Official course content requirements for each of five levels of study of French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish are detailed in this booklet. Descriptions of requirements for Latin 1 and 2 are also included. Examination of the basic beliefs of education in the State of Nevada serves as the focal point leading to curriculum specifications. The course design reflects the belief that the essence of language study is to develop listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills in the target language. (RL)

FOREWORD

This High School Course of Study is prepared and printed in accordance with the provisions of the Nevada Revised Statutes, Section 385.110, which states, “The state board of education shall prescribe and cause to be enforced the courses of study for the public schools of this state; provided: 1. That high schools may have modified courses of study, subject to the approval of the state board of education; and 2. That any high school offering courses normally accredited as being beyond the level of the twelfth grade, shall before offering such courses, have them approved by the state board of education.”

This publication is the culmination of the combined efforts of many Nevada educators who have worked diligently to bring it to the present stage of completion. It is the result of the thinking and planning of teachers from the various school districts, members of the staff of the University of Nevada, and consultants from the State Department of Education. Many compromises and changes were made in the original document and the Course of Study, as it now stands, is the consensus of those participating in the planning. When the final revision was made, all comments were carefully considered and many changes resulted from them.

The State Department of Education expresses its sincere appreciation to everyone who helped in the preparation of this publication. Without such assistance, the job would not have been so effectively accomplished.

It is the expressed hope that each teacher will be constantly aware of the fact that this Course of Study represents minimum standards to be attained. Teachers are urged to exceed these minimums whenever and wherever they find it possible in the development of the curricula.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction.
INTRODUCTION

In 1960 the Curriculum Division of the State Department of Education began work on the first Course of Study for Foreign Languages since 1934; this represents the culmination of the work of the Foreign Language Course of Study Committee, consisting of foreign language educators and school administrators from all parts of the State. Members included:

- Honora Anderson, Las Vegas
- Paul Arena, Las Vegas
- John Blaikie, Carson City
- Santina Cangialosi, Hawthorne
- Jonathan Chamberlain, Panaca
- James Costa, Smith Valley
- Mae Donew, Sparks
- Edwin Dodson, Reno
- Gloria Fundis, Lovelock
- Ruth Holton, Elko
- Edward Zirtland, Carson City
- Florindo Mariani, Ely
- Andrew Morby, Reno
- Carol Mueller, Reno
- Florence Polish, Reno
- Marvin Roth, Reno
- Gene Scarselli, Gardnerville
- Wallace Smith, Hawthorne
- Paul Sorenson, Las Vegas
- Paul Sorenson, Las Vegas
- J. Marlan Walker, Henderson
- Fenton Whelan, Boulder City
- Anthony Zeni, Reno

We wish to express our gratitude and appreciation to these people, to Mr. Raymond A. McGuire, former Curriculum Director, and to the many others who have given of their time and efforts to produce this Course of Study for Foreign Languages.

A PHILOSOPHY OF EDUCATION

The basic beliefs of education in the State of Nevada have evolved over a period of many years. The philosophy and objectives presented reflect the educational principles upon which our school system is based and the values placed upon education by the people of Nevada.

We believe that:
A. Equal educational opportunities are to be provided for all the children of the State of Nevada.
B. The basic skills for academic achievement must be mastered by each child. This mastery is to be commensurate with the ability of the individual.
C. The dignity of the individual is to be recognized and stressed in all areas.
D. The intellectual, moral, and esthetic values of each child are to be developed to the utmost.
E. An understanding of, and a love for the cultural heritage and democratic way of life of this Nation and State are to be developed.
F. An understanding of human relationships and the development of those attitudes that are necessary for wholesome citizenship are to be evolved and stressed.
G. Opportunities for children to develop desirable mental and physical health habits are to be provided.

PHILOSOPHY

Inasmuch as we are living in a world in which all nations and peoples are daily being brought closer together, it becomes necessary for our public schools to promote better universal understanding by offering to all students the opportunity to study foreign languages.

Today foreign language study is, therefore, assuming not only an imperative, but a crucially important role.

