This teacher's guide specifies language skills and related areas of knowledge needed for communicating in the target language. Discussion of the philosophy governing the Atlanta language program includes an examination of student eligibility, program articulation, testing, teaching methods, resources, and equipment for use in the classroom. An outline for integrating Afro-French literature and culture in the high school curriculum is included, and course offerings are described. Sections concerning cultural information focus on (1) the arts in France today, (2) teenage life in France today, (3) French politics and professions, (4) the "new" France, (5) the French approach to life, (6) France: a film introduction, (7) French in review, (8) highlights of French literature, (9) history of France, (10) family life in Africa, (11) life in the West Indies, and (12) the African today. A list of resource materials is provided. (RL)
ATLANTA PUBLIC SCHOOLS

FRENCH GUIDE

Revised

1971
The French Guide was prepared by Teachers of French of the Atlanta Public Schools in cooperation with students, counselors and librarians. They were assisted by the following consultants: Genelle Morain, Frank M. Grittner, Herman Bostick, King Trousdale, Don Spivey.
Foreword

French curriculum committees have been struggling with the problem of specifying language skills and related areas of knowledge which are needed for communicating in French. This tentative guide has been developed through the diligent efforts of many teachers and consultants with the following principles in mind:

1. Because of the high mobility of students in the city of Atlanta, it is essential that French teachers agree on the basic objectives and content of the French curriculum. Such agreement is essential to the welfare of the student and to the progress of French as a discipline.

2. The quality of a French program must be measured by the extent to which the goals are achieved rather than by the methods and procedures of achieving them. It is not the aim of this guide to prescribe "the way to teach French," but rather to make available to the teacher suggested resources and methods which may be useful in selecting and developing appropriate means of helping his students attain the goals.

3. The study of French has a unique contribution to make to a student's understanding of the world, past and present, and a greater appreciation of his own language and culture. For a student to realize full value from his study of this important world language, he must develop reasonable proficiency in the fundamental language skills which then become the vehicle for acquiring knowledge and understanding of the way of life of French-speaking people.

It is hoped that this guide will prompt all concerned to re-examine the comprehensiveness and soundness of the French program in the local school with regard to the skills and related areas of knowledge which are presented here and to make suggestions for the continued improvement of the instructional program in French.

Many thanks to all those who have worked in preparing this guide.

Foreign Language Teaching in Atlanta

A. Philosophy and Long-Range Goals
The study of foreign language has a vital contribution to make in the education of today's youth. The long-range goals of foreign language teaching in Atlanta are as follows:

To enable the student:

1. to comprehend aurally new arrangements of familiar material when spoked at normal tempo and with normal intonation and rhythm
2. to reorganize familiar vocabulary and grammatical forms and to apply them to new situations using pronunciation and intonation in a manner acceptable to a native speaker
3. to read for direct comprehension without constant recourse to a bilingual vocabulary list
4. to express his ideas in writing without conscious reference to English
5. to apply spontaneously the language skills he has learned to new situations
6. to understand the nature of language and that there are certain relationships between English and the foreign language
7. to appreciate the foreign culture for its own merits rather than from the standpoint of Anglo-American culture
8. to recognize the universality of human experience
9. to gain cultural and aesthetic insights for individual growth
10. to evaluate our country's relationships with French-speaking nations and to consider our mutual inter-dependence.

B. Who Should Study a Foreign Language?

1. The opportunity to study a foreign language should be open to all students. Goals should be broad enough to allow students of differing abilities and interests to move toward their potential in this area. With such scope available, then all students can sincerely be encouraged to gain the profit and enjoyment from learning another language regardless of their vocational aspirations; moreover, unlike the college-bound student, the terminal student may never have the chance for such an experience again.

2. Any student can be attracted to the foreign language curriculum when it is understood that evaluation will focus on individual effort toward reasonable aims rather than on some simple, teacher established standard of achievement.

3. Every student can achieve some degree of success in foreign language study. The fact that he has learned to understand and speak English is a definite empirical indication. We teachers may need to emphasize positively the progress made, reminding students that their mother tongue was not mastered overnight! Opportunities to use what has been learned will provide a growing sense of accomplishment for each individual as well as motivation to continue learning. Since "success breeds success," we shall need to show approval and pride in what has been learned rather than permit students to become frustrated and defeated by all they still have not mastered.

C. How Long Should a Language Be Studied

1. Length of study seems to be the chief determiner of competency in foreign language learning. Therefore, all students should be encouraged to take a longer sequence in one foreign language instead of dividing their time between two. Those with FLES experience should be counseled to continue the same foreign language in secondary school to reap greater gains from the early beginning.

2. The high school department's first objective should be to provide a minimum of four sequential years of study in at least one foreign language.

D. The Place of English in the Foreign Language Classroom

1. If the language objectives listed are accepted as valid goals, then it must follow that most of the instruction be in the foreign language. As little English as possible will be used in the beginning courses, and, as a general rule, none in the advanced courses.

2. Clarity and efficiency may at times require the use of English, especially for test instructions. English would undoubtedly be needed in discussions related to the nature of language learning; these brief sessions would probably be completed in the opening weeks of Level I and could be arranged for the end of periods so as not to break into the "cultural island" being established in the class. Although the presentation of cultural information in the foreign language is preferable, when possible, a realistic decision must be made in this regard.
E. The Place of Grammar in Foreign Language Teaching

The objectives listed previously call for the ability to communicate in the language rather than the acquisition of knowledge about the language. Grammatical generalizations are thought of as means to an end rather than as being important in and of themselves. Accordingly, a pupil's progress in the language must be evaluated in accordance with his ability to understand, speak, read, and write it rather than by his ability to talk about its structure in English. A rule of thumb would be this "Teach only that grammar which is necessary; do not assume that everything is."
Articulation

Our foreign language professional bulletins constantly stress the importance of sequential study, recommending strongly a full four-year program in the secondary school, extension downward into seventh and eighth grades as soon as feasible, and initiation of FLES to take advantage of the young child's flexible speech organs and adeptness at minicry. Then on top of this follows the admonition that the total language program must be well articulated! Most of our journals stop there to leave us teachers with the problems of development and coordination.

We have made significant progress in the Atlanta City System in the area of lengthening the foreign language sequence. Various high schools already have a four-year program with some fifth and sixth year study available to students who began learning language in lower grades. It is hoped that such offerings can be increased to provide Atlanta children with the greatest advantages possible. While this growth continues, however, all teachers need to tackle the very practical issues of articulation in order to assure the benefits that long sequence programming can provide.

The blanket statement "Take the student from where he is" may sound like an over-simplification of the articulation problem; nevertheless, that procedure is precisely what each teacher must attempt to follow. The same circumstance applies even to first-year pupils. Regardless of what grade the beginning point may be, no group of students is homogenous as to abilities, interests, or motivation! The teacher, then, cannot outline a single course of study to which students will fit; the tailoring must be in the other direction: the course needs to be fashioned to fit the students.

How is such possible with very heterogeneous grouping? The program is even more complicated by the long sequence which brings together young people in varying stages of linguistic development. Perhaps the major saving grace is for the teacher to recognize before he initiates his efforts that he will obviously have no more equalized group at the end of the quarter than at the start. In fact, if he has succeeded in reaching a common plateau, then indeed he has failed because to do so, he would definitely have pressed some children beyond their limit or would have slowed progress for others! Again, we need to remind ourselves that these conditions hold true in first-year classes as well as third or fourth year.
The necessary undertaking is to individualize the learning process as much as possible. What does that procedure involve? It means finding different approaches to certain aspects of lessons and allowing added time to try these with some students while others move into broader usage of what they learned faster. It means letting those who have caught on to some facets of the lesson help classmates in groups while you assist others in solving their difficulties or advancing their endeavors. It means evaluating on basic objectives and at the same time allowing those who are ready to do so to extend themselves into levels of work which some students will not even attempt during the quarter. It means providing many open-ended experiences, where performance is possible for all, but, not expecting all to reach the same depth.

Impossible? Not at all! Class practice promptly shows who can do what and when. We teachers are quick to diagnose; we need thereafter to take a few horizontal steps before we ask for another move in the vertical direction. Learning a language is not a straight-line operation anyway. The time to use what has been learned is more significant than cramming in the next tense, structure, or vocabulary, regardless of ability to absorb more.

