This 207-item questionnaire assesses drug-use practices, alienation, sexual orientation and practices, and wide ranging biographic and demographic factors in persons 14 years old and older. The instrument is untimed, and administered as a structured interview. Interviewers require a brief training period and some practice. See TM 001 169, 170 for responses of sample surveys. (DG)

162. Everyone is a "member" of some groups, an outsider to others. Toward what groups do you feel like an outsider, regardless of what someone else might say about your being in that group or not? For example, a person can be a member of a family but still feel left out of it, or he can be a citizen of a country but so disgusted with its policies that he disassociates himself from it in his mind. Similarly, a person can feel himself a member of the upper class, an insider, even if that class isn't a group in the formal sense of being organized, etc. Please check in the list below whether you feel like an outsider or an insider to each.

The way things are in the U.S. today I'd like to emigrate to another country

It would be better for kids if families were replaced by a better system

Many parents really mess up their kids

"Work 8 hours, sleep 8 hours, which leaves 8 hours for fun" is a terrible way to live

This is the best of all possible worlds

The way things are today no one should bring children into the world

No one should work at a job he doesn't like

This country would be better off if there was a real revolt

In government today there is no one you can really trust

You can't blame a person for wanting to commit suicide

Making a lot of money at a job is essential

Most parents don't really care about their kids

I wouldn't want to take a job that didn't offer me some status

Marriage is unnecessary

In general, schools are becoming more and more irrelevant to what's happening

Life without a job would be very boring and unsatisfying

However poor the convention system, when you get down to it, it still works

There is no room, really, for Radicalism in America

In general, I would consider myself alienated from the society

Kids need a stable home life with a mother and a father if they are to be well adjusted
