In the Continuous Progress school, the child progresses as rapidly as his development permits. He is not passed or failed at the end of the year. Instead, his program is continuous. He begins each fall where he left off in the spring.

Organization

Continuous Progress refers to a method of organization of a school by which pupils are allowed to progress through levels, or groups of skills, at their own individual rates. Each pupil covers as much of an appropriate curriculum as he can during the year. At the beginning of the next term he picks up where he left off and, again, works at his own speed. No grade level is attached to the work. There are no promotions and no rejections. A slow learner may take four years to cover the work which the average pupil does in three, but he does not repeat work as he would if he were held back a year under the graded system. The academically-talented pupil may complete the curriculum faster than he would in a graded school, but he does not "skip" any material. The faster learner can be led to deeper and more enriched areas of learning. Thus, each child gains the maximum of instruction and opportunities for expression and personal assistance.

The term "level," as used in the Continuous Progress Plan, indicates a specific state of development. A change in class placement may be made whenever it becomes apparent that it is to the advantage of the child. A change is made gradually by permitting the pupil to visit his new class for short periods until it is obvious that he can make the transition without difficulty. Very rarely does a child change teachers more often than once each school year.

The levels through which children grow have been established and developed by the staff of our school after a careful study of our reading program and other subjects. In the beginning, pupils are placed on the basis of reading readiness. Later on, placement of pupils is based on their level of attainment in mathematics also. They progress through succeeding levels on the basis of achievement and mastery of skills. Levels have no time limit and are very flexible. A child has completed a level when, on the basis of teacher judgment supplemented by special tests, he has mastered the skills for this level.

The levels for reading for what formerly was Grade 1 are:

- Level 1: Readiness
- Level 2: Primer
- Level 3: Primer
- Level 4: First reader

Within each of these levels are groups of carefully defined skills which must be mastered.

6. A Good Bilingual Program develops from the child's environment even though the environment of the English-speaking and Spanish-speaking children is different.

Following are a few of the most important principles of a good program.

a. It provides many opportunities for social adjustment. Since most young children are individualists, they must learn through experience to share, take turns, and to plan and act with individuals and groups. For example, the Level I child may learn through experiences in sharing toys, and educational games. Level I and Level II children may adjust to a most important developmental task of taking turns. This may be done through child leadership of groups or by serving as a personal helper. The young child must learn to interact with his peer group. Teachers must be cognizant of the fact that each human being derives from his experiences those meanings that are uniquely his--learnings that are his own. The experiences must be organized through time and consequently achieve meaning.

b. It develops from the immediate environment of the child, since his environment points up and emphasizes the child's interest. The human being learns with his total organism in interaction with his total environment. So the child is made comfortable with learnings associated with his environment. For example, the child's math facts may be based on family size, times of family activities, and family purchasing power.

c. It allows ample time and adequate opportunities for children to express themselves freely through many media. The young child likes to work with things, he likes to get his hands in water, to paint with his fingers or with brushes, to pound nails into wood, to play "dress up", to work with clay, and to build with blocks.

d. It provides opportunities for the child to use his whole body in proper activities. He likes to use his voice in talking, singing, laughter, and dramatizing. He needs to engage in dancing and rhythmic activities. He needs to engage in varied physical activities that will insure proper muscular development and total body balancing. A proper balance between vigorous and quiet activities should be maintained.

e. It utilizes the experiences of children to build firmly for later experiences. It provides experiences which build foundations for formal subject matter. Active involvement in the learning process causes children to form concepts.

Concepts become ideas which help the child to further extend understandings, gain new knowledge, and comprehend more readily. By using a logical step by step approach the children will learn and understand the basic concepts necessary for success in their exposure to reading as they continue their total school career.

7. It considers the interests and needs of parents as well as interests and needs of children. Parent involvement is an essential in a bilingual program. Provision should be made in the teachers' professional load for parents' meetings, conferences with parents, and for frequent home visits. A detailed explanation of this point is found in the Parental-School-Community Involvement and Parent Education Component in this proposal.

7. The Curriculum Guidelines of a bilingual program are not organized into a rigid schedule for time allotments with separate periods for language arts, math activities, and science. Rather, the learning skills will be acquired in different situations, and groups so that general movement of the child from group to group may be achieved. Since the classroom teaching staff will move from group to group throughout the classroom, and since the grouping of students will be highly flexible, allowances will be made for small for small group, large group, and individually supervised activities. Some groups will have the full attention of the Cult staff members while other groups will be maintained by the instructional materials, by teacher aides and models. In all learning centers, activities requiring spoken or written language will permit and encourage instruction concurrently in English and in Spanish.
Bilingual language development will be a constant factor in each confrontation between pupils and teachers as they model, elaborate, extend, and reinforce language. Every effort will be made to stimulate the pupil's efforts to communicate and to reinforce him when he does make the attempt. Teachers and teacher aides will use every teaching situation to increase and extend the vocabulary of the students.

Example:

If someone in a car should ask you to ride, be polite, but walk away and do not get inside.

is my friend. Will you be my friend too?

To Market; To Market

To market, to market,
To buy a fat pig.
Home again, home again,
Jiggety - jig!

Si alguien en un carro quiere que vaya con él, tenga cortes, pero marchase y no entre su carro.

es mi amigo. Quiere ser mi amigo también?