Such a system provides articulation: this is articulation of the program for the student. As he moves to the next level, his teacher can help by passing along notations of what he can presently accomplish in language usage and what he has attempted instead of a single grade average. Intra-departmental discussion can be advantageous in orienting for another year's study. The student himself should be aware of his progress in accomplishing objectives and encouraged to assist the next teacher in quickly adapting to his needs. Why not? Whose business is it if it is not his own! This individual responsibility for learning is exactly what we want to develop.
Independent Study

Independent study programs lasting a quarter or more may be arranged for a student who finds himself unable to schedule one of the regular courses. Although it would be preferable, if at all possible, to have the student participating with others in the normal sequence, rather than cause him to have a gap in his language study when he would like to continue, the teacher and student might arrange a special program that would allow maintenance of language contact plus use of skills in a profitable way.

Interest, aptitudes, and achievement level of the student as well as the particular situation existing in the school need to be considered carefully by teacher and student to arrive at a plan for independent study. Agreement upon objectives for the quarter will be essential; these aims should be stated precisely in writing, more or less like a contract, so that the student will know what is expected, how progress checks will be made, and what form final evaluation of his endeavors will take.

Attention in the planning should be given especially to activities that would provide opportunities to maintain and to improve listening and speaking skills. The student should not be closeted in some nook with books, paper, and pencil. Although portions of his time may necessarily require individual effort in this manner he should have built into the course occasions for interaction with other young people and with the teacher.

Several proposals for independent study which offer potential in all language skills are listed here for consideration. These may arouse interest or stimulate development of even more ideas on the part of both teacher and student for a valuable independent study program.

1. Peer tutoring for students from less advanced classes in the school.
2. Serving as group leader and teacher's aide for more individualized activities in a less advanced class.
3. Assisting a FLES teacher and learning to direct parts of the lessons*
4. Providing seventh-grade students in a school where there is no FLES program with an introduction to foreign language learning activities.*

* For help in arranging activities, call the foreign language coordinator or the foreign language utilization teacher at WETV
5. Preparing tapes, visual aides, game adaptations, and other instructional materials, then trying them out with less advanced language students.

6. Devising a series of short culture capsules and map studies and presenting them at regular intervals to a less advanced class.

Such "quest" type activities could serve to motivate a student to develop his language abilities as he feels responsibility to others in the communicative skills. The multi-directional endeavors may indeed provide a sense of personal satisfaction beyond the completed plan of study itself.
Grouping for Student-Centered Work

Teachers are humorously accused of being the most talkative creatures on earth. Enough truth in that statement prevails to cause us some concern. We know that teacher talk is not considered the best procedure for learning; therefore, it behooves us to check the amount of time we ourselves consume in discussion while students remain silent. We can note the interaction readily enough by spot recording a class session from time to time. We shall certainly hear much repetition and question-answer response; our methodology is geared to those. But will we find opportunities when students speak without the direct stimuli from their teachers? These won't happen, at least not in French, unless we arrange class activities to provide time and flexibility.

Even lacking the ideal, individualized study packets or work units, teachers can schedule 10 to 15 minute slots several times per week to permit students to work in groups of two, three, four or more on small tasks. The change of pace and the focus on student-centered activities prove to be tremendous motivation factors in themselves, in addition to other values of the assignments. The latter can entail great variety within the range of horizontal learning, chances to apply what has been studied in original recombinations or chances to strengthen skills. Perhaps the finest rationale of all for group work is that the lockstep is broken; not everyone does the same activity at once. Then students have something different to share with colleagues, though all were together in the same class.

Skits come to mind as a splendid group project. Writing scripts, planning props or staging, and review of language with appropriate gestures: these are all valid supports for playlets; student interaction is tremendous. Although at times it may be fun to have everybody participating in skits, we teachers may oftentimes find it more appealing to have different types of activities running simultaneously, some for later class presentation, some for individual improvement.

* For most activities the teacher will need to designate the groups according to the type of assignment. In some cases only one or two groups would be working apart while the teacher would continue to practice with the remainder of the class. Although bright students may need more opportunities to perform individualized tasks, all should be provided numerous occasions for the different kinds of activities; weaker students should not constantly be doing remedial chores since they perhaps need the motivation of variety beyond the others. As often as possible, these slower students should be mixed in groups containing one or more keen individuals who then can serve as peer helpers. The teacher would vary groupings for each activity. This would produce greater student interaction in general and avoid establishment of cliques.

While one group is preparing a skit, others might be involved in activities like these:

1. Designing and preparing materials for a bulletin board on a cultural aspect, complete with French captions (Levels II, III, IV); preparing a bulletin board on the next dialog (I).

2. Preparing a short narrative in French utilizing past dictionary-page items to read to the class for comprehension and vocabulary review. This could be read completely first and then reread with blanks for members of the class to supply the key words. (II)

3. Reviewing verb forms orally in short sentences when cued by changing subjects. One who excels in this, or an A-contract student, might serve as leader. This peer teaching might be used as preparatory for a test or for a quick drill presentation for the class. Other structural items might be substituted as needed. (I,II)

4. Drawing up a dialog in English on a topic of class interest which is not covered in the book, having the teacher supply the French, and then learning the parts for class presentation with props. (End of I) This would be a welcomed opportunity for pupils who think the book's dialogs are not relevant enough for their taste.

5. Preparing a résumé of a selection and answering oral questions on it so that the whole class will not need to read that particular selection. A practice of any new words should also be given. (II)

6. Making out a practice test for use by the class on recently studied material. (I,II)

7. Writing a recombination narrative for comprehension review or reading by the class. (I,II)

8. Reviewing a reading selection by rewriting its key elements in dialog form for class presentation. (II)

9. Learning dialog lines. (I) A lead student can assist by peer teaching of others who need extra practice.
10. Practicing with a tape under the guidance of the teacher or a lead student. (I, II)
11. Transforming a dialog into a narrative. (I, II)
12. Preparing a group discussion of a reading selection so that the class will not need to read it, but asking general questions to the class afterwards for review of key points.
13. Personalizing conversation with the teacher on a theme recently studied, (I, II, III, IV) This session may provide one of the best occasions for free commenting in more than a single statement, especially if questions remain open-ended.
14. Listening to a taped story or talk and practicing making notes in French... (II, III, IV) This can be followed by group discussion or summary through use of notes.
15. Viewing a filmstrip with coordinated tape. (II, III, IV)
16. Taking a practice comprehension test from a tape. (I, II, III, IV) Other types of practice tests could be substituted as needed; the material might be presented on a handout instead of on tape.
17. Listening to taped music typical of some region. A brief commentary on the composer or selections might be provided also on tape or on a handout. (I, II, III, IV)
19. Viewing a short filmstrip (or perhaps a series of related photographs), and preparing a suitable dialog. This could then be presented to the class. (I, II, III, IV, depending on selection's potential difficulty)
20. Preparing a culture capsule with visual aids which can be offered to the class. (II, III, IV)
21. Making visual representations to accompany French proverbs for display. (I, II, III, IV)
22. Drawing a city plan, with a plaza in the middle, to be used in teaching directions and working out a sample set of directions to initiate the class practice. (I, II)
Grouping for Student-Centered Work

23. Reading aloud the roles from a short play. (III, IV)

24. Working up a group discussion on some custom or traditional observance for class presentation. Comparisons and contrasts with our way of life might also be identified. (II, III, IV)

25. Preparing and taping a newscast based on current events in the French world. (III, IV) This could be played in various classes or heard by groups.

26. Investigating the political leadership in the French-speaking world through current news magazines to provide a brief oral report. (III, IV)

27. Preparing a series of commercials with pictures of products (II, III, IV) to be announced individually during coming lessons as the teacher changes from one activity to another. This can provide great humor for the whole class.

28. Drawing up a set of items for the class to use in a game; for example, baseball, twenty questions, What's My Line? or Who am I? (II, III, IV)

29. Formulating a scene, given a collection of objects which suggest a theme. (I, II, III, IV) This can be related to the class with the visual cues or dramatized in dialog form.

30. Playing French Scrabble, Bingo, or Dominoes. (I, II, III, IV)

31. (For a musically talented group) Rehearsing and taping a medley of songs with accompaniment for class enjoyment.

