The primary objective of this study was to test the validity of the American Library Association policy statement on Library Education and Manpower by applying it to the tasks described in Phase I of the Illinois Task Analysis Project. (Available as ED 040 723.) A Model was to be developed in which the tasks would be arranged in accordance with the definitions established in the policy statement, on the basis of the consultant's experience and judgement and bearing in mind the scaling of all appropriate factors by SERD (Social, Educational Research and Development, Inc.). This would be the exact process which would have to be followed by an administrator attempting to apply the new manpower policy in an individual library, and the result, besides serving as a test of the policy's validity, should also serve as a demonstration to administrators of how to make such application to positions in their own libraries. The study was based on public libraries. The list of tasks indicating the sort into categories upon which the report is based is an appendix to the study. Objectives of the Study

The primary objective of this study was to test the validity of the ALA policy statement on Library Education and Manpower by applying it to the tasks described in Phase I of the Illinois Task Analysis Project. A model was to be developed in which the tasks would be arranged in accordance with the definitions established in the policy statement, on the basis of the consultant's experience and judgment and bearing in mind the scaling of all appropriate factors by SERD (Social, Educational Research and Development, Inc.). This would be the exact process which would have to be followed by an administrator attempting to apply the new manpower policy in an individual library, and the result, besides serving as a test of the policy's validity, should also serve as a demonstration to administrators of how to make such application to positions in their own libraries.

Only public libraries were to be included in the study, and this was interpreted to include the State library agency, the processing center, and the system headquarters, as well as the individual public libraries included in Phase I of the project.

Formal job descriptions were not to be produced, since any such grouping of tasks into positions would involve knowing the quantity of such work to be performed in a given library or organizational unit, and this information was not available. Promotional lines from one grouping or level of tasks to another were to be indicated, however, since this is a major element in the manpower policy.

Methodology

Substantial and detailed review was made of the 1615 tasks described in Phase I of the project by SERD, and of their coding of the tasks by Functional Areas, General and Specific Tasks, and the scales of Performance Standards (II),
Task Environment (III), Worker Functions (IV), General Educational Development (V), Worker Instructions (VI), Training Time (VII), Time to Complete the Task (VIII), and Extraordinary Physical Demands (IX).

Two of the scales were ruled out at the very beginning as not having significant validity for the study: VIII - Time to Complete the Task, and IX - Extraordinary Physical Demands. The coding of General and Specific Tasks was not formally used, since the distinction was apparent from a reading of the tasks. It should be noted, however, that for the kind of task analysis attempted in Phase I, only specific tasks can be of use. The inclusion of so-called "general" tasks, actually clusters of tasks, contradicts the expressed objective of the analysis attempted. For reasons of practicality, however, both general and specific tasks were used in this study, with the breakdown of general into specific "assumed," or supplied without formally setting it down, on the basis of the analyst's experience with the duties as performed.

Two of the most important codings were not supplied: that listed in SERD's report as Scale X - Knowledge/Skills/Abilities, and the type of library in which the task occurred. For a study to be based entirely and reliably on the findings of Phase I, the Knowledge/Skills/Abilities factor is an absolute essential. In order to perform the study, it again had to be supplied, implicitly, from the analyst's experience. The absence of coding by type of library does not in any way affect the validity of the study, but the need to sort out all the tasks occurring only in school, college and university, or special libraries, added a great deal of unnecessary work and had serious impact on the useability of the machine runs.

It was apparent from the first line-by-line study of the tasks ordered by Training Requirements that there was going to be significant disagreement with SERD's scoring, based largely on the missing Knowledge/Skills/Abilities factor, and also that a rather high proportion of the tasks were either duplicates or would be unuseable because of the ambiguity of their description. These problems, combined with the inability to sort by type of library, meant that any machine sort of the data would be not only cumbersome because of the inclusion each time of tasks in all types of libraries, but highly unreliable unless the scoring of all the scales were first reviewed, reevaluated, recoded and rerun.

It was therefore determined that the study would be based on a manual sort of the cards, with duplicates, unuseable descriptions, and tasks specifically identified or occurring solely in school, college/university, and special libraries excluded, and with ratings for individual tasks reappraised at each stage of their use.

