These five lists form an annotated bibliography of instructional materials for use in teaching French, classified according to the age and level of instruction for which they were intended. Each list treats a separate category of materials. There is a title index, as well as an index of authors, editors, compilers, and adaptors, with each list. (HW)
TEACHING MATERIALS FOR FRENCH
RECORDED AND AUDIO-VISUAL COURSES

This list forms one section of a bibliography which, when complete, will comprise several sections. It has been produced in consultation with members of the Modern Language Association and of the Audio-Visual Language Association. Their help is gratefully acknowledged.

The present list contains only teaching materials of which some elements are presented in a visual form such as calls for the use of a projector, or in a recorded form on disc or tapes or in a combination of these media. It is further restricted to materials which aim to provide a progressive teaching sequence and such as are normally called 'course materials'. A separate section, Teaching materials for French: recorded and audio-visual supplementary materials, contains audio-lingual drills, readers with tape or disc accompaniments, visual aids to French teaching etc. Where it is thought that a course could be used as supplementary material, it appears in both sections.

For primary school work reference should be made to section Recorded and audio-visual materials for primary schools. Cine films are listed in the handbook of the Educational Foundation for Visual Aids, Visual aids, part 1.

Materials in this list are designed for teaching language skills. Literary texts, poetry and plays are excluded. The annotations are based on a careful examination of the materials and are intended to be objective. A simple classification, set out overleaf, gives a broad indication of the age and level of instruction for which the materials were designed. The key letters relevant to each course are given opposite each course and in the Contents list. Where appropriate, other categories for which they could be used have been added.

Teachers should examine selected materials and listen to specimen tapes or discs whenever possible to decide whether they are suitable for particular classes. Selections and examples are available for examination in the audio-visual section of the Language-Teaching Library at the Centre for Information on Language Teaching. Inspection materials are also usually available to teachers from the publisher or distributor on request.

Courses shown here are available in the United Kingdom. Materials published abroad have been included only if there are agencies in the United Kingdom able to supply them. Details of price are subject to change; it is advisable to check with the publisher or distributor before an order is placed.

Suggestions for improvement to, or new entries in, this list will be welcome and should be addressed to the Director, CILT.

1. Active French foundation course

Fernand Marty. 1965. European Schoolbooks Ltd, 100 Great Russell Street, London WC1

An audio-lingual course for beginners of fifteen to sixteen upwards. It is carefully programmed, extensively illustrated and makes use of ‘interpretation’ and contrastive analysis. The printed text is used from the beginning and the two books, covering thirty-three units in all, are suitable for self-instruction. In the early stages special emphasis is given to pronunciation and to oral question-answer exercises. The teacher's guide Teaching French gives a full account of the course and a more general discussion of the techniques used. The same author's Active French dialogues (see section: Recorded and audio-visual: supplementary materials) will also be found useful.

Printed Material
1.1 Book I. v, 410p. hardback
1.2 Book II. v, 377p. hardback
1.3 'Teaching French'. 1968. 337p. index. paper

Recorded Material
1.4 14 Tapes, 7'' reels, 7½ ips, full track (Book I)
1.5 11 Tapes, 7'' reels, 7½ ips, full track (Book II)

2. Activités

Intended for pupils in the secondary school who may have begun their French in the primary school, not for complete beginners. Prepares pupils for the oral/aural aspects of GCE ‘O’ level and CSE, providing also an introduction to France itself. Each episode is based on the everyday life of two teenage Parisians, their family and friends.

The course is divided into separate parts each of which comprises ten episodes. Parts 1 and 2 cover about one year's work. Parts 3 and 4 cover a further year to provide material to take the student up to CSE standard.

Each episode has an initial dialogue followed by varied types of exercises, which lend themselves to oral work. The teacher’s pamphlets for each part give detailed notes on how to use the texts and exercises, and on the grammatical points and vocabulary involved. They also show clearly which pieces are recorded on the tapes.

The Mary Glasgow tapes record the episodes and selected exercises. The Rank tapes record the episodes only, though some exercises are recorded on the tapes to Part 3. The Rank tapes are not based on the revised 1969 version of the course.

3. Actualités françaises: a complete course for advanced students

A course in two parts, providing material to GCE 'A' and 'S' level. The first part could be used as a continuation course for pupils not taking examinations in the sixth form.

The first part contains thirty-four units grouped under seven subjects of current interest. Each unit is illustrated by photographs, diagrams and simple statistical tables. The course has an integrated approach in that the exercises (questions, grammar explanations and translations) which are based on the passages, all lead towards the writing of an essay on the original theme. A grammatical index is provided as well as passages for prose translation based on the themes in the main body of the work.

The tapes contain readings of one passage from each chapter of the book, seven short dialogues, grammar exercises, seven model essays and the French version of fifteen passages for prose translation.
The second part contains thirty-five units grouped under eight main themes and has a similar lay out to the first. It also includes advanced material suitable for study in the first year at university and in colleges of education and colleges of technology. Passages for translation and prose composition are provided, as well as thirty-seven passages in English for use with the tape recordings of the original French text.

The tapes of part two consist of a reading of eight of the passages in the book giving practice in listening to material previously studied; sixteen passages for listening comprehension, (questions for comprehension and composition are provided in the book) and the French text of the thirty-seven passages mentioned above, for retranslation, dictation and other exercises.

4. A la page 5
D. Grayson. 1964-70. Ginn & Co Ltd, 18 Bedford Row, London WC1

This course of five textbooks plus audio-visual materials is for secondary school beginners and will take the pupil up to GCE 'O' level or equivalent standard. In all five books a passage in dialogue or narrative form is followed by a variety of exercises. Each book has a grammar section and chapter vocabularies. The third book gives a good introduction to the cultural heritage of France and provides substantial reading passages as well as the other features of the first two books. The fourth book is an extension of the third book and has a continuous story, Le catalyseur, followed by exercises and sixteen passages for translation into French. The fifth book has selected passages from modern French writers. Each reading is followed by a variety of exercises. There are also forty-two literary passages for translation into English, thirty-two prozes for translation into French, material for composition work from texts and pictures, and exercises for grammar and aural comprehension.

Printed Material
4.1 Book 1. 240p. illus. vocabulary, grammar index. hardback
4.2 Book 2. 288p. illus. vocabulary, grammar index. hardback

5. Allons-y!

For pupils in their second year of French and planned as a follow-on to French for beginners (see no. 28 below). There are twenty-eight broadcasts, and for each lesson the pupils' pamphlets contain ten line-drawings and relevant key sentences from the radio scripts. The teacher's notes supply all new words and full guidance for preparation and work after the broadcasts. The reader contains twenty-eight chapters, covering the whole year, and each chapter has photographs and question work. The reader also contains a list of new words and a review of structures.

Printed Material
5.1 Teacher's notes (3 pamphlets, one for each term). 21p each paper
5.2 3 Pupils' pamphlets (one for each term). 27p. each paper
5.3 Reader. 88p. illus. paper

6. At home with French
R.E. Maddison and A.M. Hall. 1968. The Reader's Digest Association Ltd, 7-10 Old Bailey, London EC4

This course is intended mainly for adult beginners and is self-instructional. In the first book there are thirty-six lessons, each of which presents a short dialogue, vocabulary lists, grammar notes, exercises and revision questions. It includes passages from Simenon's Maigret stories. An introductory section provides notes on how to use the course, and a summary of key phrases with lesson references is given at the end of the book. The second book expands the grammar and provides thirty-six supplementary lessons. Notes are given on pronunciation with script for the material recorded.
One of the twenty records deals entirely with pronunciation and has pauses for repetition. This book also contains the answers to exercises in both books. The discs have the lesson dialogues, key phrases and vocabulary. The conversational guide presents expressions chosen according to situation, to English key words and finally to French key words.

Printed Material
6.1 Book 1. xix, 285 p. key phrases. paper
6.2 Book 2. 272p. course vocabulary, alphabetical guide to the course. paper
6.3 French conversational guide, D.W. Phillips. 112p. paper

Recorded Material
6.4 20 Discs, 7\"", 33 \rpm

7. A-LM French

Originally intended for American schools and colleges, this course has four levels, each of which contains at least a year's work and can be used independently of the other three. Each unit is built around a dialogue, a series of sentences or a text, which forms the basis of the exercises and structure drills which follow. New vocabulary and idioms are introduced in context at a carefully controlled pace and reintroduced at later stages for reinforcement.

The course is carefully graded and is audio-lingual in character. It can be used in the classroom with gramophone or tape-recorder, or in a language laboratory where the material can be exploited to the full. Student practice discs are provided for homework and private study. Level 1 is now in a second edition.

Level 1

10. Beginners' French: an introduction to conversational French

This course is an introductory book to Conversational French (see no. 12 below) by the same author. There are sixteen chapters, each of which has a dialogue with notes followed by fluency practice of basic structures and vocabulary. Grammatical explanations are given with each chapter. There are a number of sketches for teaching purposes. There are also sections on pronunciation, spelling, liaison, with exercises for practice and revision exercises.

Printed Material
10.1 Textbook. 118p. illus. index. paper

Recorded Material
10.2 2 Tapes, 5" reels, 3 3/4 ips, twin half track

11. Bonjour Monsieur Leroux

Course of twenty lessons intended for secondary and adult beginners. Contains conversations, lesson vocabularies, grammar and varied types of exercises. Illustrations and crosswords are included and the conversations often illustrate humorous incidents involving the absent-minded M. Lerous, his family and friends. The course can be followed by Au revoir Monsieur Leroux (see no. 8 above).

Printed Material

14. Cours de langue et de civilisation françaises
G. Mauger. Paris 1967. Librairie Hachette, 4 Regent Place, London W1R 6BH (Reprint of 1953 edn.)

The complete course comprises four volumes of which only volumes I and II have accompanying recorded and visual materials. Volumes III and IV are not, therefore, described here.

Volume I has a basic introduction of sixty-five lessons. Each lesson contains grammar points, pronunciation exercises, passages for study and copious illustrations. Additional material consists of anecdotes and dictations; songs, poems and vignettes of French life complete the book. There are tabulated grammar summaries, alphabetical indexes to grammar and lexis and to chapters. Volume II follows a similar plan through seventy lessons.

There is no audio-visual accompaniment to volumes II, III and IV of the course but both volumes I (premier et deuxiéme degrés) and II are provided with recordings on disc of selected pages of the text.

An audio-visual presentation of the linguistic material and audio-lingual exercises on the lessons in the course book have been provided for the introduction and first twenty-five lessons only of volume I (premier degré). The first part of this audio-visual version consists of an introductory sequence using a filmstrip and two tapes to teach articular drills and corrective procedures. A booklet gives guidance to teachers.

A leaflet introduces the remaining audio-visual material, setting out the linguistic framework and suggesting methods of use according to the different facilities which the teacher may have available.

Each teaching tape and the accompanying filmstrip introduce the language items for a lesson in the course book. The tape text is printed in a separate leaflet with numbered sentences to correspond with the frame numbers of the filmstrip. The remaining tape provides (a) recapitulatory audio-lingual exercises based on the filmstrip presentation structures and vocabulary and (b) a recorded version of the lesson material in the course book, including specimen answers to exercises.

An audio-visual adaptation of lessons twenty-six to sixty-five (i.e. deuxiéme degré) is envisaged.

15. Cours élémentaire de français:

A beginners' French course for schools

Beginners' course in two parts, which leads up to Cours moyen de français (see no. 17 below). There are twenty-eight lessons in the first book. The pattern of the lessons is grammar explanations, vocabulary list, dialogue and reading passages, and various exercises, including translation from English and questions in French. From lesson fourteen onwards the reading passages form a continuous adventure story. The content of the discs is listed in the books and consists of pronunciation practice and selected passages and exercises.

The second book has twenty-four lessons which follow roughly the pattern of those in the first book but include much more material. The content of the discs is listed in the book.

16. Cours illustré de français

This secondary school course contains illustrated texts plus tapes and supplementary, filmstrips. The five books take the pupil to CSE (books 1–3 or 4 only) and to GCE 'O' level standard. Teacher's book 1 covers the first two pupils' books and contains general information on oral methods and detailed plans for individual lessons. Teacher's book 2 covers the last three pupils' books. Pupils' book 1 has finely graded progression of structures and vocabulary with frequent repetition throughout its fifty-two lessons, as have books 2 (forty-two lessons) and 3 (thirty-nine lessons). The filmstrips reproduce drawings from the first and second books.

The lessons of the first book contain reading passages, varied question work and dialogues. In the second book attention is focussed mainly on the perfect tense, and the imperfect tense is also introduced. In each lesson unit there are no more than eight new words. The third book is based on texts rather than pictures and introduces the future and pluperfect tenses. The fourth book of thirty-three lessons, based mainly on texts, meets the requirements of the CSE examination. The past historic is used from lesson five onwards.

The fifth book is divided into five sections. Section A provides new material in the form of seventeen passages from modern French authors serving as a basis for intensive question-answer work, vocabulary and pattern study and for various written exercises including composition. There are also conversations and historical readings in this section. Section B contains passages for reading comprehension with searching questions in French and/or English. Section C consists of nineteen passages for unseen translation. Section D presents passages for translation into French, part 1 containing passages for retranslation of the seventeen stories in section A; part 2 providing new practice material (twenty-two passages). Section E contains ten picture stories for oral and written composition. Finally, a grammar summary with many examples is provided and there are French-English, English-French vocabularies.

E.B. Travis and J.E. Travis. 2nd edn. 1951. George G. Harrap & Co. Ltd, 182 High Holborn, London WC1V 7AX. Discs by Linguaphone Institute Ltd. 207-209 Regent Street, London W1R 8AU. (First published 1936.)