32. (For students interested in dancing—two or three couples). Learning the basic steps to a popular French folk dance and rehearsing them with a record in order to demonstrate the steps for the class.

33. Preparing "sales pitches" to "sell" certain items to the class, describing the articles, their uses, their values to the "purchases", and their cost.

Obviously, such a list could be infinite in the hands of an imaginative teacher. Each of these items also has the potential of great variety in actual subject matter and approach by students; few would turn out to be alike even if all groups did them. This very fact of difference adds spice to the activity, allowing for individual pride in sharing something of self with the group and/or class.
Particular Problem: Reading in the Second-Year Class

After the lively, active, varied first-year foreign language course, why does second year often become the drop-out trap? One of the major reasons may be over-emphasis on reading. Teachers see the mass of material available and seem to feel impelled to plow through all of it. No crime would be committed if some of the selections happened to be omitted! After all, reading is supposed to receive only approximately 30% of the time with 30% used for oral work, 30% for listening comprehension, and 10% for writing.

Adherence to this time arrangement in itself can reduce the danger of too much sameness of class activity. In the past some teachers have dedicated whole periods to reading (exercises), excusing this by considering questions and answers as elements of hearing and speaking too. No matter how interesting the reading selections, this same format can only evoke boredom. Variety of treatment must be utilized or some of the reading will simply have to be skipped in favor of other activities.

Foremost to be remembered is the fact that reading at this level should not be content oriented, but should be comprehension skill oriented. The information may be both interesting and appealing; but for the student to remember the details is insignificant compared with his developing the skill of reading for general understanding.

Following up each reading selection with questions can be deadly. Why not offer variations?

1. The teacher might call out a question and have the students read silently to find the answer. Then the student who finds the answer asks the next question.

2. Groups might read different selections and offer short summaries orally for the class.

3. (From an assigned narrative) A group might devise a dialog for class presentation.

4. Groups might read different selections. Two teams might be named with a representative from each group. The teacher could ask a series of simple questions, skipping from selection to selection. A team member who read the particular selection would answer; if he failed to do so within the time limit, one in the audience who read that selection could respond, giving a half-point credit to the team of his choice.

5. Pairs of groups might read a selection, one group getting down its own questions to ask the other, which would attempt to anticipate possible questions and prepare for them. Rules could then be reversed with a second selection.

6. The teacher or a student could call out key words from a selection read by the class, having individuals make comments about the words as related to the piece, thereby together giving a short oral review of the major points.

7. Two groups might read separate selections while the teacher and class deal with another activity or reading selection. Then each group would present its material to the class in the following way:
   1. each member would give a 3 or 4 sentence summary of his segment,
   2. the class would skim that portion,
   3. the group member would repeat his paraphrase,
   4. a class member could then add a comment if he felt something important was omitted,
   5. and then the other portions would be handled similarly one by one.

8. Perhaps more valuable would be the use of some of the reading ideas or themes out of their context to inspire related but more personalized oral work or written work. This horizontal technique might also include comprehension practices prepared by the teacher or preferably by certain pupils. Such 2-to-3 minute talks would allow for varying opinions or parallel experiences, all more appealing because of the acquaintance with the live speaker.

Reading, yes! But to develop comprehension skills and as a source for variety, not for content as an end in itself.
Suggestions for Out-of-Class Activities

1. Encourage students to bring in realia. Be sure to display their goodies and comment favorably on them during their class period!

2. Assign minimal, but precise, homework lessons to lower-level classes. Do not ask students to do work that can better be handled in class. Do follow up in class the next day with activity based on any assignment. Do have extra short practices dittoed and available on various problem areas for those who request them or for whom you suggest their benefit. This procedure provides for more individualized help. (If you maintain a copy with answers, students can then check their own work.)

3. Schedule groups to prepare bulletin boards on advanced units so that students can participate in keeping their room attractive and varied, a foreign language "cultural island."

4. Maintain a section of a bulletin board for newspaper clippings, recipes, cartoon, etc. related to the foreign language world.

5. Prepare with students special displays and observances for Foreign Language Week and/or an assembly program to draw attention of the whole student body to the language program.

6. Hold periodical French club meetings to develop student leadership and cooperation through preparation of informal, colorful programs to appeal to all. If possible, separate students into a French I club and an advanced-level club so that the latter can have most of its activities in the language; also you can invite members of each group to present a highlight from their meeting at the other's session from time to time.

7. Arrange field trips for classes or club members to dine at a French restaurant, to attend a cultural event, to visit a locale about which they can converse in the language, etc.

8. Set up a tape exchange with a foreign language class in another city to stimulate interest in shared activities and student performance.

9. Establish pen pals for interested students who can then keep the class posted on their correspondence.
Suggestions for Out-of-Class Activities (continued)

10. Have students work on special projects of their own choosing (perhaps from a basic list of suggestions you provide plus their additions) which could be presented to the class at intervals during the year.
Rapport Building

Every year teachers have some classes that seem to work together better than others.

"Third period just makes my day," one will say, or another, "Sixth period is such a let-down after my wonderful fifth-period group."

What accounts for this variation? Since the teacher is the same and the subject matter is similar, our answer seems to be the students; they make the difference. Each student tends to play his own role in building class rapport. This harmonious relationship in learning is more than basic discipline and control; in fact, unless we consider those two terms in the light of students' self-discipline and self-control, they hardly fit the concept of rapport.

Can teachers really do anything to foster rapport, or is it some-think elusive which may or may not grow? An analysis of that wonderful third or fifth-period class may give clues. Probably present are conditions like this:

1. Each student feels recognized and appreciated by the others. The teacher may have arranged the class in a horseshoe seating design or a semicircle so that everyone can see and hear others with ease.

2. Students are equally free to ask questions, supply answers, or express individual opinions. The teacher has turned to each for comment at regular intervals, thereby showing sincere interest in everyone's participation, not just in his own role as leader.

3. Answers vary at times with individuals so that each feels that he is really adding something to the class. The teacher asks open-ended questions whenever possible to strengthen this aspect.

4. Humor and originality are rewarded with laughter and commendation. The teacher supplies his own share of both, approval which elicits more.

5. Mistakes are not deflating, but are considered trouble spots for added class attention. The teacher permits the whole class to participate in reviewing error correction, thereby relieving the individual making the mistake from feeling that he alone does not know. This face-saving technique reduces embarrassment and allows concentration to focus on learning.

6. Students understand why they are doing certain practices or activities and what benefits they are aiming to gain. The teacher identifies the objectives, helping the students in the self-evaluation process. He provides additional time, materials, and aid to encourage the students to reach these objectives for themselves.

7. A spirit of helpful fellowship exists. The teacher arranges time within the period for pairs or groups to work together, to help each other, and to enjoy shared efforts. By removing himself from the dominant position, the teacher allows the students to bear part of the responsibility for successful endeavors.

8. The room features different displays, representing the material being studied and the contributions by students, giving the class a feeling of belonging. The teacher has various groups prepare bulletin boards, mobiles, and table arrangements, knowing that their efforts make this their classroom.

9. Students volunteer, showing their interest and willingness to become involved. The teacher knows his students as individuals and plans situations to produce their reactions as individuals.

10. A feeling of anticipation hangs in the air. The teacher always has at least one "pink" activity in mind, something to add sparkle and color to the class session through a slightly different approach to learning, a kind of "happening" to recall pleasantly after school.

Such efforts can indeed create class rapport. Just as a smile is catching, the teacher's awareness of others and their need for identity can spread too. Those foreign language names become alive as interaction leads to acceptance of one another, then providing greater desire for communication.
Use of Electronic Classrooms

Few events appeal to a teacher more than that of having all students actively involved in learning. This condition does not exist consistently within a class period since some minds turn off or simply wander as responses from certain classmates are awaited. Lab time, however, is a different proposition. Everybody gets into the act! Each student can listen and respond every minute of the session.

Choral practice in class is valuable since the teacher can employ backward build-up to aid in developing full-sentence repetition, can pause to concentrate on difficult sounds, can slow the pace to achieve accuracy before insisting finally on normal speed. This time also is used to insure comprehension of meaning. However, after this initial work is done, the lab is the place for real learning, for gaining proper intonation and pronunciation. Extended additional choral work may lead to overconfidence and flubleness as voices blend, but the lab demands articulate practice, heard in the individual's own ears.

