to place the object to be shown on the tray of the projector, and it will be reflected on the screen. Shortcomings of the opaque projector are the need for considerable darkening of the room, which is sometimes difficult to achieve in the classroom; the awkwardness of changing from one exhibit to the next; and the noise of the cooling system.

d. Overhead Projector

There are several advantages of the overhead projector:
(1) The teacher can write on the plastic film while he faces the class. (2) This kind of projector permits a larger image than can be written on the board. (3) Since the drawings and writing on the plastic sheets or roll can be prepared in advance to be projected at the desired time, considerable flexibility and power can be achieved. (4) No darkening of the room is required.

e. Motion Pictures

A number of motion pictures for the teaching of foreign languages and of English as a foreign language have been produced. Yet, these reels are merely supplements to a course, but whole series covering an entire course are rare, and even when available are not widely purchased. Perhaps this is because motion pictures date rapidly, and methods and props soon look out of fashion, and in fact are.

Motion pictures depicting the culture and people as well as the language can be used to great advantage for enrichment, since they bring to the classroom a realism that cannot be attained otherwise. The selection of appropriate films and their availability are matters that take time on the part of the teacher or department head, but it is time well spent.
f. Television

There is a case for as well as against foreign language teaching via television. A survey sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education and the Modern Language Association of America led to the following conclusion:

A single, skillful, inspired teacher on a city-wide or nation-wide network cannot and will not be able to do the work of several hundred, or one hundred teachers—of one classroom teacher. Such a television teacher can, however, do a significant part of the work of several hundred teachers.

Television is not the answer to the shortage of language teachers, but insofar as TV teaching of foreign languages is done by skillful, inspired teachers, backed by sound advice from linguists and producers, and by a sound program in the schools, television can be a major part of the solution to this problem.¹

1. The Tape Recorder

The tape recorder is a valuable adjunct to the oral activities of the foreign language lesson. If the school has no regular language lab, a tape recorder should be available to the language teacher and ready for use during the entire class period.

Some of the specific values of the tape recorder are that: (1) It extends the repetitive force of the teacher's voice beyond his own physical limitations. (2) Voices other than that of the teacher can be brought into the classroom. (3) The tape provides permanent reference for sounds in the language. It makes listening available to the student at times other than when the teacher is present and is speaking. Listening to the tape recorder in a language class requires strict attention on the part of the student. He must listen to remember, to recognize later, and to be able to reproduce. It is, therefore, important to associate some type of activity with each situation requiring the student to listen. As he listens, he may be required to (1) repeat the identical material he hears, (2) read silently as he hears the material read, (3) provide answers in writing to questions asked, (4) provide answers orally to questions asked, (5) look at a picture which the tape described, and identify objects on the picture. The tape recorder is an excellent device for testing the listening skill of the student.

2. The Record Player

Like the tape recorder, the record player can be used effectively in the language class, especially for songs and literary selections in the foreign language. Some valuable sets of film strips accompanied by records or tapes are available for the foreign language classes.

3. The Radio

Radio programs devised for teaching foreign languages must be graded, and must be based on the vocabulary and the idioms which the pupil is learning. The radio program also lends itself to imaginary visits to the foreign country. In addition to dialogue, authentic music and dance rhythms can be introduced.

In larger metropolitan areas where there are daily radio broadcasts in various foreign languages, it is possible to use some of these in the classroom or assign them for listening at home.

Far more satisfactory are the educational programs sponsored by commercial concerns or specifically set up by boards of education which provide daily broadcasts in a variety of subjects. Among these is the C.C.E.R., Cleveland Catholic Educational Radio, a station set up by the Diocese of Cleveland. By tapping the resources of educators throughout the entire diocese, it can bring to the Catholic students the "cream of the crop" and thus advance educational potential. At present, C.C.E.R. includes in its language program the following: (1) Elementary Latin, a complete series of beginning Latin for fourth grade pupils, every Monday and Wednesday, and a continuation course for fifth grade pupils every Tuesday and Thursday, conducted by Father Henry Gardocki, S.J.; (2) High School Latin, 33 lessons including the teaching of syntax and of classical selections from a variety of authors, under the direction of Father Bode of Borromeo Seminary; (3) French dialogues, 75 lessons, 15 minutes each. Spanish may be added in the near future.

The aim of most radio language programs is to cover the two main phases of language teaching: (1) the cultural, on the basis of vicarious life experience in the foreign country; and (2) hearing and speaking the foreign language.