For those who have done two years' French, this course can follow Cours élémentaire de français (see no. 15 above) and consists of twenty-two lessons and an appendix containing nine poems by La Fontaine and Victor Hugo. A typical lesson has a reading passage, a vocabulary, a grammar section and varied exercises including translation from English, and essay work. Verb tables and two-way end vocabularies are provided together with an index and a small map of Paris. The discs contain the texts of seven of the lessons with the appropriate questions and answers from exercises in the same lesson, and some poems which appear in the appendix of the textbook.

18. En avant
ABCF

A five-year course designed for children starting French at eight. Stages 1, 2, 3 and 4A together cover four years' work; subsequent material for pupils between thirteen and sixteen years is provided in two sets: Dans le vent for pupils who will not take a public examination or who may sit CSE and Avant garde for prospective GCE 'O' level candidates.

Stage 1 lasts four terms and lays the foundations of aural-oral skills. It is provided in two kits for convenience in handling.

In stage 2 which lasts two terms reading is progressively introduced and provision is made for copy-writing practice. An imaginary French town supplies the beginnings of background interest.

Stage 3 maintains the development of oral skills, develops extended reading and encourages varied practice in writing. The Norman Conquest provides a new cultural interest.

Stage 4A covers about half a year's work. The sentence patterns and grammar learnt to date are consolidated; the new material constitutes an expansion of vocabulary. Aural comprehension and productive speech are heavily emphasised, reading is further extended and many additional activities are made available. The scene of many of the stories is set in the Pays Basque. Stage 4B is to be published later.

Dans le vent will have stages 5A, 5B, 6A and 6B and is intended to encourage group and project work. Avant garde will have magazine-type material, a grammar and exercise book, a reader, tapes and visual material on filmstrips. These two sets of continuation materials are projected for publication in 1972.

20. Le français contemporain: an integrated course of essay work, linguistic study and translation into French for 'A' level students.

An integrated set of exercises which revise and extend grammar and vocabulary for students preparing 'A' level. The twenty recorded texts form the starting point for intensive study beginning with detailed comprehension questions, continuing with constructions for memorising and semantic study, and concluding with translation practice exercises deriving from all of these. There are also topics for free composition based on the matter studied.

The tape texts are not printed in the student book but form the bulk of the teacher's book. Brief suggestions for use appear in both books. None of the exercises is recorded.

P.J. Downes and E.A. Griffith; with P.B. Hou/dsworth. 1966-70. The English Universities Press Ltd, St. Paul's House, Warwick Lane, London EC4

This audio-visual course is intended for lower secondary school beginners and is so designed that the book's and audio-visual material may be used independently or as a complete integrated course.

Parts 1 and 2 each cover from 1 to 1½ years' work, while Part 3, which contains much background information on France, covers one year. Part 4 consists of a GCE 'O' level version and an alternative version for CSE candidates.

Part 4 GCE version is independent of Parts 1 and 2 and is intended as a revision book for helping candidates through the examination. The teacher is expected to choose exercises from the sections provided on grammar, translation, vocabulary revision, and picture composition which is in full colour. There is a supplementary booklet containing passages for dictation and comprehension, aural tests and multiple choice comprehension tests in the form of listening and reading tests (the listening tests are available on tape).

Part 4 CSE version combines revision of basic structure and vocabulary with intensive practice for the CSE examination. The tests are practised first with known material and then with unseen examination questions. The book is extensively illustrated. Tests are provided on the illustrations and are followed by questions, a dialogue, translation exercises, vocabulary lists and grammar notes. Suggestions for composition are provided.

23. Le français et la vie: 1
Gaston Mauger and Maurice Brudzière with the collaboration of Suzanne Mercier and René Guffroy.
Paris, 1971. Librairie Hachette, 4 Regent Place, London WC1

Two introductory lessons on pronunciation and twenty-eight main lessons. The presentation phase consists of twenty frames which illustrate a French dialogue, one picture per phrase. The printed version of the dialogue with coloured hints on pronunciation and intonation follows on the facing page. Learning practice is provided by the use of substitution tables; these are followed by exercises to encourage the student to build up brief dialogues in written or spoken form. There are supplementary photographs and conversations. The filmstrips show the picture sequences so that the presentation phase can be made, if desired, in the classic audio-visual mode. The dialogues are recorded twice on tape, first with pauses for repetition and second, unexploited. Recorded examples are provided for each structural exercise. The remainder of each lesson tape (the greater part) consists of language laboratory exercises which are not printed in the book.

The teacher’s book and a set of figurines for the premier degré are in preparation and will shortly become available. The material for the deuxième and troisième degrés are due to appear over the next two years.

24. Le français par la méthode audio-visuelle: EG
Harrap-Didier audio-visual course

This course is based on the ‘Global’ method of language teaching as originally developed at the Centre de Recherche et d’Etude pour la Diffusion du Français (CREDF) and is intended for upper school and adult beginners.

Each of the twenty-five lessons is built up round a situational dialogue presented on filmstrip and accompanying discs or tapes. The grammatical component of the dialogue is exploited in further filmstrips called ‘entraînement grammatical’ and the ‘grammaire en images’. Some exercises and a vocabulary are included.

25. La France en direct

The course comprises four levels and would appear to take fourteen-year-old beginners to ‘A’ level in four, five of six years according to local circumstances. The basic progression is planned according to characteristics of the French language as determined by phoneme, word and structure frequencies and by French socio-cultural patterns. Certain training sequences are specially contrived to counter problems of language interference among student populations speaking German, Dutch and English. The presentation stage is audio-visual with filmstrips and tapes. The fixation stage has tapes, student books and student discs. Flannelgraph and structured classroom dialogue is used for the exploitation stage. Grammar is taught largely inductively and is exercised through structure drills. All aspects are carefully graded.

The teacher’s notes are extremely thorough. They explain the aim in view, the resources available and the classroom techniques for each moment of the course, making clear the snags to be avoided and the means of recognising adequate or inadequate progress on the part of the students without wasting time. This helps the teacher to profit from the close grading of the course and the inductive method of grammar teaching.

The tapes have the presentation dialogue accompanied by sound effects, exploded versions (without sound effects) for imitation, phonetic exercises, dictations, dialogues appropriate to different social situations of which printed versions with illustrations appear in the pupil's book, and structure drills of the kind used in language laboratories.

The first two levels have each a basic pupils' book, a pupils' book of exercises suitable for homework and a booklet of skill-training material for use with tapes in class or in the language laboratory. There are also available pupils' discs for home revision. Materials for the third and fourth levels are now in preparation.

26. French: a structural approach  DF
C.G. Hadley and B. Howson. 1966-70. Oliver & Boyd, Tweeddale Court, 14 High Street, Edinburgh EH1 1YL

This four stage course is intended for secondary school beginners. The fourth book, together with an anthology, is intended for work up to 'O' level. The tapes are an essential part of the techniques to be used. The separate pre-reading book contains many illustrations to be used as a basis for oral work. These illustrations, now with a corresponding written text, figure at the beginning of the first book. This first book contains twelve basic units, each of which contains a dialogue, narrative passages with translation and question work. There is additional material for exploitation work, pattern practice, composition and conversation. Additional dialogues are included with each unit, and there are some songs. Books Two and Three follow a similar pattern. Books Three and Four have a grammar synopsis.

Included on the tapes are the basic texts, the pattern practice and the additional dialogues. Much guidance and supplementary material appear in the teacher's manuals.

29. French for the businessman

For adult beginners requiring an intensive course in the spoken language. There are thirty lessons which contain dialogues and structure drills. The teacher's manual lists the linguistic content of each lesson, gives instructions on using the course and contains a grammar index. The tapes have the dialogues recorded at normal conversational speed, at slower speed, and with pauses for repetition. The recorded drills are of the four-phase type and suitable for the laboratory. Level II contains thirty units of dialogues and contextualised drills, covering both business and social situations.

A course intended for American school beginners but used in many British schools. Audio-lingual in character and can be followed by Parler et lire and then Lire, parler et écrire (see below). For use with gramophone, tape-recorder, or language laboratory. Each of the twenty units has dialogue for memorisation through repetition, with pauses provided, followed by question-answer work and pattern practice on selected structures. The unit ends with a series of conversations which recombine elements already learnt, and there are topics for oral composition work. Revision passages after each five units give questions for practice. Songs are included.

Le français: lire, parler et écrire
Camille Bauer, Margaret D. Barton and Patricia O’Connor.

This book follows Parler et lire and leads from the audio-lingual emphasis of the first two books to reading material from a variety of sources. This material ranges over many fields, from literature to advertisements of a popular nature, and covers a considerable number of varied topics. Oral and written exercises are provided and there is a substantial grammar section with abundant exercises.

34. Initiation au français

This book has fifteen units to last 100 hours excluding homework and laboratory time, each with two or three texts and a grammar study. Each text is followed by a vocabulary, questions and pattern drills. The texts, focusing on five American students and their French instructor, proceed from informal dialogues to lectures and discussions on French culture and then to letters, written by the students, describing modern France. The tape has eighteen hours of material and contains the text, questions, most of the pattern practices, selected exercises, and an oral test.

36. Intermediate conversational French

These thirty units follow on from Basic Conversational French (see no. 9 above). They contain conversations with an English translation alongside and abundant exercises of an audio-lingual nature, including question-answer work and translation exercises involving idioms and grammar points. Grammar sections with explanation, examples and exercises are provided, together with sections on pronunciation, syllabification, verb tables, etc. There are phonetic transcriptions of the conversations, and a number of photographs (historical, cultural, and of modern France). The exercises provided on the tape are different from those in the textbook. The conversations on the tapes are the same as in the book.

37. Jean Legallois

A post 'O' level course aimed at the development of oral skills whilst not neglecting requirements for written examinations at an advanced level.

The course consists of twenty-eight units, each based on a text which is alternately a monologue and a dialogue. The central theme of an English businessman's visits to France presents situations and vocabulary which are socially and commercially relevant and up-to-date.

Each text is followed by related oral exercises, consisting of structure drills, questions and answers, oral translation into French, role-playing conversation exercises and questions without answers. The units based on dialogues contain written exercises such as prose translation, précis writing, letters, essays and reports.

The passages are followed by grammatical commentaries, some general in nature, some more detailed. A French-English vocabulary is provided.

The presentation tapes of all units have the text recorded at normal speed, and an 'exploded' version for repetition or translation work. The tapes for the monologue units have questions and answers and oral translation exercises on them; those for the dialogue units have two conversation exercises. The structure drill tapes have four-phase recordings of the six structures in each unit.

This is a comprehensive course to GCE 'O' level. The vocabulary is based on Le français fondamental. Each lesson has a word-list, a conversational passage incorporating narrative and finally grammar explanations. There are exercises with notes on pronunciation and spelling, useful phrases, verb tables, word-lists and French-English, English-French vocabularies. Ample opportunities are given for oral practice. The fourth book consists of passages for comprehension, with questions and outlines for their reproduction, a grammar section with sentences for translation into French and English-French vocabularies.

The supplementary oral exercises and structure drills consist of additional practice on grammar points in the first three books of the main course.

The audio-visual version of the course offers an alternative way of introducing the first book of the course. Both these sets of additional material have corresponding booklets giving the recorded texts. The booklet Images et vocabulaires presents situational pictures with word-lists and exercises for an approach to oral and written composition.

Taken as a whole the materials are arranged to provide a smooth transition from an audio-visual learning situation based on dialogue to intensive and extensive reading of French based on narrative. It could be a sequel to Let's speak French (see below). The audio-visual version consists principally of colour filmstrips and associated tapes. Several voices are used. The text of the tapes is available to teachers in booklet form and to pupils in a separate booklet which also contains a summary of the grammar in tabular form and a French-English vocabulary of 750 to 2,000 words according to level. The tapes have four-phase comprehension exercises with pauses for the students to reply and specimen answers. The readers recount the same stories and have their own, separate tapes. The narrative is much extended as compared with the audio-visual version; only the narrator's voice is heard for the story; two voices are used for the comprehension questions to which model answers are supplied. In each chapter one set of exercises refers to the photographs, another to the printed narrative.

40. Let's speak French

This course is for beginners in the lower forms of secondary schools and can be used with children of varying abilities. In the first book there are thirty-four lessons with illustrations for teaching purposes (a few, dealing with clothing, are in colour) together with a few songs, games, and a short chapter in English on French life. The presentation provides for much oral and question-answer work, and there are dialogues in addition to the basic text of each lesson. The present tense is used and grammar is dealt with only in the summary table at the end. The second book has thirty lessons and follows a similar pattern to the first. Pronouns and the perfect tense with avoir receive close attention. There are ample exercises which provide a basis for oral work. French life is introduced through the texts, particularly in the second book.

The tapes consist of all the conversational exercises in the language laboratory version; the recordings are 'exploded' in the four-phase manner.

41. Living French

EGS

Course of twenty-five lessons intended primarily for students in commercial and technical colleges. Suitable for beginners and students wishing to revise their knowledge of the language. Adequate for the purpose of GCE 'O' level or equivalent examinations. Revision lessons are provided after every five chapters, together with sections on the use of the subjunctive, punctuation and pronunciation, etc., commercial correspondence, verb tables, lists of useful words and idioms. Each chapter has grammatical explanations, a word list, a reading passage, questions for oral work, and varied exercises including translation.

The tapes include the reading passages followed by questions, pauses and correct answers.

42. Longmans’ audio-visual French

DF

An audio-visual course devised for pupils of varied abilities. After the first two stages there are alternative versions, one for slower and one for faster students.