Also obvious is the fact that the native speaker on that tape can remain constantly a good model while even the best teacher will tire, losing some of his sparkle, under the continuing endurance test of repetition. The cue is then to shorten the teacher drills and cut on the tape. Segments can simply be replayed as needed.

Teachers sometimes seem to resent the loss of a minute or two for students to get to their headsets. This is about as ridiculous as deciding to walk five miles to work, leaving a five-thousand-dollar car in the garage because opening the garage door is a lot of trouble. That expensive electronic equipment will suffer from disuse comparable to the car. The investment of school money for technological aid must be used for the benefit of the children! What teachers think of as disruption of class routine with changes in desk arrangements may even be wholesome physical movement for young people who have already sat too long in classes!

Use of lab facilities should be planned everyday for 10 to 20 minutes for first and second-year classes. Advanced-level students will need fewer lab sessions since their pronunciation will require only occasional remedial work. They should, however, be provided use of the lab from time to time as a refresher in intonation patterns. They also can benefit from comprehension checks done by various native-speaking voices; they need the experience of hearing many speakers, not just their teacher and classmates.

Atlanta schools are fortunate in having electronic facilities available to every foreign language class for at least a part of each period. Use of the equipment will be more extensive if teachers set up an automatic half-period shift schedule rather than make week-to-week arrangements. Here is a simple time plan, for example:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Period 2</th>
<th>(10:30–11:20)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>10:30–10:55</td>
<td>Class A in lab; Class B in classroom</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10:54</td>
<td>Class B pupil gives lab teacher signal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10:55</td>
<td>Two classes exchange with students walking silently to the right to avoid confusion in the hall and entries.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10:56–11:20</td>
<td>Class B in lab; Class A in classroom.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Since having the classroom session before lab is preferable, the two teachers should rotate their half-period use of the lab at the middle of the quarter. The teacher with the lab first must prepare the day before for the lab work; he may need to use the opening minutes to refresh the students' memory too. Half the period will not be used for lab work anyway. More than about 20 minutes may even be detrimental because insufficient time would remain for other phases of the lesson and students would become weary since lab work is so intensive. No play or lackadaisical attitude can be tolerated during the lab session. The importance of the period must be impressed upon the participants.

What is most essential is that the recorded material be an integral part of the lesson. Preferably, it should be an actual accompaniment of the textbook. With extra channels on the console, the teacher can provide the type of practice needed to individuals rather than force all to respond to the same tape. Playing the same lesson to an entire class is failing to take advantage of the equipment's potential for individualizing instruction. Selection is made easier for the teacher by the short cassette segments and tapes divided into smaller units. Generally, students should not follow textbooks or other printed materials in the lab. When they do, they tend to depend on their eyes rather than their ears. If the recordings are not well arranged, however, sometimes referring to the text will be required. Extra preparation in class with difficult parts can remedy this situation.

The teacher must monitor student responses to evaluate, to encourage, to make corrections, and to diagnose common errors for further emphasis in the classroom. If the mistake made is minor, interruption may not be necessary since the student may correct himself as the drill continues; besides, the student would miss a portion of the exercise while being corrected. The student ought to be corrected immediately if continuation would establish a bad form.

Evaluating in the lab everyday should be expected. Students work more conscientiously when they realize that their efforts are significant. Although one response is indecisive, the large number considered throughout the quarter can give an accurate appraisal of oral performance. This composite evaluation should be equated with big tests because it represents a most important area of the work. The major strength of the lab facility is that it allows all students to speak simultaneously many more times than would be possible in the regular classroom. Although the teacher can mark only one person at a time, as he becomes more adept in the lab, he will find that he can hear and evaluate more responses in the lab than he could possibly manage in the classroom. Grades, by the way, should be considered from the "satisfactory" level up or down, not from perfect and down.

A seating chart is necessary. This avoids confusion on entering the electronic classroom. Students can then go promptly to their places and begin without delay. The teacher should have his material marked and ready to put on the console so that work can begin immediately. Efficiency on the teacher's part is conducive to proper procedure.

The seating chart, if divided into blocks per pupil, can double for grading as well. The scale (something like this: 0—superior, 1—good, 2—satisfactory, 3—poor, 4—unsatisfactory or no response) should be visible for rapid reference. If the teacher is neat, he can probably use one chart for a month or more. The basic outline can be mimeographed for all foreign language teachers; each can fill in names, etc. per class assignment. Class sheets can be stapled together in the left-hand corner, folded left to right for convenience, and taken to the lab with the teacher's manual or text. They must not be lost! Disturbances, or discipline problems, are lessened by planned arrangement of seating. Placing girls between boys or quiet pupils between rambunctious ones is a good idea. The arrangement need not be varied unless the teacher feels that moving a student is advisable; in such case, a simple reassignment should be made after class without fanfare. Since lab work is not designed for interaction of the students, they should not choose their seats in the lab.

Actual testing in the lab is limited. Multiple-choice comprehension tests may be the best procedure. If test items are spaced properly, students can write short answers or fill in blanks. Totally oral tests are impossible without recorders. At times, however, the teacher may want to utilize lab time for short individual conversation tests. He can then assign a lead student to the console to monitor and assist (but not to grade!), thus permitting the teacher to chat with individuals. With his questions already prepared in a list, the teacher can elicit an adequate number of responses from a student within a minute or two; during several successive days he can arrange to do his oral testing of the whole class.

Needless to say, all lab work should be done in the foreign language. Materials taped by native speakers are more suitable, but special exercises to meet particular needs can be very advantageous even though recorded by a non-native. The main point to remember is that the lab serves best to perfect through drill the items already presented in the classroom. Completely new elements should not be offered in the lab. Students should know exactly what is expected of them in advance so that they will proceed to practice with confidence and to benefit fully from the time spent.

Not to be forgotten either are the definite advantages of the lab for the teacher. He can rest his voice and listen to evaluate thoughtfully his students' oral process!
"If only we didn't have to give grades!" is the frustrated cry of many teachers. We know that some students will show up badly when compared with others in the class; then they will lose their sense of pride in what they have learned, beginning the downward journey to defeat. Our colleagues in educational psychology bluntly tell us that grades are our most vicious act.

We attempt to improve in what our schools still consider a necessary evil by being sure that we "test what we teach," that we avoid "throwing students curves" on tests. Even so, we recognize that some pupils cannot absorb or implement what has been presented at the same rate as others; given more time and practice, less pressure, they can achieve satisfactory results.

How can we remedy this condition? Here are a few thoughts for consideration:

1. Test less; evaluate more! We can discover weaknesses and strengths if we provide ample oral practice in class. Since oral work is much faster than the written form, we can give far more extensive experience with problem points before we attempt to grade performance.

2. Many short written check-ups on specific items can help students identify for themselves what points they need to concentrate on more. Then testing for credit on these can be administered when both teacher and student feel ready; no rule prevents a teacher from allowing students to take minor tests at different times, and the grade book shows quickly which quizzes are still outstanding. More flexibility in scheduling tests can provide some students with the extra time to learn; they can feel more responsibility for the study because they have some choice in the matter. This procedure fits beautifully with the idea of performance objectives, our master outline which lets students know precisely what it is they are to learn.

3. Why should we not revamp our testing system if we believe that it has been defeating to some in the past? On the upper end of the pyramid, is there any reason why we can't allow better students who can manage anything we dish out to contract for their "A's" by submitting to more complex testing?

Again, our educational psychologists remind us that challenge and competition (which should be competition against one's own potential, not others) is rewarding only to those who think they can succeed with it. Then we can let them make that choice for themselves through contracting for the more difficult assignments and tests.

4. Our tests at best meet only about .4 validity, according to experts in tests and measurements. We simply do not have the time or the experience to become very precise in this area; more time is needed for teaching and we are not willing to use it excessively for preparing scientific tests. Then knowing these things, we should not overrate our testing program! For us tests should be mainly a way of diagnosing where we need to strengthen our teaching.

5. Our aim is to keep students moving forward. If our tests only shake students' confidence, making them believe that they have learned very little, then we would be better off not to give them at all. Everyone feels that he could help a student learn more of a foreign language if the student returned for another year of it. Perhaps that fact should be foremost in our thinking so that we do not test people right out of the program.