4. and 5. NOTE: Motion Pictures and Television have been treated under A 3, e. and f.
6. The Language Lab

The advantage of the machine over the living person for purposes of sustained repetition is obvious: the machine can repeat in identical fashion what was said before, and it can do so without fatigue or irritation. The machine can also record the student's response, which he may judge more critically when replayed than he can as he hears himself speak. He can also compare his response with the original, often perceiving what was not clear to him while he listened and replied.

Language labs can be simple and inexpensive or elaborate. Regardless of the investment, the return depends essentially on the integration of work in the classroom with activity in the lab. At best, lab work can be only peripheral to authentic talk. Its virtue is to provide the repetitions for overlearning that are absolutely essential to the student but tedious and taxing to the teacher. The statement that the language lab will take all the drudgery out of language teaching is a gross exaggeration. Drudgery can never be completely taken out of teaching, because teaching will always involve working with those who know less than the teacher. A teacher who feels strongly that drill is a boring chore should seriously consider whether he should remain in the profession.

When a proposal to install a language lab is under consideration, those who must make the decisions have a problem that involves not only the usual matters of budget, salary, and purchase that accompany all such expenditures, but also the following topics that concern language learning in particular:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Equipment</th>
<th>What the student hears</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Installation</td>
<td>Length of tapes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Upkeep and repairs</td>
<td>Voicing and timing of tapes</td>

<tr>
<td>Length of lab period</td>
<td>Literature in the lab</td>

<tr>

<td>Tests in the lab</td>

<tr>
<td>Lab program</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In the lab, no matter how expensive the equipment, there can be good materials, bad materials, and impossible materials. A forty-five minute commentary on the subjunctive in Spanish or Latin without a single example, and therefore without practice by students, is bad teaching, whether in a classroom or in a modern lab. Materials for the lab must be prepared with as much, if not more care than any other materials for teaching. They must be clear, graded, purposeful, and based on linguistic facts and psychological laws of learning. Merely recording something for use in the lab does not make it a good exercise. It must be a good exercise to begin with.

How to Prepare Lab Materials

1. Identify the problem that needs lab practice.
2. Choose the type of drill best suited for the purpose.
3. Prepare the tape script.
4. Make the recording.
5. Check the recording.
6. Evaluate the exercise in actual use with the class.

C. PROGRAMED LEARNING

Many of the features of programmed learning are not exclusive with it, since they can also be observed in good materials not arranged as a program. The following combination of features sets programmed material apart from other teaching aids. The only feature that is strictly peculiar to programed learning is the last in the following series of five: (1) The materials are graded into small easy steps. (2) The program requires the student to be active by responding to every new item. (3) The program is to be used by each student individually. (4) Program learning provides for immediate reinforcement by supplying the correct answer after each response. (5) The most distinctive feature of programed learning is the merging of teaching and testing into one single process. Most items teach and test. They may test something presumably learned through previous items, or something inferable by analogy, logic, or linguistic patterning.
Chapter viii
Evaluation
A. CRITERIA FOR THE EVALUATION OF TESTING PROCEDURES

The teacher should construct tests designed for the particular skills being emphasized. During the pre-reading phase tests should measure listening comprehension and speaking skill. Reading and writing tests are added as these skills are developed.

1. Listening comprehension tests may be of several kinds:
   a. True-False
      The teacher reads a series of statements. The student may write True or False, Yes or No, or he may mark the response on a prepared answer sheet.
   b. Action-Response
      The teacher gives a command or direction; the student performs the action.
   c. Multiple choice completion
      The teacher reads an incomplete statement and then gives three or four possible completions. The student writes or marks the number or letter of the correct completion. After reading has begun, the completions may be written on the prepared answer sheet.
   d. Rejoinder
      The teacher reads a statement and three or four possible rejoinders. The student writes or marks the letter or number of the correct rejoinder. After reading has begun, the rejoinders may be written on the prepared answer sheet.

2. Speaking may be tested by the following:
   a. Repetition or echo
      The student repeats what the teacher or the voice on the tape has said. A variation of this consists in having the student repeat sentences which are progressively lengthened.
   b. Personal question-answer
      This may be varied by the use of taped questions.
   c. Completion
      The teacher gives the student a partial sentence; the student completes the sentence.
d. Rejoinder
The teacher makes a statement to which the student gives a suitable rejoinder.

e. Directed speech or directed dialog
The teacher gives a command or direction to say or ask something; the student formulates the proper statement or question.

f. Picture reaction
The teacher shows the student a picture. The student gives information such as the identity of the person(s), a description of the person(s), color, size or location of objects, or action of the person(s), according to the expected competence.

g. Oral reading
After reading has been introduced, the student may be tested for pronunciation and intonation by having him read a selection which he has practiced; the material should be that which he has already memorized.

h. Situations
The teacher outlines a situation. The student expresses the proper reaction.

