Supplementary instructional materials developed by master teachers for use in foreign language classrooms are compiled in this booklet. The materials are intended for teachers of French, German, Spanish, and FLES. A wide variety of activities focusing on vocabulary development, grammar, conversational skills, and classroom games is included. (RL)
RECIPIES FOR TEACHING FOREIGN LANGUAGES IN OKLAHOMA

Prepared by Oklahoma Foreign Language Teachers

Edited by Patricia Hammond
Curriculum Specialist for Foreign Languages
Oklahoma State Department of Education and

Alan Garfinkel
Assistant Professor of Education and Foreign Languages
Oklahoma State University

under the auspices of Oklahoma Curriculum Improvement Commission

W. D. Carr, Chairman CURRICULUM SECTION
Clifford Wright, Administrator
Philip Kochman, Assistant
Peggy Gill, Special Assistant

STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
Leslie Fisher, Superintendent

1972
FOREWORD

It has always been the objective of Oklahoma school administrators to supply the classrooms in our public schools with the best available in facilities and teaching materials. To this end, planning is continuous.

We share, however, the firm belief that the first and the most important essential in any classroom is the teacher herself. The priceless elements are the basic knowledge, the teaching personality, and the professional commitment of the teacher. One of the best sources for the acquisition of effective teaching techniques is to be found in the sharing of those special skills developed by master teachers in the classroom.

The foreign language teachers of Oklahoma have compiled a collection of such techniques in Recipes for Teaching. They have gladly shared the devices which they have developed and have found successful.

We sincerely hope that Oklahoma teachers will utilize the teaching expertise represented here for the improvement of the foreign language program in our state.

Leslie Fisher
State Superintendent of Public Instruction
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The materials for Recipes for Teaching were collected from those presented in workshops which were conducted in six state colleges: Northeastern, Southeastern, East Central, Northwestern, Southwestern and Central State University.

Editing was done by a committee working in cooperation with the Oklahoma Curriculum Improvement Commission under the auspices of the Oklahoma State Department of Education.

We are especially grateful to the teachers who served as chairmen of the panels which discussed teaching techniques at the various workshops:

Mrs. Audis Moore, Chairman
Department of Foreign Languages
Okmulgee Senior High School
Mrs. Wayne Fellows
Latin Teacher
Hugo Senior High School
Mrs. Patricia Goodman, Chairman
Department of Foreign Languages
Ponca City Senior High School
Miss Colleen Kivlehen
Spanish Teacher
Edmond Senior High School
Mrs. Dorothy Shirley
Spanish Teacher
Pauls Valley Senior High School
Mrs. Mildred Dosser, Chairman
Department of Foreign Languages
Eisenhower Senior High School
Lawton, Oklahoma

In the revision and expansion of “recipes”, we are indebted to the following people who served as chairmen for the individual languages represented:

SPANISH: Mrs. Suzanne Sparks, Chairman
Department of Foreign Languages
Sooner Senior High School
Bartlesville, Oklahoma

GERMAN: Mrs. Ilse Adams
Professor of German
Central State University

FRENCH: Mrs. Helen Carney
Foreign Language Supervisor
Tulsa City Schools

LATIN: Mrs. Lois Ellsworth, Chairman
Department of Foreign Languages
College Senior High School
Bartlesville, Oklahoma

FLES: Mrs. Isis Tuel
Spanish TV Teacher
Oklahoma City Schools

We wish to express appreciation, also, to Dr. Clifford Wright, Director of Curriculum, State Department of Education and Executive Secretary of the Oklahoma Curriculum Improvement Commission, for his help and encouragement in our workshops and in the publication of this booklet.

Our thanks go also to the foreign language teachers who submitted these “recipes”. Without the enthusiasm and dedication of these teachers, who are its authors, the publication of Recipes for Teaching could not have been accomplished.
EDITING COMMITTEE

DR. ALAN GARFINKEL
Department of Education
Oklahoma State University

DR. CLIFFORD WRIGHT
Director of Curriculum
State Department of Education

MRS. PATRICIA HAMMOND
Curriculum Specialist
for Foreign Languages
State Department of Education

CONTRIBUTORS

AMA LOU JOHNSON
Granite Public Schools
Granite, Oklahoma

ALICE GREGG
Wagoner Public Schools
Wagoner, Oklahoma

FELICE FELDMAN
Putnam City Public Schools
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

KAY MORRIS
El Reno Public Schools
El Reno, Oklahoma

LOYCE LAMB
Purcell Public Schools
Purcell, Oklahoma

CHARLES BENKE
Harrah Public Schools
Harrah, Oklahoma

AUDIS MOORE
Okmulgee Public Schools
Okmulgee, Oklahoma

SHERRY JONES
Lawton Public Schools
Lawton, Oklahoma

ABIGAIL LAKE
Midwest City Public Schools
Midwest City, Oklahoma

PATRICIA GOODMAN
Ponca City Public Schools
Ponca City, Oklahoma

RUTH SALWACHTER
Waynoka Public Schools
Waynoka, Oklahoma

FRANCES MAY
Tahlequah Public Schools
Tahlequah, Oklahoma

VIVIAN WATKINS
Coalgate Public Schools
Coalgate, Oklahoma

TED WENTWORTH
Oklahoma State University
Stillwater, Oklahoma

VELMA BOX
Bartlesville Public Schools
Bartlesville, Oklahoma

AUTUMN STONER
Enid Public Schools
Enid, Oklahoma

WANDA WATKINS
Moore Public Schools
Moore, Oklahoma

BEATRICE NOTLEY
Tulsa Public Schools
Tulsa, Oklahoma

PATRICIA HAMMOND
State Department of Education
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

SUSAN CARNEY
Central State University
Edmond, Oklahoma

ILSE ADAMS
Central State University
Edmond, Oklahoma

MARY JEAN CALLAHAN
Mangum Public Schools
Mangum, Oklahoma

JOYCE SLAGLE
Tulsa Public Schools
Tulsa, Oklahoma

COLLEEN KIVLEHEN
Edmond Public Schools
Edmond, Oklahoma

LOLA WOOD
Seiling Public Schools
Seiling, Oklahoma

MARILYN MOORE LIVINGSTON
Coyle Public Schools
Coyle, Oklahoma

MARGARET CARTER
Blackwell Public Schools
Blackwell, Oklahoma

DOROTHY STACY
Tahlequah Public Schools
Tahlequah, Oklahoma
The editors did not list the name of each contributor with the item contributed because some of the items that appear are combinations of several teachers' work made by the editors for the sake of economy and efficiency.

Artwork is by courtesy of the Foreign Language Department, Oklahoma State University. Special thanks are given to Harold Raley, Marsha Shaw, and Timothy J. Shea.

(This publication is made possible by funds from Title V, Section 503 of the Elementary and Secondary Act of 1965 through the State Department of Education.)
CONTENTS

FOREWORD ........................................ iii
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS ............................... iv

CONTENTS

I. This We Believe .................................... 1

II. Theory Into Practice ............................. 2

III. Favorite Techniques of Foreign Language Teaching

1. French ............................................ 3
2. German .......................................... 13
3. Latin ............................................ 19
4. Spanish .......................................... 25
5. FLES ............................................. 35
6. All Languages .................................. .39

IV. Selected References

1. Materials ........................................ 43
2. Professional ..................................... 45

V. Evaluation ........................................ 47
A STUDY OF THE
FOREIGN LANGUAGE PROGRAM IN OKLAHOMA

PHILOSOPHY

This we believe—

Every child should have the right to experience learning in a foreign language, because the child's world is the entire world. To deprive a child of this right is to deprive him of world citizenship. "For no language is the exclusive property of any group or society. But, like the stars, language belongs to everyone."¹

The knowledge of a foreign language is one of the best keys to the understanding and appreciation of the peoples of the world. For this reason even a few years of study of a language can be excellent preparation for intelligent citizenship; no language study, if seriously undertaken, can be without value.

The understanding of a foreign language and culture provides a solid basis for the study of world history and literature, both classical and modern. "Enough foreign language study to create an awareness of our ignorance could be an instrument in the increase of understanding."²

Instruction in a foreign language should begin at the earliest possible age when continuous progress in the language can be assured.

Foreign language instruction should include emphasis on all skills which will lead toward the attainment of mastery of the language: listening comprehension, speaking, reading, writing, and culture of the people who speak the language natively.

Personalities, objectives, and teaching-learning situations vary too greatly for any single method of teaching or learning a foreign language to be superior to all others.

¹ Nelson Brooks, Yale University, in his address "The Rung and the Ladder" delivered at the Northeast Conference of Foreign Language Teachers.

² Marjorie Johnston in her address "Foreign Languages and International Understanding" delivered at the Arkansas Foreign Language Teachers' Association.
THEORY INTO PRACTICE

Recipes for Teaching is a unique production. While hundreds of books are written by professors of education and language-oriented administrators, few, if any, have been written by people who teach foreign languages day in and day out, every day of the academic year. That is what Recipes for Teaching is, an exchange of ideas by fellow professionals and, even more so, a welcome to those about to enter the language teaching profession in the form of a most useful gift.

It was the editors' job to make this body of information fit within the limits of space and organization that must be observed by any readable publication. Most of the material is the direct contribution of practicing teachers who, when called upon to give time and effort for the betterment of the profession, responded generously and enthusiastically. None of the contributions has been specifically signed; all are written by Oklahoma teachers. This response is an act of professionalism in its truest sense, and all of those who contributed to the collection are to be warmly commended.

The editors found it convenient to classify the recipes in the collection in accordance with the language taught by the contributor of each recipe. That is why Recipes for Teaching has a French section, a German section, etc.; however, there is no reason why most of the ideas given in one language cannot be adapted for use in another. In fact, the new teacher who reads only ideas from teachers of his own second language will be denying himself most of the value of the collection.

Teachers of nearly all the foreign languages taught in Oklahoma made contributions to Recipes for Teaching. They were teachers of every imaginable methodological persuasion. It was not the editors' purpose to add labels and commentary in order to sort techniques reflecting one kind of methodology from those reflecting another. This is not to say that the editors have no methodological bias. The editors are, as one interviewee on the NBC Today show put it, "extreme centerists". That is to say that they are simply not interested in anything but a balanced curriculum which gives appropriate concentration to all four foreign language skills: listening, speaking, reading, and writing. If a given idea does not suit the reader's own methodological biases, he should examine it for its adaptive possibilities. Chances are good that a little time spent in this way will help the reader devise his own new ideas which may be published in a subsequent edition of Recipes for Teaching. It is essential to join with other professionals, in order to achieve all four goals of foreign language behavior. Today's professional does not waste his time with petty bickering that should have been dropped ten years ago. Only one thing must concern us as language teachers — the ability of our students to communicate.
A Filet of French
In order to push your students into the deep water of thinking in French, insist from the first year that new French words be identified with already familiar French words—never with English words.

la bougie — la chandelle la boiture — l'auto
doucement — gentillement

A list of words to be matched with known French words challenges the student, whether he be a beginner or in an upper-level division studying literature. Certainly making out such a list calls for creativity from teachers or students.

Fill in the blanks with words of equivalent meaning from the right-hand column:

1. l'avis
2. achever
3. interroger
4. debout
5. le tapage
6. ennuyer
7. nu-tête
8. l'aubergiste
9. le mot
10. la bougie
11. se rappeler
12. le métier
13. le visage
14. faire la classe
15. le bout
16. d'habitude
17. faire attention
18. doucement
19. la voiture
20. conduire
21. la femme
22. revoir
23. la moitié
24. l'auberge
25. sembler
26. certain
27. parfois
28. la joie
29. tout de suite
30. songer
31. prier
32. la chaise
33. la maîtresse
34. fort beau
35. singulier
36. les lunettes
37. l'abécédaire
38. le coffre
39. le cabinet
40. la seconde vue
41. la douleur
42. le sens

à pied l'hôte voir encore se souvenir la profession la physionomie gentillement
se mettre au volant paraître quelquefois rêver extraordinaire la tristesse finir la place du professeur d'ordinaire l'hôtel la demie portion le bruit le lorgnon sans chapeau soudainement la clairvoyance être attentif la parole très beau l'opinion poser une question enseigner le fond un livre élémentaire le plaisir sur gener la chandelle le buffet l'auto supplier
un professeur feminin la mariée la direction
la boîte de trésor
GET MORE PARTICIPATION FROM STUDENTS

During the first showings (2nd or 3rd) of the film Aventure en Mer from the Toute la Bande series, we happened upon the idea of stopping the film after each scene, and having the students each write a question about it. Afterwards, they formed groups and asked and answered these questions in French. The response was fine, probably because they were dealing with small parts and could be specific. Many times students do not respond well because they have only a hazy idea of what the teacher wants them to say or do.

Add your own devices for getting action from students during films, but it is a fact of life that students are more likely to stay on their toes figuratively, if the teacher stays on his feet literally.