Procedure and Findings

The first step was to eliminate from the 1615 tasks those not to be included in the study. Two hundred eighty-five (285) tasks were sorted out as specifically identified or occurring solely in school libraries, 164 as specifically identified or occurring solely in college/university libraries, and 70 as specifically identified or occurring solely in special libraries. Tasks identified or recognizable as occurring in the State library, processing center, and system headquarters were included in the study without separate treatment.

There was a fair number of tasks which could be either school or college/university, or both. The decision between the two was made arbitrarily, usually on the basis of vocabulary, but the resulting count may not be precise.

Ninety-five (95) tasks were eliminated as duplicates in this or subsequent sorts, and 114 as being unuseable. It may be useful to see examples of some occurring in the latter category. Most were determined to be unuseable because of ambiguity or vagueness of description, which made it impossible to determine what the nature of the task really was; for example,

- Determines records to be kept in public library
- Provides technical assistance in non-professional areas to libraries in the system
- Reviews and evaluates staff studies and revises or implements results
- Approves proposals for new programs.

Others were simply not "tasks" by any definition, as

- Maintains working climate conducive to staff morale and patron needs
- Anticipates new problems and needs for library and develops programs dealing with problems before critical situations arise.

In the case of duplicates, the most specific or the most clearly stated version was retained.

Duplicate and unused tasks were not culled from those identified as belonging in excluded types of libraries.

This left 840 tasks as the universe of the study -- those occurring in the public library, including State agency, system headquarters, and processing center. Obviously many of these tasks are universal in libraries, occurring also in other types of libraries.

These tasks were then sorted into ten categories -- the nine established in the ALA policy statement on Education and Manpower and a tenth called, tentatively, "Custodial-Maintenance and others not included by definition in the statement."

1. Clerk
2. Library Technical Assistant
It rapidly became apparent that a number of additional categories would need to be inserted for sorting purposes. One was called Supervisory Clerical (as distinct from Library Technical Assistant). Another consisted of administrative or supervisory tasks which were multi-level, depending on where they occurred in the organization, as

- Approves vacation and leave requests of staff
- Makes annual evaluation of staff members
- Conducts monthly staff meetings
- Writes annual report of activities in department.

This group was ultimately eliminated from the study since they are unplaceable by category. Their existence should not be forgotten, however, in any further use of the task descriptions, since they are important elements of positions at several different levels.

A separate category was established for Audio-Visual in the first sort, but this was later eliminated and the tasks within it sorted by Functional Area and integrated with the others in the study.

A small category of self-development items was also separated out in the first sort, but later integrated or, in a few cases, excluded from the study.
Also separated in the first sort were a few tasks involving the transfer of work at the conclusion of a process. SERD viewed this transfer as a clerical operation, but in almost all cases it was simply a matter of the person who had performed the preceding step passing the work on to the next person, and these tasks were later integrated into the main body of the tasks with interpretation and evaluation based on the task which had just been completed.

Categories were also set up for Librarian or Specialist, Senior Librarian or Senior Specialist, and these were retained, since the tasks could appropriately be performed by either, depending on the staff-utilization pattern of the library. One was also inserted for Associate Specialist or Specialist, consisting largely of tasks which could be delegated by the Specialist to an assistant if the unit were large enough to justify a second position.

"Other" was found to consist of custodial—maintenance, truck or mobile—unit driver, and shipping room functions. Since tasks of this nature were not included in the policy statement, no further analysis was made of them.

Within most of the categories, the tasks were then sorted by Functional Area. This provides a good example of why a machine-sort based on SERD's codings would not be reliable. More than a third of the Clerical tasks allocated by SERD to Functional Area 2 (Selection and Acquisition) needed to be changed, most of them to 1 (Administration) or to 3 (Cataloging and Processing), or in some cases to 4 (Registration and Circulation). At this stage numerous additions were made to the Unuseable category (but included in the total given earlier) because of such problems as not being able to tell when "orders" referred to books or other media and when to supplies or equipment.

Similarly, about one-fourth of the Clerical tasks coded 3 were changed, and again duplicates became visible which had not been caught in the first sorting.
In Category 4 (Registration and Circulation) the problem arose of having tasks described involving several different kinds of charging systems. They were all left in, with the result that considerable duplication remains. There was much confusion in the placement of Interlibrary Loan functions, with SERD placing some in Category IV and some in Category VI — Reader Services. While either could be defended, they were all placed in Circulation for the sake of consistency.