3. Reading tests may be of various types:

a. Completion
A part of a sentence is given on the test and the student must select the phrase or clause which completes it.

b. Rejoinder
After a given statement there are several possible rejoinders; the student must select the appropriate one.

c. Answering questions in complete sentences

d. Summarizing a passage

e. True-False statements about a passage

4. To test writing several procedures may be used:

a. Dictation

b. Structure drills
A model sentence and the cues are given; the student writes the complete drill.
c. Variations on a model
   Students change sentences
   1) from affirmative to negative, or vice versa
   2) from singular to plural, or vice versa
   3) from one tense to another
   4) from dialog to narrative style

d. Integration
   The student is asked to combine two utterances; for example,
   1) by using a relative pronoun
   2) by using such expressions as "Il faut que"

e. Multiple choice completion

f. Controlled sentence writing
   The student is given a series of words; using these words in the same order, he writes a sentence.

g. Controlled paragraph writing
   The student is given a series of words or expressions. Using these in any order he wishes, he writes a paragraph.

5. Good testing procedure requires that the tests cover those patterns and units in the target language which are different from those of the native language. In testing listening comprehension and speech the items should involve contrasts requiring careful distinction. An example given by Dr. Ladol cites two English sentences:

   The man is watching the dog.
   The man is washing the dog.

   To test aural comprehension the examiner shows pictures representing each of these actions, and says one of the sentences. The examinee must identify the picture showing the action described by the sentence given. In another test of listening comprehension the examiner could say both the sentences and then repeat one. The student tells or writes the numbers of the two which sound alike. In a simpler variation of this test only the key words need be said.

6. Intonation may be tested by writing numbers above the syllables of a sentence. The student is asked to write or mark the number of the syllable which receives the greatest stress.

7. In testing spelling students may be asked to supply the missing letters of a difficult word rather than to write the entire word. The incomplete word may be part of a sentence. This method of testing spelling is a timesaver.

2Ibid., pp. 165-166. 3Ibid., p. 167 4Ibid., pp. 168-169.
8. Vocabulary may be tested by means of multiple choice items in which the choices are very closely related. Dr. Lado gives an English example:

To cook meat by dry heat is to ______ it.
(a) boil (b) roast (c) fry (d) broil (e) bake with roast as the correct response.

9. Constructing tests demands careful attention to the linguistic elements so that the test really measures knowledge of the target language and does not just ask the student to identify or distinguish items which differ greatly in sound or structure. Tests should be so constructed that the students do not have incorrect forms presented to them. These points should also be kept in mind when selecting commercially prepared tests.

B. CRITERIA FOR THE EVALUATION OF BASIC TEXTS

(E=Excellent A=Acceptable U=Unacceptable)

1. Development of the Four Language Skills

E: Listening comprehension and speaking represent the major concern at the beginning and throughout the period covered by a basic text, followed by the teaching of reading and writing, which occupy no more than one third of the total teaching time.

A: The text recognizes the importance of introducing all four skills and generally observes the accepted relative emphases.

U: The text is not written in accordance with the principles above.

2. Scope:

EA: a. The text reflects one dominant objective, language competence, to which are eventually added two others, cultural insight and literary acquaintance. b. It is designed to familiarize the student with high-frequency structural patterns in the three systems of sound, order, and form (phonology, syntax, and morphology).

U: a. The emphasis on cultural insight or literary acquaintance is so great as to be detrimental to the development of language competence. b. The text does not distinguish between structures and usages that are important because frequently used and those that only a full description of the language would include, their importance being relatively Criteria used by the Educational Research Council of Greater Cleveland in their SEQUENTIAL PROGRAMS IN FOREIGN LANGUAGE FOR A RESTRUCTURED CURRICULUM, March, 1966, pp. 29-32.

It places a principal effort upon the learning of irregular and exceptional forms.

3. Organization for School Schedules

EA: The material is organized to fit into the schedule.

U: The material is not so organized.

