INTRODUCTION

The following in-service program is designed for classroom teachers who wish to broaden their knowledge about children from ethnic and minority groups. This is a flexible guide which should be useful in helping teachers to clear up many misconceptions and to gain new understandings about minority group children.

The plan suggested requires approximately 14 hours of participation:

1. A one or two-hour planning session with teachers representing all grade levels or subject areas that the program intends to cover.
2. An intensive training session for group leaders, recorders, etc.
3. Four 3-hour meetings - preferably one each week for four consecutive weeks. If possible, these meetings should be scheduled during the regular school day on released time. Four consecutive Saturdays would be an acceptable alternative.

Consultative services should be determined by the planning groups. Suggestions from the Equal Educational Opportunities Section appear with each "program." Consultant services may also be requested for the EEO office during any phase of the program.

Director, EEO Section
This packet consists of nine parts:

1. Objectives and Concepts.

2. Suggestions for general planning with teachers.

3. Suggestions for training group leaders and recorders.

4. Suggestions for Session I--"Intra-Personal Understanding and Inter-Personal Relations."

5. Suggestions for Session II--"The Dynamics of Cultural Systems."

7. Suggestions for Session IV--Presentation: "Black Culture" or "Indians in Minnesota."

8. Suggestions for Session V--A participant panel.

Objectives

1. To increase participants' knowledge of various ethnic and minority groups:
   A. Blacks
   B. Indians
   C. Mexican-Americans
   D. Poor Whites

2. To acquaint the participants with appropriate materials for individual reading about cultural differences.

3. To increase participants' awareness of critical ethnic differences.

4. To assist participants in developing positive attitudes toward ethnic differences.

5. To bring about change in behavior in a positive direction toward minority groups.
The most basic meaning of Human Relations refers to those relationships that exist among people. The meaning of the term can be determined or modified by how or where or when it is used.

Human Relations becomes more precise in meaning when a group of teachers uses the term in reference to the development of educational specifics, such as curriculum and in-service training. It points to ethical ways in which people relate to each other and to events. Curriculum development and in-service training become vehicles for the actualization of desirable human relationships. Let us look at these concepts:

Attitudes:

- Respect for the basic worth of every individual.
- Appreciation of the contributions of all groups to the pluralism of American culture.
- Sensitivity to the rights, needs, feelings, and problems of every ethnic, racial, and religious group.
- Appreciation of the meaning and implication of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for all groups in American society.
- Respect for the democratic ideal of equal justice under the law.
- Respect for the right of individuals and groups to disagree with the cultural norm for individuals and groups.

Understandings:

- Recognition that no characteristic trait is typical of every individual of any one group and of no other group.
- Realization that mental ability and talents vary among individuals of every ethnic, racial, and religious group.
- Realization that all groups have similar rights, needs, feelings, and problems.
- Recognition of the changing and broadening nature of American democracy.
Skills:

Ability to participate effectively and democratically in group discussions and activities.

Ability to think and verbalize rationally and objectively about all groups.

Ability to avoid stereotyping, scapegoating, overgeneralizing, and making premature conclusions about groups and individuals.

Ability to participate in the problem identification and problem-solving process.
Planning

Part I--General Planning Session(s)

A. This planning should be done several weeks prior to the opening of the in-service effort.

B. Form a committee of appropriate Central Office personnel, principals, classroom teachers, outside consultants, etc. Example: (1) Director of Curriculum/area supervisor, (2) 4 or 5 key teachers, (3) community resource person if such is available and (4) EEO Staff consultants.

C. Determine most pressing concerns of teachers who will be involved.

Example: 1. Black's attitude toward authority.

2. Indian's lack of competitive spirit.

These concerns may be determined through informal surveys, observations, previous evaluations of problems, etc.

D. Determine in-service mechanics.

1. Dates

2. Time

3. Location

4. Selections of participants

5. Selections of consultants/committee

6. Arrangements for materials/special equipment

Part II--Training Group Leaders

A. Group dynamics.

1. Your role as leader

2. The leader's duties

3. Developing a group
4. The problem of effective communication
5. Building a positive social climate
6. Applying group process to your group
7. Role and status
8. Building group cohesiveness

B. Providing lists of questions and special materials. These people should be provided appropriate questions and reading material prior to each in-service effort.

C. Consultants and available resource persons in training group leaders may be secured by contacting the EEO Section.

IDENTIFYING CULTURAL TRAITS

Directions

The following exercise is designed to survey classroom teachers' conceptions of ethnic and racial differences. The primary purpose of the exercise is to demonstrate the fact that there are probably more likenesses than differences between racial and ethnic groups. And if differences do exist, they are difficult to express. The exercise should take only 5 to 10 minutes to complete. It is not necessary for teachers to place their names on the sheets. The exercise should be collected and analyzed for discussion before information type in-service programs start. Two sheets with a carbon insert may be used so that participants can refer to their answers later.
Many Americans think that each ethnic or racial group has its own cultural pattern which is different from other groups. Listed below are four (4) blocks of blank spaces. There are two blocks under "White Middle Class Culture." In block (A) write at least 4 desirable white middle class cultural traits and in block (B) 4 undesirable white middle class cultural traits. There are also two blocks under a minority culture(*). In block (C) write at least 4 desirable minority cultural traits and in block (D) write 4 undesirable minority cultural traits. State your first and honest opinion.