Within several of the Functional Areas, with large numbers of tasks, subdivisions were established, as

Clerical: FA 1 (Administration)

- Unskilled Clerical
- Simple Machine Operation
- Typing
- Secretarial
- Switchboard
- Supplies
- Personnel and Payroll
- Fiscal

Clerical: FA 3 (Cataloging and Processing)

- General Processing
- Newspaper Processing
- Physical Preparation

Clerical: FA 4 (Registration and Circulation)

- Registration
- Circulation
- Overdues/Fines
- Shelving
- Reserves
- Interlibrary Loan
The Technical Assistant category, although small enough numerically that it was not sorted by Functional Area, was divided in order better to see its composition, e.g.

Audio-visual Equipment
Data Processing
Microfilming
Printing
Photography
Other

Similarly, Specialist was divided into:

General Management
Personnel
Public Relations
Computer
Audio-Visual

No tasks were placed in the Senior Specialist category, probably a result of the size of the libraries included in the study.

Senior Specialist or Senior Librarian was divided into

Professional
General Management
Buildings/Architecture
Budget/Fiscal.

As the next stage of the study the tasks, thus arranged, were reviewed in the light of SERD's scaling of the following factors:

VII - Training Time

V - General Educational Development
   A - Reasoning
   B - Mathematics (only for those in which it was likely to be a significant factor)
   C - Language

VI - Worker Instructions

II-A Performance Standards - Who or What Sets the Standards

III - Task Environment

The Training Time factor was obviously the most significant in terms of the objectives of the study, and although it was known that the correlation was high between Factors VII and V, General Educational Development (GED) was reviewed simply as a cross-check on SERD's evaluations.

Scale VIII (Time Required to Complete the Task) and IX (Extraordinary Physical Demands) had earlier been eliminated, and Scale V-B (Mathematics) was so obviously not significant in most tasks that it was used only in categories where it seemed likely to be required.

Scale IV (Worker Functions: Data, People, Things) was included experimentally, but the scattering was so widespread that it was meaningless for the purposes of this particular study. This factor would have great importance, however, in actually grouping tasks into jobs, and a careful analysis of it for all the tasks performed in libraries would surely be of interest to those concerned with recruitment and selection of library staff at all levels, and with their educational preparation and on-the-job training and development.

Scale II-B (Quality Required) was excluded because, for the purposes of this particular study, the variation of error permitted was meaningless unless accompanied by a rating of the consequence of error. As illustration, Task 1150, "types multilith masters" and Task 1368, "manages and controls budget, including major expenditures and transfer of budgetary items" are both, accurately, coded 1 - "error-free quality (or very, very close to it) is required"; but the difference in level is considerable.

II-C (Are Standards Written or Unwritten?) and II-D (Pace or Productivity) were excluded; again, because they say nothing about level of work or educational requirements.

The codings as listed in Chart B represent the range, or predominant or characteristic valuations, and where one or more occurred with considerably greater frequency than the others listed, these are underlined.

The scalings used here are essentially SERD's. A few changes were made for individual tasks in cases of marked disagreement, but in no instance was the range for a category affected by this.

CHART B appears on pp. 14-16.

Analysis of the SERD scales revealed the following:

Scale VII - Training Requirements: The characteristic range for Clerk positions was 1-4, with a few 5's, thus fitting easily the policy statement's requirement of high school graduation. The tasks described as Secretarial, Fiscal, and Personnel and Payroll had a somewhat higher 3-6 range, with Typing and Supplies positions and those in Functional Area 4 concerned with Overdues/Fines in a 3-5 range. Those called Supervisory Clerical ranged from 5 to 7.

Tasks placed in the Library Technical Assistant category fell in the 4-6 range, with most at the 5 level, and those grouped as Technical Assistants ranged from 3-6. While not going much beyond the level of high school graduation there was, at least, a visibly and consistently higher requirement here than for most of the Clerk positions.

Tasks grouped under both Library Associate and Associate Specialist also fell in the same 4-6 range, with only a few in the Associate Specialist or Specialist category going as high as 7. This would seem not quite to match the requirements established by the policy statement.

