This report describes the administrative organization of two hypothetical comprehensive community-junior colleges: an urban institution with an enrollment of 1500 and a small-town, church-related institution with an enrollment of 1500. Data were obtained from interviews, literature search, and 2-year college publications. Five major administrative offices were examined in terms of their mission, assigned personnel positions, responsibilities, typical tasks, and desirable qualifications. The offices and their assigned personnel are: (1) President's -- president, director of institutional research, and college chaplain; (2) Academic Affairs -- dean, director of evening programs and community services, director of learning resources/librarian, director of occupational and extension programs, and division heads; (3) Student Affairs -- dean, director of student activities, director of health services, director of placement and financial aid, director of counseling and testing, counselors, deans of men and women, and registrar/director of admissions; (4) Business Affairs -- director, director of auxiliary services and personnel, superintendent of buildings and grounds; and (5) Development and Public Affairs -- director, director of fund raising, alumni secretary, and director of public information services.

The following job descriptions are based on interviews with persons holding similar positions, readings from the literature, publications of two-year colleges in various parts of the United States, and the personal experiences and discussions of members of the class. The descriptions are not intended to be exhaustive and may not fit every situation. The positions described are keyed to two hypothetical two-year colleges (see Figures 1 and 2). The numbers in parentheses following each job title refer to one or both of the colleges in the two Figures.

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE

Title: President (1,2)

General Statement: A position in which the individual is responsible directly and/or indirectly for the overall operation and the educational leadership in relating to the college community.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: Serve as administrative officer to the Board of Trustees and report to the Board of Trustees on the internal affairs of the institution; clarify objectives and recommend alternative objective which would help the institution reach educational goals; select key personnel to serve with the president in major administrative areas in order to relieve the president of some administrative details in fulfilling the overall educational objectives of the institution; coordinate, correlate planning on short and long range basis; set goals, practice and encourage high morale and inspirational leadership among personnel and students of the institution; encourage and practice effective communications among all segments of the campus community; be able to make and enforce logical policy.

Desirable Qualifications: Doctor's Degree in College Administration. A minimum of three years experience in Junior or Senior College Administration.

Title: Director of Institutional Research (1,2)
General Statement: The Office of Institutional Research has as its main function the collection and interpretation of information relating to the College, its students, its staff, its faculty, its program and its operation. Any studies which relate to these areas are considered institutional research and must be coordinated by this office, though other college personnel may actually conduct the work. It is also advisory in the areas of seeking outside funding from public or private sector, assisting in locating possible areas of support and writing of proposals.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: The Director offers leadership and coordination for various projects and programs of continuing institutional self study. He collects, files, and acts as liaison person relating research reports from external and internal sources, particularly those involving college services to its community. He develops models to collect, store, and analyze pertinent kinds of student, faculty, follow-up, or community data in machine readable form, and uses these data banks to analyze and project research. He disseminates, in meaningful formats, results of his research to those affected by it. He acts as a consultant with administration, faculty, students, staff, and outside agencies to determine college-wide research needs and assist in evaluating or implementing new educational concepts. When requested by the President, or other persons with official authority, he conducts studies and searches of professional literature and confers with university professors, state, local, or federal officials to acquire necessary information and support. (He may assist in preparation of federal grants, questionnaires or reports, and coordinates compilation of all such documents.) He is chairman of the Institutional Research Committee and the Data Processing Committee.

Desirable Qualifications: Doctorate, or equivalent experience in applied practice of research, computer technology, or institutional development.

Title: Chaplain of the College (2)

General Statement: This person is primarily concerned with the religious activities and welfare of students on campus.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: To organize and promote the religious programs on campus; to conduct Sunday morning and evening services at the chapel; to advise and counsel students in religious matters; to invite speakers of varying faiths to the campus; to have showings of spiritually educational films; to organize student unions for members of various denominations; to make himself readily available for counseling; to speak at various civic functions in the community; to supply news of religious activities to the publication officer.

Desirable Qualifications: Bachelor's degree and first professional degree in theology; experience working with young adults.

ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

Title: Dean of Academic Affairs (1,2)

General Statement: This person is responsible for the administration of the overall instructional program of the college.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: Develop instructional objectives, policies, plans, and programs for the college. Chair academic committees, schedule regular meetings with divisional chairmen and academic committees for consultation in developing instructional programs, and discussing problems or plans of the individual programs; works with program directors in procurement of faculty and recommends to the President appointment, retention, promotion, and dismissal of instructional personnel; reports periodically to the President on matters concerning the instructional program; works with registrar in final approval of faculty loads, class schedules, and quarterly or semester reports; works with divisional chairmen in cooperation with local business, industrial, and professional leaders to coordinate instructional objectives with local need; establish criteria and policies for student standards - their selection, retention, and awarding of degrees and honors; works in advisory capacity with library and learning resources center; coordinates instructional program with other programs of the college; conducts studies to promote instructional excellence; submits budget for instructional program to the Director of Business Affairs; acts as chief administrative officer in the absence of the President; maintains adequate records of duties.