GAME FOR VOCABULARY REVIEW

RULES: Divide the room into groups. One member from each group goes to the blackboard. The teacher can give English words or sentences. The students at the blackboard are to translate the word(s) given in English into the foreign language. The team member who finishes first and gets the word(s) correct earns two (2) points for his team. (For vocabulary, visuals would be good.) The team member(s) who did not finish first but did give the correct answer earns for his or their team(s) one (1) point each. The member(s) who did not give the correct response do not earn any points this round. The other team members cannot help the students at the board, except by saying in the foreign language, "There is an error (two errors, etc.)."

EXAMPLE: "Il y a une faute?"
"Il y a deux fautes!"

After each round the students are seated and another member from each team goes to the board. The process is then repeated. In the advanced levels I like to give sentences stressing new grammar points and reviewing old ones.

HORS D'OEUVRE

Students enter my classroom eager to learn, but sometimes they don't know it yet, so that I can't count on them to use self-starters to get class going. For "starters", I collect tricks which require each individual to perform, to use his own ideas, perhaps to lead the group, and certainly, to think in French.

ON THE BOARD

Each day I post on the board in French, the date, the day of the week, the weather report, and the cafeteria menu. Sometimes the translation challenges my ingenuity. For example, would anyone want to eat "chien du mais, sans moutarde, ou même avec la moutarde de Dijon?"
REALITY IN THE CLASS

I use a French wire salad washer for a basket. It contains articles for building the day’s vocabulary. Of course, the strength of associating new French words with well-known objects which can be touched, depends entirely upon ways in which students actually use these props.

1) Students may describe the contents.

   la petite tomate
   la grande tomate
   la tomate verte

   This exercise can also help establish position of adjectives.

2) The command “Comptez les légumes!” gives students an opportunity to use numbers in a situation involving real objects.

3) Beginning students can answer questions about contents, repeating the structure in the question, while picking up the object from the basket.

   Q. Laquelle des tomates est la plus grande?
   R. Celci est la plus grande.

4) Students prepare their own questions about contents of the basket. Beginning students create within tightly controlled structure. Advanced students work more freely in order to learn to ask and answer questions rapidly without thinking.

This simple recipe also makes a piquant, easily digested item when served after the heaviness of the main course — like a French salad — because students eagerly anticipate each day’s novelty. They also anticipate assuming leadership and the responsibility for making things go.

PROOF OF THE PUDDING — TESTING

My students received well a test which permitted them to illustrate the meaning of a word by drawing a sketch of it.

   un arbre . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .

   une pâtisserie . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .

Some words are difficult to catch in a picture:

   le crève coeur . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .

   la crépuscule . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .
TEACHING PARTS OF THE BODY

This past summer I was a participant in an EPDA Institute in France. In addition to two weeks of touring the other regions of “la belle France,” we attended classes for eight weeks at the Lycée de Grand Air in Arcachon, a summer resort fifty kilometers south of Bordeaux. During the course of our stay, several of us became very good friends with some young Arcachonnais teen-agers who were students, either at the lycée in the “classes terminales” or at various universities, such as the Universite de Bordeaux, de Paris, Oxford, etc. On various occasions, they taught us some of the songs they sang. A few of them happened to be medical students at the Université and they taught us a particularly delightful one sung by their “comrades”, appropriately entitled “le Macchabée” (the “Cadavre”). The words concern an ill-fated cadaver, who is being duly dissected in an amphitheater (operating arena), to the edification and relish of the zealous spectators (who are, of course, medical students). One can certainly appreciate the resourceful capacity of these ardent medical minds, and can therefore imagine some of the eloquent strains proposed, especially with the use of “Tsouin! tsouin!”—a delicious, onomatopoetic word which conjures up the Chop! chop! of the blade dissecting the hapless macchabée. After therefore having “cleaned up” some of the verses, I decided to use the song in my classes to teach the parts of the body (to the delight of the students). The verses are obviously innumerable, depending on how many parts one wishes to chop off, much the same as “l’Alouette”. And when singing the song in class, it is most efficacious to point out very demonstratively the parts being chopped.

We happened to be in France at the time of our first three astronauts’ moon-landing, and it was most interesting to observe it through French eyes. During one of our more creative moments, we wrote our own stanzas to “le Macchabée”, this time appropriately entitled “En Honneur des Astronautes”, which I also use in my French classes. One may, of course, alter the words to fit our subsequent landings, but the original is herein enclosed. At a time when everyone appears to be screaming for “relevancy” in the classroom, this is only one attempt to appease such advocates. I even turn my students loose, and suggest that they make up their own verses, embellishing to their heart’s desires. I never cease to be amazed at the inventive minds of the little monsters in our classrooms!
Dans un amphi-théâtre, phi-théâtre, phi-théâtre, phi-théâtre. Tsouin! Tsouin!

1. Dans un amphi-théâtre,
Dans un amphi-théâtre,
Dans un amphi-théâtre, phi-théâtre, phi-théâtre, phi-théâtre. Tsouin! Tsouin!

2. Y avait un mac-chabée, (three times)
Mac-chabée, mac-chabée, mac-chabée, Tsouin! Tsouin!

3. On lui coupa les pieds, (three times) pa les pieds, pa les pieds, pa les pieds. Tsouin! Tsouin!

4. On lui coupa les jambes, (three times)
pa les jambes, pa les jambes, pa les jambes. Tsouin! Tsouin!

(Continue using the various other parts of the body, always repeating the last three syllables for the chorus.)

5. Et sur ces en-tré-faits, etc.

6. Le mac-chabée disait,

7. Ah! e’ qu’en s’em-bête ici . . .

EN HONNEUR DES ASTRONAUTES (same tune)

1. Dans une toute petit capsule . . .
2. Y avait trois astronautes . . .
3. S’en allant vers la lune . . .
4. Le petit L-E-M descend . . .
5. Conrad a fait dodo . . .
7. L’homme de la lune qui a dit . . .
8. Soyez les bienvenus . . .
9. An! c’ qu’en s’embète ici . . .
ENVIRONMENT FOR LEARNING

Make the Language Room a pleasant setting for learning. If possible, have appropriate pictures and realia. Each month I try to have meaningful bulletin board decorations to create conversation interest. For example — September was the “Welcome back to school” month — the rentrée — and almost anything having to do with people’s classes, clothes, books, sports, music, extracurricular activities, etc., can be used to stimulate a simple conversation.

October has been sports month this year and we used French and American sports. I now have a Corne d’Abondance (Horn of plenty) with fruits, vegetables, nuts, and leaves from which we are getting a food vocabulary.

December will have its Crèche, cards, etc. This goes on for a special theme each month.

To prepare these boards I use all possible pictures, book covers, advertisements, posters, etc. — and the work of talented students who can create cut-outs and designs. I cannot do it myself, but by giving ideas, materials, and help to artistic students, they are usually able to do a fine job.

Since we have plenty of space, a portion of the board is usually used for regular French posters, maps, menus, etc., which we try to recognize and discuss.

GRAB BAG DRILL

I bring an assortment of things such as pens, pencils, cards, booklets, pins, etc. into the class with a paper bag. I then go around the class identifying the item and asking the student to say he’s put it in the bag. A script would read like this:

Teacher: “Le papier
Mettez le papier dans le sac.”

Student: “Je le mets dans le sac.”

I repeat this procedure for various pronoun forms and students. This drill requires verb form and pronoun usage practice.

VERBAL DANCE

The very essence of life is rhythm. All performance — singing, dancing, teaching, learning (all having a common ingredient, DISCIPLINE) — is accomplished through the medium of rhythm. Timing makes it right for the STUDENT, right for US. We are lulled to drowsiness or excited to wakefulness by the rain — by the brush or the boom of the cloud drum. And that great flash of illumination brings us up sharp.

I like that being brought up sharp. And so do the students. Someone is demanding attention. SOMETHING is being expected — OF ME — OF THEM. The unspoken challenge to team work is met with sheer spontaneity and we are caught up in a learning recipe.

Fortunate is the teacher who senses the mood of his students — IN TIME. There’s no doubt about it, mood is contagious. It sets the stage for the drama of learning. The teacher, the director, is quick to sense a wrong setting. It would be deadly to start throwing the furniture around; SO, he maneuvers the setting into rightness — into receptiveness — with a little “crazy rhythm.”
We are somewhere in a beginning French class. Numbers have been introduced. So what? What's so exciting about numbers? The following poem is familiar enough that we can do our dance with it.

Students: Un, deux, trois,
Teacher: Nous irons au bois;
Students: Quatre, cinq, six,
Teacher: Cueillir des cerises;
Students: Sept, huit, neuf.
Teacher: Dans mon panier neuf.
Students: Dix, onze, douze,
Teacher: Elles seront toutes rouges. 1

Stress that the pause after each number line must be no longer than the pause after each count. YOU show them how you can pick up YOUR line and they will play it back for you. Switch the lines. Work by rows or by pairs of students. Students will whip each other into line.

Quelle heure est-il?

POEME
LE MATIN

Il est une heure, mais il fait nuit.
Il est deux heures; la lune luit.
Il est trois heures; le ciel est noir.
Il est quatre heures; on commence a voir.
Il est cinq heures; le coq crie.
Il est six heures; le soleil brille.
Il est sept heures; l'autobus passe.
Il est huit heures; on va en classe.
Il est neuf heures; lisez la lecon.
Il est dix heures; ah! recreation.
Il est onze heures; j'ai grand appetit.
On va dejeuner; il est midi.

L'APRES MIDI

Il est une heure; c'est l'apres-midi.
Il est deux heures; on etudie.
Il est trois heures; de l'ecole on sort.
Il est quatre heures; on fait du sport.

LE SOIR

Il est cinq heures; il faut rentrer.
Il est six heures; on va diner.
Il est sept heures; voila le soir.
Il est huit heures; on fait les devoirs.

LA NUIT

Il est neuf heures; bonsoir famille!
Il est dix heures; les etoiles brillent.
Il est onze heures; la lune se leve.
Il est minuit; le jour s'acheve. 2

1 Julian Harris and Helene Monod-Cassidy, Petites Conversations, Boston, D. C. Heath Co., 1956, p. 11
Possessive Adjectives

Try a ballet with possessive adjectives. The prelude should be a brisk review of this troupe. Call a subject pronoun, indicate the row which is to name (without loss of rhythm) the troupe belonging to it. Je - mon, ma, mes; Elle - son, sa ses. It is urgent to keep in step. IT MAKES THEM THINK! An example of what is expected is necessary. “Je demeure avec mon frère, ma sœur, et mes parents.” Name another pronoun. Il, the student using it must use a different verb and possess different things, but must use all three possessives. “Il regarde son chien, sa maison et ses autos.” He then names another pronoun and presents the next member by a nod, a curtsy or an original move — which can be genuinely entertaining.

Prepositional Phrases

Do a turn with prepositional phrases. Call it the “Spice Dance”. For truly prepositional phrases are the spice of sentence life. — “Est-ce que la mule est sur la table près de la porte?” — Starting with the last word in the sentence, work backward, as in pattern drill, until the sentence is pieced together well. Manage to repeat the phrases as units twice or more. Repeat the sentence again and ask for an answer. The students love this response: “Non! C’est ridicule. La mule n’est pas sur la table. La table n’est pas près de la porte. Elle est devant la carte.”

The sense of rhythm helps put the sound combinations properly in the ear, which makes it possible for the vocal facilities to operate effectively on recall, which promotes practical use of acquired vocabulary, which prompts the student to read, which finally awakens a keen desire to WRITE the language.

I allow students to come to the French room at noon to study and practice. They have instituted a program of their own of learning to write the language. Those who speak especially well are chosen to give dictation. I am impressed by their enthusiasm; and enthusiasm is impossible without rhythm — the “moving ingredient”.

Nothing so lets us be ourselves as rhythmic performance, be it self-discovered or friend-directed. And nothing so “jells” the students in a foreign language class as feeling confident that their TEACHER is their FRIEND.

The poem “Quelle Heure Est-il?” can be used effectively as a verbal dance.

TEACHING TIME CONCEPT

Use time line to give students an idea of the relationship of tenses to each other:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Present</th>
<th>Past Simple</th>
<th>Past Perfect</th>
<th>Future Anterior</th>
<th>Future</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Imparfait</td>
<td>Maintenant je vais à l'école.</td>
<td>Faisant je suis allé à l'école.</td>
<td>Maintenant je vais</td>
<td>Maintenant je vais</td>
<td>Maintenant je vais</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>(présent)</td>
<td>(maintenant)</td>
<td>(maintenant)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>je vais</td>
<td>je vais</td>
<td>je vais</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>x Hier</td>
<td>x Hier</td>
<td>x Hier</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>(maintenant)</td>
<td>(maintenant)</td>
<td>(maintenant)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>je suis allé(e)</td>
<td>je suis allé(e)</td>
<td>je suis allé(e)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Plus-que-parfait: Quand je suis allé(e) en France, j'avais déjà appris la langue.