Librarian tasks had a 5-7 range, with a few stray 8's, rather than the clear-cut 7 one might have wished for, and the Specialists were the same, with a few more 3's. Again, however, there was a clear line of differentiation between these positions and the nonprofessional ones.

The Senior-level positions, Librarian or Specialist, were all in the 6-8 range, again consistent with each other and a cut above the journeyman-level tasks in their categories.
Scale V - General Educational Development: A similar gradual upward progression was visible on Scale A (Reasoning), with the Clerks ranging 1-3, with the exceptions again of Secretarial, Fiscal, and Personnel and Payroll, which ranged 3-4, as did the Supervisory Clerical. The Library Technical Assistants ranged generally 3-4, with an occasional 5, but the range for Technical Assistants was only 2-4. The Associates (both Library and Specialist) also struck a 3-4 level, with a few 5's. The Librarians hit a consistent 4-5, as did the Specialists with a few stray 3's and 6's. The Senior levels ranged 4-6, with a predominance of 5's and 6's.

Scale B (Mathematics) was tabulated for only a few categories, with "high school mathematics" required only in the Fiscal grouping among the Clerks. "Highly specialized mathematics" was required for no task listed. "Elementary college mathematics" was required for a variety of Specialist tasks and in all Senior-level groupings, but was dominant only in the Computer group.

Scale C (Language) again showed a gradual rise from 1-3 for the Unskilled Clerical, to 3-4 for most tasks in the Clerk category. Level 5 ("Post high-school and linguistic experience") began showing up in the Library Technical Assistant tasks, but not as frequently in those of Technical Assistants. It was only at the professional level (Librarian and Specialist) that 6's ("Considerable education and linguistic experience") appeared with any frequency and they became more dominant at the Senior level.
Scale VI - Worker Instructions: Level 5 ("the worker is expected to know and employ theory...") did not occur until the Supervisory Clerical and Library Technical Assistant levels, and it occurred in only two of the six Functional Area groupings of LTA's. It occurred spottily among the Technical Assistants. Level 6 ("requires some creative use of theory well beyond referring to standard sources...") occurred occasionally among Supervisory Clerical, Library Technical Assistant, Technical Assistant, and Associate Specialist, but became dominant only at the Librarian level. It was here also that Level 7 (worker must define need or problem) appeared for the first time. Tasks at the Specialist level ranged widely, from 4-8, with 6 probably the most frequent level. All tasks at the Senior levels included some 7's and 8's, but again with a scattering of lower levels.

Scale II-A - Who or What Sets the Standards?: With the exception of three tasks coded 1 ("the worker"); all were coded either 2 ("other") or 3 ("outside criteria"). The 3's became dominant in Supervisory Clerical, Library Technical Assistant, Associate, Librarian, Specialist, and Senior categories.

Scale III - Task Environment: Most Clerk tasks were coded 2-3 ("repetitive, short cycle operations" performed "under specific instructions.") Those in the Administrative: Fiscal category, however, were significant exceptions, as were those in all the "over-the-desk" Registration and Circulation tasks. Beginning at the Supervisory Clerical/Library Technical Assistant levels, there was a wide mix, with 3 dropping out, with rare exceptions, at the professional levels.

2/ Two self-development items and one questionable one.
Conclusions and Recommendations

Without exception, the tasks included in the study were those traditionally performed in libraries, traditionally described. They fell easily into the categories established in Library Education and Manpower. The line between Clerk and Library Technical Assistant was clear and followed the definitions established by the policy statement and the several Deininger Committee reports. Groupings of tasks emerged which logically could be described as Technical Assistants, Associates, and Specialists. There was no difficulty in determining the base line for tasks which were professional - either Librarian or Specialist.

The check against the five SERD scales revealed a structure roughly resembling that described in the policy statement.

The first column of x’s in each category represents the predominant coding for Scale VII; the second, Scale V-A; the third, V-C; and the fourth, Scale VI. Scales II-A and III do not lend themselves to this type of representation.

In any consideration of SERD's scales, it must be remembered that Scale X - Knowledge/Skills/Abilities Required is lacking. If present, this would undoubtedly create a sharper differentiation among the categories.

Before accepting this tentative fit, however, several other observations need to be made:

(1) A very high proportion of the tasks included in the study were clerical (46% including Supervisory Clerical).