All students shall be given the opportunity and should be encouraged to participate in the foreign language program. This participation should bring about the better appreciation and knowledge of and respect for the life and cultures of the peoples throughout the world as well as to provide students with communications skills in a second language.

OBJECTIVES

LINGUISTIC OBJECTIVES

Since the ability to communicate is the heart of modern foreign language study, initial emphasis should be on learning to communicate orally.
Learning a language is a fourfold process; hearing, speaking, reading, and writing. These four skills are closely related and largely interdependent. Speech cannot come without hearing while reading and writing are linked by the common system of representing the written word. All are governed by the structural concepts of the language itself.

1. Hearing: The student should understand the foreign language as it is spoken by native speakers in situations similar to his own experience.

2. Speaking: The student should, within his experience, develop fluency and efficiency in speaking the foreign language correctly.

3. Reading: The student should develop the ability to read, without conscious translation, anything within the range of what he has learned to understand and to say.

4. Writing: The student should be able to communicate in writing his thoughts within the range of his vocabulary.

NONLINGUISTIC OBJECTIVES

The study of foreign languages contributes to the general aims of education. Certain specific skills and attitudes which should be developed are:

1. An understanding and appreciation of foreign peoples and their cultures.
2. The encouragement of an appreciation for Americanism through the knowledge of our national heritage as it was derived from foreign backgrounds.
3. The motivation of student interest through an awareness of foreign peoples and their cultures.
4. An acquisition of an understanding of the origin and development of human speech.
5. The provision for opportunities for development of desirable study skills.

SUGGESTED SEQUENCES

The mastery of a foreign language is the acquisition of a definite set of skills. These skills require time to achieve. It is recognized that the study of a foreign language should be maintained as long as the interest, ability, and needs of a student permit.

In this light the study of a foreign language for 3 school years is considered minimal, with the desired aim a possible sequence of 6 years for able students. Accordingly, the course outlines which follow are designed to permit a school to institute a flexible but sustained sequence of foreign language study.

In the following diagrams are illustrated some of the possible foreign language sequences that can be instituted by utilizing the six levels outlined in the course content descriptions.
Linguistically talented students should be encouraged to undertake the study of a second foreign language after completing two levels of the first. A very few especially talented students may even be able to undertake a third. Students should be discouraged from undertaking a single year's study of a modern language.

THE LEVEL SYSTEM

In recent years the term Level has come into widespread use in foreign languages, replacing the more traditional names Spanish I, French II, etc. that have been applied to courses. The Course Content Outlines for this present Course of Study have been written with the Level concept in mind.

The dividing of languages into levels of accomplishment frees instruction from limitations of time and grade. Minimum structural accomplishments are established for each level. One full school year can be devoted to mastering a certain level or several years can be taken to learn the same structural content. With newer advances in the language learning process, ability grouping, and better methods of instruction, the accomplishment of a level in less than a school year will become feasible permitting rapid student progress and resultant saving of instructional time. This permits a certain level to be taught at any place in the development of the student from kindergarten through grade twelve.

The Level System is easily adapted to many sequences and types of instruction from a foreign language in the elementary school program to programmed learning through a teaching machine. It permits much wider flexibility than the more traditional course time-block concept.

I. Three year program: To begin at any grade level, seven through ten.

   Level I | Level II | Level III

II. Four-year program: To begin at any grade level, seven through nine.

   Level I | Level II | Level III | Level IV

III. Five-year program: To begin in grades seven or eight.

   Level I | Level II | Level III | Level IV | Level V

IV. Six-year program: To begin in grade seven. Level I is to be accomplished in two steps, the first part in grade seven and the second in grade eight. Classes could meet either three or five times per week.
V. Ten-year program: To begin in grade three. Level I should be accomplished in four steps from grades three through six. Grades seven and eight should be devoted to Level II. The twelfth grade should be devoted to maintaining and increasing competency.

