ABSTRACT

GRADES OR AGES: Secondary level. SUBJECT MATTER: French (Intermediate). ORGANIZATION AND PHYSICAL APPEARANCE: The guide is divided into 14 units, each of which is laid out in four columns across two pages. Column headings are: Concept To Be Taught, References, Special Comments, and Evaluation. The guide is offset printed and spiral bound with a paper cover. OBJECTIVES AND ACTIVITIES: A basic theory and general objectives are outlined in an introductory chapter. Activities outlined in the first three columns of each unit consist mostly of grammatical drills, reading for understanding, and writing on selected topics. Translation is not emphasized. INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS: A list of six texts to be used in the course is given at the beginning of the guide. The second column in each unit refers to specific parts of these texts for each activity. STUDENT ASSESSMENT: A fourth column in each unit makes suggestions for appropriate times for quizzes or exams. An appendix suggests types of exam questions that can be used to test specific skills. One example is given for each type. (RT)

FOREWORD

This Guide represents the culmination of over three years of study of the foreign language program in the secondary schools. The group faced the difficulties of changes in staff, large numbers of students, inadequate laboratory facilities, variations in texts, and insufficient time allotments. As a result, overcoming these rather formidable obstacles creates something of the exuberance of une grande victoire.

With nongrading on the secondary level imminent, the Writing Committee planned the Guide to allow for a steady progression of skills from unit to unit. Students of all abilities will be able to continue the study of French or Spanish as long as they have an interest. Language study remains open to every student, not just to a select few.

The program is based on the audio-lingual approach. The Guide itself is divided into four sections: concepts to be taught, references to instructional materials, special suggestions for teaching procedures, and evaluation techniques. Taped materials are correlated to lessons throughout. A separate script of the tapes in use in the program is available. To aid in revision, teachers are asked to annotate their own copies of the course of study.

The foreign language teachers should be lauded for their patience and forbearance as well as for the excellence of the material found in this Guide.

For the Committee,

Joan D. Kerelejza
The concept of an ungraded foreign language instructional program, on which this Curriculum Guide is based, is new and challenging. It is hoped that it will enable all students who elect to study French and Spanish to find a measure of successful achievement in such pursuit. With its framework of units and levels, the program will allow a student's progress to be paced at a rate which is best for him. Methods of evaluation of his progress have been carefully indicated in the Guide.

The foreign language program consists of six years of instruction, with students having the option of beginning their study in the seventh, ninth, tenth, or eleventh grade. The student has a double election at the end of the sixth grade. He may or may not elect to take a foreign language; he may elect French or Spanish. Readiness for foreign language study should be judged by elementary school achievement in English and social studies and by maturity level. Students should be advised by their sixth-grade teachers and guidance personnel as to their readiness.

Progress and achievement determine whether or not a student should continue in the foreign language program in the eighth grade. Teacher evaluation of a student's performance is of vital importance here. It is often profitable for a student to wait a year or two and begin the material again. Continuance in the high school should be with placement at the unit and year in the student's on-going foreign language experience at which he finds himself. Under this ungraded program, the student may complete large units of work at different times during the school year in accordance with his ability.

Students should be encouraged to plan at least a three-year sequence if they elect to begin the study of foreign language at the high school. Learning to speak is time-consuming and, unless more than two years are planned, the ability of the students to read and especially to write will be seriously underdeveloped.

The problem of college entrance credits under the ungraded program can best be met by indicating on the transcript the fact that the student has successfully completed a number of levels (Level in this sense is to be defined as the equivalent of one year's work under the traditional programs) of French or Spanish rather than the number of years he has studied the language. A good evaluation of such progress through the levels is the IIA Cooperative Modern Language Tests in the basic four skills.
Standings on these tests, based on national norms, present valuable information for college admissions officers in evaluating credit in foreign language and should be part of the transcript.

The following convictions form a basis for this Curriculum Guide:

1. French and Spanish are of immediate practical and cultural value in the curriculum of the Farmington Public Schools in that they:
   a. Meet the practical need of introducing the culture of the French- and Spanish-speaking peoples to the student so that he can learn first-hand about groups of people who are members of foreign language-speaking minority groups in his own community, state, and nation, or who are members of nations which are near neighbors of the United States, as well as part of the United Nations community.
   b. Prepare those students who will enter commercial areas of world trade with a language background and understanding of economics and cultural patterns which will aid them in this pursuit.
   c. Provide the necessary preparation for advanced work and admission requirements in foreign language at colleges and universities.