Stage 1: The vocabulary consists of approximately 650 words based on Le français fondamental and this first stage covers 1 to 1½ years’ work. The approach is basically oral.

Stage 2: Writing now begins to play a greater part. This stage has a vocabulary of 700 words and contains material for 1 to 1½ years’ work.

Stage A3: This covers 1 year and the emphasis is audio-lingual. The new vocabulary is about 1,000 words, half of which are for active use. In addition twenty per cent of the previous vocabulary in the course is revised. Revision tapes are also available at this level. Most classes would take one year to cover this stage, but a fast stream could do it in two terms. Information about French is introduced progressively.

Stage B3: This is the first of two stages covering 2 years’ work to CSE standard. Work in stages 1 and 2 is thoroughly revised. This stage follows a similar pattern to A3 but contains less structural material and moves at a slower pace. It is intended for fourth year pupils who have taken 3 years to complete the previous stages.

Stage A4: This follows the pattern of previous levels, is extensively illustrated and is intended to follow stage A3.

Stage B4: This is similar in design to stage A4 and is also extensively illustrated and is intended to follow stage B3. Important constructions are revised for the CSE examination. There is a comprehensive grammar summary, passages from French authors are used as a basis for comprehension and there is detailed guidance for oral and written composition. Aural and written tests are offered as practice for examinations.

Stage A5: This is similar in design to stages A4 and B4 and can be used as a sequel to the latter also by those students who have followed the B section of the course but now intend to take a GCE ‘O’ level examination.

43. Manuel de français moderne: French practice for the examination form
Discs by Linguaphone Institute Ltd, 207-209 Regent Street, London W1R 8AU.

Comprises twenty-six chapters, twenty examination passages for translation from French, six comprehension tests, ten examination passages to translate into French, fourteen brief outlines for essay work. The main chapters each contain a reading passage, questions in French, dictation, translation into French, a dialogue or poem, grammar revision exercises, conversation, word and idiom lists and essay subjects. There are also seven stories for reproduction. A chapter is provided giving practical advice to pupils. The content of the discs is listed in the book.

*43. Since this list was compiled, information has reached us that the discs for this course have been withdrawn.

44. Modern French

This course for beginners consists of twenty units, each containing dialogues in French with English equivalents, phonetic transcriptions, vocabulary and dictation drills, grammatical explanations, audio-lingual pattern drills and conversation exercises, and readings. The dialogues are recorded first at normal speed, next in short segments with pauses for repetition, then again in longer segments (for fluency practice) with pauses for repetition, and finally at normal speed again for comprehension. Various exercises in each unit are also recorded on the tape. The discs contain just the dialogues of each lesson spoken at normal speed, then broken into segments with pauses for repetition. There are four lesson dialogues on each disc.

45. Modern method French course

The first four books of this course cover the ground required for GCE 'O' level. The fifth book is intended for those taking this examination after five years. Book 1 contains twenty lessons with revision exercises after every five lessons. An introductory chapter deals with pronunciation and phonetic matters. Each lesson has a reading passage followed by questions, a grammar section, vocabulary, various exercises and dialogues. Passages for prose translation are provided. Books 2, 3 and 5 follow a similar pattern to Book 1 but without any questions on the passages. Instead there are additional sections of passages for aural comprehension or dictation and questions on those passages. The grammar sections are considerably longer and Books 3 and 4 include some poems. Book 5 has passages for translation from French (with questions in French) and into French, poetry and prose passages for comprehension (with questions in French), anecdotes for reading and conversation (with questions in English), dictation passages, topics and pictures for free composition, grammar sentences for translation into French. A grammar summary is also provided.

The tapes contain recordings of the stories and dialogues of each lesson as well as the passages for oral comprehension. They are recorded at less than normal speed but become faster as the course progresses.

47. Parlons de Paris

FH

Michael Young. 1966. Thomas Nelson & Sons Ltd, 36 Park Street, London W1Y 4DE. Tapes by Student Recordings Ltd, King Street, Newton Abbott, Devon.

This is a revision course for GCE 'O' level candidates. Each of the twenty-one chapters centres round a conversation and has notes, explanations and exercises. Several of the passages refer to aspects of French history and 'civilisation'. There is a section containing twenty-one prose passages for translation into French. Answers are provided to some of the exercises in the book, and also included are verb tables and chapter vocabularies.

The tapes consist of all the conversations of the textbook, and include grammar notes on the dialogues.

50. Prenons la parole

This course is for Australian secondary schools and takes the pupils to GCE 'O' level standard. The approach is mainly oral and there are eighty lessons on each of Parts One and Two and sixty lessons in Part Three. The students' book is not intended for study without a teacher whereas the students' manual and the discs can be used independently of the course, for private study. The vocabulary and structures are carefully graded, and oral work is immediately consolidated by reading and writing.

Longer reading passages appear at regular intervals throughout the students' books, and are followed by comprehension questions where appropriate. Exercises are provided with each lesson, and translation exercises are used after the first half of the first book. The second and third students' books contain a special English-French vocabulary for these exercises. Drawings are used throughout the texts and in Part Three these form the basis for guided composition. A grammar index for the whole course is provided at the back of the teacher's book for Part Three.

54. Spoken French for students and travelers
Charles E. Kany and Mathurin Dondo. Heath, Boston, 1946. UK office: 3 Queens Road, Farnborough, Hampshire. Tapes by Tutor-Tape Co. Ltd, 258 Wimbledon Park Road, London SW19

This book consists of graded conversational passages dealing with everyday topics and can be used with adult beginners. Translations are given for every sentence. An appendix gives a synopsis of grammar, verb tables and vocabularies concerning food and drink.

On the tapes, phases A and B have the lesson read at normal speed and then repeated with pauses for repetition. In phase C, sentences one, three, five and seven are recorded with pauses for the student to answer. Then the process is reversed; the student puts the question and the tape provides the answer.

55. Sur la route

Intended for the foreign traveller, this course tells the story of hitch-hiking a journey in south west France. A basic first-year knowledge of French is assumed. The twenty lessons have a conversation, vocabulary, grammar notes, background notes, and exercises. This course can serve as a suitable follow-up to French at home (see no. 27 above) and could be used for self-study. The dialogues in the book are recorded on tape.

56. Tavor Aids audio-visual French course  DF
V.V. Kamenew. 1960. Educational Foundation for Visual Aids. 33 Queen Anne Street, London W1M OAL. Distributor: National Audio-Visual Aids Library, Paxton Place, Gipsy Road, London SE27

The filmstrips of this course are very carefully related to the structures to be taught and the initial approach is oral. The three sections of the Preliminary course (1 FRO, 2 FRO, 3 FRO) give the pupil a basic mastery of the spoken language to enable him to approach the grammar through sentence patterns rather than through isolated points. The material of this part covers two years. The Oral grammar course (1F R I, 2F R I ) covers two further years of study.

58. Vivre en France  FHJ
Fernand Marty; with the collaboration of Winifred Porter and Ella Stewart. 1970. European Schoolbooks Ltd, 100 Great Russell Street, London WC1

Thirty chapters based on situations in Paris. Each passage is illustrated by up-to-date photographs and is followed by a dialogue. Structural exercises in drill form and questions complete each chapter. Although the structures are not graded in any particular way, the lexical items have been carefully controlled and revised. The course is to a large extent an adaptation of Active French dialogues by the same author (see section: Recorded and audio-visual supplementary material).

59. Voix et images de France  EFGH

This audio-visual course is intended for adult beginners but can be used for upper-school beginners. The first part aims to develop the student's powers of oral expression in familiar, concrete situations. The second part teaches the language of opinion, judgement and feelings and is based on the vocabulary of the written language.

57. Vive le francais!

Volume 1 has thirty lessons, each one presenting a grammar point in the traditional sequence and beginning with pronunciation practice, the sounds of which are in the International Phonetic Alphabet. Lesson vocabulary is listed in French only. Grammar is taught on the inductive principle from sample sentences. A specimen conversation or reading passage illustrated by a line drawing is supplied with questions in French. Subsequent exercises use manipulation, substitution, gap-filling but no translation. They lead to oral or written composition based on pictures. Each lesson closes with a song, rhyme, game or puzzle. The perfect
Each lesson is built up round a situational dialogue and material is provided for phonetic, conversational, and oral grammar practice. Dictation, reading, written composition and exercises for the language laboratory are introduced later. The filmstrip frames of the first part are closely related to the sentence patterns being taught.

60. Voix Françaises

A two-part course for intermediate and advanced students. The first section of the first part consists of two series of dialogues centred on selected structures. Each dialogue text and reading is divided into five-second segments and is followed by notes in French and vocabularies. The second section of the first part consists of teacher’s notes for the whole course. The first section of the second part consists of notes on recorded passages for aural comprehension on a variety of topics. The texts of these are in the second volume so that the student can concentrate on the explanatory notes and the vocabularies before attempting the exercises. The last section of the first volume provides tests and topics for composition.

ADDENDUM to
Recorded and audio-visual courses

Please note that the information given below replaces the annotation and details given for EN AVANT (entry no. 18) in the original list.

18. En avant

Materials prepared under the auspices of the Schools Council by the staff of the French Section of the Nuffield Foreign Languages Teaching Materials 1970. Stage 4B, 1971. E.J. Arnold and Sons Ltd, Publishing Division, Butterley Street, Leeds LS10 1AX.

A five-year course designed for children starting French at eight.
Stages 1, 2, 3 and 4 together cover five years' work and are described below. Subsequent material for children between the ages of thirteen and sixteen years is in preparation. Details can be obtained in due course from the Project at Micklegate, York. Present indications are that it might comprise a) Core materials, using filmstrips, tapes, magazinetypo materials with associated grammar booklets and b) Auxiliary materials which might include suggestions for role playing, project work, language laboratory exercises and readers.

Stage 1 lasts four terms and lays the foundations of aural-oral skills.
It is provided in two kits for convenience in handling.

In stage 2, which lasts two terms, reading is progressively introduced and provision is made for copy-writing practice. An imaginary French town supplies the beginnings of background interest.

Stage 3 maintains the development of oral skills, develops extended reading and encourages varied practice in writing. The Norman Conquest provides a new cultural interest.

Stage 4A covers about half a year's work. The sentence patterns and grammar learnt to date are consolidated; the new material constitutes an expansion of vocabulary. Aural comprehension and productive speech are heavily emphasised, reading is further extended and many additional activities are made available. The scene of many of the stories is set in the Pays Basque.

Stage 4B provides work for three terms with pupils of roughly average ability and two terms with pupils of above-average ability in French.
The same principles have guided the authors as in the preparation of Stage 4A. The future tense is the principle new step in grammar; much of the action takes place in Paris. This concludes the material for the five-year course; follow-up materials as described in the first paragraph above are in preparation.

As far as could be ascertained, the details about components and prices given in this list were correct at the time of going to press.
This list forms one section of a bibliography which, when complete, will comprise several sections. It has been produced in consultation with members of the Modern Language Association and of the Audio-Visual Language Association. Their help is gratefully acknowledged.

The present list contains only teaching material of which some elements are presented in a visual form such as calls for the use of a projector, or in a recorded form on disc or tapes, or in a combination of these media. It is further restricted to material such as audio-lingual drills, visual grammars, overhead projector transparencies, slides and film-strips, tapes and discs, which are specifically designed to improve French language skills and can be used independently of 'course material'. The latter is described in the Recorded and audio-visual courses section of Teaching Materials for French. Where it is thought that a course could be used as supplementary material it appears in both sections.

For primary school work reference should be made to: Primary school French. Cine films are listed in the handbook of the Educational Foundation for Visual Aids, Visual Aids, part 1.

Material included in this list is designed to teach language skills. Literary texts, poetry and plays are excluded. The annotations are based on a careful examination of the components and are intended to be objective. A simple classification, set out overleaf, gives a broad indication of the age and level of instruction at which particular material may be used. The appropriate letters are given opposite each entry and in the list of contents. Where applicable, other categories for which it could be used have been added.

Teachers should examine selected material, see specimen visuals and listen to samples of the tapes or discs whenever possible to decide whether they are suitable for particular classes. Selections and examples are available for examination in the audio-visual section of the Language-Teaching Library at the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research. Specimens are also usually available to teachers for inspection from the publisher or distributor on request. Material shown here is available in the United Kingdom; if it is published abroad it is included only if there are agencies in the United Kingdom able to supply it. Details of price are subject to change; it is advisable to check them with the publisher or distributor before placing an order.

Suggestions for improving this list, or for new entries in it, will be welcome and should be addressed to the Director, CILT.

Index of authors, editors, compilers, adaptors
1. Active French dialogues
Fernand Marty. 1966. European Schoolbooks Ltd, 100 Great Russell Street, London WC1

This book is designed for use alongside the Active French foundation course (see section: Recorded and audio-visual courses, no.1) or independently and has authentic situational dialogues with various exercises, employing 'interpretation' and question-answer techniques, and reading passages. Much cultural background material is included and the book contains more than 500 up-to-date photographs. The method employed is essentially audio-lingual in character, and since the course can be used for self-instruction with individual tape-recorder, no pauses are provided on the tape.

Recorded Material
1.2 10 Tapes, 5" reels, 3½ ips, twin half track

2. L'actualité française: études linguistiques

A composition and conversation textbook which assumes a fairly advanced standard of French. There are sixteen chapters, each of which has a reading passage followed by notes in French, a series of questions, vocabulary study, varied exercises and grammar notes. The passages cover a wide spectrum of topics presenting a profile of modern France.

