This content analysis schedule for the Bilingual Education Center of Chicago presents information on the history, funding, and scope of the project. Included are sociolinguistic process variables such as the native and dominant language of students and their interaction. Information is provided on staff selection and the linguistic background of project teachers. An assessment is made of the duration and extent of the bilingual component, and the methods of second language teaching in general. Included is an analysis of materials, student grouping, tutoring, curriculum patterns, and cognitive development. The report also discusses self-esteem, learning strategies, the bicultural and community components, and means of evaluation. Attached are various graphs and tables which supply additional data.

USE NON-ENGLISH LANGUAGE: USE ENGLISH
II. Statement of Need

In Chicago, thirty thousand (30,000) school-age boys and girls use Spanish as their predominant language. Our current survey indicated that there were thirty-six thousand (36,000) non-English-speaking children in our public schools. This figure represents an increase of seven thousand (7,000) non-English speakers over the preceding year. Many of these newly arrived monolingual people settle in neighborhoods such as the Pilsen Community, where Spanish is often used to conduct daily business. In these communities, the children are forced to maneuver in the often conflicting cultures of the Spanish-speaking and English-speaking worlds. The dichotomy of these cultures is especially evident in the educational experiences of the children. School-community relationships are not fully developed because the expectations, customs, and language of school and teacher are often in conflict with those of home and parents.

Forty-four percent (44%) of the pupils in these communities are from low-income families. Teacher observations have disclosed that these students are not able to participate actively or give sustained attention in class activities because of their complete or partial lack of ability in the communicative skills of English. This inability of the students to understand what is being said in school results in fear, frustration, and a poor image of self. The need to communicate is thwarted, and the motivation to learn suffers.

Identified needs of these children have resulted in several programs of instruction and specialized services for bilingual children in the schools of Chicago. Recent intensification of effort in this direction has resulted in two federally-funded activities for Spanish-speaking children in the English as a Second Language (ESL) program. These activities are Teaching English as a Second Language (TESL) and the Intensive TESL Center.
The Teaching English as a Second Language program for the 1967-1968 school year, with 69 teachers and 36 Spanish resource teachers serving 6,610 public school and 640 nonpublic school pupils was an instructional and services program in 54 elementary schools and four high schools in 12 school districts. During fiscal 1969, the program focused on 45 schools in 12 schools districts to provide intensive instruction and extensive services for 4,897 pupils identified as most in need.

However, in the light of recent research and legislation, there is an urgent need to establish bilingual centers in target areas of Chicago where monolingual English and Spanish-speakers might learn together. Currently, the TESL programs only partially fulfill the need of the monolingual child. While they put intensified effort toward English-language learning, they fail to provide conceptual growth in subject matter at a normal rate of speed and neglect to emphasize the important asset of bilingual education for both the monolingual and bilingual child.

The influx of additional Spanish-speaking students and the need for bilingual education necessitate the creation of bilingual centers in five critical target areas, one at the Lafayette School, where an intensive TESL program has been in operation, another in the Jirka-Komensky mobiles in the Pilsen Community; a third and fourth in model cities areas at the Goudy Elementary and Harrison High Schools, and a fifth Center at Hawthorne, in the Lakeview community. In these areas of proposed activity, there are 31,633 resident children. In the districts that will be served by two of the Centers, approximately 70% of the children speak no English or are limited in English. Of this total 20,500 are Spanish-speaking. In the other three areas, 7,230 are Spanish-speaking. Approximately 714 of these children from the five areas will be directly served by the bilingual centers. Provisions will also be made for parent involvement as desired by each community.

INTRODUCTION

There are many classrooms in the Chicago public schools, as there are throughout this nation, where children of various ethnic backgrounds and cultures sit side by side but whose worlds never meet. Language and culture barriers isolate the children and develop problems that result in negative attitudes, serious retardation, racial conflicts, and dropouts from school.

The need for bilingual education in the Chicago public school system is clearly indicated in the 1970 school census, which showed that the schools now have more than 56,000 students with Spanish surnames, an increase of approximately 18 percent from the 1969 survey.

A similar survey in 1965 indicated that there were 12,863 children in the Chicago public schools who were newcomers to Chicago and needed help in learning English. The number of children who need to learn English has increased almost 500 percent in the last five years.

In Chicago, the complexity and difficulty of providing bilingual education is evidenced through the needs of not just one Spanish ethnic group, as in parts of Texas, California, or New York, but through many Spanish groups such as Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, and South Americans. Moreover, these groups are divided into many sub-groups such as Mexican-Americans--first generation and native since 1540--and Mexican-Nationals, as well as those groups reflecting inter-marriages.