2. The foreign language must LIVE for the student if it is to justify its place in the curriculum. To be ALIVE it must be active, interesting, and challenging in spirit. The student must be able to see his progress and the value of his study if it is to maintain his interest.

3. A student will achieve best in a program which proceeds at his rate of learning. He is not discouraged in a program in which he is not held back by slower-learning students or unnecessarily challenged beyond his ability by faster-learning students.

The method adopted for use in the Farmington Public Schools is that which was formerly called the "audio-lingual" and which perhaps could be better named "basic skills," since all four skills are to be developed during the language experience of the student.
At first the approach is completely oral, with the student learning to comprehend the spoken word (listening skill) and responding to it with oral utterances which have meaning both to speaker and hearer (speaking skill). When evaluative techniques indicate that the student is ready for the third basic skill, that of reading comprehension (reading skill), he is introduced to the textbook and begins by reading material he has already mastered in the listening and speaking stages of learning. The fourth skill, that of writing (writing skill), is developed progressively through various means which are described later in this Guide.

The language of the classroom is that which is being learned. For clarity and understanding, an occasional English meaning may be given; however, care is to be taken not to allow classes to deteriorate into sessions in English.

Grammatical patterns, basic to the mastery of the basic four skills, are taught by practice drills and laboratory sessions in which imitation, repetition, and variation insure familiarity and mastery of the speech habit. Explanations of grammar are often confusing to the student and are postponed until the pattern has been controlled by the student, in some instances many units or levels later.

Laboratory drill is an important part of the language learning experience. The student's active participation in laboratory sessions, whether he is recording or not, is a critical point to be insisted upon by the teacher. Passive listening without mouthing the sounds in careful imitation is of little value. In structural drills the student should be encouraged to anticipate the correct model, listen to it, and then repeat it. It is often advisable to give visual aid by using an overhead projector, filmstrip, or film to insure learning with meaning rather than parroting of material.

Visual aids form a very necessary part of the courses. The overhead projector offers many opportunities for presentation of visual cues to match oral drills and responses. Realia in the form of objects, models, pictures, and materials gathered from the French-and Spanish-speaking countries add interest and variety. This storehouse of teaching aids and materials should be continually improved.

While specific references are made to certain pronunciation patterns in the units following, the oral command of the sound structure of the language must be constantly refined and improved. The teacher should correct glaring errors, but not at the expense of fluency. The student should be encouraged to speak; he may be discouraged by persistent interruption of speech patterns for correction of minor mistakes.
The MLA Cooperative Foreign Language Tests are used as an evaluating device to enable the teacher to judge the student's progress and to determine areas for restudy. Forms LA and LB are given near the end of Level I, the end of Level II, and at the half-way mark in Level III. Forms MA or MB are given near the end of Level III, the end of Level IV, and the end of Level V. These cooperative tests are used diagnostically, not for grading purposes. Other quizzes and tests are written by teachers or adapted from suggestions in the specific publisher's Teacher's Manual for the textbook being used.

Suggestions for testing the four skills, prepared for methods classes at Central Connecticut State College, are repeated in Appendix A as a guide for teachers in preparing quiz and test materials.

Unit tests should be uniform for each unit taught. As the staff prepares such tests, strict security will be required, since only when we can use an evaluative instrument over several years do we have the necessary knowledge to judge progress on the part of students. Teachers will wish to return tests for class review, but should be certain to collect and store them after such review.

It must be emphasized that the key to successful teaching is the classroom teacher. He is an individual, as each student is an individual. It is hoped that as a creative individual the teacher will develop a multiplicity of methods and means to lead his students to successful learning experiences. This Guide is to give direction to the foreign language program for continuity and coordination, and should not deter a teacher from individualistic practices so long as they are coordinate with its broad framework and basic method. We ask that members of the foreign language staff communicate their new ideas and practices, with an aim to constant revision of this Guide, to keep it current and valuable.

Modern Foreign Languages
Introduction

In choosing the text Parler et Lire for the third-level course, the Department of Modern Languages had several considerations in mind:

1. It was felt that, after having completed the work of the two-volume Le Francais Vivant, the student should have a very firm foundation in the grammatical patterns of French, a basic vocabulary, and a beginning exposure to reading.

2. A definite need at this juncture in the study of French was that of increasing the skill of reading so that the student would be able to read current, active French.

3. In changing the emphasis to that of reading, we should not lose sight of the other three skills and should remember that these must be constantly refined and practised.

With these convictions as bases, then, the teacher should adapt the suggestions in this Guide to meet the several and collective needs of the class. It may be necessary to accelerate or decelerate the pace of the class; one or more of the skills may need emphasis at any time. In no case should the teacher consider the text to be the course for the year.