Some Do's and Don'ts in Testing

1. Do let students know what types of items will be included on the test. Do give practice with samples in advance so that students can evaluate their own readiness.

2. Do present instructions in English unless you are absolutely sure that everyone will understand; don't permit students to become uptight for fear of doing the wrong thing.

3. Do provide many short item tests on different particular skills during the quarter, keeping the skills in proportion to your emphasis for the level.

4. Don't give numerous full-period tests, but when you do, measure all four skills and include something on culture too, whenever appropriate. Do be sure such a test is a worthy, positive experience, meriting the valuable time it consumes.

5. Don't say lines like these: "Pay attention now! This is important because we are going to have it on the test." "All right, if you don't want to pay attention, we'll just have a test on this." Don't use tests to threaten. Dependence on tests and grades as motivation lessens the value of learning per se.

6. Do begin tests with the simplest items and gradually proceed to the more difficult ones.

7. Do test what has been taught, including simple recall elements as well as rearrangements of pre-learned material.

8. Do avoid tongue-twisters and absurdities, but do deal with problem sounds and structures.

9. In setting up multiple-choice items, do include at least one distractor, two plausible but incorrect items, and only one, unambiguous, right answer.

10. Do present, when appropriate, a couple or so of examples of open-ended questions to allow for at least some individuality.

11. Do help students to feel a sense of personal responsibility for their own work.

12. And do smile and look relaxed! Don't transfer tension by appearing so dead serious about your test! This won't be your last chance to provide a test or theirs to take one.

Suggestions on How to Use a Film

1. Good film utilization requires prior activities
   a. Difficult words and expressions are thoroughly drilled in advance, preferably with the help of visual aids such as slides, overhead transparencies, pictures or filmstrips. (In some cases the film producer makes a tape available for this purpose including not only the sound track but supportive drill material.) Essential structures should be drilled for rapid and easy student recognition; this will tend to minimize student discouragement as the class views the film and listens to the sound track.

b. The content of the film can be dealt with in advance by drawing the student's attention to the main points of interest. This may be done by presenting the highlights of the film through a series of appropriate questions and answers. Some films can be used several times by drawing attention of different areas of content during each showing. Also, by alerting the students in advance to certain aspects of the foreign culture, you can be assured that they will see things that they otherwise would miss. (For example, in a luncheon scene you may point out that the fork is held in the left hand, a fact which otherwise might not be noticed.)

2. Techniques for presenting the film are these:
   a. Make certain that maximum room darkening is achieved.
   b. Have as large a screen as possible available.
   c. Obtain the best possible quality of loud speakers. (Best results can be achieved by having large, high quality loud speakers located in front near the screen. Also, in many language laboratories it is possible to jack the sound track in through the console so that the students may hear through their headsets while turning down the volume of the student microphone. This provides maximum quality of sound while minimizing the machine noise.) Ideally, all motion pictures would be projected through a glass partition so that the noise of the projector would be reduced to a minimum.
   d. Short films can be shown twice in succession to enable the students to verify the impressions gained during the first showing.

3. Activities which may follow the showing of a foreign language film are:
   a. The teacher may administer a short quiz using true-false, matching, or multiple-choice questions.
   b. The film may be run with switch on silent and the students may be asked to take brief notes in the foreign language describing some of the main impressions which the film conveys.
   c. The film may be run with the switch on silent and students may be asked to provide a narration which they record on tape. (Naturally this requires a laboratory with student recorders in all positions.)
   d. The students may be asked to write a short composition in response to a series of questions which the teacher asks orally.
   e. With films on the foreign culture and way of life, students may be asked to list behaviors which contrast sharply with those with which they are familiar in the American culture.
   f. The students may be asked to write a brief summarization of the storyline or content of the film.

NOTE: The type of follow-up which is intended should be carefully explained to the student before work with the film is begun. It should be strongly emphasized that the film is an integral part of his instruction and not "a day off at the movies." The teacher should have decided very specifically what the film is supposed to accomplish and should communicate this fact to the students. Ordinarily, a film should have one or two main purposes. According to the nature of the film, the focus may be any one of the following: (1) to study the customs of the people, (2) to stimulate appreciation of people whose language is being studied, (3) to consider the effect of geography on the social and economic conditions of the people, (4) to provide listening practice, (5) to build new vocabulary or to reinforce prelearned vocabulary items, (6) to present new structures or to reinforce prelearned structures, and (7) to stimulate other activities requiring active use of the language, such as speaking or writing exercises.

Generally, the teacher should not try to combine all of these objectives in one film. It would be much better to select a few of the activities which are most appropriate for a given film. Most important, the student should know in advance on which objectives the teacher has decided to focus.

4. Films with English sound track can be used as follows:
   a. The film can be viewed first with the English commentary.
   b. The teacher can then show the film silently supplying a foreign language commentary.
   c. In advanced courses students can be supplied with basic vocabulary and can create their own commentaries which, in some cases, can be taped and played back in coordination with the film showing.

5. Basic considerations for using all films are these:
   a. All films should be previewed in advance by a teacher to determine suitability and manner of utilization. (A teacher in the area of business education once ordered a film on filing for her girls in an office practice class only to find that the film was intended for industrial arts and showed the techniques of using different files for metal and wood.)
   b. Films which reinforce ethnocentric prejudices should be avoided.
      (Note: Many films are available from both the city and the state audio-visual departments. Consult catalogues. Additionally, a list of films is included in the appendix.)
Accountability and Foreign Language Teaching

Much has been said and written about accountability in recent educational programs. The pro's and con's of its implementation will continue to be debated all the way from the national convention platforms to the local teachers' lounges. Even through the maze of verbiage, we foreign language teachers can sift pertinent philosophy to apply to our own endeavors.

1. First, we recognize that our prime responsibility is to our students. Although foreign language is our field, the subject matter itself has to be secondary to the individual's development via this medium.

2. Certainly we intend to see that every student has a more positive attitude toward foreign language after studying it than he had before the opportunity to attend our classes!

3. "Every kid a winner" can be the case when we emphasize individual progress instead of applying normal curve tactics or insisting on unrealistic goals.

4. Perhaps we in our foreign language frame of reference can find accountability more tenable than can some other curriculum areas since we can identify rather precisely the skills we are attempting to develop. We can, through our performance objectives, which are a kind of criterion base for evaluation, determine specific results in the learning process.

5. We can diagnose weakness and "recycle" the material; our methodology calls for regular reentry.

6. With our electronic classroom equipment, we can arrange for extensive individualized practice. The lab lessons can be geared to individual needs, allowing remedial work for some, horizontal learning for some, and even new or advanced work for those who demonstrate readiness.

7. By assigning different activities to small groups, we can avoid too much teacher talk and permit more student action. Such work we have intended to do anyway to meet our reinforcement and recombination needs. At the same time we can see that these assignments fit demands for individualization plus building in opportunities for peer teaching.
Accountability and Foreign Language Teaching (continued)

8. When the accountability experts speak of the fact that all testing does not have to be with pencil and paper, we emit a resounding "amen" because we are accustomed to evaluating oral responses. This, however, is a reminder to us not to overrate written work, but to see that our grades reflect our audio-lingual emphasis parallel to our classwork and to our guide's flowchart on skill development rationally per level.

9. We may feel qualms at saying "If the student does not learn, the teacher fails the course," but we do utilize a variety of techniques to accomplish our task of facilitating the learning. We even employ specific techniques to avoid a student's embarrassment, to supply many correct answers giving him additional means for catching on!

10. Relevance is one of our strong points. Our dialogs deal with current topics suitable to the maturity and interests of our pupils. Readings include variety. Perhaps we need to allow more students' selection to assure their involvement and to provide more personalization even if that forces us to skip some stories; nevertheless, much material is available to us to permit a high degree of relevance.

We can even provide those educational "happenings" which Dr. Leon Lessinger, the father of accountability, includes to insure aesthetic growth beyond all the audited objectives. Our inviting native speakers to visit class gives youngsters the language for real, complete with cultural moves and gestures. Field trips to French restaurants or to programs by artists add color and dimension. Yet we consider these only basic essentials in our efforts toward cultural awareness.