The relatively sound 1971 economic status of Chicago with the lowest unemployment rate of any major United States city has drawn and continues to draw many new Spanish people into the city seeking jobs. For instance, estimates from current government records indicate thousands coming into Chicago each month; Illinois has over 500,000 Spanish people alone and many of these are moving into Chicago.

The 1970 Reading Achievement Survey of Chicago public schools reveals that Spanish-speaking students have the lowest level of educational performance of any identifiable ethnic group.

The Metropolitan Achievement Test administered in April 1970 to 193 Chicago public school third-grade children participating in the English as a Second Language activity revealed the reading level to be 2.5 and the mean age to be 11.4. The national norm for third grade pupils is 3.8 and the mean age is 8.4.

A factor which has a readily identifiable relationship to school performance and one for which the schools have both responsibility and potential resources for changing is reading achievement, a sine qua non for academic success. Children who are graduated from the eighth grade of the Cooper Upper Grad Center, which has an 81.9 percent Spanish-speaking student body, and destined to enter the Froebel Branch of Harrison High School, which has a 79.9 percent Spanish-speaking student body, are found to have an average reading score of 5.9 which is some two years below grade level.

An example of the level at which the problem begins to be apparent can be seen at Komensky Elementary School where 94.5 percent of the pupils are Spanish-speaking and where the average sixth-grader reads on the fourth grade level, evidencing two years of achievement retardation.

An antecedent factor inextricably related to all of this academic retardation is the well-documented language handicap with which Spanish-speaking children must work. Upwards of 10 percent of the children do not speak any English when they enter school. Those who do speak some English often do not have their English reinforced since the language spoken at home is Spanish. Correct speaking is effectively dealing with symbolic representation and its meaning in a language with which one has a degree of mastery, hopefully in auditory, oral, and conceptual areas. Consequently, the school dropout rate for Spanish-speaking students is the highest of the major ethnic groups in Chicago.

Statistics and observations, from competent workers in the field supported by a recently completed government funded study, point to an excessively high dropout rate among Puerto Rican school-age children residing on the North Side of Chicago. From the view of national productivity, a staggering potential wealth in human resources is being wasted.

These and other studies indicate that one of the main causes of the high dropout rate among the non-English-speaking children is the frustration that they experience in school.

Communities such as Lake View (District 3) have assessed the dire need for funding and personnel to solve the problems facing schools in the target areas, as shown in the fact sheet summary compiled by the Lake View Citizens' Council: (6.9) (Community Attitudes)

"The lack of bilingual education for our increasing Spanish speaking community is an urgent problem that must be dealt with now!!!

The complexities of urban society impose heavy demands on rural oriented Latin Americans. It is grossly unfair that our Spanish students are being denied their educational rights because of a language barrier. Their talents and vitality are being wasted as is their opportunity to become part of the mainstream of American life.

One third to one half of the 9,728 students attending five public grade schools, Lake View High School and two schools of the Catholic archdiocese are Latin American. An estimated 420 students are non-English speaking and approximately 2000 more have severe limitations in language and reading arts. E.S.E.A. Title I fund allotment to District #3 provides only 19 personnel; 5 T.E.S.L., 3 Spanish resource, 2 tutorial, and 9 School Community Representatives. Lake View High School, which receives the majority of the students, has no E.S.E.A. funding.

The Guide Line qualifications of extreme poverty under Title I of the E.S.E.A. Act are not relevant to the need of the majority of Chicago Latin Americans who are determined to stay off relief rolls and only 5,000 of the 59,000 Spanish speaking in Chicago receive welfare assistance. It is unthinkable that the qualities of independence and pride which so enrich our community should serve detrimental ends.

The need is for programs that provide training in English language skills while preserving the Spanish language, customs, and culture. Funding now coupled with extended efforts by volunteer and Community Agencies could unharness valuable human resources which are presently unutilized (sic) to their full potential and which are so needed by their families, their community and their city."

The actual instruction for staff will include:

1. Techniques in teaching ESL.
2. The teaching of reading*
3. The integration of Latin American and United States cultures and social studies.

The materials selection, adaptation development and coordination will include:

1. Reviewing and accessing pupil responses to known materials.
2. Adapting and creating teacher-made materials, including evaluative instruments, such as questionnaires and tests of behavioral objectives.
3. Seeking out and reviewing additional materials.

* for all staff, regardless of content-subject area of teaching responsibilities.

