This curriculum guide, designed for the quinmester system, is an aide to secondary grade teachers as they plan instructional programs, and takes into account students' needs, available resources, and other factors. Objectives of this course of study are for the student to understand the causes and issues that led to the Civil War, the course and strategies of that war, and the results of the struggle. It is hoped that a conceptual transfer of learning occurs whereby students gain insight into today's issues that divide America and acquire suggestions about their resolution. One main idea is to make students aware that there are ways of resolving social, political, and economic differences within a nation peacefully, but if differences are not settled amicably war sometimes occurs. Included is a list of: review activities, textbooks, paperbacks, pamphlets, supplementary books, film resources, multi-media resources, captioned filmstrips, records and teaching tapes. Related documents are: SO 002 708 through SO 002 718, and SO 002 768 through SO 002 792. (Author/SJM)

INTRODUCTION

This course of study was written as part of a total effort to revise curriculum to fit the quinmester administrative organization of schools. The materials and information in this guide are meant to be neither all-inclusive nor prescriptive; but rather, an aide to teachers as they plan instructional programs, taking into account student needs and characteristics, available resources, and other factors.

The major intent of this publication is to provide a broad framework of goals and objectives, content, teaching strategies, class activities, and materials all related to a described course of study. Teachers may then accept the model framework in total or draw ideas from it to incorporate into their lessons.

The guide is divided into 1) a broad goals section, 2) a content outline, 3) objectives and learning activities, and 4) materials. The first section provides descriptive and goal-oriented information for the teacher; "indicators of success" refers to suggested prerequisite or corequisite experiences. The content outline illustrates, in general terms, the scope and major subdivisions of the course. The objectives and learning activities section, hopefully, provides a total picture of the concept or main idea and specific behavioral objectives for a set of given learning activities. The materials section of the guide lists resources in four categories: essential textural or other material; alternate classroom materials to use in place of or in addition to the aforementioned; supplementary teacher resources; and supplementary student resources. The appendix may include other material appropriate for a specific course: e.g., pretests, readings, vocabulary, etc.

Anyone having recommendations relating to this publication is urged to write them down and send to: Social Studies Office, Room 306, Lindsey Hopkins, A-1.

COURSE RATIONALE:

Since the beginning of our national history, Americans have held different views about a variety of issues. The great majority of these differences have been peacefully resolved. At one time in our history, however, Americans could not resolve their differences amicably and the issues that had divided the nation led to a civil war.

The student, having completed this course, should better understand the issues that led to civil war, the course of that war, and finally the results of the struggle. As a consequence it is hoped the student will gain insight into some of the issues that divide America today and acquire some thoughts about their resolution.

COURSE GOALS:

1. The student will suggest different ways of resolving social, political, and economic differences within a nation.
2. The student will compare the sectional differences that divided the nation from 1800-1861 to sectional differences today.
3. The student will examine the years preceding the Civil War: the conflicts and the attempts to compromise that led to war.
4. The student will compare the events that divided the nation from 1800-1861 to sectional differences today.
5. The student will suggest reasons why selected military and civilian personalities of the war were successful or unsuccessful in their endeavors.
6. The student will analyze the strategy of the war that led to the war.
7. The student will describe the role of the individual soldier on either side and relate to all soldiers.
8. The student will analyze the events of the Reconstruction Era and relate these events to problems of the present day.

4. Have students read about problems that existed between Lincoln and his cabinet.
   a. Ask students "Did this affect organization and leadership in Union Army?"
   b. Have students cite examples of possible discord between president and cabinet recently and any similar effects on war today.

5. Present information on Battles in the East 1861-63 and have previously assigned reports on military leaders and their relation to these battles.
   a. Battle of Ironclads (importance of new ironclads)
   b. Peninsula Campaign-7 days battle
   c. Second Battle of Bull Run
   d. Antietam (influence on Lincoln's decision for Emancipation Proclamation)
   e. Fredericksburg
   f. Chancellorsville

7. Have designated students present a report with prepared transparencies on the Battle of Gettysburg.
   a. Class will write papers on "If you were a Confederate leader at Gettysburg, what would your strategy have been"
   b. Discuss importance of this battle as a turning point in the war.