This enumeration shows that we foreign language teachers can afford to stick our necks out and to hold ourselves accountable. We have the chief ingredients for success. Our program is already developed consistently; we just need to focus our attention more on what is resulting from the student's standpoint. In the final analysis, we agree that it's their performance that counts!

An Outline for Integrating Afro-French Literature and Culture in the High School Curriculum

Using the current guide for teaching French in the public schools of Atlanta, one can easily and effectively integrate Afro-French literature and culture into the high school French curriculum at the following levels:

Intermediate French A

Objective: (to objectives listed under Intermediate French A add:)

13) to locate on a globe or map of the world those countries and territories of Africa and of the West Indies where French is spoken.

Approach

After the students are able to locate France on a map and are familiar with it as a geographical unit, the teacher introduces them to those countries and territories of Africa and the West Indies where French is the official language.

Aids and Techniques

At this level the teacher makes use of specially selected visuals—slides, post cards, posters, filmstrips, transparencies; a film on the geography of Africa, and a map or globe that clearly indicates the political divisions of Africa and the West Indies. These should be in French if possible. In selecting visuals to be used in class the teacher should avoid the exotic and bizarre. The teacher will need to have ready access to the following projectors:

- overhead projector
- slide projector
- filmstrip projector
- movie projector

Afro-French songs and recordings may be used to stimulate interest.

Intermediate French B: (to objectives listed under Intermediate French A add:)

Objective

15) to learn the capital cities and important rivers and seaports of French-speaking countries of Africa and of the West Indies.
Intermediate French C

Objective: (Under objectives already listed for the course see)
2) to read with more facility in understanding

Approach

Now that the students have been introduced to the geographical and political dimensions of francophone Africa and the West Indies, the teacher guides them in reading simple, short narratives or folktales and poems selected especially for their interest for students of this age group. Attention is paid to cultural similarities and differences—to those traits that are typically African, names of people, places, plants, animals. The teacher makes use of simple Afro-French songs, recordings, and visuals to supplement the works read.

Aids and Techniques

Adequate supply of all works to be read. These should be discussed in the target language rather than translated into English. At this level films involving people may be shown for the purpose of providing an opportunity for the students to see and hear Africans and West Indians actually speaking French. Moreover they will be able to see Afro-French "culture" come alive. The film, "L'arrivée d'Elisabeth" produced by Scholastic Magazines is one example of a film showing an African using French as a native speaker.

Intermediate French D

Objective: (Under objectives already listed for the course see)
2) to read longer selections with more facility in understanding
Approach

The teacher guides the students in a more systematic study of longer narratives, poems, and essays written by French-speaking Blacks which will give them a deeper understanding and appreciation of the civilization and culture of francophone Africa and the West Indies. These readings will include selections on customs, geography, family life, black heroes, music and dance, art, and, perhaps, the learning of African proverbs.

Intermediate French E

Objectives: (Under objectives already listed for the course see)
2 thru 9

Approach

dame as Intermediate French D using longer and more difficult selections.

Recordings of African music and brief talks by native lecturers and scholars are utilized to continue to improve the student's audio comprehension.

Intermediate French F

Objectives: (Under objectives already listed for the course see)
1 thru 9

Approach

The teacher guides the students in reading a complete novel or a play and leads them in discussions based on their reading. These activities provide opportunities for continued improvement of the students' fluency in French. Also, native speakers may be invited to speak to the class on customs and institutions of their country.

Approach

Same as French 408
Course. Number- 361010

Beginning French A

Description of Course:

A course to begin the development of the skills of understanding and speaking French. Minimal attention is given to reading and writing. The language skills are developed through vocabulary and structures related to the following topics: names, friends and family, addresses, salutations, and introductions.

Administrative Requirements:

1) A maximum of 30 students - 25 recommended
2) An electronic classroom with 30 positions highly recommended
3) A tape recorder in the classroom
4) A map of France in the classroom; access to a world map and a globe
5) Access to a record player, film and filmstrip projector, and other audio-visual aids
6) Sufficient number of textbooks for the students
7) Appropriate recorded tapes and visual aids for the teacher
8) Daily classes
9) Student practice records recommended

Course recommended for any student who expresses an interest in and a desire to learn French.
Beginning French A

Objectives of Course

The student is able:

1) to discriminate the sounds of French audially

2) to reproduce the sounds of French adequately

3) to imitate native French intonation pattern

4) to manipulate orally French language patterns related to topics studied
   A. to make required changes in structure in pattern practices
   B. to respond appropriately to questions
   C. to ask directed questions

5) to recognize visually selected sentences mastered orally

6) to read aloud a few selected sentences mastered orally

7) to locate on a map countries where French is spoken

8) to recognize that social customs and courtesies are different in various countries

9) to identify appropriate ways of learning a second language

10) On pages T4 through T8 of the Introduction to the Teachers' Manual Performance Objectives are given for each component of Ecouter et Parler, 1968 edition. These should be carefully studied and can serve as a guide for objectives for specific lessons.

Suggested Content

Phonology, Morphology, Syntax, Vocabulary, and Culture as outlined on the following pages

From Basic text Ecouter et Parler - H. R. & W. Units P - 3 (1968 edition) and other resources and materials.
Beginning French A

Suggested Resources, Materials.

Media, Methods, Activities

3) Reinforce the learning of the Basic Dialogue Sentence by using the corresponding Question & Answer exercises and pattern practice drills. Use the factual questions suggested in Holt in the conversation section as an extension of the B.D.S.

4) Bring in as many Audio-Visual materials as possible to help stimulate learning especially if Holt dialogue posters are not available.

5) Books should not be introduced until after the pre-reading period (lesson 3).

6) As a framework for lesson plans the suggested order might include the following patterns: Warmup (This would include materials presented in previous class period) Presentation of New Material, Review (This would include new material) Recapitulation, Supplementary (This would allow time to introduce outside cultural notes of interest or short filmstrips, research study, classroom discussion, etc.)

7) Teacher should serve as a model for student imitation. Taped version is introduced to re-enforce teachers model and to add to the listening comprehension.

8) Refer to the teacher's manual of the Holt series for a complete listing of suggestions in methodology.

9) Use world map to point out places French is spoken.

10) Demonstrate French forms of greetings, handshake, etc.

11) Explain concept of "tu" and "vous."

12) Have students give reports in English on various aspects of French countries, people, or life; make varied resources available.

Word order differs from English especially in questions and with adjectives and pronouns. In spoken and written form, words cultural items are an integral part of a language. To communicate in that language, one must grasp the meaning, isolated or in context, without conscious cultural forms. To speak the language correctly also means to use culturally acceptable forms. Languages cannot be equated word for word.

Suggestions for Evaluation
(=Beginning French B)

Units 4-8 (Revised)
Units 6-10 (1961 ed.)

I. To reproduce the sounds of French accurately.

A. Given three sentences spoken by a native on tape, the student is able to imitate the sentences with 85% accuracy in pronunciation of the critical phonemes.

Examples:
1. Peut-être. Elle ne marche pas très bien.
2. Ta montre doit retarder un peu.
3. As-tu déjeuné de bonne heure ce matin?

B. Given three sentences spoken by a native on tape, containing the unaspirated p, t, and k sounds, the student is able to reproduce these sounds with accuracy.

Examples:
1. Quelle chance! Pas de travail demain!
2. Que je suis bête!
3. Tiens! Je n'ai pas de couteau!

II. To imitate native French intonation patterns.

A. Given on tape four sentences (containing known lexical items) spoken by a native, the student is able to imitate with accuracy the following patterns of intonation.

1. Declarative pattern
2. Exclamatory pattern
3. Rising interrogative pattern (anticipates a yes—no answer)
4. Falling interrogative pattern

Examples:
1. Je l'avais, complètement oublié.
2. Je n'ai pas de chance!
3. Tu es libre ce soir?
4. A quelle heure vas tu au cinéma ce soir?