The Summer Program, for staff development, will follow essentially the same emphases, in a concentrated form. The work sessions, for example would be daily. The alternating schedule pattern set for the school year, with recapitulation and self-evaluation planned for alternating weeks will be maintained.

12.0 METHODS OF SECOND LANGUAGE TEACHING

(i.e.: all that apply; some projects may use a combination of methods)

1-Audio-lingual habit skills or behavioral approach. Emphasis on communication. Includes contrastive analysis of sounds (units) in both languages by teacher and students, student repetition of tapes and/or fluent teachers’ model sentence patterns until responses are automatic. Structural drills and dialogues are systematically presented. Includes direct association between object and word in second language in a sequence of patterns learned in complete sentences. Inductive-generalizations drawn from examples.

2-Transformational-cognitive approach
Acquiring an understanding of the structural patterns or grammatical rules of a language.

11.17 continued "during the morning [students] speak only English in the afternoon, Spanish P. p. 25"
but culturally different. We have to point out that although it is true that they are culturally different, by no means should they reject or scorn their culture or heritage. On the contrary, the school has within its walls the power to transform the students by letting them maintain their own unique identity and absorb the American culture little by little.

After analyzing the student's needs in terms of the cultural background, the following goals were accomplished:

- to acquaint the student with aspects of the American life in relation to the Latin American life, in particular Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, Cubans and other Latin Americans
- to cultivate and enlighten attitudes toward other cultures leading to a greater understanding among them
- to develop pride and confidence in their own culture
- to promote peace by promoting a better understanding of all people

Bilingual Classes

The bilingual class is made up of approximately 15 Anglo-speaking children and 17 Spanish-speaking children.

The Spanish teacher coordinates and directs the first fifteen minutes of the 40 minute period, at which time the language spoken to Anglos is Spanish.

The TESL teacher coordinates and directs the next fifteen minutes of the period at which time the language spoken to Spanish children is English.

The last ten minutes is spent in controlled conversation between Spanish and Anglo children speaking in small mixed groups.

Behavioral Objectives (Language - Spanish)

The Anglo children will practice and use in real life situations the Spanish they are learning in the classroom.

They will learn to communicate with Puerto Rican, Mexican and other Latin American students who are their peers. They use the patterns they have learned in the classroom.

This real life situation motivates them to be able to communicate without embarrassment in their new language. The various accents used will familiarize the Anglo children with this aspect of their new language.

The Spanish children will be the models for pronunciation, intonations, and accents for the Spanish speech patterns that the Anglos use. The Spanish children also participate in Spanish dialogues and conversation with the Anglo children.

Behavioral Objectives (Language - English)

The Spanish children practice and use in real life situations the English they are learning in the classroom.

They learn to communicate without fear or embarrassment with Anglo children and they also become accustomed to different accents.

The Anglo children are models for pronunciation, intonation, and stress for the English speech patterns.

Both Spanish and Anglo students participating in this class have been pretested and will be posttested in their second language. The students speaking the native language will be the informants.

In planning the language lessons the teachers are aware of the two cultures so that each group will learn about the customs and culture of the other group.
2a-inductive - generative approach: through listening to communication, perhaps of peers, and attempting the new language in situations which call for the student to generate sentences - test his understanding. (the way native language is acquired) includes direct association between object, picture or action and word in second language.

2b-deductive - the cognitive code approach: through initial formal study and analysis of grammatical structures, then applying them through examples, i.e. answering questions, or transforming affirmative sentences to negative, declarative to interrogative, active to passive.

Learning the four skills is a continuing, sequential, developmental process.
VESL/TESL teachers from Komensky; two Chicago Board of Education teachers from Jirka, three Title VII Bilingual teacher, two teacher aides (one of whom will be Title VII) and one community representative. One of the Title VII teachers will serve as head teacher or co-ordinator at the Center.

Since language development is based upon the meaningful usage of known vocabularies and structure, the second language learning aspect (English or Spanish) of the program will emphasize audiolingual exercises at both Centers. Reading and writing which will be held at a minimum at the beginning of the program will increase at the appropriate time of level achievement in these skills. Then matching exercises, filling in blanks, limited forms of original expression and original sentences, can be operative in the learning process. This system of language learning in both English and Spanish will be in progress at the home school, where the monolingual students will mingle with bilingual students in the following classes: language arts, social studies, art, music and physical education.

Resource materials in the mobile provided for this purpose will be made available through library periods, group study sessions, team-teaching sessions, and study periods, as determined by the staff. There will be feedback of the curriculum procedures to the classroom teachers at the Hawthorne feeder schools and at Jirka and Komensky so that the bilingual aspects of the regular school program can grow at each school according to need and teacher implementation.