3. Advanced conversational French
J.C. Whitehouse and F. Wetherill. 1968. Oliver & Boyd Ltd, Tweeddale Court, 14 High Street, Edinburgh EH1 1YL

This course, containing eighteen units, is intended for advanced students and concentrates mainly on oral skills. It can be used with single tape-recorder or with a language laboratory. Each of the units has a conversation followed by 'explications' in French, vocabulary exercises, substitution and adaptation exercises. The conversations on the tape are read first as a continuous passage, then with pauses.

5. Avec les Carré: en dessins animés
Gerald Fleming. 1966. Macmillan Educational Ltd, Houndmills, Basingtoke, Hampshire. Loops prepared by Halas & Batchelor Education Division Ltd, 3-7 Keen Street, London WC2

This is a series of twelve cartoon-type coloured cineloops each lasting about four to five minutes and intended for use with a cineloop projector. Each cineloop depicts a humorous incident in the life of Monsieur Carré and can be used at various levels of teaching; for pupils of varied abilities and ages, for oral practice and written follow-up work if required.

The two books contain colour reproductions of still frames from each incident. Facing the six pictures there are, on each right-hand page, sentences corresponding to them, a vocabulary list and sample questions.
The sample commentaries on tape can be approximately synchronised with the cineloops. They include five sample questions.

8. C'est compris! a programme of FH certificate practice based on comprehension

The twenty-three passages of French, recorded by two speakers, are arranged to train pupils for the aural comprehension test at 'O' level. The subject matter covers aspects of contemporary French life. The exercises supplied are designed to improve progressively the students' comprehension skill by means of the author's preferred technique. A further twenty dictations, related in subject matter to the comprehension passages, revise particular language-teaching points.

9. Choisissons bien! FH

Preparation for comprehension papers at GCE 'O' level. Graded exercises precede model tests. Questions are provided with multiple-choice answers.

Part one consists of ten listening tests. The tapes for these include the preparatory exercises. Part two consists of ten reading

6. Ça y est! twenty audio-lingual FH lessons

These lessons provide aural/oral and written practice for fourth and fifth forms in secondary schools, and for adult students who may be in the third year of a 'once a week' French course. The exercises are intended primarily for laboratory use but can be used without equipment in the classroom. Each lesson has a conversational text followed by a number of questions in French and several structural drills. These drills fall into two groups: stimulus-response pairs where the same person of the verb is used in stimulus and response, and pairs which form a question-answer relationship. The tapes contain only the dialogues.

23. Garde à vous! pattern drills to accompany ‘Nos voisins français’

The drills are recorded by male and female French voices, instructions being presented by the compiler in English. They are designed as consolidation material to accompany lessons of a school course but can well be used independently. The exercises are mainly transformational and four-phase in layout. The tapes need to be ‘exploded’ for use. The introduction has pertinent comments on the place of drills within the teaching sequence.

Nos voisins français, the course for which these drills were designed, is by the same author and also published by Oxford University Press.

25. Je vous présente

This book reproduces fifteen interviews conducted, as it were, by a Paris newspaper reporter, whose questions are framed so as to express the curiosity of foreigners about French people and institutions. Each text is accompanied by one or more photographs, a word list designed to help with unusual or technical expressions and suggestions for further discussion which would encourage the re-use of structures, idioms and vocabulary.

Nine of the interviews are recorded at normal speed and with a full range of intonation patterns.

26. Language laboratory pattern drills in French: basic series

J.B. Adam. 1964. Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons Ltd, 39 Parker Street, London WC2

Sixty-eight four-phase structural drills, whose vocabulary is largely drawn from Le français fondamental: premier degré. The range of structures roughly corresponds to those used in a GCE ‘O’ level course.

Most of the drills consist of between twenty and thirty stimulus-response pairs. The vocabulary book provides a word list of the major items in Each drill and an index showing on which tape each vocabulary item occurs.

29. Miroir de la France: Sa vie, sa culture, sa civilisation

The first part presents eleven chapters on different aspects of France and French life, establishing a few links between current features and historical events. Each chapter consists of a black and white photograph and eight texts. The latter are arranged each with its summary and exercises on a single page.

The second part has a further five chapters, each containing a photograph and ten extracts from French authors spanning altogether the period from the mid sixteenth century to 1960. Outline maps, hints on learning and the way to perform exercises, plus a fold-out synoptic chart of tense forms complete the book.

Only texts from both parts are recorded on the tapes, i.e. no exercises. They are read by one male and one female voice, adopting different roles where suitable.

T.B. Inman. 1965. G. Bell and Sons Ltd, York House, Portugal Street, London WC2. Tapes available from Tutor-Tape Co. Ltd, 258 Wimbledon Park Road, London SW19

Consists of thirty-six French passages selected from modern authors and used as a basis for further exercises. Each passage is approximately 250 words in length and is followed by sections on pronunciation, vocabulary (words and phrases), a set of questions in French and a subject for composition. There are also thirty-six passages for translation into French and a forty-two-page grammar section including verb tables. This is followed by ten pages of grammar exercises.

The tapes consist of four-phase exercises for use in the language laboratory and recordings of the passages on which they are based.

32. 'O' level French dictation: practical guide for GCE candidates
Margaret Coulthard. 1962. Hutchinson Educational Ltd, 178-202 Great Portland Street, London W1

A comprehensive book on dictation for those who have studied French for three or four years. The dictation passages, with pauses and liaisons marked, are divided into three groups. The first twelve emphasise phonetics and spelling, the second twelve grammar and syntax and the other forty-eight are general tests. Notes are provided for each of the seventy-two passages.

A further twenty-seven passages, without notes, are tests set in past years by nine different examining boards. There are also introductory chapters giving adequate treatment of general instructions, phonetics, grammar and syntax, and additional aids to comprehension and spelling. The tapes have twelve selected dictation passages.

35. Questions et réponses:
a guide to success at the first oral
French examination
Headington Hill Hall, Oxford OX3 OBW
172 basic questions, accompanied by some permutations and grouped under general headings according to subject interest. The tapes form an integral part of the publication, supplying questions in authentic French voices slightly slower than normal speaking speed, allowing pauses for the student to respond and providing specimen answers in a second voice. The questions are of the kind posed in routine oral examinations; cues for the answers are provided in the booklet and printed symbols guide the student when he is required to operate the pause button.

36. Regardons, écoutons et parlons
Charles Bouton and Léonce Clément. 1968. Hulton Educational Publications Ltd, Raans Road, Amersham, Bucks
An audio-visual course for beginners. Each of the six books has a hinged flap which covers the text and enables the learner to see the pictures and concentrate on them while listening to the teacher or the tape. The text can later be uncovered and be used for reading and writing practice. Only the present tense is used and the vocabulary is closely integrated with the pictures so that translation is unnecessary. (See also: Primary school French.)

37. Salut les copains!
Sadie M. Boyles. 1967. Longman Group Ltd,
Longman House, Burnt Mill, Harlow, Essex
A collection of sketches based on a series of radio programmes. Designed to bring teenage life into the French course, and with up-to-date vocabulary the sketches can be used for intensive or extensive reading. Questions are provided on each of the sections which follow the young people through the course of the school year. There is a French-English vocabulary.

38. 68 French dialogues for language classes: ‘Dites donc Dubois!’
J.B. Adam. 1968. Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons Ltd,
39 Parker Street, London WC2
Sixty-eight recorded and printed dialogues and sketches, each one contrived to practise certain grammatical points in as natural a situation as possible. The grammar material is closely linked with the same author’s Language laboratory pattern drills in French (see no.26) but the sketches can be used independently. The preface includes suggestions for use; the content is suitable for beginners and intermediate students from sixteen upwards, as well as for the needs of business people requiring general French language practice.

The spoken texts feature clearly defined intonation patterns at fractionally slower than normal speaking speed, phrased in a way convenient for the use of a pause button or the interpolation of gaps for students to imitate the pronunciation.

Charles E. Kany and Mathurin Dondo. Heath, Boston, 1946. UK office: 3 Queens Road, Farnborough, Hampshire. Tapes available from Tutor-Tape Co. Ltd, 258 Wimbledon Park Road, London SW19
41. Talk French: audio-visual language exercises

The book consists of exercises on basic structures which serve as material for consolidation; it can supplement any course. Most of the exercises start with an introductory section in which vocabulary is presented in conjunction with illustrations in the pupils' book. The teacher's book contains the text of the exercises together with guidance notes. The exercises on the tapes are not provided with pauses and it is suggested that the original tapes be stored as master tapes, using an 'exploded' copy.

45. Voix françaises
A.E. Servel and C.I. Konigsherg: edited by International Textbook Co. Ltd, 158 Buckingham Palace Road, London SW1. Tapes available from Tutor-Tape Co. Ltd, 259 Wimbledon Park Road, London SW19

A two-part course for intermediate and advanced students. The first section of the first part consists of two series of dialogues centred on selected structures. Each dialogue text and reading is divided into five-second segments and is followed by notes in French and vocabularies. The second section of the first part consists of teacher’s notes for the whole course. The first section of the second part consists of notes on recorded passages for aural comprehension on a variety of topics. The texts of these are in the second volume so that the student can concentrate on the explanatory notes and the vocabularies before attempting the exercises. The last section of the first volume provides tests and topic for composition.

This list forms one section of a bibliography which, when complete, will comprise several sections. The books listed here aim to provide practice in (i) conversation, (ii) aural comprehension, (iii) oral and written composition, (iv) translation into and from French. Five of the entries include a recorded element.

The material in the list is designed to teach language skills. The annotations are based on a careful examination of the components and are intended to be objective. A simple classification, set out overleaf, gives a broad indication of the age and level of instruction at which particular material may be used. The appropriate letters are given opposite each entry and in the list of contents. Where applicable, other categories for which it could be used have been added.

Before placing orders teachers should examine specimens to decide whether they are suitable for particular classes. Examples are available for examination in the Language-Teaching Library of the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research. Specimens are usually available to teachers for inspection from the publisher or distributor on request. Books shown here are available in the United Kingdom. Details of prices are subject to change; it is advisable to check them with the publisher or distributor before placing an order.

Suggestions for improving this list, or for new entries in it, will be welcome and should be addressed to the Director, CILT.
CLASSIFICATION

D  Secondary school material for lower-school beginners
F  Secondary school intermediate material (below and up to 'O' level, etc.)
G  Adult beginning material
H  Adult intermediate material
J  Advanced material (post 'O' level, etc., for adults or school pupils)
S  Material with specialised content and vocabulary

CONVERSATION

1. ALLEN, Bryan
   1.1 Pupil's book. iv, 44p.
   1.2 Teacher's book. viii, 88p.

   A review in five parts corresponding to the various types of oral examination: the reading passage (with and without questions), general conversation, pictures for conversation, general knowledge about France and topics on which candidates are to speak for a limited time. Specimen oral examinations at GCE 'O' level and CSE level are provided in the indexes in the parallel teacher's book, the main part of which consists of suggested questions and information about the examinations. No end vocabulary is provided.

2. ARNOLD, Marian

   A collection of dialogues and questions arranged under four headings: Section I consists of dialogues among school children, Section II of questions and answers which are often exchanged in the classroom between teacher and pupils, Section III (which constitutes the main body of the book) of similar dialogues, which might take place between examiner and candidate. These are based initially on a quoted reading passage and extend to general dialogue about the pupil's life. The last section offers a list of useful topics and phrases, common question forms, and answers to which the pupils are asked to form questions. No end vocabulary is provided.

3. BAKER, Lilian A.

   Seven sections consisting of sentences for phonetic training, questions and sentences for completion, important grammatical constructions, subjects for discussion, conversation games, questions (general and detailed) on pictures and, finally, twenty reading passages with questions on them. No vocabulary is provided.

4. BOURNE, J. D.
   Qu'est-ce que nous voyons? Harrap, 1965. 78p. illus.

   Thirty-five photographs depicting life in France, each accompanied by a brief descriptive text, followed by ten questions in French and a word-list of less than ten words. The questions are for guidance only and are intended as a basis for conversation at elementary or advanced level.

5. BUCKLE, E. M.

   Twenty-four dialogues mostly based on fairy stories and folk-tales, some of which have been recorded by the Linguaphone Institute. Each dialogue is illustrated with line drawings and followed by questions for comprehension and conversation practice. The language is simple and, except for the last few stories, the present tense is used throughout. The word-lists are arranged at the back of the book in sections corresponding with the dialogues. The total vocabulary is approximately 280 words.

6. DORLING, J. A.

   Forty short passages adapted from the newspaper France-Soir for use by CSE candidates. The perfect tense has been used instead of the past historic and a wide range of interesting true incidents has been selected. Each text is followed by three sub-sections: questions (for use in class or the laboratory), activity (for guided oral and written composition and related exercises) and vocabulary (a word-list of approximately twenty items).

7. FYFE, James

   Twenty large, clear, line drawings each with between fifty and sixty questions for conversation practice. The kind of topics covered are 'A la ferme', 'Sur l'autoroute', 'Au bord de la mer'. Word-lists and lists of phrases corresponding to each picture are arranged at the end of the book.

8. HEATHER, Monique
   Pris sur le vif (saynetes). Macmillan, 1971. 72p. illus.

   Emphasising colloquial expressions this book offers twenty-five dialogues centred round everyday situations. Explanatory notes provide cultural information on the French way of life. Word-lists are arranged at the end of the book according to each dialogue, but are not in alphabetical order. There are approximately 420 items listed.