Futur: Demain j'irai à l'école. Je vais aller

Futur antérieur: (Actually past of future tense)
J'irai à l'école après que j'aurai fini mon petit déjeuner

Distinction of Imparfait and Passe Composé or Passé Simple

Imparfait = Habit, description, continuation, duration in the past
Imparfait = IM (not) PARFAIT (finished)
Passé simple = Completed action performed one time in historical or literary language. (one word - simple)
Passé composé = PASSÉ (past) Composé (Completed) — Completed action performed one time in everyday, spoken language. (two words — composé)

Use same time line concept as above to point up the basic difference in these tenses. Now let the time line equal length of time necessary to complete whatever is taking place:
GERMAN

GAMES

"I went to the zoo"

Each student begins a recitation with "I went to the zoo and saw...". He adds one animal name to the list built up by successive recitations. The game provides an entertainingly effective noun drill. It has variants such as "I looked in my flowerbasket (fruitbasket) and saw..." or "My ship's coming from Hamburg loaded with...". The game is even more effective if it involves actually taking the thing named out of a container.

Speed Contest

Students are each given thirty seconds to see who can name the longest list of things in the shortest time.

Singular — Plural Game

The class is divided into two teams. A member of one team calls to a member of the other team a singular noun. The one called must reply with the plural form. Then he challenges a member of the first team in a similar manner. Score may be kept.

Games with Numbers

Bingo-using, of course, the numbers and letters of the foreign alphabet.

Zoom — a counting game in which the word "Zook" is substituted for the number seven. When, for example, the counting reaches "twenty-seven", the person whose turn it is must say "twenty-zoom". Failure to do so eliminates one from the game. May be played very rapidly.

Rhythm

Each student is assigned a number and a rhythm is established by slapping the desk twice, clapping the hands twice, then snapping, first, the fingers of the right hand and then, the fingers of the left hand. When the leader snaps his fingers according to the rhythm he first calls out his own number, then he repeats the rhythm sequence and calls another student's number. The surprised student has to do exactly what the leader did while keeping up with the beat.

TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS

One teacher has two war surplus telephones that are used as props to enliven classroom recitations. They ring for added realism and topics of conversation are assigned in advance. Another teacher actually tells students to expect a real phone call over the weekend. The resulting conversation is pre-assigned and graded.

NONSENSE

Students frequently confuse direct and indirect objects or find parts of speech a confusing subject in general. Yet German students in particular must know parts of speech in order to use adjective endings correctly. Using nonsense words can frequently convince them they can recognize a direct object even if they don't know what the words in the sentence mean. Try putting Lewis Carroll's nonsense poem on the board:

"Twas brilling and the swithy toves
Did gyre and gimble on the leabe;
All mumsy were the borogoves,
And the mome raths outgrabe."

Endings, definite and indefinite articles lead them to the right answer. Then have them invent words with appropriate articles and endings for the foreign language. This seems to give courage and confidence to formerly bewildered students. It also avoids grammar lessons, particularly for those who never understood English grammar anyway. The sillier the words sound, the better. Those who have no problems are still amused by the inventive part of the game, using skill, humour, and imagination in the assignment. They also enjoy analyzing each other's creations.

Example: Das prutsche Klofflein hat den schlurpenden Fuhliger der Senkelin begriet.
DIALOGS

Another teacher has called our attention to the fact that many texts in use today lack sufficient visual support to help teach the meaning of their dialogs in the target language. She makes her own rough visuals to support dialogs such as depicted in the illustration below. It is important to note that she used a separate visual to support each individual thought in the dialog. These visuals may be done on ditto masters or transparencies or poster boards, or all three.

DIALOG CHARADES

Here is one way the same teacher brings old dialogs back to provide re-entry of previously learned materials.

All children enjoy charades. First I divide the class into two teams. Then I give one person at a time a small piece of paper on which I have written a simple sentence or expression taken from the dialog or work in class. Each person must act out the sentence in pantomime to his team. The team must guess the sentence, being careful to use the correct endings and verb agreement. The team with the shortest time accumulated to guess the statement correctly wins. I do not grade the performances, but I do find the exercise worthwhile in helping vocabulary, comprehension, and grammar.
RESTAURANT

One of our German teachers likes to play “Restaurant” in her German classes. Certain popular German dishes, drinks, etc. are learned. Students play roles of waiters, patrons, etc. The rechnung (bill) is added orally giving students practice also in the use of numbers.

Cognates

Cognates can be very helpful in increasing vocabulary. Each student makes a list of all of the cognates he knows, competing with other students to see who has the longest list. The teacher should be careful to explain the difference in meaning between cognates if there is one (i.e. gift, German and gift, English; kind, German and kind, English; etc.)

Etymological explanations (for words such as Vieh, or Buchstabe, etc.) can be helpful to students in remembering difficult words. To trace our word dollar from the German Joachimsthal reveals all sorts of historical and cultural facts.

ENLARGING VOCABULARY

German employs many compounds. An interesting way of enlarging vocabulary is to give students a list of prefixes from which they form as many compound verbs as they can think of. Of course the object is to see who can write the most. This game-exercise can be varied in several ways:

A. Give students a basic verb; let them add prefixes and decide meaning of the new verb.

B. Give students basic nouns: have them form compounds.

USING MUSIC

There are so many beautiful German operas that students surely should know some of them. There is often a reluctance among students to listen to an opera, always based on the excuse, “I like popular music”. I have found the most reluctant student can become intrigued with at least one opera — The Magic Flute, by Mozart. I tell the plot in simple German; it sounds like a fairy tale and contains both serious and humorous incidents. Listening to a tape of highlights (arias, duets, etc.) the students can follow the story live. Every time they are intrigued and delighted with classical music in which they hadn’t expected to be interested.

BINGO

It is best if you can make the cards yourself, but students can make their own cards. The only problem is that they tend to select words they already know and it requires more class time. The card should have twenty-five squares. These can be filled with all nouns, verbs, numbers, etc. I prefer to give the word in English and have the students cover the German word with beans or scraps of paper if you feel like risking a ticker tape parade. To win, he must know both the German and English words and if it is a noun, he must know the definite article (This is a good way to bribe them to learn genders.)

PASSWORD

Divide the class into two teams. Each team has a contestant (who changes with each new word). The German word is written on the board and all members of a team can confer to give one clue in German. Turns alternate until the word is guessed. Be sure to limit the time allowed to give clues and to respond. This works best for second or third year students.

SKITS

Students like skits. It gives them a chance to be creative and provides listening practice for the other students. Be sure to remind them to stay within their vocabulary and grammatical constructions, and be prepared to be caricatured.

SINGING

If you don’t sing, perhaps you have a student who can lead if you help him with the words.

SCRABBLE

You can buy a German scrabble game and then make your own extra boards on cardboard and make letters out of construction paper. This works best for second or third year students. You can use two people working as a team for each position.

COMPOSITION

Give them a situation or topic and allow them to create a story or an essay around the subject. Be sure to have them stay within their vocabulary and grammatical constructions. You can also give them a picture which contains illustrations of words they have had and have them either describe the picture or write a story centered around the picture.

CROSSWORD PUZZLES

Make your own puzzle based on the students’ vocabulary. If you feel creative, you can construct the puzzle in shapes appropriate to various German holidays.
HELPING WITH PRONUNCIATION

Certain sounds in German are problematic to students. The ü sound was a special problem until I found a German version tape of My Fair Lady. The famous song The Rain in Spain is in German:

"Es grün so grün, wo Spaniens Blüten blühen."

By listening, learning, and singing imitating the pronunciation, students learn perfect ü's besides enjoying very much the song itself!

Another problem is the pronunciation of ei and ie, not because they are difficult sounds, but because of inconsistent pronunciation in English. I remind students to remember the spelling of Eisenhower; in German ei is always pronounced as in Eisenhower; ie is always pronounced as in brief. No more problems!

Ü = UE

GERMAN RECIPES

GAME

The students make up a story with each student contributing one word in his turn. Go around the class several times. In a bright class the stories can be exciting "thrillers" or very funny.

GAME

One German children's game is called "Onkell Otto sitzt in der badewanne." From 2 to 6 students can play in one group. At the top of a piece of paper the model sentence "Onkel Otto sitzt in der badewanne" is written. The paper will be folded vertically so that one word is folded out of sight each time. The first person writes below "Onkel" a German word of the same type such as "Vater," "Professor," etc. The paper is then folded over so that the next contributor cannot see what has been written. The next person writes below "Otto" another word of the same type (any name), folds the paper and passes it on. The last person unfolds the paper and reads what has been written. A new sentence is then started below the old one in the same manner.

HINT

A mnemonic device to help students remember the order of adverbs or adverbal expressions is the word "TeMPo." "TeMPo" stands for time, manner, place and helps students remember that adverbs of come first, adverbs of manner second, and those of place third.

SUGGESTION FOR TEACHING ADJECTIVE ENDINGS

Students can easily remember the forms of the endings by using the following simple memory crutch. It is effective, however, only if set up in the following order, and therefore may not be useful for classes not accustomed to this sequence. Endings for adjectives preceded by a "der-word" can be arranged in the following chart:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>PRECEDED BY DER-WORD</th>
<th>masc.</th>
<th>neut.</th>
<th>fem.</th>
<th>plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>nominative</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>en</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>accusative</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>en</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dative</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>e</td>
<td>en</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>genitive</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>en</td>
<td>en</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The boxed in area can be called the "map of Oklahoma." It is easy to remember that all the endings inside the "map" are "e" and all those outside the "map" are "en." A similar chart is constructed for the endings of adjectives preceded by an "ein-word" (ein, kein, mein, ihr, unser, usw.).

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>PRECEDED BY AN EIN-WORD</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Nominative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>accusative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>genitive</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The "map of Oklahoma" is drawn in again and inside of it an even smaller "map of Oklahoma." The endings inside this smaller "map" are the same as those of "der" itself. The rest of the endings are the same as on the previous chart.

WORD ORDER DRILL

Put each word to form a sentence on a large 5 X 7 card. Hand the cards out to students. Let them "huddle" to decide on the correct order and then line up to form the sentence. The teacher points to each student who says his word in turn. (The cards may also be held in front of them to be seen.) The teacher may then give one of the students a different card. He might for example take away a noun object card and hand the student a pronoun object; or the teacher might instruct the student with the adverb card to go to the head of the sentence. The participating students or the class must then decide what to do to correct the word order. This is handy because students can move the words around without the teacher having to write all the changes on the board.
Another way to demonstrate word order is to prepare a large flannel board with the elements of sentences to be assembled on the board written on pieces of paper of different shapes and/or different colors. For example: subject = yellow or triangle or both, finite verb = green or rectangle, adverb = blue or circle, etc. Several sentences can then be placed on the flannel board or on the chalk board with cellophane tape and the pattern of normal word order and later inverted, verb-first, and subordinate word order can be demonstrated. The colors and/or shapes can aid the student in seeing the pattern.

Example:

1. Der Hund beibt den Mann
2. Den Mann beibt der Hund

THE PASSIVE

The passive is less frightening if it is presented as an extension of something already familiar. Students gain confidence if they realize that they already know all the forms and need only to add the past participle of their choice. Let them discover that they know the forms of the verb in the passive by asking them to conjugate "werden" in the third person singular in all the tenses they have had.

STEP I: WERDEN

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tense</th>
<th>Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>present</td>
<td>Es wird</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>simple past</td>
<td>Es wurde</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>present perfect</td>
<td>Es ist geworden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>past perfect</td>
<td>Es war geworden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>future</td>
<td>Es wird werden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(future perfect)</td>
<td>(Es wird geworden sein)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Then draw a box in each sentence and let them add any past participle (perhaps "gesagt" or "erklärt"). Cross off the "ge" on "geworden."

STEP II: WERDEN

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tense</th>
<th>Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>present</td>
<td>Es wird &quot;gesagt&quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>simple past</td>
<td>Es wurde &quot;erklärt&quot;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>present perfect</td>
<td>Es ist &quot;&quot; worden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>past perfect</td>
<td>Es war &quot;&quot; worden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(future perfect)</td>
<td>Es wird &quot;&quot; worden</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The same procedure can be followed for the passive with modal auxiliaries.

STEP I: have them conjugate WERDEN MÜSSEN

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tense</th>
<th>Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>present</td>
<td>Es MUSS werden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>simple past</td>
<td>Es MUSSTE werden</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>present perfect</td>
<td>Es HAT werden MÜSSEN</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>past perfect</td>
<td>Es HATTE werden MÜSSEN</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>future</td>
<td>Es WIRD werden MÜSSEN</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Then draw in the boxes and write in a past participle such as "gesagt" or "erklärt."

NUMBERS DRILL OR GAME

Write numbers on small cards or 3 X 5 cards cut in half. Playing cards might be used. Mix up the cards in a shoe box with a hole cut in the lid. Pass the box around and have each student draw out two or more cards, say the numbers in German, and add or multiply them, etc. Two sides might compete as teams. Each student replaces the cards, shakes the box and passes it on. For added interest a few "slot machine" cards with cherries, lemons or other fruit could be added to the box. The student who draws two cards of the same fruit (and names them correctly, of course) wins ten extra points for his side or a candy bar or other prize.
A LITTLE LATIN
LATIN CONVERSATION

One Latin teacher recommends opening each class session each day with a few minutes of general conversation with the pupils responding.