(2) A significant number of the clerical tasks in the Administrative area, particularly in the Secretarial, Fiscal, and Personnel and Payroll subdivisions, were in the LTA rather than Clerical ranges on several of the SERD scales (most notably VII and V-A and C).

(3) A primary factor in raising either a Librarian or Specialist position to the Senior level was administrative responsibility, with size of unit or library a dominant factor.

(4) Although LTA/TA and Library Associate/Associate Specialist tasks were rated at similar levels on SERD's scales, the latter are by their nature tasks assignable to trainees or assistants, while the former grow out of similar work performed at lower levels.

(5) SERD's scales do not include the accountability or level of responsibility factor. Nor is there any weighting of factors to indicate relative importance.
A synthesis of all of these factors suggests that, on the basis of the tasks described in this study, the following career structure would be appropriate:

Level 1
Clerk

Including all those tasks matching the general definition supplied by the policy statement and ranging generally in the 1-4 levels of SERD’s scales VII, V-A and C, and VI.

Level 2
Library, Technical, and Administrative Assistants

Including all those tasks matching the general definition supplied by the policy statement and here sorted into LTA and TA categories, plus those separated experimentally as Supervisory Clerical, plus those in Fiscal, Secretarial, and Personnel and Payroll categories which range beyond the Clerk level in SERD’s codings.

Also at Level 2
Associates - both Library and Specialist

As defined in the policy statement and evaluated in this study.

Level 3
Librarian/Specialist

As defined in the policy statement and evaluated in this study.

Level 4
Senior Librarian/Senior Specialist

As defined in the policy statement and evaluated in this study.
The qualification requirements (apart from personal attributes) for these levels would be as follows:

Clerk:
High School graduation the basic requirement, plus requisite skills in typing, etc. as required by particular positions (may be acquired in high school, business school, on-the-job training or by other means).

Library, Technical and Administrative Assistants:
High school graduation plus the particular skills, knowledges, and judgment required by particular positions. These may be acquired through experience, in-service training or formal post-high school instruction in appropriate areas, and, most usually and most desirably, through a combination of these.

Associates:
B.A. or B.S. degree (with or without library science courses, as appropriate for particular positions).

Librarian:
M.L.S. degree.

Specialist:
Master's degree in field of specialization or bachelor's degree in appropriate field plus significant related experience (in or outside of libraries).

Senior Librarian:
M.L.S. degree, considerable breadth and depth of library experience, plus additional formal study, with (for the tasks described in this study) strong emphasis on management. A master's degree in management or other appropriate related field highly desirable.
There were no Senior Specialist tasks identified in this study. For those called "Senior Specialist or Senior Librarian," the requirements are essentially the same as for Senior Librarian - substantial experience on the base of a master's degree in the primary discipline, plus advanced formal study in a "cross" field.

The resulting structure of career progression would thus take the following approximate shape:

CHART D

Lines of Promotion

- Clerk [High School graduation]
- LTA / AA / TA
- B.A. / B.S. degree
- Master's degree
- Lib. / Spec.
- Sr. Lib. / Sr. Spec.
How, then, does this compare with the recommendations of the policy statement on Library Education and Manpower?

1. There is complete agreement with the policy statement's definition of Clerk and its educational requirements. The pulling out of the upper ranges of some of the administrative tasks into an Administrative Assistant category is important, however. Because such tasks are smaller in number than those of similar levels of difficulty in the bibliographic area, they tend to be less visible and thus are viewed as "just clerical." Such duties as control of the library's accounts or its personnel record-keeping (including position and budgetary control, as well as the entire complex of salary increments, service ratings, etc.), along with the important interpersonal relationships involved, or serving as secretary to the director of the library, including supportive services to his relationship with the library board, require a very high level not only of skill, but of organization, responsibility, and above all, judgment. They fully merit recognition at a level equivalent to that of the Library Technical Assistant.

2. There is complete agreement with the policy statement's definition of Library Technical Assistant, so far as the nature of the tasks performed is concerned, and strong support for the removal of such tasks from the Librarian level. Serious question is raised, however, regarding the educational requirements, especially as accompanied by the statement, "The Technical Assistant categories... are not meant simply to accommodate advanced clerks." While Clerks are not excluded by the policy statement from moving to the LTA level (indeed, the career-lattice diagram indicates this as a line of promotion for them), the basic requirements established for the level recognize only formal study, not the learnings which come through experience.