9. MARKARIAN, R. H. M., and Sidney Moore

   Ten sections, each containing a picture of a typical French scene; a dialogue related to it followed by questions directly concerned with the dialogue; a reading passage and related questions; general questions relating the subject to the pupils' own experience; suggestions for written work and a list of words and phrases. The present tense only is used and there is repetition and grading of the material.

10. POWELL, D. B.

    Twenty-five chapters, each containing a large line drawing, tabulated questions on the drawing with a choice of vocabulary items and a word-list of approximately thirty or forty items. Only verbs in the third person present tense are used in the main text. Appendix A suggests the style of commentary a teacher might compose on a picture, Appendix B suggests how the first and second person forms could be introduced and Appendix C shows opportunities for using the perfect and imperfect tenses. There is a French-English vocabulary of about 600 words, divided into verbs and nouns.

11. THIMANN, I. C.

172 basic questions, accompanied by some suggested choice of answer and grouped under headings according to subject interest. The tapes form an integral part of the publication, supplying questions in authentic French voices slightly slower than normal speaking speed, allowing pauses for the student and providing specimen answers in a second voice. The questions are of the kind posed in routine oral examinations; cues for the answers are provided in the booklet and printed symbols guide the student when he is required to use the pause button.

Recorded material
11.1 1 Tape, 5¾” reel, 3½ ips, twin half track.

AURAL COMPREHENSION

12. ARNOLD, Marian
Avez-vous compris? Hutton Educational, 1970. 132p. illus.

Fifty-three passages for comprehension, the first eleven with questions in English, the next thirty with questions in French and the rest with multiple-choice answers in French. This is followed by thirty multiple-choice exercises of a general nature. The rest of the book is devoted to practice in the various forms of essay, ranging from notes and suggestions on how to describe pictures, write a letter and so on, to a list of topics. The book ends with specimen pictures and a list of useful phrases.

13. BAKER, Lilian A.

Sixty-one passages, approximately 300 words in length, each followed by exercises. These consist of gap-filling, composing sentences round given verbs and constructions, translating, word collecting, or changing direct to indirect speech. There are separate French-English word-lists for each chapter. Comprehension tests are provided, with questions in English and a suggested marking scheme.

14. BEARMAN, E. C.
Lisons les journaux. Hulton Educational, 1968. 64p.

Forty passages varying from a short paragraph to 450 words in length. The aim of the book is to practise language patterns and vocabulary and to encourage the student to use reference works. Each passage is followed by not more than ten questions in French. A French-English vocabulary devoted to some 750 more difficult words is included at the back of the book.

15. BERBIERS, John D., and A. C. Cullerne

15.2 Key to the prose passages. Cambridge University Press, 1955. 30p.

Thirty chapters, each containing six sections: Section A has an original article or very short story, Section B an extract from a standard French author on the same theme, Section C extracts and expands certain constructions in the previous texts, Section D has a passage for translation into French and Section E sentences for similar treatment. The final section suggests an essay on a topic related to the theme of the chapter. The themes comment on important features of French life and should appeal to both arts and science students. There is a final section consisting of word-lists, corresponding to each chapter. The words and phrases occur in the order in which they appear in the text.
16. CARTWRIGHT, Donald W. FH

Twenty-six humorous stories for reproduction, not more than approximately 120 words in length. Each passage is followed by sentences showing the more important structures and by about twenty questions in French. The tapes are 'unexploded' versions of the texts, containing questions in English based on the twenty passages. The last section consists of dictation passages also derived from the first twenty passages. A French-English vocabulary is provided.

17. COULTHARD, Margaret FH

Part I contains thirty-six passages of approximately 350 words in length on topics of modern French life. These are for the first year of the course. Part II contains twenty-four passages for the second year. The questions are in separate parts of the book to enable the passages to be used for aural as well as written comprehension tests or exercises. Towards the end of each set, the questions become more general in nature. Part III contains questions in French for the first year; Part IV contains questions in French for the second year; Part V contains questions in English for the first year; Part VI contains questions in English for the second year. There is an appendix which offers a selection of the different kinds of CSE French-English vocabulary of some 800 words.

18. EMERSON, H. O. FH

Twelve illustrated articles on modern French life, each approximately 240 words in length. Each article is followed by vocabulary notes, exercises, essay topics and questions, all in French. A glossary is provided.

19. EVASON, H. S., editor FH

Ninety-six passages by French authors, including some verse, divided into seven general sections, such as: the sea, nature, portraits and narrative. The passages are approximately 180 words in length and each section is preceded by a French-English vocabulary covering idioms and vocabulary on the topic. Each passage is followed by vocabulary notes, or sometimes a few questions either in French or in English. There is a separate section of eleven sets of questions in English, for use as aural comprehension tests.

20. HILL, Norman FH

Thirty-two passages, mainly stories of interesting incidents from newspaper sources, ranging from a short paragraph to approximately 300 words in length. Each story is followed by between fifteen and thirty questions in French. No vocabulary list is provided.

21. KENYON, R. W. FHJ

Forty-two passages, approximately 300 words in length, chosen from modern French novelists. After each passage there are vocabulary notes and about ten questions in French. A model introductory lesson is provided, with questions in English and French, specimen answers and a suggested marking scheme. After the passages, there is a comprehension test section with sets of about eight questions in English. An appendix gives sets of about seven questions in French, to which candidates are asked to reply as if they were one of the characters in the corresponding passage.

22. MARRIOTT, J. P. FH

Forty passages, approximately 400 words in length, selected from modern French authors. Each passage is followed by ten questions in French. There is an introduction giving advice to pupils, and a French-English vocabulary of some 750 words is provided.

23. MEIKLEJOHN, W. H., compiler FH

Sixty passages approximately 250 words in length chosen from modern French authors. Each passage is followed by questions in English and in French, grammar exercises, vocabulary extension exercises and a composition outline. A suggested marking scheme for the tests is provided, but there is no end vocabulary.

24. MOUNTJOY, M. E. FH

Twenty original passages and three from past London University GCE 'O' level papers. Each passage is followed by a completion exercise and ten questions based upon it. This section is followed by a section containing questions in English based on the twenty-three passages. The last section consists of dictation passages also derived from the first twenty passages. A French-English vocabulary is provided.

The tapes are 'unexploded' versions of the texts, recorded by native speakers. Methods of using the tapes with the book are suggested by the author in the preface.

Recorded material

24.1 1 Tape, 5" reel, 3½ ips, twin half track.

25. NEVIN, Vera E.

Twenty prose passages, up to 500 words in length, and eight poems, all chosen from modern French authors and centred on particular topics. Each passage is followed by notes on constructions of particular interest, grammatical exercises, vocabulary extension exercises, sentences for composition round given idioms, and, in some cases, sentences and passages for translation into and out of French and for retranslation. The last section offers plans for essay writing.

26. WATSON, J. R.

101 stories between 80 and 250 words in length, written in the restricted vocabulary of le français fondamental. The length of the texts increases from story to story. Section I uses the present tense and the premier degré vocabulary. This section contains the first fifty-one stories. Section II uses the perfect and future tenses and the deuxième degré vocabulary. Each story is followed by about six questions in French, and a French-English vocabulary of some 1,300 words is provided. The aims of the book are to provide practice for reading, comprehension and oral reproduction. The tapes are 'unexploded' versions of all the anecdotes in the book and are recorded by native speakers. The questions are not recorded.

Recorded material

26.1 3 Tapes, 5" reels, 3½ ips, twin half track.

27. WHITE, N., and J. A. Robinson

Sixty passages, of approximately 180 words in length, divided into three sections. Section one (nos. 1-20) is for aural comprehension and is followed by sets of ten questions in English. The questions are printed separately from the passages to enable them to be used for aural tests and practice. Section two (nos. 21-40) is for written comprehension and each passage is followed by a set of ten questions in French. Section three (nos. 41-60) is for dictation and each passage is followed by questions in English on grammar points and essay outlines based on the text. No vocabulary list is provided.

28. WRINGE, C. A.

Thirty-five passages on domestic situations and family life, intended for intensive oral work. The length of the passages ranges from 80 to 250 words and each one is followed by ten questions in French and a suggested subject for composition. A French-English vocabulary of some 1,700 words is provided. Certain chapters concentrate on the use of specific tenses.
ORAL AND WRITTEN COMPOSITION

29. BLACKSHAW, W., and J. Walker

A collection of thirty sets of line drawings for composition work. Twelve are for practice in dialogue style, thirteen for narrative composition and the last five are for testing purposes. All except the last set are provided with questions to be answered by the pupils, general questions and a word-list in which meaning is conveyed in French. The last section consists of pattern practice or drills contextualised since they are based on each picture series.

30. COULTHARD, Margaret

Divided into three parts, this book provides general guidance for the pupil in part one, ten sets of line drawings for descriptive composition in part two and forty for narrative in part three. Except for the last three, each set of drawings is followed by a short list of less than twenty words or phrases, by questions and a suggested title for a composition. The last three sets are provided for testing purposes. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 1,200 words.

31. DODSON, C. J.

Sixty sets of line drawings for guided or free composition purposes. Each set has a word-list of some twenty items, offered in English, French, German and Spanish, but no questions are given. There is an introduction giving the pupil advice on how to use the book.

32. GILBERT, Mark

Twenty-three sets of line drawings for composition work. The teacher is expected to tell the story first, then use the questions provided to practise the structures. Each chapter also has lists of words related to each picture and useful phrases. In some cases further structure tables and suggested topics for composition are offered. There is a French-English vocabulary of about 400 items.

33. HEATHER, Monique

Twenty specimen letters based on the lives of two French families and their relationships. Notes at the beginning and the end give details in English and French of the various manners of address. The book is offered as an aid to letter writers both in and out of school. No separate vocabulary is provided.

34. JAMES, A. W., and A. M. James, compilers

Thirty essays written in French by children in the course of their school work. The essays are arranged in order of difficulty. Each essay is followed by exercises which encourage the English pupil to employ the original expressions in new contexts, and notes which explain difficult words and phrases in French. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 600 words.

35. MEECHAN, H. L., and C. M. Walker

Forty-four sets of six line drawings for oral and written composition. The drawings are on the large right-hand page while the corresponding text is on the left. The texts consist of useful verbs isolated from the equally useful vocabulary. The introductory notes offer a sample composition and explain the steps the pupil must take to expand the sentences and plan an essay. There is no separate vocabulary.

36. PORTER, James A.

Twenty-six extracts from Le Figaro, each followed by suggested vocabulary and notes, with additional information about the topics. Introductory notes suggest ways in which pupils can be guided towards written composition. At the end of the book there is a French-English vocabulary of some 350 words.

37. PORTER, Janet M.

Twenty-eight short stories between 100 and 150 words in length, for reproduction by the pupils after question and answer work. Each story has an accompanying French-English word-list, which is reproduced with meanings over the page with the related questions.

38. RICHARDSON, G., and W. Fletcher

Twenty-nine sets of six line drawings, each set being a basis for composition work. Questions are given on each picture in such a way that it is easy for the pupil to work out the required answer. No word-lists or vocabulary are provided. At the end of the book there are three sets of pictures without questions.
Forty-nine sets of six line drawings for composition work. After an encouraging introduction to the pupil showing how a composition can be written, the first five sets have suggested words and phrases corresponding to each picture and the present tense only is expected to be used. In the next eleven sets the perfect and imperfect tenses are introduced. The following twenty-five have questions rather than suggested phrases, though a choice of idioms is offered separately, and the last nine sets are offered without any written stimulus at all, thus providing a grading of difficulty.

A book in three sections. The first contains fourteen single line drawings each provided with vocabulary and questions to help produce a description of the picture; the second contains eleven pairs of pictures for narrative work. Questions to help form a linking passage between the pictures are in heavy print. In the third section of four sets there are four pictures for each. Compositions of a maximum of 100 words are envisaged and linking questions are again emphasised.

Fifteen letters in French each providing a basis for five possible topics for compositions of varying difficulty. Pictures are provided as a stimulus for some of the topics. The basic vocabulary and structures are to be found in the letters and this helps to show the link between oral and written work through reading. Both dialogue and narrative style are covered. No separate vocabulary is provided.

Fifteen letters roughly 300 words long, with line drawings and photographs, which are to be used as a basis for oral and written composition. There are questions on each letter to clarify meaning and practise structures, explanations in French of difficulties and items of interest, and word-lists for each letter. Tapes of the letters, questions and model answers are available from Students Recordings Ltd, 15 Devon Square, Newton Abbot, Devon, or from the publishers.

Two sets of line drawings each provided with vocabulary. The following fifteen are separated from their corresponding word-lists (in the four languages) and the suggested titles for further practice. They consist of assuming the rôle of one of the characters in the story or a story of slightly differing outline. The last six sets are from recent GCE 'O' level examination papers.

Thirty chapters each providing a list of objects for the pupils to draw, a list of words and expressions to learn by heart, and some questions to answer. The teacher is expected to introduce each topic with an oral lesson, and the questions are arranged in such an order that the answers are the basis for ordered composition. As the book progresses, the number and complexity of the questions increase and asterisks mark the beginnings of paragraphs. At the back of the book, thirty additional topics are offered as well as a French-English vocabulary of some 1,500 words.

Contains essay plans, a selection of useful idioms, some model full-length essays and a selection of French texts which can be related to ten of the essays. The introduction suggests methods of approach based on intensive oral work and note-taking by the pupils. No vocabularies are provided.
different types of composition test set by Examining Boards at GCE 'O' level. These are: title and suggestions in French or English, an essay based on an English passage, pictures, reproduction of a French text, letters, dialogues, summaries of films, plays or books, and essays on more abstract themes. Each title is followed by a plan, or questions, and additional phrases and vocabulary. No alphabetical word-lists or vocabulary are provided, but there is an extensive introduction suggesting methods of approach to the teacher.