Suggested Procedure:

Salvete, discipuli! Salve, Magistra!
Quid agitis, hodie. Bene satis, ego valeo, non valeo, etc.
Quis dies est hodie? Hodie est Dies Lunae.
Estne sudum hodie? Minime! Pluit! (ningit, frigus est)
Quota hora est? Prima (or secund, etc.) hora est.
Quid est nomen tibi? Mihi nomen est annos natus sum.
Quot annos natus es? Quot annos natus sum.
Quid novi? Nihil novi.
Valete! Vale!

CHARADES

Children love to dramatize. Let them try their hand at acting out a Latin quotation, word, name of a character from history or fiction for the class to guess.

GHOST

Ghost is a little game I sometimes use the last few minutes of a period for vocabulary drill. The first pupil in the first row will think of a Latin word but will only give the first letter. The second pupil will try to think of a Latin word which begins with that letter and will then add the second letter. The next pupil will try to think of a Latin word that starts with the first two letters given. He will then add a third letter. If a pupil cannot think of a word starting with those letters, he gives a letter anyway and tries to bluff his way through. If the next pupil thinks he is bluffing and believes there is no such word, he then says, “I challenge you.” If the pupil can actually give a word starting with those letters, the challenger becomes a ghost and is out. Then the next person starts a new word. This goes on around the room until all the pupils become ghosts except one who is declared the winner.

ROMAN WEDDING CAKE

During a discussion of Roman wedding customs, a Latin II class translated the recipe for a Roman wedding cake. Several students decided to try their hand at baking the cake.

As translated from Cato, the recipe called for a peck of flour sprinkled with grape juice, seasoned with anise and cumin and laurel twig shavings, a pound of cheese and a pound of lard. This was shaped into cakes and baked on laurel twigs. Since laurel could not be found, that part of the flavor had to be omitted. The cake was delivered to school and the pupils sampled it. They missed the sweet taste associated with our present-day cakes since honey was used as a sweetener instead of sugar.

READING FOR BACKGROUND

In teaching a Cicero class I found that requiring the students to read novels based on the Roman Empire made the study more interesting. Also acting out some of the trials such as the trial of Roscus Sextius made the class work more fun.

PANELS AND DEBATES ON PHILOSOPHY

During our study of Stoic and Epicurean philosophy in Latin III and IV, I assign four or five students to make an intensive study of Stoic philosophy until they become “experts” on the subject. I make the assignment to the same number on the subject of Epicurean philosophy. Each group works together and does a great deal of research. On the assigned day the two panels face each other in front of the class and present their cases. They question the members of the opposing panel and attempt to refute their statements. The purpose is for each panel to try to convince the other group as well as the members of the classroom audience that the philosophy each proposes would be the most beneficial to live by. Each member of the class then votes on the philosophy he would choose for himself based on the discussion he has heard in class that day. This also can be done in the form of a debate with the same results.

QUIS EST?

Each pupil writes a description in Latin of some member of his class. He reads the description to the class as the students try to guess the person he is describing.

QUIS SUM?

One person assumes the role of a famous historical or fictional Roman character. Another student acts as questioner and attempts to find out the identity of the character. The questions and answers are given in Latin; therefore outside preparation must be done in advance of the class period. New vocabulary will need to be given to the students.

“QUID EST MEUM OPUS” or “WHAT’S MY LINE”

Adaptations of television programs, such as “What’s My Line,” provide interest as well as experience in conversation for students. The teacher should furnish the class with a vocabulary of professional terms in advance. The whole class can play along with the participants or the master of ceremonies can show the audience a card with the answer on it.

NEWS BROADCASTS

Roman historical events can come alive for students when they are translated into “everyday” language. Each student can be assigned an event such as a battle from the Gallic or Civil Wars to be written in modern Journalism style for a news article or news broadcast to be given before the class. Any number of events can be treated in this manner. The assassination of Caesar becomes quite realistic and dramatic in the hands of students.

FLANNEL BOARD

A flannel board is an effective means to stimulate the use of oral Latin. An inexpensive flannel board can be made from a piece of wallboard, plywood, etc., and covered with outing flannel—a neutral color or green and blue for land and sky. On such a background, colored pictures (either original or cut from a magazine) can be used to create any scene or group activity desired.

“LATIN LIVES TODAY” NOTEBOOKS

Any teacher of Latin is aware that there is much evidence that Latin is not “dead”. Students find it interesting to collect such evidence: advertisements of products using brand names derived from Latin or Greek; plans for the modern home (the atrium house, the condominium); furniture; room decor; use of columns, arches, and domes in architecture; music, science; mathematics; movies; cartoons, etc., and covered with outing sequins make effective eyes. The clothing is made after the niple butterfly style, raising the neckline so it can be pinned around the finger hold in the head.

Students, working in two’s and three’s, write their own dialog using the vocabulary already learned.

In the presentation of the dialogs, the flannel board can be used as a background if a puppet theater is not available.

A CLASSICAL FILE

With the word humanitas ever in mind for content, a news item, editorial, regular column (Sydney J. Harris, Tulsa World, is excellent), comic strip, or a short magazine selection may be glued on a large file card with a suitable-to-content vocabulary word and all of its parts along with several English meanings printed in large letters on the opposite side. A “dictionary” collection of these may be filed in an appropriately sized box covered with classical print paper or cloth, or may be used in any way the teacher wishes. In this way today’s materials pertaining to archaeology, philosophy, politics, social problems, and the sciences may be related to Latin and the Classics, and vocabulary may be made more meaningful.

BRIGHT ARROWS OF THE MORNING

“Bright Arrows of the Morning” is a sportive dance playfully exaggerating the formalities engaged in an archery combat.

The opponents announce their arrival on the scene by ringing bells in “open” and “shut” poses, signifying a call to the gods above and to men on earth.

“Attend, 0 gods! All men attend!”

Three times (a magic number used in ancient times as well as at the beginning of a theatrical performance today) they make the sign of Father Time’s scythe, then run through the opened “arena gate” to face each other in a gleeful “slap pump” (the alley-opp get ready signal of acrobats). They leap forward into the air supplicating the blessings of the gods upon their arrows. The dancers slide past each other closely, just missing collision, passing swiftly as arrows in the wind.

Caught in a whirlwind of fleet motion, the archers approach together, mark time, then send their arrows up to the sun (the ultimate judgment of fate lies in heaven!).

Exulting in mutual victory, the archers bring the dance to a close. As in the beginning, so at the end, their bells announce the closing of the arena gates (the invisible curtain separating men from gods). Their only reappearance is to receive the plaudits of the crowd assembled in the arena theatre.
Recipes For Teaching Foreign Language In Oklahoma

HOREOGRAPHY

by Mrs. Fred E. Frey, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Music from “Fountains of Rome” — Respighi.

SENTENCE STRUCTURE

PURPOSE: To improve pronunciation, drill in vocabulary and sentence structure.

METHOD: The first student starts a sentence with a noun subject, the second adds a verb, the third a direct object. After we have the skeleton of the sentence, each student in turn adds adjectives, adverbs and prepositions, and starts clauses for others to finish. Each student must repeat the whole sentence when making his addition. Finally, each student writes the entire sentence and translates it.

A DEVICE FOR TEACHING ABLATIVE ABSOLUTES

In teaching ablative absolutes in my Latin classes, in order to add motivation and a note of humor, I often hand to the students a list of these in Latin.

Students are required to rewrite the clauses in English. When they have done this, they can then complete the sentences in English as they wish. The following is a sample list; a list of some of the sentence completions which I have received is included. You can see for yourselves that they enjoy devising funny endings.

Ablative Absolutes

1. Hostibus pulsis,
2. Pace Confirmata,
3. Forō Romānō visō,
4. Militibus defeōs,
5. Armīs à militibus diu portātīs,
6. Tempestante brevī,
7. Meās litterās acceptās,
8. Ianuā aperta,
9. Consiliō eius auditō,
10. Urbe tōtā vastātū,
11. Iūnern longō,
12. Omnibus discipulis ridentibus,
13. Luce clarissimā,
14. Classe eōrum repulsa,
15. Cicerōne consule,
16. Puerōs monēs,
17. Nostrōs amīcis ad convivium venientibus,
18. Ėnā optimā in mensā posītā,
19. Hīc opere perfectō,

Some of Completions Received

1. .she spanked them all soundly and sent them to bed.
2. .The Romans kept saying, “Carthage must be destroyed.”
3. .we decided to .shop the rest of the afternoon.
4. .we hiked up our togs and happily hippity-hopped to Caesar’s palace.
5. .they killed a few small dragons and hit the sack.
6. .they stopped for a spot of tea and crumpets.
7. .the barbarians in the hold of the ship had a good time.
8. .she went to the movies with my best friend.
9. .George resisted temptation.
10. .they smiled, grinned, snickered, chuckled, laughed, gulped, and fell on the floor.
11. .they realized the city would be saved.
12. .we had our picnic at the beach.
13. .the wrecking crew asked for a raise.
14. .they drove the bus driver crazy by singing the same song over and over.
15. .she ran out of money
16. .Caesar walked in.
17. .the teacher gave a pop test.
18. .the boys were able to fish again.
19. .mother put away the good dishes.
20. .we thought we’d go to Dallas before they arrived.
22. .teacher will probably think of something else for us to do.
23. .may we work on our algebra?

TEST CORRECTIONS

In order to insure that students go over their test papers after they have been returned instead of merely looking at the grade and throwing them into the waste basket, the following plan has been suggested: the teacher puts no mark on the test except the number of errors made and a grade. On a separate piece of paper the teacher will record the number of errors and the questions missed for each student. When the paper is returned to the student, he must then go over every question in an effort to determine whether it is correct or incorrect. The number of errors marked at the top of the paper tells him how many mistakes he must find and correct. He may use his textbook or other helps in checking for errors. When he feels he has made all the corrections, he turns his paper in a second time for the teacher to check. The teacher keeps returning the paper to the student until he has found all the errors and made all the corrections. A bonus may be given to the student who finds and corrects all errors the first time.

TAPES ON THE AENEID

Since it is practically impossible for students to read all twelve books of the Aeneid in Latin during the school year, many teachers assign the remaining books to be read in English translation. One method which should prove effective and interesting to the students is to divide the class into small groups of three or four students to a group. Assign each group a book of the Aeneid to read in English, summarize, then write a dramatization with members of the group taking the various parts. The dramatization is taped and the tapes are played for the entire class. The writing and taping are done outside of class. Many students have tape recorders in their homes and most schools have sample or practice tapes that can be used over and over.

"LET'S PLAY BALL"

An adaptation of a baseball game takes the monotony out of grammar and vocabulary drills. Two students are selected the day before the game to serve as captains. These students are instructed to make out a long list of questions which may be answered briefly with one or two words. These questions may be verb or noun forms, vocabulary, grammatical constructions, etc. Each captain makes his own list of questions. On the day of the game, the teacher divides the class into two teams, each serving under one of the captains who will act as pitchers. The students and the captains have no previous knowledge of the persons who will be on each team. After the teams are selected, the captain (pitcher) of each team appoints one person to serve as catcher, one as first baseman, second baseman, third baseman, and scorekeeper. The teacher serves as umpire. Every student takes his turn at bat in a definite order without substitutions or changes of any kind. One team goes to the field and the other takes turn at bat. When the first batter is up, the captain, who stands in the center of the room, fires a question at the batter and catcher. If the batter answers the question correctly before the catcher does, he advances to first base. If the catcher answers the question before the batter, the batter is out. The second batter comes up and the process is repeated. If the batter answers correctly first, he advances to first base and the batter who is already on first base is allowed to move to second. Scores can be made only when a batter on third base is allowed to move to home base. At any time the pitcher (captain) may turn to a base and fire a question at the person on base and the baseman. If the baseman answers first, the batter is out; if the batter answers first, he moves on to the next base. After three outs in each inning, the teams change sides.

OPERATION: SEARCH

To enrich and supplement the daily discipline of the Latin language study, I require a parallel study related to the study of Latin. For the first nine weeks students read and summarize the Greek and Roman mythology of Edith Hamilton. During the second nine weeks, to throw the spotlight of illumination on the Roman era, the students are required to read an historical novel with a Roman background. During the third nine weeks the student should be impressed with the vast amount of scholarship that has been devoted to the study of the Roman era and should read as much non-fiction material as possible. Therefore we have Operation: Search.

We use three libraries for our search: the school library, the city library, and the classroom library. First, I present an outline of nine areas:

I. Reference Books
II. Language (books written in Latin, word study and derivatives)
III. Roman Literature
IV. Roman History
V. Roman Culture
VI. Classical Fine Arts
VII. Archeology
VIII. Travel Today
IX. Magazines.

Armed with the outline we go as a class to the library and begin our search. On 3 X 5 cards, each student is to find and look at two books for each area and to list these books on his card. The student is to repeat this process at the city library and in the classroom library. Next, he is to read as many pages as he can from as many areas as he can and write a brief summary on what he has read.