Some students may finish the text and be well advanced into the Level IV materials by the end of the school year; others may have to start the year in Level II material and then finish the Level III material; others may find it necessary to extend the period of study for Level III material into the normal Level IV time.

Cultural material should be introduced and used whenever appropriate. The teacher should make use of his background, knowledge, personal experience, and travel and should take each opportunity to enlarge the experience of the student.
Teachers may find that students who learn faster are ready for the work of Level IV before completion of the thirteen units in Level III. Such students may be advanced to the work of the next level at the end of Units X, XI, XII, or XIII.

For variety, teachers may also find it wise to break the standard pattern of the work of this Level III course by using reading material which is available in the Department Resource Center. Suggested for use at this level are the following:

- La Dernière Classe, Alphonse Daudet
- La Chevre de l. Seguin, Alphonse Daudet
- Une Chasse à l'Ours, Alexandre Dumas
- TOP, Réalités Jeunesse (Current selections from this weekly magazine which may be judged as appropriate and of proper reading level for the students involved.)

CHECK WITH THE DEPARTMENT CHAIRMAN (RESOURCE TEACHER) FOR OTHER MATERIALS WHICH MAY BECOME AVAILABLE.

Care should be taken to make certain students understand how to use the text.

Impress the student with the idea that he is expected to read for ideas and to guess intelligently at unknowns.

CAUTION: Teacher should not follow Teacher's manual exactly! Remember that you have third-level students using a second-level text at this point!

SPECIAL COMMENTS

Words should be presented in context. Do not attempt to teach all vocabulary items at once. Use Teacher's Guide and text to determine when items are best taught.

Presentation of definitions or of pictures characterizing actions by overhead projectuals has proved to be excellent.

Use questions in A, Narration Orale, for quick classroom drill.

assign reading according to the ability of the class. If this unit begins the year, move slowly; if material is presented after completion of work in Le Français Vivant 2, move rapidly.

EVALUATION

Check for command of partitif.
Then assign remedial work as necessary on an individual basis.

EVALUATION

Check individual's ability to form imparfait.

Familiarity with forms and natural use of l'imparfait should be demonstrated by student.

Student should demonstrate command of this form and be able to write correct form.
Remember: All four skills are important. Do not neglect any of them while emphasizing one!
Continue careful guidance of student's writing skill.

Reading of each student's composition with him as it is corrected is a worthwhile practice. It takes time but helps to avoid future errors.

Rest of class can be doing lab drill in next unit or reading while time is devoted to this procedure.

Continue to use Beginning to Write French as necessary with individual students.

Vocabulary building is of great importance but should always be taught in context—never in isolation.

Some students may learn quickly through French "Scrabble" or other games.

Use #2, La Vie Journaliere for listening comprehension in lab—very well dramatized.

Teacher may also introduce new reading by using tape recording. Consult tape index—Parler et Lire.

Continue to encourage "intelligent guessing."

Grade assignments according to the ability of the class.

Remember that vocabulary is taught along with and through reading comprehension.

Teach words as they are introduced in the reading.

See Comments, previous units.

If possible, secure the film La Vie dans Une Ferme Francaise (Coronet Films) to use with readings on Robert Tanner.

Continue to emphasize reading techniques of "intelligent guessing."

EVALUATION

Student should demonstrate his growing vocabulary in his performance in reading, writing, speaking, and listening comprehension.

A variety of testing techniques
1. Quiz (several types)
2. Games
3. Lab drills

SPECIAL COMMENTS

Note change in format. No formal word study in this unit.

Cultural material may be introduced here, as these readings give wide diversion of experience and area of France.

Prepositions with infinitives very often present a problem for the student.

They are best learned through practice and use rather than through learning of lists.

This material will have to be re-entered later for additional drill.

This is the first time the material has been presented in a "total picture" form.

For teacher reference:

EVALUATION

See Evaluation, Unit VI.

Student should be able to use, with ease and with small percentage of error, the more common and current verbs requiring prepositions.

Use quizzes and fill-ins.

APPENDIX A

Testing the Four Skills
Testing the Four Skills

Following are some suggestions for helping test the four skills. Item types have been gathered from tests that have already been published or that are soon to be published. Teachers should be able to adapt at least some of these to their own classroom tests.

Listening Comprehension

1. True-False Statements. The speaker or tape presents a number of statements, each statement being presented twice. The student indicates in some prearranged manner whether the statement is true or false.