Evaluation

(1) The ESO Section is able to refer you to speakers and consultants in the area of concern.

(2) The Simulation Game as a Teaching Technique

Simulation is designed to provide opportunities for teachers and others to engage in individual and group problem solving which focuses chiefly upon the following broad areas: pupil behavior, teacher relationships with pupils, colleagues, and parents. It provides meaningful human interactions in groups both in affective and cognitive experiences. It makes possible transfer of training so that the learner after experiencing the simulation technique is better prepared to cope with real events. Each problem in a simulation experience is open-ended. No single clear-cut solution is indicated. It also operates with a minimum reliance on experts.
Simulation Objectives:

1. To increase skills of teachers to analyze problems.

2. To increase the ability of teachers to recognize and evaluate approaches for constructive action.

3. To sensitize teachers to beliefs, feelings, attitudes and ideas of their counterparts through participation in open discussion of a problem having implication for the school and community.
Questions Frequently Asked

1. Are lower-class blacks and Indians really any different from lower-class whites?

2. What are some of the cultural traits of American black people?

3. What are some of the cultural traits of Indians which distinguish them from the majority race?

4. Are the cultural differences a matter of degree or are there clear cut differences?

5. What are some examples of value conflicts?

6. If there are important ethnic differences between the races, what are some of the most obvious examples?

7. Why are minority groups so conscious about race and culture?

8. Should all ethnic groups try to acquire white middle class culture?

9. Is it true that blacks' moral standards are different from those of whites?
HAVEN HILL HIGH SCHOOL
(A Simulated Game)

Haven Hill High School has a student body of 800 with a faculty of 30 in addition to two counselors and the principal. There is one black staff member who is the librarian. The custodial and kitchen staffs have black and Indian personnel. About 15 percent of the student body is black; another 5 percent is Indian.

The mean age of teachers is about 50. Most of them grew up and still live in this town. The residential areas are segregated but everybody knows everybody.

When the school was integrated in 1955, the all-black high school was closed. None of the traditions of old Mather School were incorporated into the new school.

Most individual classes are mixed; however, several of the remedial classes and vocational type classes always have a high percentage of minority group students. Ability grouping is not practiced, but students tend to group themselves naturally according to interests. The college preparatory classes are mostly white and, of course, these students tend to take the lead in all of the school's activities.

All activities are open to anyone who can meet the rather high qualifications. There are very few minority group students in the high prestige clubs such as the Pep Club. This is so because of transportation and financial problems. Athletics appear to attract many blacks, especially football and basketball.

There has been a great deal of controversy about school dances; therefore, the faculty adopted a no dance policy on school time and property. Several clubs now have an annual banquet. The junior class also sponsors a Junior-Senior banquet.

Haven Hill generally has a graduating class of about 125 with approximately nine percent of them minority group students. Only one or two minority group students go on to college or technical school. Teachers say that most of the minority group students are achieving about two grade levels below whites.

Recently, both blacks and Indian students have formed very highly organized groups which have been making complaints to the principal and counselors about irrelevancy on curriculum and the attitudes of many teachers. Students are claiming that they are being treated differently from whites. They equate the treatment as a form of discrimination. Students have backing in their allegations from their parents and organized community groups. These groups are calling for more minority group teachers. The board has tried to hire some, but has failed to this point to attract any.

Until recently, there were no problems between students and teachers. The school was thought to be reasonably integrated. Teachers at Haven resent criticism and feel that they understand their students quite well.
Questions

1. What would you say is the major problem in this school?
2. What special problems does the lack of black or Indian teachers present?
3. Do you think that the teachers at Haven Hill have an adequate understanding of their minority group students?
4. What can teachers do on their own to improve the school climate?
5. If you worked in this school, what would you want the administrators to do to help you do a better job?
6. What would help these teachers the most?
7. How much should this school allow itself to be influenced by Black and Indian pressure groups?
8. What kind of in-service training would help this situation?
9. How different are the problems of disadvantaged whites in this school?

The Report of the Subcommittee's efforts to "examine, investigate, and make a complete study of any and all matters pertaining to the education of Indian children" which was authorized in August 1967 and continued inquiries through October 1969. They have not offered Indian children -- either in years past or today -- an educational opportunity anywhere equal to that offered the great bulk of American children. The Report presents the Subcommittee's findings on what has happened to Indian education in the past and then 60 separate recommendations which, if put into effect, the Subcommittee "believes that all American Indians, children and adults, will have the unfettered opportunity to grow to their full potential."