TRANSLATION

48. BRYANT, A. D.

Thirty test papers each containing two literary passages of French and one of English prose for translation. These are followed by a passage of French verse for translation into English prose, and a choice of five essay topics. The book ends with word-lists corresponding to each test paper. It is intended that the papers should be used as supplementary course material for the early stages of sixth-form work.

49. BURG, Marie

Sixty-six passages taken from late nineteenth- and early twentieth-century authors. Each passage is classified according to difficulty and is approximately 300 words long. Word-lists and notes corresponding to each passage are provided at the end of the book.

50. CROMPTON, J. S.

Sixty passages of English prose approximately 180 words in length for translation into French. The first twenty-six are modelled on typical passages set in GCE 'A' level examinations, the rest are taken from modern authors and are arranged in order of difficulty. There are no notes or word-lists provided but model translations are to be found in the key (as above).

51. FERRIER, Janet M.

Intended for university students, these passages are all from twentieth-century authors and are approximately 500 words in length. There is an index of authors but no vocabulary is provided.

52. KASTNER, L. E., and J. Marks

Sixty passages approximately 100 words in length for translation. Notes are provided below each passage. The major part of the book is an introduction consisting of a grammar, with rules and exceptions, followed by sentences for practising each point. There is an English-French vocabulary of some 1,800 words.
53. KASTNER, L. E., and J. Marks

Seventy prose and thirty verse extracts from a wide variety of nineteenth- and twentieth-century authors. Each passage is supplied with notes and references to the introduction which deals with common errors. These are followed by fourteen prose and twelve verse extracts chosen from GCE 'O' level examination papers. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 4,000 words.

54. KIRK-GREENE, C.W.E.

A book primarily for sixth forms consisting of passages taken mainly from newspapers which have a more light-hearted content than is usual in books for translation. Word-lists about six items in length corresponding to each passage are arranged at the end of the book.

55. LAMPORT-SMITH, L.

Sixty extracts of prose and verse from French authors and GCE 'O' level examination papers. Difficult words selected from other examination papers have been included in the passages. A word-list of between six and twelve items is provided at the end of each extract.

56. LECUYER, M. F., and P. Virey

100 passages taken largely from newspaper sources, fifty for translation into English and fifty for translation into French. Subject matter is mainly industrial, commercial and political and is chosen for its value to new sixth-form and college students studying non-aesthetic French or English. Two or three notes are provided at the back of the book for each passage.

57. LE GRAND, R. J.

Sixty passages, approximately 300 words in length, from nineteenth- and twentieth-century authors. These are followed by notes and phrases corresponding to each passage. The intention of these is to provide active practice in using the words in a passage before the next one is studied. The last section of the book contains notes on the authors.

58. LIGHT, E., and J. B. Howitt

Designed for students taking Northern Universities Joint Matriculation Board General Studies Examination at Advanced level, this book offers thirty passages dealing with technical matters and general problems of modern life, followed by thirty more for comprehension practice. Each of the latter is followed by questions which include demands to translate certain phrases and idioms. Each passage is approximately 400 words in length. The book ends with a glossary of phrases of high frequency and a French-English vocabulary approximately 1,000 words in length.

59. LISTER, F.

100 passages approximately 150 words in length for translation into French, numbers 1-20 providing intensive revision of the commonest structures, numbers 21-50 introducing new structures and taking the pupil to 'matriculation' standard, numbers 51-100 containing extra revision passages. The first seventy-seven pages of the book consist of grammar rules and examples, to which the notes below the passages refer. The book ends with forty subjects for free composition, an English-French vocabulary of some 2,000 words, and a list of authors of passages.

60. LOUGH, John, and Muriel Lough

100 prose and thirty-five verse passages graded roughly according to difficulty and varying between 200 and 400 words in length. There is an introduction in which problems of translation are discussed and two sample model translations are offered. The book ends with a list of authors.

61. MOSS, F. W.

Intended to make translation into French easier the sixty lessons in this book contain a passage in French and a related passage in English, both for translation and followed by questions in French. Word-lists of about twenty-five words are given at the beginning of each chapter and each passage is approximately 100 words long. Each of the seven sections in the book introduces one or two new tenses. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 1,500 words and an English-French one of about 1,300 words.

62. PICAZO, José, editor

Pages originally set by the University of London divided into two sections of forty passages for each level. Notes to help the student with difficulties of vocabulary and idiom are provided in a third section of the book, but they are not intended to supplant reference works and dictionaries.

63. PRYCE, D. K., and J. R. Foster

Sixty annotated passages graded from GCE 'O' level to 'A' and 'S' level. These are followed by twelve passages taken from past papers set by examining boards and lists of about forty words corresponding to each passage. The book ends with a list of dictionaries, grammars, and books on vocabulary and style.

64. RITCHIE, R. L. Graeme

200 passages and key (see above), graded into four levels, easy (scholarship level), moderately difficult (University Pass Examinations), difficult (Final Honours) and very difficult. There are four introductory chapters on Descriptive Vocabulary, Homonyms and Synonyms, Grammar and Syntax, and Style. A fifth chapter offers a model lesson. The passages for translation are arranged in eight sections, such as Descriptive, Narrative and Conversational. These are followed by a selection of model translations from English, literary extracts by French professors and professors of French. The book ends with indexes of authors, titles of passages and first words of passages.

65. RITCHIE, R. L. Graeme, and James M. Moore

100 graded passages for translation into French. Each passage is provided with an English-French word-list of about twenty-five words and notes. Since each passage is only about ten lines in length, this is generous help. The passages are divided into ten sections, each section introducing one or two new tenses. There is an English-French vocabulary of some 1,200 words and an index of passages according to title.

66. RITCHIE, R. L. Graeme, and Claudine I. Simons

114 passages from French literature grouped under the headings: Descriptive, Portraits, Historical and Narrative, Characters, Conversational, Literature and Art, Philosophical and Reflective, and Verse. Notes are provided below each passage and the model translations are presented on the page opposite the originals. There are indexes of authors of the passages, titles of the passages, first words in passages and of words mentioned in the notes.

67. ROE, F. C., and J. Lough

200 passages from modern English writers with notes and (separately as above) key translations. There is an index of authors of passages and an introduction which discusses prose composition, the theory and practice of prose translations, and gives three model translations. The difficulty of the passages increases as the book progresses, while the supporting notes become fewer.

68. SEGGER, S. W.

Eighty-five passages from modern English authors and their model translations approximately 300 words in length, taken from examination papers for Open Scholarships. There is an introduction which discusses problems such as the use of the postposition, the tenses, the subjunctive and other traps. Notes are provided below each translation.

69. THIMANN, I. C.

In an attempt to approach unseen translation scientifically this book offers word-lists, one for Ordinary level and one for Advanced and Scholarship levels, before the corresponding passages. The lists are based on the Vanderbeke word frequency list and on previous examination papers. Model answers are provided at both levels and the book ends with a list of suggestions to teachers.

70. VARLEY, C., and H. M. Black, editors

One hundred passages, about 300 words in length, taken from French authors and graded according to difficulty. Nos. 1-20 are for translation and have no questions provided. Nos. 21-60 are harder, are for translation also, and are followed by sets of between ten and twenty questions in French and in English with a suggested marking scheme. Nos. 61-90 are for 'interpretation' (comprehension) and have similar sets of questions in English and French. Nos. 91-100 are poems, also followed by double sets of questions. No vocabulary list is provided.

71. WHITMARSH, W. F. H.
71.2 Key. Longman, 1969. 84p.

ADDENDUM

72. BISSCHOP, H. R., and A. M. Lunel
Twenty-one texts, the majority in narrative form, on a wide variety of subjects, including news items, legends, interviews, aspects of daily life and of industry. Texts vary between 400 and 700 words; they are of 'O' level standard and are accompanied by black and white illustrations (photographs and maps) — up to three per text. Four or five lexical items are explained in French at the foot of each passage. There is no cumulative vocabulary. Exercises, which are all in French, comprise: (a) comprehension of salient facts — eight questions with multiple-choice answers; (b) narrative comprehension check using eight open-ended questions; (c) five statements about the narrative to which the pupil replies: juste/faux; (d) a selection of eight topics from the text to encourage the composition of brief statements; (e) a related theme for the composition of a paragraph or so.

Ninety-five graded passages for translation into French divided into two sections. The first contains easier passages specially devised to practise essential constructions and introduces the subjunctive only from number seventeen onwards. The second contains passages from many sources which are more difficult. These are followed by twenty-two groups of practice sentences to drill essential constructions, and a grammar summary. The book ends with an English-French vocabulary of about 4,500 words. A key to the translations is provided for teachers.

73. MACKERETH, J. D., and L. M. Derham
Choisissons bien! Harrap, 1969.
Preparation for comprehension papers at GCE 'O' level. Graded exercises precede model tests. Questions are provided with multiple-choice answers. Part One consists of ten listening tests. The tapes for these include the preparatory exercises. Part Two consists of ten reading tests which are not recorded on tape. Answers for both parts are provided in the teacher’s book which also carries the printed versions of the audio tests.

This list forms one section of a bibliography which, when complete, will comprise several sections. The books listed here aim to provide opportunities for pupils to follow a more individualised programme in the skills of drama, singing, playing games and reading for amusement and pleasure. Teachers who are anxious to find materials which could be adapted for the average and slower learners, and which lend themselves readily to group work, will find this list of particular interest.

In the section on drama, readers written in dialogue form have been included only if their length makes them suitable for classroom acting. Some readers have been included in the song-book section in order to make this a useful source of reference for teachers who wish to have a comprehensive list of where songs can be found. In the section on games and puzzles, readers have been included if they contain a strong element of puzzles and other game-like activities. The last section contains readers in which the visual element is very important, and can be regarded as the chief method of conveying meaning. Seven of the entries have a recorded element. For further lists of song-books, language games and activities teachers might consult the 1973 French catalogue of European Schoolbooks Ltd.

The annotations are based on a careful examination of the components and are intended to be objective. A simple classification, set out overleaf, gives a broad indication of the age and level of instruction at which particular material may be used. The appropriate letters are given opposite each entry and in the list of contents.

Before placing orders teachers should examine specimens to decide whether they are suitable for particular classes. Examples are available for inspection in the Language-Teaching Library of the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research. Specimens are usually available to teachers for inspection from the publisher or distributor on request. Books shown here are available in the United Kingdom. Details of prices are subject to change; it is advisable to check them with the publisher or distributor before placing an order.

Suggestions for improving this list, or for new entries in it, will be welcome and should be addressed to the Director, CILT.

PLAYLETS AND DRAMA

1. ARNOLD, Marian
   These plays are suitable for classroom production or stage presentation and have pupils in mind who have done two, three or four years of French. Casts of some six pupils are needed on average. There is no obvious repetition of structures, but the language is quite simple and gives opportunity for a wide range of interpretation. At the end of the book there are explanatory notes on phrases from each play and a French English vocabulary of some 480 words.

2. CALLEN, A.
   Four plays, each with a wide range of structures and vocabulary and offering parts to a good number of pupils. The plays are more suitable for stage than classroom presentation, and include chorus work and six songs. Unharmonised musical notation is offered for each song and notes for production are provided. There is a French English vocabulary of some 480 words.

3. CARTER, G. D.
   Thirty-two short playlets linked together by a basic story concerned with the visit of an English boy to France. Structures and vocabulary have been chosen with examination requirements in mind. There is an appendix which gives a list of props and suggestions for team work and award of marks.

4. DOYLE, Nicholas P.
   A reader for teaching vocabulary of domestic interest to girls in the second or third year of French. Each situation is introduced in the form of questions and answers and then developed as a short dialogue. The vocabulary is then reintroduced in a number of specially composed songs set to well-known tunes: She'll be coming round the mountain, Goodnight ladies, Underneath the spreading chestnut tree, Oh dear what can the matter be, Il court, il court, le furet, Yankee doodle, So early in the morning, As I was going to Strawberry Fair. Word-lists for each situation are provided, but not in alphabetical order.

5. DOYLE, Nicholas P.
   A collection of dramatic situations, scenes, exchanges, songs and chorusing activities. There is much repetition of structures and vocabulary in very short simple pieces with parts for many participants.

6. ELSTON, Charles Sidney
   Twenty sketches for beginners, of a similar level of difficulty to the earliest ones in French classroom comedies by the same author. Subjects are taken from everyday situations: in the station, in the park, and so on. Tense usage is mainly restricted to the present and there is much repetition of structures and vocabulary though without detriment to the dramatic effect. There are French English word-lists at the end of the book.

7. ELSTON, Charles Sidney
   A collection of fifteen playlets, of which eleven are drawn from the author's Fluent French for secondary schools and four are new. The first two use the present tense only, the next five use the perfect tense with avoir and the rest have a wider range of tense and structure. Films of the first two sketches: L'entente cordiale and Quelle chance! can be hired from Gateway Film Productions Ltd, 470 Green Lanes, London N13 5XF or from the National Audio-Visual Aids Film Library, Paxton Place, Gipsy Road, London SE27 9SR.

8. ELSTON, Charles Sidney
   Fifteen short sketches for classroom or stage production. The first six are particularly easy and can be useful for first and second year students. It is possible to expand the plays and divide many of the parts. The design is such as to offer rôles for many participants.

9. ELSTON, Charles Sidney
   Forty-five rhymes, jingles, dialogues and playlets. In all of these, rhyme is used to aid memorisation. As the book progresses the lines become longer but the speeches are all brief. French English word-lists are provided at the end of the book.