What is being recommended here is that primary recognition be given to valid related experiential learning, with the two-year college program still recognized as an alternative but not necessarily a more desirable mode of entry. The advanced clerk should indeed be strongly encouraged (or in some cases required) to undertake formal course work to assist in his development to the LTA level. Courses directly concerned with library techniques might well provide a valuable synthesis and overview of that which he has learned on the job. Or, even more profitably, he might take courses in supervision, or in computer applications to library processes, or some other subject which has not been taught in the course of his clerical assignments.

There are two reasons for this emphasis on stronger recognition of experience as a qualification for promotion to the Library Technical Assistant level. One is the nature of the LTA tasks themselves, and the other is the high proportion of library tasks which are clerical.

The LTA tasks represent the highest level on a continuum and are different from the tasks immediately below them in the Clerk category only in degree of complexity. Those tasks requiring the kinds of knowledge provided by general education are already excluded from this category. It would therefore seem that an able clerk, after a number of years of well planned, well evaluated, well supervised experience would be the natural candidate for advancement to the LTA level, and would bring to his performance a more substantially based judgment.

In analyzing any career structure, the amount of work to be performed, or the number of staff employed to do it, at any level, is also of significance. For example, the career line of a photographer in a typical library is extremely short; there just is not that much photography to be performed. There need to be more ladders up from a category containing two hundred positions than from one including twenty. This kind of quantitative information was not provided in the Phase I document, and it is not altogether safe to use the total number of tasks in any one category as a criterion. Some of the tasks described are very simple and specific, requiring only a few minutes to perform, while others are complex and general, almost unmeasurable in terms of time requirements. Nevertheless, the ratio represented by such a mechanical count can provide insights.

Numerically, the clerks are the backbone of the library staff, and to cut off their primary promotional line by the insertion of another category, itself sharply limited in upward potential, does a serious disservice to both. There is a good numerical ratio between the two levels, however, if one is regarded as the natural base for the other.

While the policy statement does not actually rule out the kind of advancement proposed here, neither does it expressly permit it, and it is apparent in the field that instead of relieving the denigration of clerical work long prevalent in libraries, the recognition of the LTA category has added another layer of staff to join in it.
3. There is no disagreement with the definition or educational requirements established by the policy statement for Library Associate/Associate Specialist, but there is disagreement with its placement as a category. The SERD scales place it on an exact par with the Technical Assistant level, and this is where it belongs. It is, at least so far as the tasks included in this study are concerned, purely and simply a trainee level. While the duties require the general education represented by the bachelor's degree, they do not require experience nor are they at the level of responsibility represented by the LTA/TA/AA tasks.

4. The Librarian category produced no problems or disagreement.

5. The Specialist category is one which has long needed the formal recognition in libraries which the policy statement now provides. The master's degree established as the basic requirement by the policy statement is highly desirable and should be strongly encouraged. It is for the most part completely justified by the tasks described here. The only reason for proposing the possible alternative of bachelor's degree in the field of specialization plus significant related experience is that all of the fields represented do not parallel precisely the educational patterns established for librarianship, and there are many conceivable situations, particularly in libraries of the size and type represented here, in which otherwise highly qualified persons would not meet the formal requirement of a master's degree. What is probably most important in these positions, along with basic professional competence, is the capacity to understand and relate to the concerns of libraries, and this, in a sense creates a dual demand to start with. The requirement of significant related experience beyond the bachelor's degree balances the MLS without experience required of the Librarian.
6. There was complete agreement with the policy statement at the Senior Librarian/Senior Specialist level. The tasks placed in the Senior Librarian category were largely at the policy level and almost entirely administrative in nature. Those described as Senior Librarian or Senior Specialist represented high levels of responsibility which could be assumed by librarians or specialists, depending on such variables as: (1) whether the library had a business manager, for example, or the library director handled the budget-making process directly; (2) interpretation of the task (for example, "checks and evaluates library programs in relation to professional standards," which could be done by a librarian for the library's programs of public service or by a personnel specialist for the library's personnel programs); (3) functions for which responsibility could rest with either librarian or specialist, but which by their very nature involve close coordination (as between public relations specialist and librarian in "monitors and supervises staff presentations related to library programs on radio station."). The flexibility of educational requirements provided by the policy statement at this level was particularly appropriate, since practically all of the tasks included here would call for advanced study in other areas rather than an additional degree in library science.