COURSE CONTENT OUTLINES

To insure equal instruction in the schools of Nevada, the following Course Content Outlines have been developed by working committees of skilled and experienced teachers. The elements of structure and vocabulary presented are to be considered the minimum acceptable accomplishments for the completion of each level.

In keeping with the Philosophy of Foreign Language Education and the Objectives listed previously, the basic criteria upon which evaluation of accomplishment is to be based is performance in communication. The ability of the student to use correctly the elements of structure in speech and writing is more important than an ability to describe or name them.

SUGGESTED TIME ALLOTMENTS

Many modern foreign language teachers wonder how much of the total school year should be devoted to learning each of the four fundamental skills. The following time allotments are suggested as indicative of what the foreign language teaching profession as a whole is currently doing. These points should be kept in mind:

1. Level I begins with an extended pre-reading period, without texts or any reference to written symbols.
2. Initially, structures and vocabulary are audio-lingually presented and mastered in context.
3. In Level I the student is not asked to read anything that he has not first learned audio-lingually.
4. Writing in Level I is usually practiced in short dictation exercises.
5. Reading at all levels should be without conscious reference to English except when formal translation is taught at the advanced levels.
Approximate time allotments for the fundamental skills are:

<table>

These can be expressed graphically as follows:

CLASS SIZE

To provide students with adequate opportunity to develop language skills and to enable teachers to provide for individual differences among students, care must be taken to limit class size. Ten to twelve students are considered ideal; 25 students shall be regarded as the maximum class size; numbers beyond this are administrative expedients and are not educationally sound.

SECOND FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Since a second foreign language is learned with much greater ease than the first, able students should be encouraged to study a second foreign language. This study should begin only after the completion of Level II of the first foreign language. Exceptional students might even be able to undertake a third language in grade eleven. Two foreign languages should never be started at the same time.
COURSES

The Course of Study details course content in the following modern languages:
- French, Levels I–V
- German, Levels I–V
- Italian, Levels I–V
- Russian, Levels I–V
- Spanish, Levels I–V
- Other languages:
  - Levels I–V (Arabic, Chinese, Hindi, Japanese, Portuguese, etc.)
- Advanced studies, Level VI—All languages
Latin, perhaps the most traditional subject area of the curriculum, is being revitalized. No longer is Latin to be viewed as a medium through which one achieves objectives that properly belong elsewhere.

The study of Latin should have as its basic objectives:

1. Familiarity with a flectional language from which many modern languages have evolved.
2. Familiarity with Latin literature.
3. Familiarity with Latin as the expression of a culture that has been of fundamental importance in the development of the civilization of Europe and the Western Hemisphere.

Latin should be offered as a second foreign language, never as the first. The first should be a modern foreign language. After the student has demonstrated language aptitude and interest by completing at least two levels of a modern language, he should be encouraged and permitted to study another foreign language. The choice may be Latin or an additional modern language. The study of the first foreign language should not be interrupted, but continue for at least 6, and preferably 10 years.

School administrators, curriculum planners, guidance personnel, teachers and other interested persons should note that teaching Latin is not recommended as an aid to the learning of English vocabulary or English grammar. English teachers can achieve these objectives with considerable economy of time and effort. Legal, scientific, and medical Latin are considerably removed from the classical Latin taught in the public schools. Institutions of higher learning that provide specialized training in these fields do not, in the main, require Latin as a prerequisite to admission. Required training in Latin needed for these professions will usually be provided by the professional school.

The study of Latin has finally returned to its rightful and logical place in the curriculum; not of the study of Latin for the sake of secondary values, but for the sake of the study of Latin itself.
FRENCH

The following course of study has been compiled as a standard for the teaching of French in five levels. This has been based on the main linguistic objectives as expressed previously: hearing, speaking, reading, and writing. The main nonlinguistic objectives have also been kept in mind, so that the French language should be taught in an environment which appreciates the past and present of France and its influence upon the United States.

LEVEL 1

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES
1. To develop facility and fluency with spoken French.
2. To develop the ability to read and write in French anything that the student can express orally.