10. ELSTON, Charles Sidney
    Twenty-two extracts from nineteenth and twentieth century authors, which have been slightly abridged. Some drama and poetry is included and bibliographical notes of authors are provided. There is a French-English vocabulary of 2,000 words.

11. EVANS, Ian Andrews

A collection of twelve playlets for pupils in the first, second and third years of learning French. The playlets are graded in order of difficulty, length and number in the cast. There is plenty of repetition of structure but not to the point of boredom; the range of structure is quite wide. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 1,000 words.

12. EVANS, Ian Andrews

Each play has a wide range of structure and vocabulary and offers rôles to about twenty participants. There is little obvious repetition and the plays are more suited to stage than classroom. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 1,500 words.

13. FOURRE, Pierre

A play in two acts based on the fable and written in the restricted vocabulary (1,500 words) of le français fondamental, premier degré. Seven songs are incorporated in the play and unharmonised musical notation is provided at the back of the book. The titles are: Malbrouck s'en va t'en guerre, Les filles de La Rochelle, La fille au coupeur de paille, Le sire de Framboisy, Cadet Rousselle, Joli tambour and Au pont du Nord. There are notes on costumes, set design and difficult words which the illustrations, consisting of line drawings, help to explain.

14. GARDNER, Carl, and B. W. Garrett

Twenty playlets based on situations likely to be encountered by travellers to France, and which introduce a considerable amount of information on French life. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 850 words most of which are to be found in le français fondamental, premier degré. Longer parts are provided for the faster pupils, and the shorter parts offer a wide variety to other pupils without overtaxing their memories.

15. JACKSON, A. H., editor

Extracts from Don Juan, L'amour médecin, Le médecin malgré lui, L'avare, Monsieur de Pour- ceaugnac, Le bourgeois gentilhomme, Les fourberies de Scapin, La comtesse d'Escarbagnas, Le malade imaginaire, Tartuffe, Le misanthrope. Les femmes savantes. Most of the extracts are in prose and have been simplified. The four photographs are from productions at the Comédie Française. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 2,000 words.

LATOUR, Omer

Aventure à Montréal.

see section: Pictorial readers, no. 73

16. LESTER, G., and R. Ferrieux

Twelve short plays selected and adapted from Associated-Rediffusion's French television series. The situations are everyday ones and the structures and vocabulary are considerably simplified but there is no obvious repetition. Notes on the text are at the bottom of each page, while more general ones appear at the end of each play. The photographs are taken from the television programmes. Exercises are set on each play and mainly provide suggestions for creative writing. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

17. LEVY, Harry

Eight short playlets based on the Tavor course material, to provide a means of revising structures and vocabulary. There is ample repetition and the situations offer rôles for a good number of participants. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 800 words. Information is given on which lessons in the Tavor course each playlet is related to.

18. LOVEMAN, C. E.

Cinq saynêtes. Nelson, 1966. 48p. illus. (Modern Method French Reading Scheme.)

Five plays for intermediate level students. There are sufficient parts for a cast of between six and a dozen actors. The language is varied and there is no obvious repetition of structures or vocabulary. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 500 words. Each play is followed by ten comprehension questions in French which indicates that the book is intended primarily as a reader, but classroom drama would be quite feasible. The illustrations consist of line drawings.

19. MALLINSON, Vernon

Nous les gosses: d'après le scénario de Hiler et Gaston Modot. Heinemann Educational, 1966. viii, Adventures of a group of French children arranged in ten scenes accompanied by four photographs from the film of the same title. Wordlists and exercises are provided for each scene and there is a French-English vocabulary of some 500 difficult words.

20. MARY GLASGOW PUBLICATIONS

Fifteen short playlets, suitable for classroom use, which originally appeared in the classroom magazine Bonjour from the same publishers. There is considerable repetition in the text and verb usage is confined to the present tense.

21. MARY GLASGOW PUBLICATIONS

Twelve playlets which originally appeared in the classroom magazine Bonjour by the same publishers, based on everyday life situations such as holidays, Christmas, a burst tyre on a car journey. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 600 words and verbs are restricted to the present tense.

Recorded material
21.1 1 Tape, 5″ reel, 3/4 ips, twin half track

22. PERRY, Nona-Louise

Twenty-four very short dialogues, each based on a large line drawing which sets the scene. The language and length of dialogue build up line by line but there is no obvious repetition of structures and vocabulary. After each sixth lesson there is a summary which includes comments on grammar and question-answer exercises. This indicates that the fundamental aim of the book is that it should be used as a reader, but the dialogues are so short and contain such useful phrases that they lend themselves well to dramatic dialogue work.

23. SAVIGNY, W. B.

Eighteen simple playlets, each one page in length. There are suggestions for a scheme of procedure from reading to acting, word-lists for each play and a French-English vocabulary of some 400 words. Repetition of structure and vocabulary is not obvious in the text.

24. SMITH, Evelyn

Very simple language and plenty of movement combine to make interesting situations.

25. TREHERNE, Madeleine

A restriction of action, a high rate of repetition, shortness of phrases and parts of equal length make these plays suitable for use in the classroom where there is not a lot of space. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 800 words.

26. WALLING, James J., and Joan Walling

Fifteen dialogues centred around two related families who go on holiday together. Although by implication intended as a reader, the book could be used for classroom drama with a third, fourth or fifth year class. Each dialogue is followed by a French-English word and phrase list. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 500 words.

27. WALLING, James J., and Joan Walling

Although intended as a reader with exercises this book could readily be used for dramatic work in the classroom. The language is modern and idiomatic, and each dialogue is quite short enough to be useful. The dialogue is followed by a French-English phrase list and a series of transformation pattern drills.

SONGS AND POEMS

28. BEAUMONT, Pierre de

Thirty-five poems especially written within the restricted vocabulary of le français fondamental, premier degré. The lines and stanzas are short and the poems are presented attractively with black and white line drawings.

29. BOGOTH, Keith

Thirty poems from well-known writers, particularly those from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Opposite each poem are introductory notes on the poem, comprehension questions in French, questions in English on style and content, a topic for oral or written composition and a French-English word-list of the most difficult words.

Poems

30. BUCKBY, N. M. FH

Four short stories based on vocabulary shared by the francois fondamental: 1er degré and Bonjour Line. Words not included in these two sources are listed in the notes for teachers. The two songs offered are: Montagnes Pyrénéennes, vous êtes mon amour and La-haut sur la montagne.

31. BUJN, E. G. and C. S. Elston FH

Ten short playlets, each based on one or more well-known French songs.

Songs

CARRE, A.L.
Bonjour Isabelle, bonjour Olivier!

see section: Pictorial readers, no. 70

32. COULSON, Evelyn L. FH

A reader about the adventures of a cat. Each of the twenty-four chapters has a line drawing and contains a short easy poem. There is a French-English word-list following each poem, and at the end of the book a French-English vocabulary of some 1,000 words which excludes the words in the word-lists.

33. DOYLE, Nicholas P. DFH

Forty-eight songs divided into eight categories and each provided with unharmonised musical notation.

see section: Playlets and drama, no. 4

34. ELSTON, Charles Sidney FH

A reader based on life in a colonie de vacances near Annecy, and including chapters on mountaineering, history and travel. Many of the twenty-two chapters are in letter form and there is a rich supply of two, three- and four-part songs, word games, jokes, poems, crosswords and other puzzles. The book has a French-English vocabulary of some 1,800 words.

FOURRE, Pierre
Fantaisie sur le savetier et le financier de Jean de la Fontaine.

see section: Playlets and drama, no. 13

35. FULLER, Bernard FHJ

A collection of sixty-two less common songs from regions of France, each provided with unharmonised musical notation. The songs are divided into sections entitled Chansons de métier, Chants de plein air, Danses, Chansons d’amour, Chansons de fête et légendes, and Chansons à mimer et à récapitulation. Each section has a regional photograph at its head and there is a vocabulary of some 500 words. A tape recording of twenty-two of the songs is available from Tutor-Tape.

44. WALKER, Sarah, compiler

La famine Noé. Edward Arnold, 1971. 46p. illus.

YOUNG, Gale

A sequel to L'arche de Noé by the same author (no. 42) with repetition of the basic vocabulary of the earlier book and gentle grading of new material. The future tense, the range of object pronouns and the tu form of verbs are used. The illustrations are line drawings which aid comprehension. Specially written words are set to the tunes of well-known traditional songs, and musical notation is included.

Recorded Material

44.1 1 Tape, 4" reel, 3½ ips, twin half track

Tunes

Marlbrouck s'en va t'en guerre — Après de ma blonde — Au clair de la lune — Alouette, gentille alouette — Frère Jacques — Il était un petit navire.

See section: Pictorial readers, no. 89.

GAMES AND PUZZLES

45. BUCKBY, M.

Feîtes vos jeux. Materials Development Unit, University of York, 1971. 82p. illus.

A collection of games and activities for children aged eight to twelve. Each of the thirty-nine units in this book corresponds to the units in En avant: stages 1A and 1B, giving extra practice in the vocabulary and structures of the course. To add flexibility, reading and writing skills are also practised. At the beginning of each game the teacher is told how many players can take part, the space and the materials required. The introduction enlarges on these topics and the illustrations refer mainly to visual aids in the course.

46. DORRY, G.

A collection of games, examples of which are in English though they may easily be adapted to the teaching of French. The book is divided into games of number, spelling, vocabulary, structure-practice, pronunciation, rhyming and miscellaneous. Each game has details of level of difficulty, number of participants and type of exercise. There is also a general index table giving similar details.

47. ELSTON, Charles Sidney

A collection of games and puzzles for which it is essential that each of the pupils should have a copy of the book. This contains explanations of the games and the rules. The illustrations are line drawings, maps and diagrams necessary for the function of the games.

ELSTON, C. S.

La colonie de vacances.

See section: Songs and poems, no. 34

48. FIOT, Jacques

Le français par les mots croisés. Hachette, 1969. 79p. (Série Variétés.)

A collection of graded crossword puzzles with both answers and clues in French. The puzzles range from small puzzles of six squares to large ones of 144. Each puzzle is based on a topic or theme such as la famille or les monuments de Paris and a vocabulary of 1,300 words is necessary. More difficult clues have the answers given at the back of the book.

49. HOURDRY, Michel

Twenty puzzles of 36 squares, fifteen of 64, graded in order of difficulty and based on a vocabulary of 3,500 words. Words which do not come in the range of Gougenheim's Dictionnaire fondamental de la langue française are given before the clue the first time they appear, but are regarded as known on subsequent occasions. Specimen clues are given at the front of the book, solutions at the back.

50. LEE, W. R.

A collection of games divided under the headings: oral games, pronunciation games, reading and writing games, spelling and a 'mixed bag'. There is an introduction which deals extensively with the rationale of games in language learning, classroom organisation and the management of the competitive element. The book has the teaching of English in mind, but the games can easily be adapted and this book provides a valuable fund of ideas.

51. McCRIMMON, Ian, compiler

Fifty-eight crosswords each with approximately twenty-five clues. The first twenty-nine puzzles have clues in French, an English translation of which goes into the puzzle. The rest have the clues in English and a French word goes into the puzzle. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 800 words and an English-French one of some 750.

52. McCRIMMON, Ian, compiler

Fifty-eight crossword puzzles of similar difficulty to those in the other collection by the same author (see above). The puzzles and vocabularies follow exactly the same pattern.

53. MARY GLASGOW PUBLICATIONS

A collection of twenty crossword puzzles of gay and irregular shape. Clues are progressively less easy through the book and both they and the answers are in French. Many of them are gap-filling in nature and could be used orally in class, or written in the class or as homework fun. The answers are given at the back of the booklet in the form of completed puzzles.

54. TREHERNE, Madeleine

A simple reader about a young girl who has to stay in a home during her father's illness. Each chapter is followed by questions, exercises and word games or a crossword puzzle. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 550 words.

Many other sources of puzzles and games are referred to in the following section.
55. BONJOUR

Glasgow. 8p. illus.

A magazine for eleven year old beginners in the secondary school, or as a follow-up to Boum! (see below). It is also suitable for slower learners who are somewhat older. The magazine is printed in two colours and includes attractive photographs, cartoons, maps, games and puzzles. A French-English vocabulary is provided. There are three issues a term from October to June.

55.1 3 Tapes per year (each containing 3 issues of magazine), 3¾ ips.

56. BOUM!

Glasgow. 6p. illus.

A magazine for young beginners between seven and eleven years of age. The text is partly in English. The illustrations consist of line drawings and photographs while the text is in two colours. Many puzzles, games and comic-strips are included, and there are notes containing suggestions to the teacher for exploitation of the text. The magazine appears three times a term, October to June.

57. BUTTERFLY: English-French magazine

A monthly bilingual magazine in which both editorial comments and articles are in French and English. There are many photographs, a comic-strip feature, crossword puzzles and advertisements for holidays, courses, au-pair posts and penfriends.

58. ÇA VA

Glasgow. 8p. illus.

A magazine for young people in the second and third year in secondary schools which would also make happy rapid reading for more advanced students. The magazine is printed in two colours and includes attractive photographs, cartoons, maps, games and puzzles. A French-English vocabulary is provided. There are three issues a term from October to June and each is provided with notes and suggestions for the teacher.

59. CHEZ NOUS

Glasgow. 8p. illus.

A magazine for young people in the pre-examination years in secondary schools which would also make happy rapid reading for more advanced students. The text includes articles on more serious topics and problems of modern living. The French studies content is increased, but there are still many photographs, cartoons, playlets, recipes, news items, songs, games and puzzles. There is no French English vocabulary, but teacher's notes are included. There are three issues a term from October to June.