2. Action-Response or Body Motion. The student carries out the commands given by the speaker.

3. Multiple Choice. Type 'a' below involves some ability to read; in types 'b' through 'c' the multiple-choice answers may be presented orally or may be written on the student's test.

   a. Sound Discrimination. The student's test contains a set of four statements with slightly different meanings but with similarities in sound. The speaker or tape repeats one of the four statements twice. The student checks the statement read.

   Speaker: I hate cake. (Twice)
   Choices: A. I bake cake.
            B. I hate cake.
            C. I ate at eight.
            D. I ate cake.
b. Recognition of Correct Answer to Question Presented Orally.

The speaker or tape asks a question. The student indicates which one of the four responses is the correct one.

Speaker: What do you answer when you are asked, "How are you?"

Choices: A. You're welcome.
B. Nine o'clock.
C. Fine, thanks.
D. At home.

c. Recognition of Correct Completion of Incomplete Statement.

The speaker or tape presents an incomplete sentence. The student chooses the word or phrase which best completes it.

Speaker: I eat because _______ ( Twice)

Choices: A. I am tired.
B. I am hungry.
C. I am doing my homework.
D. I like television.

d. Recognition of Multiple-Choice Answers Based on Passage Presented Orally.

The speaker or tape presents a conversation or passage twice. Each question is presented orally twice. The student selects the proper answer for each question from the four choices given.

Speaker: Mrs. Jones stepped in front of her apartment door. She was discouraged. She had lost her keys. Her husband was in the hospital, very ill. Her daughter, whom she had met on the street, had told her that she had flunked her history exam.
1. Where was Mrs. Jones?
   A. On the street.
   B. In the hospital.
   C. In front of her apartment door.
   D. In school.

Speaking Ability. A test for speaking ability should be short so that if it is recorded, it will be possible for the teacher to listen to all the answers and score them, and if the test is given to one student at a time, it will be possible for the teacher to get to each student. The latter procedure may make it necessary to make a different test for each student or to see each student privately and in such a manner that there will be no communication between a student who has finished and one waiting to be tested. Scoring might be based on how soon the student responds, how good his pronunciation and intonation are, and how accurate his answer is. Most of the item types listed below involve listening comprehension as well.

1. Mimic or Echo. The student repeats what he hears.

2. Oral Reading. The student reads a passage aloud.

3. Questions. The student may be asked to answer questions about himself or about other topics. He may be asked to answer some questions in the affirmative and some in the negative.

4. Directed Dialog. The student is told to ask someone a question, or he may be told to relay a message to another person.

5. Response to Picture. The student is instructed to respond orally to a picture.
Reading Ability. The following question types have been used for many years to test reading ability.

1. True-False questions.
2. Questions on content.
3. Summaries.
4. Matching of items.
5. Completion.
6. Multiple choice.

Writing Ability. Writing ability should be tested at the subsentence, sentence, and paragraph levels.

1. Subsentence Level. Sentences are used in which one element, usually a word, is deleted and has to be supplied by the student. Words deleted should be non-content words such as prepositions, pronouns, conjunctions, negatives, auxiliary verbs, basic idioms, articles. Each item should have only one possible answer.

   1. He wrote not one sentence, _____ two.
   2. She _____ gone to the movies every night this week.
   3. I picked up _____ very book he was looking for.

2. Sentence Level. The following item types are among those that can be used to test writing ability at the sentence level.

   a. Dehydrated or Fill-out. A sentence is "dehydrated" (words deleted), and the student must restore it to its original dimension. Words should be used in the order given, and some indication should be given as to the approximate length desired for the completed sentence.
"Construct an acceptable sentence of between ten and fifteen words, using the words in the order given."

(1) go concert if buy ticket

(I will go to the concert if I can buy a ticket.)

b. Rewrite. The student is instructed to change a sentence by changing the tense, subject, or number, or to make any other changes necessary.

c. Rejoinder. A rejoinder is written in response to an utterance.

(1) You're late again. (It wasn't my fault this time.)

(2) Finish your homework. (I'm too tired.)

3. Paragraph Level.

a. Paragraph Writing. The student is instructed to write a paragraph based on the elements given.

Using the items listed below, write a paragraph of about fifty words.

Winter vacation
John and Joe
New skis
Broken arm
Skis intact

b. Rewriting. The student is asked to rewrite a given paragraph, changing the time, the point of view, etc.

c. Combining Sentences. The student is asked to combine isolated sentences into a paragraph. The sentences will be structured to produce the desired type of response.

d. Fill-ins. A paragraph is presented containing blanks in place of certain words that have been deleted. An acceptable paragraph is to be reconstructed by filling in the blanks.