As proficiency increases in second language learning, classes and tutoring sessions in the first and second languages will provide for the retention of new concepts in either language. Proficient bilingual students, as recommended by regular class teachers, might participate through a tutorial system in these help sessions. Bilingual teachers,

Knowledge gained from inservice is helpful in teaching, but the overall attitude and effort of the teacher is not to be underestimated. Giving recognition to whatever dialect is actually spoken by the child and in being able to communicate interpersonally, the teacher performs a fundamental service to the developing bilingual child. An evaluative study in Chiapas, Mexico, suggest that the teachers' ability to communicate with the students may have outweighed their training or educational level. According to Nancy Mediano, "Attitudes, culture, and cognitive development, including the perception of objects and symbols are linked inextricably to one another and to language."1

To insure smooth operation of the Center and maximum student benefit, it will be necessary for the staff to insure cooperation on the local level through consultation, adequate role-definition, open lines of communication with other school programs and activities, and development of mechanisms to maximize interchange of ideas.

Resource materials in the mobile or classroom provided for this purpose will be available through library periods, as determined by the staff. There will be feedback of the curriculum procedures to the classroom teachers at all schools so that the bilingual aspects of the regular school program can grow according to the need and teacher implementation.

As proficiency increases in second language learning, classes and tutoring sessions will provide for the retention of new concepts in either language for grades 2 through 8 and 9 through 12. Proficient bilingual students, as recommended by regular class teachers, might participate through a tutorial system in these help sessions. Bilingual teachers, whether they are utilizing English or Spanish as the means of instruction, will provide exceptional stimuli in the teaching of social studies, science and mathematics through the expended use of audio-visual and programmed learning materials.

The use of educational trips, and other motivational devices during the first weeks of operation will serve to acquaint incoming students to their new environment and to prepare all for the cooperative effort of reaching proficiency in two languages, adapting to city life in the United States, adjusting to modern school practices in Chicago, and making new friends. 3rd year Continuation - 1971

Classroom teachers from all centers will meet periodically to exchange observations, practices, teacher-made materials, and testing techniques. A "materials pool" will be set up so that all centers may benefit from the exchange of materials and ideas with other centers. Principals of schools with centers will meet periodically to discuss common problems and possible solutions.

The English taught in the centers will be relevant to real life situations, e.g., units in reading newspapers, using telephone directories, answering want ads, and preparing for job interviews. Flash cards will be used that show Latinos in all types of work, not just Anglo professionals.

Materials from Spain and Latin America will be utilized as well as those listed in the Board of Education's approved list of instruction materials. Those found to be especially pertinent and suitable to the needs of the pupils in the centers will be adopted and utilized beginning in September 1971.

be facilitated will be the center's participation in the cooperative teacher corps co-sponsored by the Circle Campus of the University of Illinois and District 19 of the Chicago public schools. That teacher preparation program is stressing the preparation of teachers from bilingual urban areas who have a commitment to return to these areas to teach.

The following services are to be provided at the new Komensky Center:

Programs designed to impart knowledge of the history and culture associated with Spanish and Latin America, particularly Mexico. Wherever opportunities arise for illustrating parallel customs, history, economic functions, or geographic or urban situations in the United States, these will be built upon.

Efforts to establish closer cooperation between the school and home.

Early childhood educational program related to the purposes of this title and designed to improve the potential for profitable learning activities by children.

Adult education programs related to the purposes of this title, particularly for parents of children participating in bilingual programs. Knowledge of the city must include field trips in order to build understanding of the total context in which we live and the opportunities it offers.

Programs designed for dropouts and potential dropouts having the need of bilingual programs. We note here that, although the Komensky is a K-6 school, the correlation between reading achievement and dropout ratios is so high and the progressive nature of achievement retardation is so great that people (even in the elementary schools, for example, in grades four and six) who are two years or more below their grade expectancy in reading achievement may be pinpointed as potential dropouts. Special attention should be directed to these young people if they are to reach anything near their own potential for achievement.

Field trips and audiovisual experiences for pupils, utilized to build interest and knowledge in correlation with studies, as well as to broaden understanding of the kinds of occupations which exist in our common culture in Chicago, thereby providing a meaningful basis for heightened pupil aspirations.
Most of the teachers have no desks or cabinets for materials. Since children of all ages are served, seating in a greater variety of sizes is needed.