The fourth nine weeks we concentrate on "Facientes Nostram Rem" ("Doing Our Thing"). Again I present an outline of suggestions and encourage as much creativity as possible. This can be in the form of research on special interests such as astrology, archeology, etc.; translation of something into Latin; reading Latin plays, stories, etc.; study of linguistics, newspapers, models, original poems, puppet shows, etc.
A SPOONFUL OF SPANISH
Most methods courses advise against free composition until the third or fourth semester in a new language. Controlled composition is used until this period of development. Sooner or later, however, the student must acquire a written style using all his knowledge of his new language structures, idioms, grammar, etc. If free composition is tried too early, the results are sometimes disastrous, but the desire of expressing himself is present and must not be suppressed indefinitely. The teacher will decide when the students can move from controlled to free composition.

At any stage the actual writing of the composition should follow the general rules for writing in English:

1. Reading of poem (from book, board, poster or transparency).
2. Visually supported presentation and practice with vocabulary.
3. Practice with verb forms — making question and answer or chain drills.
4. Suggestions by students of alternate descriptions of the subject of the rhyme: (These should be put on the chalk board.)
5. Presentation by teacher of any added vocabulary and structure she thinks is needed.
6. Writing a paragraph about the central figure of the rhyme (a butterfly perhaps) in accordance with the descriptions that are in the poem and on the board.
7. Reading by students of each others’ work to check for accuracy.
8. Reading by students of their descriptions to others and later to the class.

The teacher who supplied the idea reports that 145 of her students were able to write a paragraph.

Fútbol

Put the following football field on the blackboard or have a transparency made of it.

8. Ball must move ten yards in four downs, the ball goes to the other team on the yard line at which the ball was resting.
9. FUMBLE (Challenge) — if two persons in a row miss the question, the other team may challenge. If challenger answers correctly, his team takes over the ball at the yard line at which it was resting.
10. Captain always starts the plays, but if he misses the question on a challenge, he may designate player to answer next. In all other plays, the players are rotated in order (up and down rows, other methods).
11. Touchdown is six points. Persons answering touchdown question must answer the next question to score the extra point. After touchdown, other team takes over on its 20 yard line.

It is up to the teacher to decide which kinds of questions to use. The students’ job may be to give the response from a stimulus — response drill. It may be to spell aloud in the “Spanish Alphabet”. It may be to answer a direct question or it may be to obey an instruction given in Spanish.

CHRISTMAS CARDS (Team Teaching)

Many projects can be done for credit in both art and Spanish courses if the teachers of the two classes coordinate their efforts. Students in either class would enjoy making Spanish Christmas cards. Here are some suggested greetings to use:

Que la Navidad y el Año Nuevo que se acercan sean muy felices para usted y los tuyos.

Que el gozo de LA NAVIDAD perduere en su corazón.

Bendiciones en Navidad y Próspero Año Nuevo también.

Que la asombrosa historia de la Navidad llene vuestro corazón de profundo gozo.

Que esta Navidad esté plétera de bendiciones de Dios; que éstas continúen durante el Año Nuevo.

Que la estrella de Belén ilumine vuestro camino, y que tengáis dicha y paz en esta Navidad.

FELIZ NAVIDAD
FELICES PASCUAS
FELIZ AÑO NUEVO

USING TEACHING THEORY

At the beginning of each school year I attempt to convey this thought to my students: Language is a product of the human mind. Words used in each language are merely abstractions of reality. They are arbitrary symbols used as representatives of various objects, emotions, actions, attitudes, etc. The spoken or written word is never the actuality itself. If a definite relationship existed between words and what they represent, then the various languages of the world would be unnecessary. There would be only one language consisting of one fixed set of symbols.

As in English and other languages, Spanish has its own set of symbols to represent ideas. This unique set of symbols differentiates it from other languages.

To learn Spanish successfully, one must learn from the beginning to think in the language. He must learn to visualize in his mind what each concept represents. Attempting to translate the thought into English will become only a stumbling block.

As a Spanish teacher, I have used the following methods in guiding my students to think in Spanish, or Think Spanish:

1. To test my students’ ability to think in Spanish, I often require them to illustrate in picture form, the main idea expressed in the Spanish phrase.

2. When expressing themselves in Spanish the students must use complete thoughts. All vocabulary must be used in complete Spanish phrases.

3. Instead of asking students to translate from Spanish into English, I use this procedure: Students are asked questions in Spanish over assigned material and expected to answer in Spanish.

4. In order to gain a better understanding of the Spanish language, students are asked to present many conversations in class. FOR PROPS THEY USE THE OBJECTS MENTIONED IN THEIR CONVERSATIONS. This gives them an association between the objects and the Spanish words used to represent them.

In my opinion, learning is much easier for students when it proves to be fun. Therefore, I provide activities for the students that encourage them to use their own creativity. A few of the activities my students have enjoyed are the following:

1. The students have made posters representing many of the Walt Disney animals with their Spanish names (Ed note: Materials from Editors Press Service can supply these — see Bibliography)

2. Also, they have made notebooks containing many colored pictures of animals. Under the picture of each animal the Spanish name has been written.

3. When studying rooms in the house and furniture in the house, students make floor plans. They label each room by its appropriate Spanish name. Then they draw furniture for each room and label it in Spanish.

4. To learn completely the Spanish words used in referring to clothing, each student compiles his own catalog. This catalog represents his clothing store. He first chooses a Spanish name for his catalog. Then inside the catalog, he features the latest styles for men, women, and children. Everything is labeled in Spanish. He also includes in his catalog, prices, sizes, and colors of each featured item.

5. To learn effectively the words used for food or food items, the students prepare grocery ads, and make attractive menus.
6. To teach students the months of the year, the days of the week, and special holidays, I require them to make an accurate Spanish calendar containing all this material.

7. When studying weather expressions, each student prepares a special weather report and presents it in class.

8. Students prepare many original dialogs to present with a partner in class. This gives them more confidence in using the Spanish language.

9. Students are encouraged to be continuously on the alert for anything that pertains to Spanish. Then they are asked to share their findings with the class members.

NON-STOP WRITING FOR LANGUAGE CLASSES

Non-stop writing is not an original innovation. It was mentioned in a book and I have supplemented and used the idea in seventh grade English classes and high school Spanish classes.

Both seventh grade English classes and high school Spanish classes are directed to write without stopping for five minutes. They write anything in English for the English classes and in Spanish for Spanish classes. If they can think of nothing but words, then they write words. If they are able to write thoughts, then they write thoughts. If they become stranded on a word or a thought, the thought or word is written over and over and over until new ones come. When time is called, words are counted and amount divided by five. Score is kept and compared with fellow students' and with self average of previous day.

For two weeks, the classes had five minutes a day which they eagerly anticipated and begged for. Not only were they surprised upon writing so many words and/or thoughts, but they vented a lot of private feelings and frustrations that young people have. After each session, they disposed of their papers if they wished.

A class of immature seventh grade students was especially satisfied after writing. Several students were non-achievers, academically, until now. One student wrote only forty-five words in five minutes. A discreet glance revealed many illegible, some slang and even vulgar words. This student diligently counted them, cat, dog, the, included the inelegant words, and kept a careful score each day.

First year Spanish students wrote only words in Spanish. These were gratified to visualize the mountain of Spanish words they hadn’t realized they knew.

Second year Spanish students wrote thoughts. From this they gained satisfaction and voluntarily proof-read their work.

After two weeks of five minute writing, it was suggested that they now “Meditate” for five minutes and then were timed, writing their “meditations.” At this point, many asked for critical viewing of their papers.

Eventually the English and Spanish classes will be assigned creative writing perhaps with a suggested topic. Hopefully, they will now have much more confidence in themselves, and enjoy writing.

Whatever the results or follow-up, the foregoing has been most satisfying to students and teacher. To the student, because many, for the first time in their lives, were filling pages with their own work. Others were frantically releasing pent-up emotions and frustrations. To the teacher, the sessions have been exceptionally rewarding; achievement, and satisfaction are evident in the actions and faces of the students.

1 Contributor unnamed from The Underachieving School, by John Holt

¿QUE HACE USTED POR LA MANANA?

Me levanto  Me visto  Me lavo  Bajo al comedor

Me desayuno  Me pongo la chaqueta  Salgo de la casa  Subo al omnibús

Bajo del omnibús  Entro en la escuela  Me quito la chaqueta  Me siento y estudio mis lecciones
This is a little drill work which relieves the monotony and appeals to all because it has some action. The stick figures and captions are on the blackboard for a few days until you wish to erase them. You may wish to make an overhead transparency of them for permanence.

At the question “¿Qué hace usted por la mañana?” the students stand and go through the recital with proper motions such as “subo al omnibus” (make a step up), “me pongo la chaqueta” (pretend to put on a jacket), “salgo de la casa” (pretend to open door), etc. As many or as few statements as desired can be used, or changes may be made to suit the class. Students may take turns leading the class.

More Games

“Who am I” or “¿Quién soy yo?” One person thinks of a famous man or woman in history or literature either living or dead such as Cinderella or Napoleon. The others must ask him questions in Spanish that can be answered by yes or no. Such as: “Are you a fictional character?” “Are you living now”, “Did you live in the 17th Century?”, “Did you live in the United States?”, etc. When anyone recognizes the character, he becomes the next player.

“What’s my line?” or “¿Qué es mi trabajo?” Here, students ask questions such as “Do you work with your hands?”, “Do you make a lot of money?”, “Do you work indoors or outdoors?”, etc. until someone guesses the occupation. This is also good for learning the various occupations in Spanish.

The first year class can soon play the game “What do I have?” or “¿Qué tengo yo?” I have a collection of dozens of miniature objects — food, furniture, animals, modes of transportation, etc. One person picks out an object and conceals it in his hand. Each person must ask him a question about it. “Is it an animal?”, “Is it white?”, “Is it in this room?”, etc. As their vocabulary grows, they can ask more questions.

We also play:

Password

Double or nothing, and for practice in numbers, “The Price is Right” with advertisements from magazines.

Once a month, the second year classes put out a newspaper “un pocho de todo” in Spanish which has editorials, sports section, “Dear Abby” (Querida Rosita), lost and found, cartoons, and a crossword puzzle. Each month the staff is changed to give everyone an opportunity to write.

COMIC BOOKS

I use comic books which are translations of English comics. I am sure the students have read. They already know the characters and the plot and can “guess” many unknown words in the story. I realize this is not teaching “integral culture” in the class, but it gives the students a feeling of accomplishment which may be needed more than the “culture” obtained from another source. These are used during the second semester of second year Spanish and are used sometimes individually and sometimes by the entire class.

USE OF REALIA IN SPANISH CLASS

From OBJECT — To PICTURE — To WRITTEN WORD — To PATTERN SENTENCES — To ORIGINAL SENTENCES

Introduce the vocabulary and drill on pronunciation with the use of real or plastic fruits, empty cartons, jars, etc., for visual support. A magazine picture file is helpful for drill to learn vocabulary. Place on bulletin board. Removable captions may be withheld at first, added when writing is presented, and left out again for spelling tests. (See conversation card approach in All Language Section) Here are a few constructions aside from simple nouns which can be practiced with the cards:

Me gusta (n)

Me gusta el melón.

Me gustan las uvas.

Adjectives — position, agreement

La manzana es roja.

El plátano es amarillo.

Las fresas son rojas.

Direct object pronoun

La carne

La como.

El pan

Lo como.

For variation, a game can be made out of a drill of direct objects. The teacher says “I am on a diet (shows card).” “Do I eat butter?” The answer (No you don’t eat it) requires the use of the direct object pronoun.

Real articles of clothing (donated or bought second-hand) can also be used for realia. Here are two drills that can be developed with them.

1st year — Lleva blusa blanca. (She is wearing.)

advanced — No me queda. Me queda grande. No es de mi medida. (It doesn’t fit, etc. It isn’t my size.)

Students may wish to present a fashion show with a pretaped commentary and student models.

FIGHTING BOREDOM?

Careful minute by minute planning is one key to good discipline. Since your class plan divides the hour into segments anyway, you might tell the class the schedule. Have one student tap a bell at the end of each segment. This passes around much responsibility. Students know how long each segment is to last. There is more participation on the part of all students. They become involved in the activities of the class. This type of planning is especially valuable when breaking your class down for small group work.

TEST REVIEW TROUBLE?

Don't bore the students who made good grades. Have a choice of related work for them to do while the teacher works with the smaller group. These "free" students may listen to tapes through earphones; read articles; make a project; draw; listen to records by using earphones; read books; play games available in classroom; or make recordings — to name a few. This has a good effect on those working on the test. They work more seriously so they will have a privilege next time.

TIME

A cardboard or wooden clock with movable hands is a very effective device for teaching time if you don't have a clock in your room.

OVERHEAD PROJECTOR

The overhead projector can be used very effectively as a means of presenting additional drills in sentence structure and verb conjugations to show agreement of gender, number, etc.

An electric typewriter with primary print is best for this, if available. The primary print will produce a larger, and consequently, more legible print. After preparing your material, it can be transferred to a transparency by a Thermofax Copier. Written captions should be made on separate "overlay" transparencies so they can be used only if needed.