1. Carry on sustained conversations at a normal French rate.
2. Read extensively without reference to English.
3. Develop the skill of formal translation.
4. Be able to write compositions of some length without reference materials.
5. Continue activities listed under Level IV.

The class will be conducted in the French language.
GERMAN

One of the world's major languages, German has long been taught in the public schools of the United States. Although the teaching of German suffered a decline following World War I, its importance is once again being recognized by the people of the United States.

The German language is not only the national language of Germany and Austria but is the native tongue of a large segment of the populations of Switzerland, the former territories of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and other nations of Central Europe. German is widely used as a second language in much of Europe and is closely linked linguistically to Dutch, Flemish, English, and the Scandinavian languages.

The importance of German in commerce, music, literature, and the sciences is well known throughout the world. In addition, German language and culture have influenced to a marked degree the civilization of the United States.

GERMAN LEVEL 1

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

1. To develop facility and fluency with spoken German.

ITALIAN

Italian is one of the most important and most beautiful of the romance languages and is spoken not only throughout Italy, but by millions of Italian emigrants to many parts of the world, and to a limited extent by the descendants of those emigrants. Due to distance, lapse of time, and the numerous dialects spoken, the spoken language of those people has become greatly divergent. There is, therefore, a great need to provide sound instruction in standard Italian.

In addition, millions of people, not only of Italian extraction, but from all nations of the earth, visit Italy yearly as students, tourists, and for commercial and other reasons. Thousands come to study its art, music, architecture, and history.

   (b) A specific course in Soviet history, geography, and current affairs taught entirely in the Russian language.
4. Students should be encouraged to actively participate in free discussions of a complex nature and to do extensive outside reading and writing of a formal nature in connection with reports and projects to be presented both orally and in written form.
SPANISH

This Course of Study is presented as a minimum outline of accomplishments for the teaching of Spanish in the schools of Nevada. It has been developed to coincide with the Main Linguistic and Nonlinguistic Objectives outlined previously.

We who live in the western part of our country are closely associated with the Spanish language in our everyday life. In this time of emphasis on bilingual citizens, this Course of Study is structured not only to develop communication in the language, but to broaden understanding of the heritage and culture that this great language has given us.

The Spanish language to be taught in the Nevada public schools will be the Spanish-American vocabulary and usage. The student should be exposed to Castilian and other regional pronunciations if at all possible.

OTHER LANGUAGES

The purpose of the Course of Study for Modern Foreign Languages is to encourage, rather than restrict, instruction in foreign languages. The preceding Course Outlines detail instruction in the more commonly taught languages. However, schools are encouraged to inaugurate instruction in other languages if they so desire.

In order to facilitate the introduction of other foreign languages to the curriculum this section has been included in the formal Course of Study for Modern Foreign Languages. Any language included on the list which follows may be taught as a regular subject in any Nevada public or private school provided that courses established meet the requirements that:

1. A sustained sequence of at least 3 years is planned under the direction of a qualified instructor.
2. The objectives which follow are used as a minimum guide for the course. It is expected that this will only serve as a foundation upon which the instructor will build.
3. Application is made to the State Department of Education as prescribed in the High School Course of Study, Volume I, "Graduation Requirements and Regulations," page 12.

In 1959 the American Council of Learned Societies, under a contract with the United States Office of Education, established a list of languages that are or will be of major importance to the United States. The listing which follows contains the major neglected languages.

Languages which may be taught under the General Outline are:

LEVEL VI
ADVANCED STUDIES

Students who commence the study of foreign languages early or who possess talent in this area may attain mastery of Levels I through V before graduation from the secondary school. While such students should have undertaken the study of a second, or even a third, foreign language, they should be encouraged to maintain competency and increase skills acquired in the first.

These students should be encouraged to continue their study of the language in a regular course, conducted by an instructor with native ability, of the seminar type meeting three to five times weekly.

Areas of study should include topics of special importance to the student, especially vocabulary and skills required by vocational interests, and a brief introduction to the science of linguistics.

Level VI may be taken as part of the Advanced Placement Program in cooperation with a college or university.