4. Presentation of Material

EA:
- a. The material of the first weeks or months of the course (depending on the age level) is designed for a period of oral presentation by the teacher, with or without the help of recorded material. In this first stage of delayed use of written language, the student has little or no need to refer to the printed word.
- b. The text presents new learnings in the FL in dialogue form or in the form of narrative or model sentences usable in conversation.
- c. Structure is learned by use rather than by analysis.
- d. Exercises enable the student to adapt new learnings to his own conversation without reference to English.

U:
- a. The text does not provide for an initial audio-lingual period or for the oral introduction of new material and the beginner is obliged to refer to the printed word in order to carry on his class work.
- b. The text is based on an inventory of the parts of speech or it presents sentences in the FL that "translate" English sentences literally but are not authentic in the foreign culture.
- c. It assumes that the analysis of structure must precede the learning and use of that structure.
- d. No provision is made for the student's gradual and guided progress from mimicry and memorization to free use of the FL in conversation.

5. Psychology of Learning

EA: It presents language models and exercises that, in their selection and preparation, sequence, apparatus, and appearance on the printed page, reflect concern for the basic principles of the psychology of learning:

- a. The text is based on the development of skills (habit formation) rather than the solving of problems.
- b. It provides models to be imitated for both spoken and written language.
- c. It observes the principle of small increment in which problems are isolated and drilled one at a time, making the chance of error negligible, before two or more related but contrasting structures are drilled in a single exercise.
- d. It provides for repetition and reintroduction of material previously learned. (Repetition is the mainstay in overlearning and habit formation).
U: The text shows little or no awareness of these basic principles of the psychology of learning.

6. Exercises

E: There are copious and varied drills dealing with language elements that have occurred in the utterances presented in dialogue, narrative, or sentence form. It includes no exercises in which the FL is to be translated into English.

A: It contains much drill material and there are no exercises in translation from English into the FL of sentences not previously learned by the student.

7. Reading Material (if present)

EA: Any reading materials foster the cultural or literary objectives or both. a. Cultural information should be factual, authentic, representative, important, and of interest to the learner. b. Other reading selections should be chosen for their quality as examples of literature, for the appropriateness of their length, their interest to the learner, and their adaptability to his competence in the new language.

U: The reading material given has no cultural or literary merit, or it is faulty in information or in language, or it is inappropriate to the learner because of its length, content, or linguistic difficulty.

8. Word Study

E: The text promotes the learning of vocabulary by observation and use of words in context and not in lexical lists. (The learning of vocabulary is minimized while the learning of structure is maximized during the period in which a basic text is appropriate.)

A: Only a few vocabulary items are added which are not necessary to the drilling of structures.

U: Many unnecessary vocabulary words must be memorized, to the detriment of the learning of structures.

9. Structure Analysis

EA: a. The explanations are in English. b. In the latter part of the text, the structures that have been gradually learned are drawn together in a clear and systematic way for ready reference.

U: a. The text attempts to explain structures in the FL. b. It presents structure summaries before examples have been learned through use.
10. Lesson and End-Vocabulary

EA: Appropriate lists of the foreign phrases, idioms, and words with or without English equivalents, appear at the ends of sections, or in a complete list at the end of the book, or both.

U: The lexical aids offered are inadequate or the glossary is inserted in the running text or in other ways that hinder learning.

11. Use of English

EA: English is used for directions, comments, explanations, and for establishing the meaning of what is to be learned. It is occasionally used as an aid in distinguishing between forms in the FL that are otherwise not easily learned.

U: The text presents the learnings in the FL as a series of translations from English, rather than as selections from a language code that is entirely independent of English. It presents dubious and faulty English designed to "lead" the learner into the patterns of the FL.

12. Instructions for the Teacher

E: There is a separate manual containing instructions for the teacher concerning: a. preparatory explanation and ground rules for the class b. presentation of the material to the class c. techniques for overlearning the basic materials (dialogue or narrative) d. techniques for drilling sound patterns, structure, and vocabulary e. techniques for checking in class the outside work f. techniques and suggested plans providing for the frequent re-entry into class work of previously learned items g. techniques of audio-lingual review and testing h. instructions for procedure with a particular unit whenever the material demands it.

A: No compromise is acceptable for a, b, c, or d.

U: Instructions for the teacher do not meet the standard for A or are not applicable as given.

13. Layout

EA: a. The type size and arrangement reflect the relationships between language models, drills, and explanations and their relative importance to the learner. b. dialogues, narratives, and reading material in the FL can be read without English being visible.

U: a. The layout does not reflect these relationships or it is confusing to the learner. b. it is printed so as to encourage constant reference to English.