These transparencies supplement the drills presented in the text and on the tapes and add variety to material which is often repetitious and dull.

Example: (The visuals are available on predrawn transparency masters by 3-M Company.)

(Visual — boy pointing at a person speaking) Do you speak Spanish? Yes, I do.

(Speaker pointing at himself while talking) Do you people speak Spanish? Yes, we do.

(Boy pointing at a group of people talking) (Same as second visual) Does he? Yes, he does. Do they? Yes, they do.

These ten questions and answers can be used on any verb in any tense in most languages. Different visuals can be used to change the verb. They make a more interesting way to practice verb forms without using the usual conjugation.

PRACTICING NUMBERS

Students can learn numbers without much difficulty when they are presented every day, but they need review to retain them. A good way to practice is to use a connect-the-numbers game to draw pictures. Any picture from an animal to a cathedral will do, but those with nearly all straight lines are best.

Place up to 60 or so numbers on the design — the students see only these numbers, not the picture at first. By drawing a continuous line from number to number (these may be written in the language or given orally), the picture is revealed. Do not give the numbers in order — for example, have them draw a line from 1 to 17 to 84, etc. Little by little the lines will cause the picture to be revealed.

For drilling, try to ask questions that will elicit the same answer.

Example: What's the weather like in the fall? How is it in the fall? Is it cool and windy in the fall? Isn't it cool and windy in the fall? When is it cool and windy? In what season is it cool and windy?

CONVERSATION

In my second level Spanish class of 9th graders, I encourage my students to use their foreign language conversation other than in a formal classroom manner.

We have an informal conversation period during the first ten or fifteen minutes of the class period to allow the students to talk about anything they wish in Spanish. They agreed this would be better for all if it were conducted in an organized manner and only one student talked at a time.

Students are given points when they add a sentence to our conversation. Although this is voluntary, these points contribute to part of the oral grade of each student. To make an "A" in oral work, the student must contribute at least four times a week, three time for a “B”, etc. The oral grade makes up one-fourth of the student’s overall grade.

I keep the conversation moving rapidly so as to keep up the interest. As soon as there is a lag, the conversation is considered ended. Usually the students have more to say than we have time for. Because of the time element, students prepare a phrase before class if they are not skillful in spontaneously using the language.

Usually in the beginning there will be one student talking about school, another about sports, another about home, etc. By about the second or third week, the conversation becomes more centered on one or two subjects each day. A student may mention something which many of the students are interested in and the others make responses or ask questions about it in a natural spontaneous manner. It is this natural use of formerly learned sentence patterns which I am seeking.

EL JUEGO DE BÉISBOL

EN LA CLASE DE ESPAÑOL

This learning game is a perennial favorite with my classes, both junior high and high school levels. It inspires 100 per cent participation, stimulates and motivates even the indifferent student, and appeals to both boys and girls. The small element of physical activity involved definitely adds to the enjoyment of the game, without in any way disrupting. It is especially successful as a review device but it will work well also with a limited amount of material, such as a single lesson or unit, making it usable early in the school year.

PROCEDURE: The class is divided into two teams, either by rows or by “choosing up sides”. Scorekeepers keep score on the chalkboard, indicating “outs” by X and scores by O. If the game is part of a “series”, a permanent copy is kept from game to game. The group decides before beginning the game the number of chances or “strikes” a player will be allowed on a question, one or three. The game can be made more complex by the teacher-umpire’s assigning a base-value to each question as it is presented. A simple question correctly answered may be worth only one base, while a question of greater difficulty or several parts may be worth two bases or even a home run.

Questions are asked by members of the opposing team who indicate by hand signal that they have a question to offer. Each questioner is expected to know the correct answer to his question. The “batter” selects the person to give him a question, but it is understood that the opportunity to question must be distributed as fairly as possible among the whole team.

The four corners of the room serve as the bases. If the “batter” answers his question correctly he proceeds to first base (or farther, according to the base value of his question), and waits for the next player to answer his question. If the answer is correct, he proceeds to the next base; if it is not, he remains on his base until he may legally advance. When he reaches home plate a score is recorded.

ACTIVITIES FOR MOTIVATION

1. Order from the American Bible Society tracts in Spanish of the Christmas and Easter stories. These may be used as bookmarks and students will find many cognates in these readings.

2. Older students like to hear the story of quail as told in Exodus 16 and read from the Santa Biblia.

3. A nacimiento is assembled this time and is the subject of much conversation.

4. Red peppers are collected in the fall to be dried and tied with red satin ribbons on a white-flocked tree. Miniature red birds complete the decoration.

I find this conversation increases their comprehension ability because they are applying previously learned patterns to real life. The students look forward to this time, especially if they have something they want their classmates to know about. It increases their vocabulary because they must look up nouns they are not familiar with. It is not unusual to have students who contribute eight or ten times a week once their interest is aroused.

Although the students must speak only Spanish throughout the class period, the conversation generally deals with classwork and is of a more serious nature. The conversational period allows for a more personal use of the language.

“TIC-TAC-TOE”

Use the ordinary playing squares for tic-tac-toe.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>seco</th>
<th>feo</th>
<th>grande</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>bonito</td>
<td>alto</td>
<td>limpio</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>largo</td>
<td>mojado</td>
<td>gordo</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Antonym version

| 572 | 68 | 500 |
| 3,000 | 763 | 4,000 |
| 900 | 73 | 960 |

Scoring squares

Numbers version (to be read aloud)
Fill each square with a language challenge. You might use a number to be read aloud in Spanish or possibly a word to be defined in Spanish, or another word whose antonym is to be given. Half of the class is on the O team and the scorekeeper puts an O in the squares containing the words or numbers which that team deals with successfully. The other half is on the X team and the scorekeeper puts an X in the squares containing the words dealt with successfully by that team. The procedure is like that of any game of tic-tac-toe.

A VARIATION ON THE GAME OF “BINGO”

Leave out the letters at the top and replace each with a splash of color (use colored pencils after the ditto for the squares has been run). Then you can call such things as “yellow 32” (amarillo treinta y dos) to extend the educational value of the game. The game could also be adjusted to practice days of the week or months of the year, etc.

A RECIPE FOR PUTTING MORE “CLOUT” IN YOUR “LINGO”

1 Piñata (any size or color) 1 Piggy bank (with a cute face)

100-200 “Piñata” questions 25-45 Lively students

1 Enthusiastic teacher 1 Long-suffering Principal

(Serve on a Spanish Holiday)

First prepare the students by teaching them the 100-200 “Piñata” questions and answers using all the idiomatic expressions you can when asking about the weather, their classes, their clothes, holiday customs, families, etc. Suggest that at least, one person make a piñata for extra credit (of course). Announce that on a certain date (like October 15) you will begin “the piñata questions”. Place the piggy bank with the cute face on your desk and suggest that the students start saving their pennies. Then explain that each person will have a chance to answer two questions (asked by the teacher in Spanish) each time you have “piñata” questions (three days a week, at least). If the student does not answer the question in correct Spanish he puts a penny in the piggy bank. (The bank is passed by a student who is a Simon Legree when it comes to collecting). As soon as possible the piñata should be hung tantalizingly above the heads of the class so that it can be admired and thumped and measured many times before La Navidad or El Día de los Reyes Magos.

Ask a student to take the pennies from the piggy bank, buy the candy and fill the piñata. Always invite one of the principals or counselors to witness the breaking of the piñata. It is great fun to start by blindfolding the shortest girl, then the shortest boy and allowing each person three swings at the piñata until it is broken. Sometimes it takes a while — but a good time is had by all, including the principal.

MOCK OAS MEETING

Pan American Day may be celebrated each year in your Spanish classes to combine fun and learning. To avoid making involved explanation, each class holds its own little OAS meeting, concluding with a “fiesta” of cookies and punch. Each student has a role in the proceedings, and preparations are made well ahead of time. One student explains the organization and purpose of the OAS; one student tells how the Pan American Union evolved; others explain the meaning of the “Good Neighbor Policy” and the “Alliance for Progress”. Other students take the roles of the different countries which would be represented and prepare a short explanation of which country they are representing. All of the proceedings are in Spanish, and the chairman usually begins by reading several paragraphs from the previous year’s speech of the OAS chairman. This is found in the magazine, published by the Pan American foundation.

America,

We also decorate a school showcase window with an announcement of Pan American Day and different artifacts and realia from the various countries. Several times students have made flags of each country in the Organization of American States.

RECIPE FOR LEARNING

I have a little method which I use to teach parts of the body and clothing in Spanish I. As a beginner, I draw a cartoon on the blackboard as I “LECTURE” all in Spanish. To be really effective, the method should be used at the first of the semester and repeated at intervals. I start by telling the class “Voy a enseñarles algo del cuerpo humano.” Then I begin drawing a huge round head. “Esta es la cabeza del hombre. Aquí están los ojos. Aquí están las orejas...” etc. The third time I “lecture” by using the cartoon method, I have them telling me what clothing to dress “el hombre” in and even what colors to use.
The fourth time I “lecture”, I draw the picture and have them fill in the vocabulary for the blanks that I leave beside “el hombre”.

I have found that the more outlandish my drawing looks, the more the students pay attention. I really do pretty good art work but I found that exaggerated features work much better to teach them parts of the body and clothing vocabulary.

RADIO-SHORT WAVE

Use the radio or short wave radio in order to create interest outside the classroom. Assign certain students at various times of the year to listen to and report on radio stations from Mexico and Latin America. These reports could include weather, news, and local advertisements.

RECIPES FOR TEACHING SPANISH

The familiar children’s stories provide a rich source of easy vocabulary learning. An additional benefit which students gain from “The House That Jack Built” is the strengthening in the use of and proper syllabic stress in the preterite tense, one of whose difficulties is the shifting of stress to the last syllable from the penultimate syllable to which they have become accustomed in the present tense. The rhythm of the familiar chant and the fact that the English equivalents are mostly single-syllable words eventually train students to put the accent on the proper syllable. The entire tale uses the preterite 71 times, and the only irregular verb is “hizo”.

The story begins: “Esta es la casa que hizo Juan.” Then, “Esta es la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan,” followed by “Esta es la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan,” and “Este es el gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.” The final sentence is, “Este es el caballo y este es el perro y ésta es la pipa del granjero que sembró el maíz, que comió el gallo que cantó al amanecer, que despertó al padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto, que bebió a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.”

I give the students a copy of the story, but we do not spend time on vocabulary learning as it is revealed gradually as we learn to say the lines. The story is introduced by showing the story book pages on the opaque projector. A later variation consists of turning the pages of the book in front of the class as a quick visual clue. Then, using finger puppets which have been made of felt in exact likenesses of the storybook pictures, I give the cue by waving the puppet which represents the object in the clause being said. The teacher may want to “wear” the 10 most important puppets at first to establish the story speed, but the class enjoys the challenge of lining up in order with one puppet each and having to remember to sway their puppets in time to the rhythm of the story.

When well learned, the story may be used without props occasionally for a quick review, but, with or without puppets, variation may be gained by having the sentences pass from individual to individual, row to row, or done chorally. The important thing is to maintain the rhythm, even from the beginning. The words fall into place eventually, and the problem of proper stress dissolves into (almost) nothing.

La Casa Que Hizo Juan

Esta es la casa que hizo Juan.

Esta es la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Esta es el gallo que cantó al amanecer, que despertó al padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto, que bebió a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el joven andrajoso y roto que besó a la joven solitaria y triste, que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado, que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto que besó a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el gallo que cantó al amanecer, que despertó al padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto, que besó a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el granjero que sembró el maíz, que comió el gallo que cantó al amanecer, que despertó al padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto, que besó a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

Este es el caballo y éste es el perro y ésta es la pipa del granjero que sembró el maíz, que comió el gallo que cantó al amanecer, que despertó al padre reluciente y limpio, que casó al joven andrajoso y roto, que besó a la joven solitaria y triste que ordenó la vaca del cuerno arrugado, que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la malta que había en la casa que hizo Juan.
arrugado que volteó al perro que persiguió al gato que mató a la rata que se comió la mela que había en la casa que hizo Juan.

USE OF LIVE RADIO BROADCASTS

Shortwave or AM radio programs, produced in Spanish, may be used in a variety of ways to bring interest and information to the classroom.

1. A student who listens to shortwave may pinpoint on a map of the Spanish-speaking world the location of stations heard, along with date and hour heard. Listing the hour shows the interesting variation in usage of time in the different countries, as some use the 12-hour and others the 24-hour clock.

2. News summaries may be presented on a weekly basis.

3. Programs may be taped in their entirety for playback for class use. Commercials may be learned quickly and sung. Radio plays can be adapted to classroom use. A simulated broadcast or newspaper can be made up which includes news, weather, sports, advertisements. Students have to come to grips with bullfighting terminology in the sportscast as well as the Spanish spelling or pronunciation of ball terms which are adaptations of the English words.