A la plaza, a la plaza

A la plaza, a la plaza,
A comprar un lechón.
A la casa, a la casa,
i ti-qui-ti, ti-qui-ti, ton!
To market, to market,  A la plaza, a la plaza,
To buy a plum bun.  Rico bollo he comprado.
Home again, home again,  A la casa, a la casa,
Shopping is done!  ¡La compra se ha terminado!

The experience-learning approach will be used for initial training in Level I (Kindergarten) and continued in Level II (First Grade). By using the children's past experiences as a base, activities can be planned that will expand the experiential background of the children. These streams of learning experiences in Level I will lay foundations for further learnings in Level II. For example, when the child has acquired the ability to listen, understand, interpret and follow directions, then he will be ready to develop the ability to listen to and follow directions that require a certain sequence.

Example:

Level I
Juan, get one ball.  Juan, agarra una pelota.
Don, find a red toy.  Don, busca un juguete colorado.

Level II
Maria, get three balls.  Maria, agarra tres pelotas, Show me two ways to tell me  Enseñame dos modos para
you have three balls.  decirme que tienes tres pelotas.

Provisions will be made early in the program for the child to acquire skills in phonetic analysis and contextual clues which will give him a head start toward becoming an independent reader. Likewise, in the skills of moving from the "scribbling" stage in art and writing he will become more symbolic in this area. Within the stream of the curriculum area, there will be a developmental sequence of skills. When the child is ready for the next step in the sequence, the alert teacher will be ready to help him take it. Included below is one example of how large blocks of time within a school day may be utilized to develop instructional activities that will provide for flexible grouping of students and an economical use of time.

Suggested Time Blocks Within a School Day

Level I

Level II

BLOCK ONE

Large group activity (Total class)

1. Free choice of activities which will provide opportunity for role-playing, dramatic play, and outlet of emotions.

1. Teacher interacts with the group in preparation for a specific activity accompanied by language related to that activity, such as phonics, use of dictionary, word recognition, and context.

PLAY PERIOD

-22-
BLOCK TWO

Structured activities (Small groups)

1. Opportunities to work in small group activities for social contacts, for experiences in spatial relationship, following directions, handling books and locating information.

1. Children at this time may have either specifically assigned work or work of their own choice related to a specific subject area as in reading activities, social studies, science and numbers.

LUNCH

BLOCK THREE

Story Time -- Music -- and Rhythms

1. Opportunity to enjoy music through singing, listening, and rhythmic expression. Opportunity to develop listening skills and appreciation for good stories as well as to memorize poems and summarize stories.

1. Continuing to develop music appreciation through singing, listening, and rhythms. Continue to progress in the ability to listen to good stories, as well as to memorize poems and to dictate and summarize stories.

BLOCK FOUR

Informal Work (Children take the initiative)

1. Children have freedom to choose their interest center, working alone or in groups. Teacher moves from child to child establishing contact with him through the medium of language on the child's immediate interest. Evaluating and planning for the next day helps the child to leave with a good feeling and anticipation for the next day.

1. Continue freedom in interest groups and teacher contacts with individual child through language. Special assistance or help in a given area may be given at this time. Evaluate and plan for the next day, make sure the children leave with a feeling of accomplishment and anticipation for returning the next day.

21.0 SELF-ESTEEM

Stated methods of project component expected to increase self-esteem:

Teacher encourages pupil to verbally express his feelings:
1. through role-playing
2. puppetry
3. language-experience approach: students dictate stories from their own experience
4. teacher accepts, acknowledges ideas and feelings
5. teacher encourages non-verbal expression of child’s feelings through painting, music, dancing
6. teacher provides experiences in which the various ways that children act are accepted by the teacher; their actions are discussed and the children are encouraged not to make fun of "different" ways
7. teacher provides experiences leading to competency and success
8. teacher provides experiences where occasional failure is acknowledged as part of everyone's experience; second attempts are encouraged
9. other (specify) (xerox or summarize) document page #

Teacher provides experiences in pupil self-direction and acceptance of self-responsibility, such as:
10. pupils act as tutors for other pupils
11. pupils have some options in choice of curriculum
12. pupils choose activities from a variety of interest centers
13. older pupils participate in curriculum planning and/or development
14. pupils write a bilingual newspaper for dissemination to the community
15. other (specify)

22.0 LEARNING STRATEGIES

1. The project mentions the following specific learning strategies as important for reaching a particular ethno-linguistic group:
   (specify or xerox) Document and Page no.
   Example: Navajo children resist participation in an authoritarian, traditional classroom. An open classroom where teacher participates rather than directs all activities and students or groups of students initiate activities, move about freely or sit in a circle or horseshoe rather than sit in rows, has been found more effective.

23.0 BICULTURAL COMPONENT

23.1 This program is:
1. bilingual alone
2. bilingual and bicultural

* It is assumed that bilingualism increases appetite for learning & also 4-teacher accepts, acknowledges ideas and feelings
5-teacher encourages non-verbal expression of child's feelings through painting, music, dancing
6-teacher provides experiences in which the various ways that children act are accepted by the teacher; their actions are discussed and the children are encouraged not to make fun of "different" ways
7-teacher provides experiences leading to competency and success
8-teacher provides experiences where occasional failure is acknowledged as part of everyone's experience; second attempts are encouraged

Teacher provides experiences in pupil self-direction and acceptance of responsibility, such as:
10-pupils act as tutors for other pupils
11-pupils have some options in choice of curriculum
12-pupils choose activities from a variety of interest centers
13-older pupils participate in curriculum planning and/or development