III. To manipulate orally French language patterns studied.

A. To make required changes in structure in pattern practices

1. Given 15 sentences with the verbs aller, déjeuner, avoir in the passe compose, the student is able to make appropriate changes in sentences in which the subject varies. (80% accuracy)
2) Given 20 sentences containing the irregular verbs: venir, prendre, devoir, savoir, croire, plaire, and the present form of "il faut que", the student is able to make appropriate changes in sentences in which the subject varies. (85% accuracy)

3) Given 10 sentences containing verbs with complementary infinitive, the student is able to make appropriate changes in sentences in which the infinitive varies. (85% accuracy)

4) Given 15 sentences with the verbs: avoir, être, aller, and er verbs in the Imperfect Tense, the student is able to make appropriate changes in sentences in which the subject varies. (85% accuracy)

5) Given 10 sentences with er verbs already studied in the pluperfect tense, the student is able to make appropriate changes in sentences when given a new subject. (85% accuracy)

6) Given 10 sentences using the verb faire in the conditional tense, the student can make appropriate changes with 85% accuracy in sentences when given a new subject.

7) Given 20 oral sentences using indirect object pronouns, or possessive pronouns or, y and en, the student is able to repeat (correctly) the sentences with the appropriate cued changes within 20 seconds.

B. To respond appropriately to questions.

Given 10 questions based on practiced materials, the student is able to give an appropriate response in grammatically correct French within 20 seconds. (Eight out of ten is required)

C. To ask directed questions.

Given direction in French to ask five (5) questions, the student is able to ask four (4) out of five (5) without any errors.

IV. To recognize visually selected sentences mastered orally.

Given five (5) pairs of similar sentences taken from dialogs studied, the student is able to identify the one which represents the French sentence that is spoken. (85% accuracy)

V. To read aloud selected sentences.

Given five (5) French sentences, the student is able to read the critical graphemes with 85% accuracy.

VI. To reproduce in written form selected sentences learned orally.

Given 10 sentences for dictation, the student is able to demonstrate his ability to write selected sentences learned orally with 85% accuracy.
VII. To manipulate structures in written exercises.

Given 10 written sentences cued in French, the student is able to rewrite these sentences, making the necessary structural changes.

VIII. To respond accurately in written form to questions based on dialogues.

Given 5 factual questions based on the dialogues studied, the student is able to identify and respond accurately in written form to the questions with 90% accuracy.

IX. To comprehend short, connected, oral or written prose based on learned material.

Given a paragraph in French from dialogues studied, the student is able to comprehend in oral or written form with 85% accuracy.

X. To list some social customs and courtesies of French people which are different from his own.

Following a class discussion of the topics listed below the student is able to list five different social customs and courtesies of the French people as compared to those of his own culture.

NOTE: These will vary from student to student depending on his readings, personal experiences, newspapers, radio and TV.

Examples:

1. French school day and year
2. Twenty-four hour clock
3. Typical foods and table manners
4. French Christmas Customs
5. Telephone and conversational differences.

XI. To recognize that some social customs and courtesies of French people are similar to those of his own culture.

Given oral and written reports using appropriate audio-visual aids based on the social customs and courtesies presented in the units studied, the student should be able to give or write comments showing that he understands that social customs and courtesies of French people are similar to those of his own culture.
XII. To accept complete structures as conveying meaning without consciously analyzing these structures.

Given 10 multiple choice questions, the student is able to choose the appropriate answer. Timing on this item should be such that student would be discouraged from consciously analyzing structures.

XIII. To identify several evidences of the presence of French-speaking people in American life or world news.

When directed (requested) to show evidences of the presence of French-speaking people in American life or world news, the student will be able to do the following:

a) Write a short English paragraph concerning evidence of French culture observed on field trips - movies, plays, exhibits, art, etc.

b) Prepare bulletin board displays on French news articles.

c) Keep a notebook of news items on France on French-speaking people from newspapers or magazines.

A. Given a Listening-Comprehension test taped by a native speaker which includes all the sounds studied (10 oral questions), the student will be able to circle the test answer which is most appropriate.

B. Given 10 oral questions based on practiced materials, the student will be able to answer questions with complete accuracy and control (proper liaison, elision, pronunciation, correct intonation, etc.)

C. Given 5 questions based on a "Narrative Paraphrase," the student will be able to respond correctly with a "short answer" within 20 seconds. (4 out of 5)

II. To manipulate orally French language patterns studied.

A. To make required changes in structure in pattern practices.

1. Given 10 sentences involving the use of the Passé Composé (verbs conjugated with avoir or être), the student will be able to make appropriate changes in sentences in which the subject varies. (85% accuracy)

2. Given 10 sentences involving contrast between the Imperfect and Passé Composé (Past Indefinite), the student will be able to choose the correct tense with 85% accuracy.

3. Given 10 sentences using the Conditional Tense of the verbs pouvoir, devoir, vouloir, aimer, the student will be able to make appropriate changes with 85% accuracy in sentences when given a new subject.

4. Given 10 sentences using the Present Subjunctive of être and "ler, the student will be able to make appropriate changes when the subject varies. (85% accuracy)

5. Given oral sentences using Interrogative Pronouns and the Relative Pronouns ce/qui and ce que, the student will be able to make the appropriate changes when cued. (85% accuracy)

B. To respond appropriately to questions.

Given 10 questions based on practiced material, the student will be able to give the appropriate answer. (Question-Answer Drills) with 85% accuracy.
C. To ask directed questions.

Given the direction to ask five questions, the student will be able to ask four out of five questions without errors.

D. To recombine, with more frequency and ease, cumulative learned structures and vocabulary in conversation.

Given a subject selected from "Reports B" the student should be able to converse freely without making glaring mistakes.

III. To recognize visually sentences mastered orally.

Given 10 pairs of similar sentences spoken in French, the student should be able to identify the one which represents the French sentence which he has heard. (85% accuracy)

IV. To read aloud sentences mastered orally.

Given 5 sentences from dialogues studied, the student should be able to read correctly the critical phonemes with 85% accuracy.

V. To reproduce in written form sentences learned orally.

Given a dictation consisting of 10 sentences, the student should be able to write the lines with 90% accuracy.

VI. To manipulate structures in written exercises.

A. Given 10 sentences written in the Present Tense, the student should be able to rewrite the sentences in the Passé Composé. (85% accuracy)

B. Given 10 sentences written in the Passé Composé Tense, the student is able to rewrite the sentences in the Imperfect Tense with 85% accuracy.

C. Given 10 sentences (with two alternatives for each sentence) using the verbs: pouvoir, devoir, vouloir, aimer in the Conditional Tense, the student should be able to write the appropriate verb form which "fits" the rest of the sentence with 85% accuracy.

D. Given five sentences cued in French using the Present Subjunctive of être and aller, the student should be able to rewrite the sentences with correct spelling of the forms. (85% accuracy)

E. Given 5 sentences dictated on a tape by a native using the relative pronoun ce qui (subject) contrasting with ce que (direct object), the student should be able to use the correct pronoun with 85% accuracy.
VII. To respond accurately in written form to questions based on dialogues.

Given 10 written questions based on the dialogues studied, the student should be able to write the answers to the questions with acceptable punctuation and spelling. (85% accuracy)

VIII. To write somewhat longer, more complex, structured paragraphs.

A. Given a picture correlated with the topic of the unit, the student should be able to produce in writing, a paragraph composed of five lines recombining earlier structures and vocabulary with more complex structures. (85% accuracy)

B. Given a subject (selected from "Topics for Reports" or "Reports B" - Revised edition), the student should be able to prepare a written report based on full sentence control of spelling and punctuation. (85% accuracy)

IX. To read and comprehend prose selections with some unfamiliar words understood from context.

Given five (5) oral questions based on prose selections, the student is able to answer the questions with 85% accuracy.

X. To locate on a map France and the surrounding countries.

Given a map with each country numbered, the student will be able to write the name of each country with the appropriate number.

XI. To locate on a map major cities of France.

Given a blank map of France, the student will be able to designate the location of the major cities, and spell correctly the names of each city.

XII. To name several geographical differences that exist within France.

A. Given a filmstrip or film which shows the regional differences of France, the student should be able to name several of these differences.

Suggested Resources

"A Year in France" ("Une Année En France") Holt Series
Je Parle Français - Encyclopaedia Britannica

B. Given a lecture (in English) with follow-up slides or filmstrips pointing out the geographical differences within France, the student is able to identify in a multiple choice type test these differences within the provinces and departments of France.
XIII. To list several human needs common to all people regardless of nationality or locale.

Having discussed orally the following topics: a) geographical differences within France, b) mobility in a big city, c) summer recreation and diversions, d) illnesses, e) courtesy patterns, f) French holidays, the student is able to list a reasonable number of human needs common to all people.