4. Students can keep a year-long (or semester or six weeks) weather log for one or several cities of Spanish culture. This may be found on shortwave stations or on travel agency ads featured on some local stations.

5. Some radio programs offer free or low-cost material or invite comments. This is excellent written practice for the student.

6. A boy and girl team may record, memorize, and imitate a Latin-American man-woman broadcasting team and give a two minute rapid-fire broadcast.

7. A recording from various countries will show the students quite dramatically the varieties of pronunciation, intonation patterns, and speaking tempos to be encountered in the Spanish-speaking world.

UNITS OF STUDY

Present units of study on various Latin American Nations. Assign certain sections to students. One could be responsible for presenting the history; another, geography and location; still another, culture and literature; people and characteristics; food and festivals; etc.

In this way many can have a meaningful part in an interesting unit aside from routine classroom instruction.
A Flick of Flies

¡Es el elefante!
DAYS OF THE WEEK

There is an old tale told to me by my father to teach me the days of the week as well as what “un domingo siete” means.

In an old village lived a man who was ridiculed by the children because of his being a hunchback. In despair he left the village and wandered into the forest. He found a huge tree which unknown to him was enchanted, climbed its inviting branches and fell asleep. In a short while noise awakened him and he saw dwarfs singing and dancing around this tree. They chorused:

“lunes, martes, miércoles tres...”

over and over. The surprised man came down and told the dwarfs he could add to their song. They consented and the intruder added:

“... jueves, viernes, sábado seis.”

This made the dwarfs very happy and they wished to reward their new friend with one wish. The deformed man asked that his hunchback disappear. The dwarfs instructed him to rub his back on the magic tree. The man did so, and presto— he was perfectly normal.

The happy man returned to the village whereupon another sad hunchback inquired how to find this tree.

The second jorobado found the tree and waited for the little people who appeared soon singing over and over:

“lunes, martes, miércoles tres
jueves, viernes, sábado seis.”

The second intruder jumped down and added:

“y domingo siete.”

The dwarfs were unhappy with the discord and intrusion so he told them to rub his back on the tree where to his horror a second hump appeared on his back.

“un domingo siete” is the equivalent for the French “faux pas”. When someone says “Salió con un domingo siete” it implies the person goofed.

TAN! TAN!

Game to learn colors

Materials: Ribbons of all colors to be learned or strips of construction paper.

One person is chosen to leave the room. Another person acts as monitor to hold ribbons and decide with class what color they choose.

ident knocks and says “¡Tan! ¡Tan!”

---

FLES

Class asks: “¿Quién es?”
Person gives own name
Class asks: “¿Qué buscas?”
1st student: “Cinta”
Class asks: “¿De qué color?”
1st person chooses a color
Monitor answers whether they have it or not “roja” (rosa, etc.)
“No hay roja --”
“Sí, hay roja”

As soon as color is guessed another person is chosen to leave the room and knock again.

This is an excellent time to stress the feminine gender without much explanation. Cinta rosa... cinta amarilla, etc... Children will discover the colors and ribbons are different from un libro amarillo, etc.

RECIPER FOR SPANISH FLES

Singing is a very important and enjoyable portion of a child’s language learning and FLES teachers should take advantage of such avenues.

Inasmuch as the beginning unit of the materials I was using was on identification, whether one is a boy, or a girl, I made up the following song.

(Tune is “The More We Get Together”, Growing With Music, Prentice Hall, Book 4, page 81. I use familiar tunes often and make up my own words.)

¿O quién es este niño, es Paco, es Pepe?
¿O quién es este niño, o quién eres tú?
¿Es Paco, es Pepe, es Juan o Felipe?
¿O quién es este niño, o quién eres tú?

¿O quién es esta niña, es María, es Elena,¿O quién es esta niña, o quién eres tú?
¿Es Elena, Catalina, es María, es Carmen?
¿O quién es esta niña, o quién eres tú?

Once the song has been learned and when visiting i: their rooms, we sing the song, but use their own names. We sing, “¿O quién es esta niña?” (I point to the girl, who is surprised, embarrassed, and delighted) as the class sings out... “Es Shirley,” “es Crystal...” We go all around the room and every child is mentioned.

SINGING THE VOCABULARY

My students had learned the basic articles of clothing and the following phrases:

¿Qué tiene tu papa?
¿Qué tiene tu mamá?
Mi papá tiene una chaqueta roja.
Mi mamá tiene una blusa blanca.
¿Qué tienes tú?
Tengo un abrigo negro.
I made up the following song using the basic vocabulary already learned. Tune: “Kookaburra”, Growing With Music, Book 4, Prentice Hall. This is an Australian round and children can do it in rounds in Spanish.

1. ¿Tiene tu papá sombrero blanco?
   ¿Tiene tu mamá sombrero negro?
   Sí, tiene dos sombreros
   Pero dí que tienes tú.

2. Tengo una falda roja y blanca
   Tengo una blusa muy bonita.
   Sí, tengo blusa y falda,
   Pero díque tienes tú.

3. Tengo una chaqueta muy bonita
   Tengo un abrigo y sombrero.
   Sí, tengo muchass cosas,
   Pero dí, que tienes tú.

4. Tengo una camisa y es blanca
   Mi papá tiene camisa blanca
   Sí, tengo yo camisa
   Pero dí que tienes tú.

Children are encouraged to make up their own combinations.

DOS Y DOS

Dos y dos son cuatro
Cuatro y dos son seis
Seis y dos son ocho, y ocho, diez y seis.

THE EXCULPATORY REFLEXIVE

Spanish grammar as well as cultural background can enliven many a language class with the following observations.

It is an impossible task to make Mexicans or latinos to be punctual human beings, for so long as latinos read, write and speak Spanish no amount of Anglo-Saxon pressure will change them.

Linguists should realize that the grammar and syntax of the Spanish language allow and almost make it mandatory for paisanos to miss appointments, be late, etc. . . . without any guilt.

The reason for such attitude is the Spanish grammatical form you can call the “exculpatory reflexive.”

Whenever a Mexican or any latino arrives two hours late he excuses himself, i.e., “se me hizo tarde” and he is off the hook. He observes, not explains, “it got late for me . . . “it” being some strange power that has forced him to be tardy. There is no way for him to say, “I was late” in acceptable Spanish — no way for him to assume personal blame. Such a linguistic dodge is the reflexive, this exculpatory reflexive which transfers the blame to some vague, never identified “it.”
Not only is this reflexive form an excuse for tardiness but it also relieves latinos from guilt and responsibility. If a child drops a toy, etc. he says “se me cayó” — “it fell from me.” If he loses his coat or jacket . . . “se me perdió” “it got lost from me.”

Mexicans and all latinos have a vested interest in protecting linguistic norms that free them from all guilt and responsibility. The exculpatory reflexive is their last most powerful defense against the insidious fallout of punctuality and let’s hope they use this weapon with courage and determination. ¡Viva Mexico! ¡Que Viva!

NUMBERS

For the primary children to learn the beginning numbers in Spanish a mixture of song and poem is most helpful.

Uno, dos, tres cho uno, dos, tres co
uno, dos, tres la uno, dos, tres te ¡Chocolate! ¡Chocolate!
¡Bate, bate el chocolate!

You can bring a Mexican beater to explain how Mexican chocolate is whipped with this wooden beater.

Use rhythm sticks, tune, whatever you choose:

Uno, dos y tres, cuatro, cinco, seis,
siete, ocho, nueve
I can count to ten!
MIX THOROUGHLY!
ALL LANGUAGES

VOCAW AND ECHO

Foreign language teachers in Tulsa developed a recipe for loosening the monolingual bind, and for building readiness for foreign language study in elementary school children. We named our advertising campaign VOCAW (Voices of Children Around the World, for modern languages) and ECHO (Echoes of Classical Heritage in Oklahoma, for Latin).

The ingredients are deceptively simple but the method of mixing them demands heretofore unused faith from teachers and highly precisioned self-control from students. For VOCAW we used three ingredients: one class of fourth graders studying a social studies unit, "Children Around the World", one class of junior or senior high school students studying French, German, Russian or Spanish, plus an administration that permitted the first two groups to get together.

For ECHO we used one class of sixth graders studying "Our American Heritage" in social studies class, one class of 9th grade or high school students studying Latin, and the administration of both elementary and secondary schools. As foreign language supervisor I helped Mrs. Ettaway Skinnace, Reading Supervisor K-12, advertise the VOCAW service to the fourth grade teachers. Both of us sent announcements to fourth grade teachers, and I notified foreign language teachers and elementary and secondary principals, so that absence from, and visits to schools could be worked out legally and smoothly. Next, several foreign language students attended a meeting of fourth grade teachers and told them that when a teacher wanted her fourth grade to hear "Voices of Children Around the World" to call the Foreign Language Supervisor. When a fourth grade teacher called me, I mailed her request to a foreign language teacher. The foreign language teacher in turn called the elementary teacher and the two of them decided upon a date and an hour for the VOCAW visit, gaining the consent of their respective principals, of course.

Now, with an actual booking in hand, the foreign language classes planned their visit with a minimum of presentation and a maximum of participation from the fourth graders. In fact, in order to insure total participation, the fourth grade class was broken up into small groups of from 3 to 6 children, with one high school student "teaching" each of the small groups. The same procedure was followed for Latin classes visiting sixth graders.

In small groups teen-aged "teachers" established a working relationship with the younger children immediately, while the children asked questions and repeated the new language without inhibitions. The excitement of learning a new language from a new friend created a joy in learning that almost crackled aloud in the classrooms. When each child took an active part, practiced the sounds aloud, associated them with objects, people or activities, he could remember more easily.

I had urged the foreign languages teachers to leave the children with "takehome language" because I knew that "takehome language" would be paydirt for the foreign language program. The teen-aged teachers outdid each other thinking of many ways to make the new language stick; they taught songs, played games, had each child handle a soft toy animal as he said its name, passed around plastic food, cardboard families, and farm animals, and left posters and tape recordings in the classroom.

We know that they succeeded because a few parents told us so, but the bulk of proof came to us in the letters the children wrote to their "teachers", thanking them for "taking time to teach me to count to ten in Spanish," "I'm glad you visited my class because I told my Mother how to say 'Mother' in German when I went home."

However, the "teachers" failed to recognize that the outstanding reason for their success was the fact that they were teen-agers. The children's letters repeated their impressions as human beings, "you were nice to us," "I hope that I was nice to you," "I hope you like it here," "It was fun and I hope you can come back", and even, "learning French is fun and easy and when I get to high school I'm going to take that course."

Time will tell about the pulling power of our advertising. But we do know that our foreign language readiness program also developed readiness for teaching in the high school students. One high school boy told his principal that he had so much fun that he would like to be a teacher. When the principal told me this I realized that VOCAW & ECHO had given him an opportunity to watch his students tasting success because they knew a foreign language, and had advertised his school in a feeder school. The greatest thing VOCAW and ECHO did was to use fun and play to increase learning.

TECHNIQUES FOR USE OF CONVERSATION CARDS

The use of objects in the classroom has long been considered vital to the teaching of vocabulary and oral use of the language. Most language rooms are, therefore, crowded with such objects. The teaching objectives can be attained through the planned use of attractive pictures of objects, and this approach is not limited by the size of the classroom.

The use of visual cards to supplement and reinforce textual materials can be effective if it is done regularly and if it follows a carefully constructed plan. These cards, used at first to teach simple words and linguistic patterns, can teach also many points of grammar. As more sophisticated cards are introduced, they can become conversation pieces to stimulate oral use of the language.

Drill with cards should not be done at irregular intervals, but should occupy a regular part of the daily schedule, perhaps as a break between periods of intensive concentration. Students and teachers will find it relaxing and interesting.

Cards should never be used without a careful plan. The possibilities for making them in various categories are endless. Here is a basic list (probably in the order that they should be taught): numbers, colors, family, home, school, fruits, miscellaneous foods, clothing, parts of the body, seasons of the year, sports. This list can, as students become proficient, be expanded to include all sorts of student interests.

Visual cards should be made of strong cardboard and should be uniform in size for convenience in storing. They should, at first, have no written words in English or the foreign language. Pictures should be in colors and should have both eye appeal and interest for students. They should be large enough that “Johnny on the back row” will have no difficulty in seeing all of the details of the picture. Pictures for the cards may be cut from magazines, but they should be clear, well-conceived pictures. Interesting situations intrigue students; people in the pictures should look like real people. Pictures of foods (fruits, vegetables, etc.) should look tempting.

After teaching the numbers to ten and the colors, teach members of the family. Begin by having students listen and repeat: “This is mother,” until they have memorized and are able to repeat correctly (responses should be in chorus by the entire class). Then, the question, “Who is this?” should elicit the response. “This is mother.” Single words should not be taught out of context; they should be taught as part of a linguistic pattern.

As new vocabulary is introduced and new linguistic patterns are learned, drill with the cards can become more sophisticated. For example, a bowl with apples, (some red and some yellow) should be shown and students should be able to answer these questions without hesitation: “What are these?” “How many apples are there?” “How many red apples are there?” “How many yellow apples are there?”

