SECTION I: PHILOSOPHY

Philosophy: To provide basic knowledge of the civilization and culture of France which includes:

1. exposure to the concrete manifestations of advancement both contemporary and historical;

2. insight into the underlying basic values and beliefs of the people, personality and behavior patterns;

3. an understanding of the language as both the expression of interpersonal relationships and the reflection of cultural patterns at a particular stage of advancement.

The above tenets are fundamental to the developmental process in the integration of culture and learning, leading to an understanding of the total way of life of contemporary France, a life bound to its Past and to the development of Western civilization.

SECTION II: OBJECTIVES

A. Cultural content should be presented as a unified, integrated and meaningful body of knowledge, the assimilation of which will enrich the experience, broaden the appreciation and allow for the expression of value judgments on the part of the student. "It should lead to personal enlightenment and refinement of sense... and promote a sense of the 'oneness' of the human family". (New York State Syllabus: French for Secondary Schools).

B. The curriculum outline is submitted for the purpose of defining and organizing the scope of cultural content to be presented at Level I of the Four Year Program; and unifying the extent of instruction at the various secondary schools within the district.

Although adherence to the suggested format is in no way mandatory, the main cultural themes must be inculcated in order to achieve the common preparation of all students for entrance into Level II.

It is further suggested that the merits of the outline be subject to annual review for discussion of its effectiveness, for modification and improvement.

SECTION III: APPROACH

In keeping within the scope of our objectives, material should be presented as an integrated part of the regular program of language instruction and learning. Cultural content is therefore treated as opportunities arise, basically as extensions of the reading passages in the classroom text and the situational contexts of the topics developed in the conversations presented in the units.
It is suggested that the approach be restrictive and conceptual in nature at this primary level of instruction.

Reinforcement of cultural values and accomplishments, past and contemporary, further arises in promoting student awareness and discussion of current events, participation in contemporary issues (e.g., theatre, T. V., field trips), and contribution of personal experiences by students.

Since the primary aim of the course is to teach the language, the achievement of communication skills is paramount. The teaching of culture should therefore be secondary to the development of these skills.
SECTION IV: Correlation of State Syllabus with Classroom Text and Supplementary Material

A. Classroom text and the New York State Syllabus are well correlated.

B. Selection of supplementary material - Getting to Know France, Revised Edition, Romunda Cadoux (Oxford Book Co. - paperbound) was made primarily on the basis of:

1. the obvious correlation of its themes and format with the outline suggested in the syllabus;
2. on the clarity, accuracy and pertinence of material presented;
3. and on the merits and contributions of its generally recognized authoress in the fields of teaching and foreign language.

C. The themes of cultural importance selected as an integral part of the French I program are suggested in the Syllabus and will be emphasized and developed in varying degrees of intensity, depending upon student interest, ability of assimilation and time allowance. The sequence of themes will vary from the outline in the Syllabus, being determined primarily by conformity to the topics developed in the classroom text and in conjunction with our program of language instruction. (Themes and page numbers in the following section refer to the New York State Syllabus classification).

Theme I: "France in the Contemporary World" (pages-107-108)

A. The influence of France on American culture - integrate discussion of French culture on American way of life and language; areas where French is spoken and where it is manifested in social customs, architecture, cuisine, etc.

B. The influence on American heritage - encourage independent study; have students draw together facts of the role and contribution of France gained in past or present citizenship courses.

III. "France, the Nation" (page-107)

A. The Geography of France

B. Paris
C. Economic geography - general introduction into France as an industrial and agricultural nation integrated with the study of principal provinces, cities, regions and products. The emphasis of study should lead to an awareness of related concepts rather than the accumulation of facts at this level of instruction.

D. Widely known social customs (café, holidays, dress).

Theme II: I. "The France of the French" (page 108-110).

A. Concentration in the French Way of Life is suggested. The themes emphasized are as follows:

1. Houses, apartments - developed mainly through more detailed study of Paris which easily allows for discussion of quartiers, streets squares, etc.

2. Family life

3. Education in France (restricted study, detailed in Section V of this outline).

4. Recreation in France - family - centered, cultural, sports, vacations, main resort areas.

5. The French worker - briefly discussed as an extension of family life, social roles

6. French holidays and customs:
   a. Legal holidays: National and / or religious
   b. Folklore: holidays of particular interest, celebration and dress in provinces (e. g. La Sainte-Catherine, les Pardons).

7. French cuisine: (topics a-f)

8. Money system - Metric system.

II. "The Historical Monuments of France"

A. Paris and its environs

B. Provinces (see Section V)

IV. "The French Language"

A. Latin origins

B. Influence on other languages (stress English)
SECTION V: Distribution of Cultural Content

Introductory clarification of subdivisions in Section V:

A. Classroom Text: The development of cultural themes will be designated by pre-reading period and thereafter by units which correspond to the format of the classroom text. The themes and related supplementary readings are suggested by the title and content of the cultural passage ending each unit.

B. Values: Where considered pertinent, certain main values and beliefs integral to the cultural patterns being studied are defined. Our objective is a more accurate and fuller understanding of the French people, their thought, character, personality, modes of behavior. (See New York State Syllabus, page 117-124)

C. Assignments: Suggestions for assignments follow the discussion of cultural concepts outlined. Their pertinence and effectiveness remain subject to the judgment of the teacher.

Recommended additional sources are:

2. Getting to Know France, Remunda Cadoux

Suggestions for outside work may be incorporated from "Things to do" ending each unit. It is recommended that assignments be given at the discretion of the teacher, arising from student interest and, if time permits, keeping in mind that class-time should be devoted primarily to the acquisition and development of language skills. (The supplementary exercises ending each section provide pertinent forms of review.)

D. Reference to supplementary readings in text, Getting to Know France, in Section V, will be designated by author, chapter and page.