Students are grouped on the basis of several sets of criteria--

- understanding of and fluency in the use of English
- age, physical, and social maturity
- previous grade placement
- understanding, fluency, and literacy in Spanish

Since every entering pupil is placed in a heterogeneous homeroom, the first and last criteria stated are utilized only for placement in TESL and bilingual program components. Pupils in the following categories are placed in subject matter content classes and in the TESL classes which complement instruction in Spanish:

- monolingual Spanish-speaking
- minimal English-speaking
  - Level A (some comprehension of oral communication)
- minimal English-speaking
  - Level B (some comprehension of oral communication and some fragmentary English speaking)
- English-speaking learners of Spanish

Each of these categories exists at every grade level. However, sharp lines between grades are ignored and pupils are grouped as primary (i.e., grades P1 to P3); intermediate (i.e., grades 3 and 4); and upper (i.e., grades 5 and 6).

The instruction of pupils in line with the philosophy of continuous development and general framework provided by the curriculum guides has been fraught with difficulties and pitfalls. The problems must be attributed to a number of specific causes, but they may be organized under the following major headings: personnel, space, and materials. Of these the most critical, in terms of its effect on instruction, is personnel. The staff members and the aides available were inadequate, i.e., the teacher aides, school-community representatives and a bilingual clerk.

The teachers were either new, completely inexperienced, or trained and experienced in a culture in which the philosophy underlying pedagogical approach is often incompatible with recommended practice in the United States. Furthermore, none of the teachers was familiar with the curriculum of the Chicago Board of Education. The program included historical cultural information and fine arts experiences associated with Mexico and other Latin American countries.
1. The model for the student government might well be a United Nations' meeting so that reports could be presented in either language or in two languages and students could earn points for serving as translators after being elected to the governing body by their peers. It is felt that this would encourage the students to speak both languages and it would help build in them habits of citizenship which needs to be fostered in the community in order that the students will function more effectively when they become adults and also in order that they may influence their parents even at this stage as they grow because they will bring home information and excitement about the functioning of the Democratic System here, and they will encourage their parents to participate.

2. Another aspect of the extra curricular activity plan is a service club plan. Older students from the intermediate and upper grades might earn citizenship points or service points by serving as:

A. Tutors in English or in Spanish for Reading, or for Math, and so forth.

B. They might also earn service points by preparing curriculum materials for teachers. A fourth grader preparing a picture dictionary, for example, for a primary class,
2. B. utilizing cards and cut-outs for catalogs and the vocabularies from some of the materials used in the class, would be learning a great deal and strengthening his knowledge. He would also have the feeling that he was serving his school community and the learning that he would do would be especially important for him if he happened to be one of those youngsters who needed reinforcement and who have not done well.

C. There might also be student librarians who could function in much the same way and in every case, building the mastery and demonstrating the mastery necessary to present material to a younger or a less advanced pupil would be a status giving incentive and we feel that this would be a very positive thing for youngsters who have, for so long, been in the background and have not been high level achievers.

- Adapting speech to different language levels such as informal, formal, and inter-group (dialogue and role-playing tests)
- Developing an awareness of the relation between one's own language and civilization and that of another country
- Evaluating progress by means of Board of Education-developed fluency tests, pre-and post-tapes.

Harrison High School Center

Objective - to achieve from the perspective of another culture, a deeper understanding of oneself, one's nation, and history.

Objective - to improve the self-image of the Latin American student and to raise his personal expectations.

Through study and discussion of the great men of Spanish America, of the great philosophers, poets, and writers and of their works, the Latin American student gains a deeper insight into his own heritage and his own worth. At the same time, his Anglo-American peer who attends class with him acquires a deeper insight into and appreciation for the Spanish-speaking people. This class is one of the most popular classes at Harrison High School Bilingual Center. Pupils and teachers who have a free period or a study period are often found there.

Komensky - Jirka Center

Objective - to achieve a deeper understanding of oneself, one's nation, and history.

Objective - A Latin-American culture curriculum, including Latin American history, was initiated. Every class in the school received instruction inputs from the Spanish resource teacher for one period each week. School in-service meetings were used to guide and encourage regular classroom teachers in integrating and emphasizing Latin America (especially Mexico) in the teaching of social studies.

Objective - to build the self-image of the pupil so that he feels accepted and so that he has higher effective adjustment or adaptation and higher achievement in curricular areas.

In-service meetings, which included Komensky teachers of regular grades and the bilingual program, as well as the bilingual program staff from the Jirka, were held. All staff members were encouraged to attend workshops, symposia, presentations of materials, and other relevant in-service