After the class has answered these questions with everyone participating in chorus, a specific question should be directed to one student, “John, do you like apples?” This helps to hold attention as students always know that one student will be asked a direct question. Another example would be in the use of family cards. As students learn the names of articles of clothing, and increase their vocabulary and use of linguistic patterns from textual materials, they are then able to discuss the color of mother’s clothing, whether she is pretty, large, small, etc. After some weeks, students are able to bring to class pictures of the members of their own families and to discuss them at some length without recourse to notes. These discussions should be limited to words and linguistic patterns already mastered in practice.

Once having mastered the elementary phases of card drill this technique can become as sophisticated as the teacher and students desire. Students will often volunteer to bring whole categories of cards in areas of their own special interests. The class should be intensively drilled with correct usage and vocabulary before the student attempts to use the cards. Ultimately, they are able to converse with some fluency on many topics.

The same cards can be used again and again in different ways. For example: singular and plural forms can be taught as well as use of adjectives and adverbs, idiomatic usage, masculine and feminine forms, verb usage, possessive pronouns, etc. For the creative teacher, possibilities are unlimited. Cards related to trips abroad could be used in more advanced classes in such categories as: procedures at the air terminal, registration in hotels, conduct on tours, conduct in a restaurant, conduct on campus during foreign study, social customs in various countries, professions, etc.

Conversation cards can be used by any teacher in any class; they cost very little; they can be exciting; and they encourage the student to use foreign language with some feeling of security because he is following a procedure which has become a part of his background of knowledge. They are not so boresome as ordinary pattern drills and they often accomplish more.

We do not advocate the use of visual cards to replace textual materials, but we do strongly recommend it as a practical reinforcement. Students still will need texts and laboratory practice.

Review Game With Conversation Cards

After some months of daily drill with conversation cards, a whole period can be given to review with everyone eagerly using the language. The class can be divided into two teams, each with a captain who calls on individual students to participate. All of the cards that have been learned in classes are mixed and turned face down on the teacher's desk. Students, as their name is called, go to the desk and draw a card. They then attempt to tell everything that has been learned from drill with that card. If they omit anything or make a mistake in usage or pronunciation, someone from the other side corrects them; this gives the opposite team a point. One person from each side keeps score; at the end of the period, the losers serve a treat to the winning team. This stimulates almost total participation and motivates students to use the language, effectively. Also, students have a feeling of security to know that they can do this, and are motivated toward independent language usage.
VARIATION ON SPELLING BEE

1. Divide into two to four teams.
2. Start easily with just dictation and for spelling.
3. Ask for the next line of a dialog used in class.
4. Ask a question and demand an answer according to the dialog.
5. Answer with any intelligent response appropriate.
6. Give a comment and have them supply a logical next line in a free dialog.

TEACHER EXCHANGE

A popular activity during Foreign Language Week was to have one day in which all foreign language teachers taught in a different language class. Students can be taught a brief lesson which brings out some natural analogies with the language they are studying. Students may ask questions pertaining to the culture or language. Slides of countries where the language is spoken may be used, and many other ideas derive spontaneously. Students were enthusiastic and many decided to add another language to their schedules for the following years.

NUMBERS GAME

I write numbers and equations on flash cards. The class is divided into two teams. The first one to say the number correctly advances one step or two or more, according to the value of the number determined by its difficulty. The first to cross the finish line is given a score and the next member of each team comes to the starting line. This continues through the whole class. The losing team pays some small forfeit to the winners.

RECIPES FOR TEACHERS

I like to make transparencies using colors to bring information to the students in a more vivid way. Temperature charts, rainfall, and land levels can be shown in a way that a student can’t help but understand.

SILHOUETTES

Cut out silhouettes of the students, and use for emphasizing use of “ser” with characteristics and inherent qualities.

Have student sit close to bulletin board on which is tacked a piece of construction paper. Shine the overhead projector toward student in such a manner as to form his profile on the paper. Trace around shadow of profile, cut out, mount on black construction paper and put ten or twelve on bulletin board at a time. Rotate from week to week. Describe silhouette such as, a tall boy, brunette, smart, handsome, intelligent, etc. Let students guess as to the identity.
SELECTED MATERIALS

(Ed. Note: This is merely a list of some of the sources mentioned in the recipes. It is not intended to be an exhaustive list of resources.)

American Bible Society
450 Park Avenue
New York City, New York 10022

Free list of publications, they distribute Bibles and Biblical literature in all languages at low cost.

Baptist Publishing House
Box 1575
El Paso, Texas 79914

SPANISH ONLY — Calendar with daily Bible readings 45 cents — Ready made Spanish Christmas cards — inexpensive.

A Spanish radio program entitled El eco español is available to those teachers who will supply blank tape for duplicating their own copies.

Write: Mr. Tom Warnock
Program Director
WOSU Radio
W. 19th Avenue
Columbus, Ohio 43210

The entire series has 32 fifteen minute programs and could be copied at slow speed onto 6 1800' reels of tape. You may prefer to send one reel only for a random sample of programs from the series.

Writing to the public relations department of any large firm will usually yield large, colorful pictures of their products which are perfect for the visuals recommended. Remember to be quite specific about the type of material you are seeking (e.g.: "Oversized, colorful posters illustrating your company’s product in use"). Use school letterhead.

Some companies you may wish to write are:

Carnation Milk Co.
5045 Wilshire Blvd.
Los Angeles, California 90036
(They also distribute an "information wheel" that gives facts about South American countries)

Del Monte
215 Fremont Street
San Francisco, California 94119

Sunkist Growers, Inc.
Consumer Service Division
Box 2706, Terminal Annex
Los Angeles, California 90054

Campbell’s Soup Company
Export Division
Camden, New Jersey

Killog’s International Division
Battle Creek, Michigan
(Mention the language you teach.)

Publications of interest to Spanish teachers are available from:

Editor’s Press Service
551 Fifth Avenue
New York, New York 10017

Their list of publications is free. They sell Españolamos magazine and numerous paperback reference books.

Transparencies and transparency masters can be ordered from a local dealer for 3-M products such as:

R. K. Black
2724 N. W. 39th Street
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73112

Dowlings Inc.
3017 North Stiles
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Pat White Audiovisual Company
1109 Hemstead
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Fairview Audiovisual
1515-B South Sheridan
Tulsa, Oklahoma

Ramboz, I. W. Spanish Program Materials
Banks Upshaw & Co.
Dallas, Texas

Taylor, Maurie N.
Classroom Games in French
National Textbook Co.
Skokie, Illinois 60076

Grobe, Edwin P.
300 Word Games for Foreign Language Classes
J. Weston Walch
Portland, Maine

Grobe, Edwin P.
175 Activities for Foreign Language Clubs
J. Weston Walch
Portland, Maine
Wagner, Rudolph F.
Lingua Gaines
J. Weston Walch
Portland, Maine

Wagner, Rudolph F.
A Conversational Approach to Foreign Language Learning
J. Weston Walch Co.
P.O. Box 658
Portland, Maine 04104

Bowmar Records
Recordings, songs, and games in Spanish, French, and German. Also supplementary booklets in Spanish for FLES.

George Campbell, Representative
Bowmar Company
P.O. Box 15424
Del City, Oklahoma 73135
Phone: (405) 671-0615

Bowmar Company
622 Rodier Drive
Glendale, California 92101
Phone: (213) 247-8995

The Guten Tag film series for teaching German is truly excellent. The teacher should inquire about loan possibilities at the Carl Schurz Service Center, AATG, in Philadelphia.

The Foreign Commerce-Foreign Policy Dept.
Chamber of Commerce of the United States, 1615 "H" Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20006

Has an interesting booklet, "Guide to Foreign Information Sources" for 25 cents.

The Belgian Embassy
3330 Garfield Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20008

Has many pamphlets, booklets, and pictures free about Belgium.

The German Information Center
410 Park Avenue
New York, New York 10022

Has many resources of books on German history, current information on news happenings, etc. for no charge to teachers.

The German Consulate
Box 66288
Houston, Texas 77006

Has many aids, many visuals, but also some brochures on cities, etc. for no charge.

The Austrian Embassy
2343 Massachusetts Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20008

Has a limited amount of pamphlets about Austria available free. For other sources check with:

U.S. Austrian Chamber of Commerce, Inc.
165 West 46th Street
New York, New York 10036

National Geographic Society
Washington, D.C. 20036

Back issues containing interesting articles on Germany are available from the Society for costs ranging from $1.50 — $4.50.

Information on Munich is available free from:

The Landeshauptstadt Munchen
Frenenverkehramt
8000 Munchen 2
Rosental 1/11 (Ruffinihaus)
Attention: I. A. Strobl,
Stadt Obersamtsrat

See your local VW dealer for colorful booklets on Wolfsburg.

The Kur and Verkehrsmalt Hinterzarten
7824 Hinterzarten
Hochschwarzwald, Germany

They can send you free brochures on their city and on the Schwarzwald.

The Bundeswehramt
5300 Bonn 7
Postfach 7120

They will send you many interesting magazines, books, etc. on the present day German Army for no charge.

The German Embassy
1742-44 "R" Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20009

Will send free copies of maps and brochures.
A FEW PROFESSIONAL BOOKS

Brown Lems and Harcleroad
AV Instruction: Materials and Methods
Third Edition, New York:
McGraw Hill, 1970
(about $12.00 including workbook)

An excellent instruction manual combining some theory with a great many highly practical ideas.

Valette, Rebecca M.
Modern Language Testing

This book presents simple ways to approach the measurement of achievement and includes several chapters of specific recipes for testing. Every teacher should own one.

Feldman and Kline
Spanish: Contemporary Methodology
Blaisdell, 1969

Rivers, Wilga
Teaching Foreign Language Skills
Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1968 (about $7.50)

This is not a "cookbook" but it is most readable and valuable.

Decanay, Fe R. and J. D. Bowen
Techniques and Procedures in Second Language Teaching
Dobbs Ferry, New York: Oceana Publications
($7.50)

The book is intended for use by teachers of English as a second language. It is extremely practical and packed with ideas that could be used by teachers of other languages.

Lee, W. R.
Language Teaching Games and Contests
Fair Lawn, New Jersey:
Oxford University Press, 1968
($1.15, paperback)

Most useful collection of games and ideas.

Mackey, W. F.
Language Teaching Analysis
Bloomington, Indiana:
Indiana University Press, 1968
($10.00)

An encyclopaedia of the theory and practice of second language teaching.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica
Review of Foreign Language Education

This annual volume is included in the price of the comprehensive membership in ACTFL (American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages). It is a gold mine of bibliography and should be in every professional library. It is sold separately from membership by:

Encyclopaedia Britannica
625 North Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois 60611

Volume III will be released in 1971. It contains references to several Oklahoma teachers.

A Guide for Instruction in Communication
Oklahoma Curriculum Improvement Commission, State Department of Education.
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

One of the present series of guides, it provides some good hints on teaching writing.

Smith and Leamon
Effective Foreign Language Instruction at the Secondary Level
Englewood Cliffs, N. J:
Prentice, 1969
($8.95)

A collection of readings. Your attention is called to Arendt's paper which gives a good step-by-step outline of audio lingual methodology.

Allen and Seifman
The Teacher's Handbook
Glenview, Illinois:
Scott Foresman and Co., 1971
($12.95)

This book provides a bibliography and a brief article on almost every curricular problem likely to face the teacher. The chapter on language teaching is an especially clear picture of the evolution of audio lingual methodology since 1965. Highly recommended.

Hester, Ralph, Editor
Teaching a Living Language
($4.95)

The editor and authors are proponents of the verbal-active method as used in Lenard's text, Jeunes Voix, Jeunes Visage. Whatever the label, this method stresses communication. Nothing is more important.
Altman, Howard B. and Robert L. Politzer
Proceedings of the Stanford Conference on Individualizing Foreign Language Instruction
Rowley, Massachusetts:
Newbury House Publishers, 1971

This conference, briefly described in The Modern Language Journal, October, 1971 offers a great deal of information about the individualizing of foreign language instruction. Special attention is called to Arendt's paper which provides strategies for curricular change. The editor, H. B. Altman, will be releasing two other volumes on the same topic in the coming year. One will be a collection of procedures for individualization.

The American Foreign Language Teacher
Post Office Box 7800
Detroit, Michigan

This is a remarkable new magazine. Little if any theory sees the light of day in its pages. A $3.75 subscription brings ideas for procedures from all over the country as well as material to xerox for class use. A must!
EVALUATION

The editors hope that everyone using Recipes for Teaching has been able to profit from at least one of the techniques and ideas that it presents.

We hope to produce subsequent editions of Recipes for Teaching and we ask you the favor of enhancing their value by making your own contribution to the next one or by sending us your suggestions for improvement of subsequent editions.

The editors want to know which ideas the teachers find most useful. They also want to know whether suggestions work and whether the sources listed are accurate and worthwhile.

Feel free to write an informal note and send it to:

Mrs. Patricia Hammond
Curriculum Specialist
for Foreign Languages
State Department of Education
4545 North Lincoln, Suite 164
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73105