7. Movement among categories is perhaps not indicated with complete clarity by either this study or the policy statement. The inclusion here of the category Associate Specialist or Specialist provides an example in which the tasks would be performed by the Specialist if he had no assistant, but which could well be delegated to one just entering or seeking to enter the field of specialization. Similarly, although not formally indicated, the line between Librarian/Senior Librarian or Specialist/Senior Specialist would be drawn in different places depending on the size of the library or unit, or the stage of development of the incumbent of the position. These shadings can be seen more clearly in actual practice, involving total positions, not isolated tasks, and actual incumbents, not theoretical "categories of manpower." This is the essence of intelligent manpower utilization. Suffice it to say here that no task should be considered immutably, at all times and places, to be in one category or another, at one level or another. To interpret either this or similar studies, or the policy statement itself, thus literally and inflexibly would be the surest way to cut off growth and development of staff.

There are, in fact, two distinct career services, separated by a very firm line which can be crossed only through the attainment of the level of general education represented by the bachelor's degree. On the one side are the positions beginning with Clerk and rising to the top levels of the LTA/TA categories. With a number of grades within each category, this constitutes a viable career structure for high school graduates, who should be expected to improve their skills and broaden their educational backgrounds as they move to positions of greater responsibility. On the other side is the professional structure, beginning with Associate or trainee positions, reaching the professional level with the attainment, in most cases, of the master's degree, and continuing to rise on the basis of increasingly higher levels of responsibility, accompanied by continuing education appropriate to the position requirements.

This essentially is both the pattern established in the policy statement and the one recommended by this study.

4/ This is undoubtedly what is intended by the various arrows on the career lattice diagram (Figure 2) of the policy statement. Yet somehow these arrows create confusion, because they imply a freedom of upward movement not actually possible except as educational requirements are met at each stage of advancement. Similarly, the horizontal arrows indicating lateral movement - between Library Technical Assistant and Technical Assistant, Librarian and Specialist, Senior Librarian and Senior Specialist - seem to be in conflict with the concept of specialization built up through the series of educational requirements.
The principal line of disagreement is between the policy statement's emphasis on academic achievement as the "single best means for determining that an applicant has the background recommended for each category" and the point of view of this study that experience — guided, planned, and evaluated experience — is, for several of the categories, a factor of at least equal importance.

The strict adherence to formal educational standards is easier for an administrator, but in the flux of daily practice and staffing needs, and particularly in the light of the diverse array of talents represented on any staff, other factors will always need to be considered.

The policy statement is concerned with categories of manpower, and the approach of this study is through tasks performed. It is, in the final analysis, the work performed which is at one level or another, and the ultimate test of the individual's qualifications is not the precise amount of pre- or in-service training or experience per se, but the totality of both as expressed through performance.

* * *

Once again, it must be emphasized that this study is based on the tasks performed in a specific group of small- to medium-sized public libraries, as described in the Phase I document of the Task Analysis Project. No metropolitan public libraries, school, special, college or university libraries were included. While the methodology may be applied to tasks in any library, the model and recommendations will not have universal application.
APPENDIX

Arrangement of Tasks by Categories

The following list of tasks is provided solely to indicate the sort into categories upon which the preceding report is based. The task descriptions are exactly as provided by SERD, with no attempts to edit. Within categories, and subdivisions thereof, there is no particular order, either by level of difficulty or by internal relationship of the tasks to each other.

In preparing the Appendix for typing, a few more duplicates were discovered and removed, and several tasks were shifted in location. The numbers may therefore not quite agree with the summary given on pages 9-11 of the report, but none of the changes alter the basic findings or recommendations.

