3. The community is best served when each individual contributes to the goals of society.

4. Education is a shared responsibility (home, church, school and other agencies).

5. Education is a life process.

6. The community should support a system of public education and should provide the needed financial resources.

7. The community expresses, through its support, the importance it attaches to the programs of the local school systems.

8. The goals of the school system must be student oriented.

9. The educator should assist the community in identifying goals for all children.

10. Curriculum includes all the experiences which children have under the guidance of the school.

11. A carefully planned instructional program, which meets the needs of the individual, is the heart of the curriculum.

12. Public education should accept the responsibility for developing ideals conducive to promoting an effective form of democratic government.

13. As an instrument of society, an educational system must be responsive to social, cultural and governmental changes.

14. A sufficient variety of educational activities should be provided in each school community to allow all children to receive equal educational opportunities.

12. Reasonable attempts are made to provide for the needs of exceptional children.
1. Job descriptions shall be written for each professional category.
Assumptions

1. The opinions and goals of students will be taken into consideration in school decisions more than they are at the present time.

2. We estimate that by 1976-1977 the proportion of elementary and secondary will be equalized; and this situation will persist for some years after.

3. Until major residential projects are developed within the county, the rate of increase in student enrollment will continue to decline, even though total enrollment will continue to increase.

4. Fiscal dependence upon governmental agencies will continue and financial support in the foreseeable future will be a limitation on scope and types of instructional programs.

5. It will be necessary for administrators to give increasing consideration to current value judgments as to what is desirable or acceptable for youth and to carefully evaluate the traditions and mores of the past before deciding to apply them to current situations.

6. The teacher association must demonstrate militancy in obtaining gains in non-salary areas in order to justify its existence.

7. The teacher association will demand an increasingly greater participation in the decision-making process as it relates to the operation of the school system.

8. The news media will continue to exert a significant impact upon the formation of public opinion.

9. Educational needs will change so rapidly that intensive on-going professional training programs will be required.

10. Private companies are accelerating their participation in education.

11. The various publics will insist that the public education system consider the services provided by the private sector.

12. The individual rights and civil liberties movements will make administration at all school levels much more complex.

13. Emphasis on ecology will place additional financial strain on the educational system, and will receive more attention on the administrative and instructional level.
14. Continued awareness and sophistication on the part of the public will require educators to take a more critical look at their programs and to demonstrate a need for the expected results.

15. New ways of financing public education will be developed at state and federal levels.

16. Continued intensive and varied professional training programs will be conducted in order to implement new and to improve existing programs.

17. State and federal departments of education will exert more control over local school system operations and will have more influence on instructional matters.

18. Due to changing structure of social institutions, the organizational framework and ventures of public education will change.

19. An increasing supply of teacher candidates will improve the quality of the teaching staff.

20. Financial constraints and demands for accountability will force public schools to re-examine their goals, techniques and activities with the expectation of increasing effectiveness.