8. Show filmstrips from SVE series, The Civil War.
   a. America's Trial and Agony
   b. High Tide of Valor
9. Present information on the progress of the War in the West to 1863 with student reports on leaders and battles.
   a. Importance of Union Navy (Ironclads) in taking Vicksburg (1863)
   b. Ft. Henry, Ft. Donelson
   c. Wilderness
   d. New Orleans
   e. Shiloh
   f. Petersburg
   g. Importance of Union Navy (Ironclads) in taking.

10. Students will write letters from the battlefield. Some may be read to the class.
11. Civil War: Lee the Virginian (1-12840), The Virginia (1-11772).
12. Discuss the mood of the North towards Lincoln and the war at this time, have students draw cartoons reflecting these feelings. (Possible source: Valley News Echo, a collection of Civil War newspaper accounts)
13. (1) Discuss strategy of Lee and Grant in the East.
    (2) Have students list important events in Lee's life.
14. Why did Lee join the Confederacy?
15. Present information on the course of the war, 1864-1865.
   a. Discuss importance as a turning point (1864-1865).

GOALS:
The student will analyze the events of the Reconstruction Era and relate these events to problems of the present day.

II. RECONSTRUCTING THE UNION

A. To examine events immediately following the end of the war.

2. Discuss with students the economic condition of the two opponents at the end of the war. Ask students to explain the statement "The North's factories had won the war." Discuss the economic condition of the two opponents immediately following the end of the war. Possible source: Baker, Gary, Andrew Johnson, and the Struggle for Presidential Reconstruction.

3. Read selections to students that show conditions in the South. Possible source: Baker, Gary, Andrew Johnson, and the Struggle for Presidential Reconstruction.

4. Have students compare the South to other nations defeated in war. Did the South receive government aid? Did the South receive the same treatment as other nations? Discuss with students the economic condition of the two opponents at the end of the war. Suggested reference: The Americans, p. 207-210.

B. Role playing

Have students pretend they are soldiers returning home.

For discussion:
- What effect do these feelings have on the terms of the peace treaty?
- Do former enemies ever become allies? Give examples. How do people who win a war usually feel? Why?
- Do former enemies ever become allies? Give examples. How do people who win a war usually feel? Why?

C. Possible questions for discussion:

REVIEW ACTIVITIES

1. Charades—Students and teacher act out charades based upon content material.

2. Historical Impersonations—Have a student pretend he is a character in history, his student gives a talk in the first person telling some of the events and accomplishments of his life. The other students try to determine who he is.

3. History Bee—Two teams of students answer questions. If a student misses a question, he sits down. The team with last member standing wins.

4. Relay Races—Questions are written on slips of paper and divided into two piles. Two relay teams are chosen. At the signal each team member rushes to the front of the room, takes a question from the appropriate pile and writes the answer. The teacher or a student selected by the teacher checks his answer, and if it is correct, he takes the pen back to the next team member who repeats the same procedure. If one contestant does not know the answer to the question, he may run back and consult his teammates and return to write the answer. The first team to finish wins.

5. History Bingo—A game based on Bingo rules.

6. Crossword Puzzles—Available in many social studies publications or students can make up their own based on review material.

7. Skits—Have students write and perform skits appropriate for the material being reviewed.

8. Role-playing—Assign students situations or personalities to portray. Have the rest of the class guess the personality or situation.

9. Who Am I—Have students write three clues about historical personalities, arranged in order from difficult to easy. Divide the class into two teams and assign point values to each of the three clues. The team making the most points wins.

10. Review Baseball—Teacher writes out questions on slips of paper and labels them "single," "double," "triple," or "home run" (according to level of difficulty). A large blackboard diagram is drawn on the board and a student will mark down the progress of each team and record the number of outs and runs. The class is divided into two teams and proceeds like a baseball game.