Distribution of Cultural Content - in conjunction with language instruction.
Pre-Reading Period:

A. Themes:  I. French language and culture:
   a. Latin origins - brief introduction into historical development; attitude toward language and language learning; use of language; main phonetic contrasts with English sounds (e.g., u, eu, r, l)
   b. Areas of world where French is spoken - stress United States and Canada

II. Influence of French Language and culture in America:
   a. Contemporary influence on language and way of life; following areas may be included: fashion, textiles, furniture, cuisine, theatre-arts, cars, tourist trade, architecture, social customs of specific areas (New Orleans/ Quebec), names of cities in United States
   b. American Heritage: encourage independent study; student-initiated review of the historical development of America

B. Values:
   1. Language highly regarded; proper use by French and foreigner expected, given recognition and admired
   2. Respect for language learning and personal show of enthusiasm and interest; striving for perfection; particular appreciation accorded foreigner who demonstrates these qualities
   3. Discipline and pride in language achievement; promoted in schools
   4. Respect for differences in culture - contributions for the advancement of France and world civilization
   5. Admiration for French heritage and contemporary accomplishments; offended if language and culture denigrated
   6. Cultural heritage a vital part of daily life; social institutions seek perfection of language and the promotion and dissemination of French culture in France and abroad (e.g., Académie française, Alliance française; state-supported schools which promote the study of fine arts; government sponsored concerts; government subsidized theatre groups; government control of radio and T. V. programs - programs having cultural content of high quality; festivals of music, drama, film; many publicly supported museums, private galleries, municipal opera houses and regional dramatic groups in provinces)
   7. Good taste essential
8. Artistic and literary appreciation expected; developed from early age; the knowledgeable are esteemed - knowledge which is not superficial; interest in these areas and historic monuments is encouraged, and one is judged accordingly.

C. Assignments:

1. Listening to T.V., radio programs; magazine and newspaper articles for words of French origin - possible weekly project; correlate with literary passages in English classes

2. Distributing articles from French newspapers and magazines - ask students to pick out words which resemble English - mainly for recognition; discuss the development and meaning of the more obvious ones

3. Scrap-book of fields influenced by French thought; products observed as part of every-day life

4. American heritage - illustrated maps of French discoveries; areas where French is spoken; names of cities

5. Have students responsible for informing the class of cultural activities, programs in New York area pertaining to the arts - movies, concerts, troupes, opera, exhibits, etc.

III. The Geography of France:

a. Location in Europe; surrounding countries; natural boundaries; principal rivers and mountains; use of French is advisable

b. Travel to France: from the United States, England, Continent/discuss means of travel/ include discussion of monetary and metric systems

c. Begin discussion of Paris, la Seine, Ile de France (Orly Airport/ Le Havre; Calais - English Channel - ferry)

d. Introduction of main geographic terms: e.g., le continent, le pays, la ville, la capitale, les frontieres naturelles, les montagnes, les fleuves; le nord, le sud etc.

NOTE: Detailed study of rivers, mountains, principal cities will follow as students advance in language-study.

Assignments:

1. Map work: individuel or filing in mineographed outline maps of France
2. Creative projects: posters representing individual impressions of Paris - original or in the form of collages/posters representing travel to France

3. Paragraphs - ask students to describe their present feeling and understanding of 'a Frenchman' - to be kept for later comparison with a parallel assignment once student has received more formal instruction

D. Supplementary Reading: Cadoux

Appendix: "Currency and Metric System" page 209-210

NOTE: During the pre-reading period, cultural content should be presented in English with the occasional and then slowly increasing use of French terminology, serving as an introduction into the basic sounds of the language.

It is suggested that during this two- to-three week period student-initiated research in conjunction with the cultural themes presented be encouraged.

The Cadoux text should be distributed to students prior to the learning of Unit 3 in the classroom text. Adequate time should be allocated for the students' outside reading of the cultural covered orally during the pre-reading phase of language instruction.

Cultural content is directly introduced in reading narratives beginning with Unit 3 in the classroom text.

SECTION VI: Suggestions for Group Activities and Semester Projects:
For extended assignments or group activities consult the following sources:

A. New York State Syllabus: "Suggestions for Cultural Activities and Experiences; General Projects" page 115-116

B. Getting to Know France, Remunda Cadoux (suggestions following each unit).

C. Curriculum Outline:
   a. Where applicable, expanding or incorporating the suggested assignments presented in Section V of the Curriculum guide may serve as possible monthly or semester projects.
   b. Term Paper Subjects: Have students select and develop one of cultural themes presented during semesters (one or two at the discretion of the teacher).

D. Current Events:
   Collections of articles in form of a scrap book; submitted at the end of each semester should include student observation of events and trends of world affairs.

SECTION VII:
Evaluation:

A. The manner of testing should be flexible depending upon availability of time, the ability of the student, his stage of language skills and need of reinforcement. Suggested format:
   1. Tests to be given in English with adequate use of French proper names and terms in the early instruction, followed by increased use of French in aural and written tests depending upon level of achievement of student.
   2. Tests which show knowledge of related items and concepts rather than emphasis of isolated facts:
      a. Multiple choice; French of English, aural and/or written.
      b. Selecting the unrelated word or groups of words from list given.
      c. Rearranging related items to indicate a set order (e.g., cities - North to South; food - in order of serving; holidays - as celebrated during year; historical data - chronological order).
      d. Indicating agreement or disagreement with a cultural statement.
      e. Matching columns.
      f. Completion.
3. Testing general concepts achieved and allowing for flexibility of thought and demonstration of personal interests, have students plan an itinerary of travel to and within France. Students are asked to indicate:
   a. route
   b. cities
   c. areas
   d. why he made his choice in terms of what he as a tourist wishes to see and do.