CLERICAL

FA 1 - Administration

Unskilled Clerical

- Picks up mail daily and delivers to dept.
- Packages books & materials for mail shipment
- Maintains scrapbook files of all printing produced in Print Shop
- Selects envelope size and/or labels needed to prepare for mailings as requested
- Gathers materials to be contained in large mailings & inserts in prepared envelopes
- Opens mail & stamps with date due stamp
- Operates, using cart, interlib. mail service by delivering titles, memoranda, mail, etc., to offices within Lib.
- Maintains files of multilith masters and stencils
- Distributes supplies on carts to requesting unit or individual
- Maintains files of completed order forms

Simple Machine Operation

- Operates automatic paper punch
- Operates paper collater
- Operates automatic stapling machine
- Operates multilith machine to produce copies from masters
- Services office machines by replenishing paper, ink, toner, etc.
- Operates paper folding machine
- Operates envelope stuffing machine
- Operates addressograph machine to produce required mailing addresses after selecting correct setting
- Operates mailing machine to affix proper postage to pieces of mail
- Operates glueing machine
- Cleans and maintains glueing machine by performing simple maintenance & cleaning processes
- Cleans office machines weekly (i.e., mimeograph, multilith, etc.) to keep in good operating condition
- Operates electric adding machine
- Operates keypunch machine
- Operates microfilm reader printer
- Operates electrically driven book cart
- Operates plastic laminator
- Operates paging system
- Operates dicto machine
- Monitors tape decks & when malfunctions occur, calls technician
- Operates splicing machine
- Operates IBM Copier to produce color transparencies
- Operates binding machine to attach prescribed covers & plastic bindings to large reports or materials
- Cuts paper & card stocks of varying thicknesses by using guillotine or other machine
Typist
Types multilith masters
Maintains mailing list by producing address plates on Addressograph machines
Types mimeograph stencils
Types mailing labels for member libs.
Makes corrections on typed copy as directed by proofreader
Types from rough drafts, letters, manuscripts, etc.
Types materials received from supervisor via handwritten forms, memos, or dictation equip.
Types from prepared draft information on purchase order form and gives completed form to supervisor for inspection
Operates TTY machine by sending & acknowledging receipt of messages
Maintains TTY machine by loading tapes, paper, & ribbon

Secretarial
Opens & sorts mail delivered to Director
Delivers opened mail to supervisor
Maintains files for Director's office
Takes stenographic notes of Board meeting
Transcribes & types minutes of Board meetings from stenographic notes
Screens salesmen
Maintains Director's appointment calendar
Answers supervisor's telephone & refers calls &/or takes messages
Takes dictation from supervisor using shorthand, notehand, etc.
Maintains files on all insurance programs for lib.
Mails to Board members monthly financial report prior to Board meeting

Switchboard
Operates telephone switchboard

Supplies
Checks periodically library & office supplies & maintains inventory by ordering supplies from Purchasing dept.
Keeps disposition record of supplies in lib.
Files approved copy of purchase orders
Prepares purchase orders
Checks invoice vouchers for mathematical errors before sending to supervisor for approval
Checks received materials against packing slip, initials packing slip & sends to billing Identifies incomplete orders and: (a) writes facts for supervisors (b) prepares credit slip
Maintains consumable supplies for department
Fills requests for office supplies in lib. by selecting supplies from shelves & loading supplies on carts
Approves & checks purchase orders received against original order submitted
Personnel and Payroll

Checks applications for employment for correctness and completeness
Conducts typing tests of clerical applicants & forwards results
Maintains & provides Director with a monthly report of personnel expenditures
Files time-off requests, sick leave reports, & other reports explaining variations from standard work week
Sends quarterly reports to employees indicating amount of compensatory time, debit time, etc. coming to them
Prepares W-2 statements for staff
Computes time owed worker or time worker owes lib. from time-off reports & notifies supervisor
Checks hourly time cards of staff & corrects & rectifies discrepancies
Files payroll records of staff in lib.
Prepares payroll for lib. personnel
Files work records of staff in personnel files
Maintains personnel files on all employees & former employees in public lib.
Prepares quarterly tax statements from payroll records & submits to appropriate government agency
Keeps time & leave data for staff by maintaining daily entries of hours worked, leave status, etc.
Explains to new employees, employee programs such as credit unions, etc.

Fiscal

Prepares deposit slips for cash received weekly from branch libs.
Writes all checks for lib.
Operates checkwriting machine
Enters weekly fiscal transactions for lib. in appropriate ledgers