XIV. To recognize that many English words show the influence of the French language.

The student will be able to list ten English words which are cognates of French words he has studied.

French magazines, readers, pamphlets

*See appendix for specific references

Methods, Activities:

1) The Introduction "The First Day in Class" in the teacher's manual should be considered carefully by the teacher (pages XVII - XXIV)

2) Teacher's edition of En Las Americas has some helpful suggestions for making the transition into further development of the skills of reading and writing. This transition should be thorough, as it will be the foundation for expanding the skills.

3) The teacher might give the general plan of the class to the students for each new conversation:
   - Ex: 1) Selected Dictionary Entries - present and practice
     - The Conversation (Introduction with picture, tape, display card of Chamonix, reading oral and silent)
     - The Pronunciation Sentence (presentation and practice)
   - 4) Narration Orale and Substitution Practice
   - 5) Idiom Practice (present)
   - 6) Narration Ecrite

4) Games "Attention" and "Dictionary Bee" can be used to enhance learning Dictionary Entries.

5) The teacher should encourage the students to use as many of the "Useful expressions" as possible.

6) The teacher should be well acquainted with the change in procedures from oral reading to silent reading. The change should be gradual.

Suggested Procedure:
   - Chapter One could be presented as follows:
     - Read conversations orally after "parts" have been assigned. Students are cautioned to read in a manner which demonstrates that the reader comprehends and the thoughts are conveyed to the listeners.
Intermediate French B

Suggested Resources, Materials, Media, Methods, Activities

7) Extra questions on the conversations are given on pages 267 - 271 of Teacher's Manual.

8) Filmstrip "Paris in the Spring" or any other based on the capitol city from "Une Annee en France" are helpful.

1) River of Counts and Kings - The Loire - June 1966, Vol 129, No. 6
2) France Meets the Sea in Brittany - April 1965, Vol 127, No. 4
3) L'Ile de la Cite, Birthplace of Paris - May 1968, Vol. 135, No. 5

*See appendix for specific references

Methods, Activities:

1) Irregular verbs which are suggested periodically in the teachers' manual should not be overlooked.
2) Pronunciation Practices are longer than before, and may sometimes be used (as may idioms and grammar exercises) for dictées Résumés, too.
3) Questions in "Narration Ecrite" and "Compte Rendu" sections are more easily dealt with if answered first orally.
4) Some portions of "La Vie Journaliere" can be memorized and presented to class.
5) "Supplementary Conversation Practice" in back of manual is good

Note: See suggested lesson plans

Suggested Procedure:

1) Chapter Seven
   EBF - No. 38 - 42 - Normandy history - Architecture, Art
   AIM Level II - p. 48, Unit 15 - Reflexives, present tense and past
2) Chapter Eight - Culture Chapter
   Emphasis should be on geography here, for many things which appear are presented again later. The Atlas is very important. There are filmstrips to accompany each of the eight readings.
   Supplementary grammar practice in AIM, Level II, on direct and indirect object pronouns, is good.
3) Chapter Nine - Reflexive verbs:
   Picture, page 3, in first Petit Dictionnaire is good here.

Methods, Activities

1) Emphasis should be placed on more independent use of the reading and writing skills. Reading selections may be expanded to allow for individual interest and ability. Development of oral fluency should be continued through conversation, discussion, and formal presentation.

2) Oral reports may be given on selections read.

3) Student-directed discussion of selections read as a class, or presentation and question-answer sessions on individual readings.

4) Résumés may be given orally or in composition form.

5) Review of basic grammatical structures as they occur in readings. Oral drills and written exercises.

6) Develop skill in vocabulary-building techniques and various approaches to reading selections (some are read for general comprehension only; others for more detailed information or facts.)

Suggestions for Evaluation
"French Politics and Professions"

The student is able:

1) to follow conversation, class discussion, or short lecture in French

   Given 10 questions based on a 10 minute lecture, conversation or discussion, the student is able to respond appropriately with 80% accuracy in oral or written French.

2) to give a short, planned talk on a chosen topic in French

   Given a topic, the student is able to prepare a 10 minute talk in correct French and test questions to which his fellow students can respond with 80% accuracy.

3) to contribute to class discussion

   Given a 20 minute, planned class discussion, the student must make an appropriate contribution at least 2 or 3 times in acceptable French.

4) to read easily for comprehension

   Given a paragraph of about 10 sentences, the student is able to summarize in appropriate oral or written French the central theme of the paragraph, or answer questions with 80% accuracy in appropriate oral or written French.

5) to prepare in and out of class a written summary or report, with access to needed materials

   Given selected topics the student is able to write a report of 2 pages in length in appropriate French with not more than 3 serious errors.

6) to identify various trades and professions and their inter-relationship within French social structure.

   Student will be able to write a theme in appropriate French or make appropriate contributions in acceptable French to a class discussion on why the French place their values on certain occupations. What are these occupations and what do they tell us about French character?

7) to compare and contrast the structure and administration of the French government with that of the U.S.

   Students are able to report in appropriate oral or written French on the basic aspects of the French governmental structure with a view to the history of republican government in France. Would the 5th republic have survived without DeGaulle? Will it survive with Pompidou?

Foreign language departments utilizing audio-lingual materials and methodology can avoid much confusion and ill-advised criticism by sending an introductory letter to parents of first-year pupils during the opening weeks of school.

Offered here is a sample of the type of letter, which may be sent home with the student. It may be modified as desired.

Dear Parent:

We are delighted to welcome your youngsters to the study of one of the most exciting courses in our curriculum. The foreign language program at __________________ High School is much improved over what you and I were able to study back when we were in school. We read, conjugated, and translated. Your youngster will have the opportunity to accomplish much more than that.

Today’s __________________ (language) program is made to meet today’s needs. __________________ High School is proud to be among those forward looking schools in Georgia which have changed to the new state-recommended foreign language curriculum. We have adopted audio-lingual materials and teaching techniques. Our objectives are to develop these language skills in this order: understanding, speaking, reading and writing.

During the first year we shall spend well over half of our class time developing the first two skills. The purpose is to establish the new sound system. Our students must learn to pronounce the words and phrases in the second language, not to say them with English sounds. To accomplish this goal, much practice with careful listening and repetition will be necessary. Encourage your youngster to give his full attention and effort to this drill work because outside of class he probably will not have much opportunity to hear good __________________ (language).

Your youngster will actually come home speaking ______ (language). He should be able to greet you and make a few comments in well-pronounced ______ (language) even during the first week. However, don’t ask him "What’s the word for fork?" or "How do you say 'I like steak'". He can’t say what we have not studied; he can’t pull ______ (language) out of the air. He can’t learn everything at once, and would become frustrated if he could not say what you wanted. Do let him use the phrases he has learned. Be enthusiastic and interested. This practice speaking at home can help solidify the learning.

For the first several weeks we shall not give homework from the text. We do not want the students to see __________________ (language).
until the new sound system is set. If they try to read too early, it would sound like [Language] (“Spenglish” or “Frenglish,” etc.) Thus homework during this period will take other forms.

After about a month your youngster should indeed bring his [Language] book home each night. He will need to practice saying aloud his assignment; also he will read the material and learn to write it. He should spend at least 30 minutes on his lesson each night: a 15-minute period in the afternoon or early evening and another 15-minute period later or in the morning before school. Mastering a foreign language takes daily study.

In class the students will be graded on their oral work every day and will have numerous short quizzes plus regular unit tests. Thus home study will make a big difference. It is essential to keep up. If one gets behind, he must then work twice as hard to catch up. Absences will hurt. The student will have to double his efforts, practice after school in the electronic classroom, and check with the teacher on any difficulties.

By the way, our electronic classroom is a great asset in the study of [Language]. Your youngster can hear native speakers on the audio tapes and use them for a model. Thus the chances are that [Language] will be a course in success.

We hope that your youngster will enjoy our program and will continue his study throughout high school. Four years of [Language] will be necessary to develop proficiency in the language. It is certainly better to have four years of only one modern language than two years each of two different modern languages. We spent quite a number of years learning English; real bilingualism will take time. However, your youngster’s knowledge of a foreign language will open up to him many vocational opportunities, as well as an understanding of people of another culture. Let’s make this a fine beginning.