Desirable Qualifications: Doctorate in educational administration; experience in teaching, in business, in industry, or in community planning.

Title: Director of Evening Programs & Community Services (1)

General Statement: The Director of Evening Programs and Community Services works under the direction of the Dean of Instruction and is the official liaison between the administration of the college during evening hours.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: The Director is responsible to represent the administration of the college during the evening hours. He takes action on routine matters, involving instructors, students, clerical and custodial personnel. The evening director is responsible to report either personally or in writing to the Dean of Instruction, any incident which is not completely settled to satisfaction of the involved parties.
The director employs instructors for community services programs (especially in public community colleges). Director is responsible for observing and reporting on existing or potential problems related to instruction, instructor, student or administrative matters. These matters will be reduced to writing and forwarded to the appropriate dean through the Dean of Instruction. The deans may assign specific tasks to be accomplished and reported directly to them. When deemed appropriate, the Dean of Instruction will be informed of these assignments.

Desirable Qualifications: The evening administrative officer must understand and be fully committed to the purposes and objectives of the college. He must be a mature individual who has had successful experience as an educational institute administrator. Experience as a teacher is desirable. A degree at the bachelor’s level is desirable.

Title: Director of Learning Resources or Librarian (1,2)

General Statement: Administers the collection, production, organization, and utilization of all instructional media including print and nonprint materials. Member of curriculum committee, and sits in with president’s council to facilitate planning for needs and development of projections. Coordinates library, audio-visual, and learning labs, as well as television activities, if present on campus.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: Manages, through qualified subordinates, the acquisition, organization, production, reference, inventory control, user guidance, and orientation functions of the Learning Resource Center to integrate educationally effective components of the instructional system. The Director recommends professional, technical, and clerical personnel for employment, and works with the computer center and other administrators of the college to implement effective support systems. He encourages faculty and student participation in selection and use through personal contact and in-service programs to stimulate use, awareness of services and materials. He develops budget and policy proposals. He recommends new technologies for consideration by the faculty and administration. He promotes and maintains community, regional, state, and federal contacts with other media specialists and developing plans for sharing of resources and networks.

Desirable Qualifications: At least a Master’s Degree, with emphasis on new media, communications, librarianship, or junior college curriculum design. Demonstrated ability to coordinate and manage service operations. Understanding of learning behaviors related to media is desirable.

Note: There are usually Librarians, Graphics or Telecommunications Specialists, AV Directors, Learning Lab Directors, Language Lab Personnel, and a range of other special talents required to make Learning Resource support effective. In a small college, these responsibilities may be met by paraprofessionals, or be added duties for teaching faculty.
Title: Director of Occupational and Extension Program (1)

General Statement: This person, under the Dean of Instruction, is responsible for planning and directing the program offering occupational upgrading courses (those to improve present occupation or to prepare for another) which are often of an extension nature. He is also Director of Adult Basic Education.

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: Works with community business and industrial leaders to plan the courses most needed in occupational upgrading; secures instructors for the courses and determines where and when the classes will be offered. (Classes are often such things as television repair and may be held at a local firm); plans and hires instructors for adult education program; assures that local citizenry is made aware of programs being offered; maintains adequate records of his duties; posts office hours for consultation with interested citizens; periodically reports to the academic dean on matters concerning these programs.

Desirable Qualifications: Bachelor of Arts, Science, or Technology Degree in a technical field, extensive work in business, industry, and community planning.

Title: Division Heads (1,2)

General Statement: This position is the chairmanship of a division which is appointed by a Curriculum Committee (composed of a member of the Board of Trustees, the President, an elected representative of the department chairmen, a student representative, and chaired by the Dean of Academic Affairs).

Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: Organizes, coordinates, develops, and promotes the program of the division in cooperation with departmental chairmen and the Dean of Academic Affairs; holds regularly scheduled divisional meetings and sends minutes of these meetings to the academic dean; recommends, in cooperation with department chairmen, through the academic dean, to the business manager the division's budget; controls inventories within the division; conducts studies on ways of improving academic excellence within the division, teaches classes assigned by the academic dean, maintains adequate divisional records.

Desirable Qualifications: A Master's Degree and preferably additional graduate work; experience in administrative work.

STUDENT AFFAIRS

Title: Dean of Student Affairs (1,2)

General Statement: The Dean of Student Affairs works under the direction of the president and in accordance with the overall concept of the institution, and is responsible for student personnel services.
Responsibilities and Typical Tasks: The Dean is responsible for formulating and recommending policies on matters relating to the development and operation of the student personnel services and for staffing his department. He is responsible for recommending decisions on any and all phases of student-related college operations. He will provide the necessary training of the staff under his supervision. Typical tasks of the Dean of Student Affairs would be coordinating student recruitment, evaluation, counseling, orientation and testing, registration, records, services, activities, student discipline, student life and placement. The dean is responsible for designing, planning, and organizing these functions in the institution.