60. FEU VERT

Hachette. 6p. illus.

A magazine for beginners who have a vocabulary of approximately 300 words. The illustrations consist of photographs; line drawings, quizzes, puzzles, cartoons and comic-strips. The pictures are selected to aid comprehension. Notes and suggestions for the teacher are included and there are eight issues in the school year.

61. PARIS

Brimicombe Publications, 8 St. John's Park, London SE3 7TQ. 16p. illus.

A monthly magazine suitable for intermediate and advanced students in schools. Articles in the magazine are graded in four categories: very easy, easy, more advanced, and for general use. Topics covered range from adventure stories to information about life in France. There are poems, songs and cartoons. The illustrations consist mainly of photographs and line drawings. Definitions of words are given in French at the end of each article.

62. PASSE-PARTOUT

Hachette. 16p. illus.

A magazine for intermediate level students with a basic vocabulary of 1,300 words. Students of advanced level could read this magazine with enjoyment and profit. The text deals with modern and controversial topics, and there are attractive photographs and line drawings. There is a section for jokes, games and puzzles, and a vocabulary page with explanations of words given in French. Notes are provided for the teacher and there are eight issues in the school year.

63. PASSPORT: a magazine for Europe

Glasgow. 8p. illus.

A magazine in English for young people wanting to find out about Europe and compare life in European countries with their own. The illustrations consist mainly of photographs and maps. So far six issues have been published, and are obtainable in multiples of thirty made up in any combination. The following topics have been covered so far: transport and travel, food and drink, sport, clothes and fashion, education and entertainment.

64. QUOI DE NEUF?

Hachette. 8p. illus.

A magazine for young people in the second year of French which could also be enjoyed by more advanced students. The text is limited to a vocabulary of 700 words and is printed in two colours. The illustrations consist of photographs, jokes, cartoons, maps and puzzles and much information about life in France is included. There is a vocabulary in which explanations of words are given in French, and there are notes and suggestions for the teacher. Eight issues are published in the school year.

PICTORIAL READERS

65. CALMANN, Marianne FH
Blanche et la rose noire. Glasgow, 1972. 30p. illus. (Photo-Roman 3.)
A photo-strip story of revenge, which occupies twenty-one pages of the book. The narrative is printed in green and the dialogue in black in 'balloons' is in the style of comics. The language is suitable for pupils who have studied French for three, four or five years in the secondary school. At the end of the book there are exercises in the form of questions on the characters, word games and a crossword puzzle with clues related to the story. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 250 words.

An eighteen-page photo-strip adventure story involving two girls and two boys on a camping holiday. The narrative is printed in red and the dialogue in black in 'balloons' is in the style of comics. The language is suitable for pupils who have studied French for three, four or five years in the secondary school. At the end of the book there are exercises in the form of questions on the characters, word games and a crossword puzzle with clues related to the story. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

67. CALMANN, Marianne FH
Mystère à Champneige; illustrated by Claude Lenoir. Glasgow, 1968. 15p. (Mystère 1.)
A comic-strip adventure story based on a skiing holiday. Each picture is a black and white line drawing and has a narrative block in brown print at the top of it. The dialogue is printed in black in 'balloons' and is simple and short. At the end of the book there are question and answer exercises, puzzles and a crossword. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

68. CALMANN, Marianne FH
Mystère sur la Côte d'Azur; illustrated by Claude Lenoir. Glasgow, 1969. 15p. (Mystère 2)
A comic-strip adventure story based on a seaside holiday. Each picture is a black and white line drawing and has a narrative block in brown print at the top of it. The dialogue is printed in black in 'balloons' and is simple and short. At the end of the book there are question and answer exercises, puzzles and a crossword. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

A photo-strip adventure story involving smuggling of diamonds which occupies sixteen pages of the book. The narrative is printed in blue and the dialogue in black in 'balloons' is in the style of comics. The language is suitable for pupils who have studied French for three, four or five years in the secondary school. At the end of the book there are exercises in the form of questions on the characters, word games and a crossword puzzle with clues related to the story. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 400 words.

70. CARRE, A. L. D
Bonjour Isabelle, bonjour Olivier! University of London Press, 1968. 48p. illus.
A reader about young children at home, at play and at school. Each double page has large line drawings on one side which are closely related to the text on the other. The language is very simple and consists of sentences one line or less in length. There is a song by the author, Isabelle tra-la-la, with full piano accompaniment. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 200 words.

71. DAVEY, Robert D
A set of readers with very large supporting full-colour illustrations which obviate the need for a vocabulary. The set is divided into two series. The first consists of seven large format books with limp covers. Print used is a large, bold italic script which is gradually reduced in size throughout the series. The narrative is conveyed in short simple sentences containing basic structures, and only the present tense is used. The second series consists of two smaller readers which have line drawings offering less support to the text. Vocabulary for the first series is given in a separate book.

71.1 Le chapeau de Mor. ur Dupont. 1970. 12p.
A dachshund finds a lost hat. D

A rampant cow eats aunt Marie's daisies.
A lonely chick in search of a friend.

A burglary with a happy ending.

71.5 Monsieur Crapaud invite Monsieur Rat à dîner. 1970. 20p.
A toad on an eventful fishing trip.

A drama between an evil fox and other animals.

A toad tricks a fox.

A dachshund rescues a boy and his toy boat and the adventures of a rampant cat. The illustrations are line drawings. The past historic, imperfect and perfect tenses are used and there is a French-English vocabulary of some 500 words.

Two stories on the adventures of a goat, a fox and other animals. The illustrations are line drawings. The past historic, imperfect and perfect tenses are used and there is a French-English vocabulary of some 850 words.

71.10 Vocabulaire, questions et réponses. 1970. 64p.
A French-English vocabulary list of all the 750 words in the first seven books of the set. This is followed by exercises in the form of questions and suggested activities.

72. FRANK, Mary E.
A series of simple readers with a strong visual element to convey meaning and avoid the use of French-English vocabularies. The illustrations consist of large two-colour line drawings and maps which have a French atmosphere.

French family life described in very simple language. There are questions on the text and suggestions for class activities. Notes are given to explain the few difficult words and phrases which occur.

72.2 Amusez-vous bien!. 1968. 48p.
Three stories of life and adventure in the town, in the country and at the seaside. The narrative is in the present tense, but some use is made of the perfect and imperfect. There are questions, suggested activities and topics for composition.

72.3 C'est la vie. 1968. 63p.
Eighteen chapters on French life with particular emphasis on Christmas and other festive occasions. Several chapters comprise an account of a western film. The perfect tense is emphasised and questions are provided on each chapter.

72.4 Sans blague. 1968. 47p.
Nine incidents centred on everyday life situations. The perfect tense and infinitive constructions are emphasised. Questions are set on each story and activities are suggested.

72.5 Bonnes vacances. 1969. 64p.
Holidays and travel to regions of France, Tunisia and England. All the chapters are written in letter form and there is an emphasis on the perfect tense and infinitive constructions. Questions and exercises are provided on each chapter.

73. LATOUR, Omer
A humorous adventure story set in modern Canada. Each double page has a large line drawing on the left which gives the context of the text on the right. This is in dialogue form and can readily be used as a basis for classroom drama. The language is varied but simple. The last twenty pages of the book are taken up by questions on each page of text. These questions are divided into two equal sets, one for comprehension and one for more demanding and general answers.

74. LEESON, Richard
An English boy's diary of a trip to Paris, copiously illustrated with photographs, drawings and maps. The text consists of a narrative in note form and dialogues between various people. There are questions on each section and a French-English vocabulary of some 250 words. Projects which are related to the text are suggested.

Recorded Material

74.1 2 Tapes, 4 1/4" reels, 3% ips, single top track.

75. LOVEMAN, C. E.
A series of humorous stories with a great deal of action. The lavish illustrations serve to convey meaning and the text is restricted in the main to the vocabulary of le français fondamental, premier degré.

Animal and adventure tales in very simple language. Meaning is conveyed by two-colour line drawings. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 150 words.
75.2 Hardi, les Huchons. 1970. 32p. illus. DF
Four tales of humour, mystery, adventure and sledge riding in winter, written in very simple language. Meaning is conveyed by two-colour line drawings. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 150 words.

75.3 Les Gaillard en campagne. 1970. 31p. illus. DF
Four tales of robbery, cliff-hanging, runaway horses and the horrors of house decoration. Meaning is conveyed by two-colour line drawings and there is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

75.4 Mystère à Cherbourg. 1971. 62p. illus. F
A smuggling adventure in seventeen sections supported by large line drawings. Some verbs are in the perfect tense, but the main narrative tense is the present. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 750 words.

75.5 La douce France. 1971. 71p. illus. F
Family holiday and travel in France. There is a considerable amount of dialogue, supported by line drawings and photographs, and the main narrative tense is the present. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 720 words.

76. MARY GLASGOW PUBLICATIONS DFGH

A picture-strip reader with short text inserted in the drawings themselves. There are fourteen episodes selected from the classroom magazine Bonjour by the same publishers. The stories are graded according to the difficulty of the texts and each occupies one page. There are approximately ten questions under each set of pictures, half of them closely related to the text and half demanding further structures and vocabulary. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

77. MARY GLASGOW PUBLICATIONS DFGH

Fourteen further episodes taken from the classroom magazine Bonjour by the same publishers. The stories are based on comic-strip style line drawings with text inserted in the drawings, and each occupies one page. There are approximately ten questions on each set of pictures, half closely related to the text and half demanding a knowledge of further vocabulary and structures. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

78. MILLER, S. H., and C. Jacob FH

A reader about a young girl who sings with a group and the adventures they undergo. As with the companion books by the same authors, the many line drawings obviate the need for a French-English vocabulary. The text occupies less than half of each page.

79. MILLER, S. H., and C. Jacob FH

A reader copiously illustrated with line drawings in order to obviate the need for a French-English vocabulary. A glossary at the foot of each page helps define difficult words and phrases. The text occupies less than half of each page.

80. MILLER, S. H., and C. Jacob FH

A reader about the adventures of a boy who becomes involved with a smuggling ring. The book is copiously illustrated with line drawings in order to obviate the need for a French-English vocabulary. The text occupies less than half of each page.

81. MILLER, S. H., and C. Jacob FH

A reader about the adventures of a boy who becomes involved with a band of robbers. The book is copiously illustrated with line drawings in order to obviate the need for a French-English vocabulary. The text occupies less than half of each page.

82. MUSMAN, Richard D

A very simple reader, lavishly illustrated with line drawings which obviate the necessity for translation. Each of the ten chapters has a composite picture with a corresponding word-list, the picture presenting a summary of the text. This is then followed by questions also based on the text. The topics covered give an idea of life in Paris. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 360 words and an end-paper map of the French capital.

83. MUSMAN, Richard D

Set in Normandy, this reader can be used as a sequel to Robert à Paris by the same author or in its own right. Some of the vocabulary of the companion book is re-introduced, some new verbs and infinitive constructions are used. The layout of chapters and exercises is similar, the many illustrations giving an attractive, almost comic-strip, effect. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 400 words.

84. PEACOCK, John FH
A comic-strip adventure story based on the theft of an antique chair. Each picture is a black and white line drawing and has a narrative block in purple print at the top of it. The dialogue is printed in black in 'balloons' and is simple and short. At the end of the book there are various exercises, crossword puzzles and word games. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 250 words.

85. RICHARDSON, G., and M. M. Lord
Salut, Correntin! Edward Arnold, 1968. 80p. illus.

A graded reader with lavish illustrations to convey meaning. The layout and aims are similar to those of Salut les jeunes! by the same author (see below). Songs and crossword puzzles are included and a picture dictionary instead of a French-English vocabulary.

86. RICHARDSON, G., and M. M. Lord
Salut, les Bouchon! Edward Arnold, 1971. 64p. illus.

A graded reader with lavish illustrations to convey meaning. The layout and aims are similar to those of Salut les jeunes! and Salut Correntin! by the same author (nos. 87 and 85). The range of structure and vocabulary is a little wider than that of the companion books. Use is again made of songs, crossword puzzles and a picture dictionary instead of a French-English vocabulary.

87. RICHARDSON, G., and M. M. Lord

A reader with lavish illustrations to convey meaning. On the left of each double page there is a large composite line drawing setting the scene for the text on the right, which is supported on all four sides by smaller drawings, maps and crossword puzzles. Four songs are also included. There are questions on the pictures to encourage composition. Pages 49-80 consist of a picture dictionary in place of a vocabulary.

88. ROCHEMONT, Henry
Mystère au Mont-Saint-Michel. Glasgow, 1970. 15p. illus. (Mystère 3.)

A comic-strip adventure story based on the making of a film on the Mont. Each picture is a black and white line drawing and has a narrative block in brown print at the top of it. The dialogue is printed in black in 'balloons' and is simple and short. At the end of the book there are question and answer exercises, puzzles, word games and a crossword puzzle. There is a French-English vocabulary of some 300 words.

This list forms one section of a bibliography of teaching materials for French and contains material specifically designed for teaching French in primary schools. Much material published under the general heading of 'French for beginners' is therefore excluded, notably the kind intended for adults. Material which forms part of a continuously developed sequence spanning primary and secondary schools is described both here and in the Recorded and audio-visual courses section of Teaching Materials for French.

For the convenience of the user, the present publication has been arranged in two parts:

Part A. Material in which some element is recorded on disc or tape and/or visual aids are essential.

Part B. Readers and workbooks which do not require any additional presentation device and can be used either for group work or by individuals.

During the compilation of the list reference has been made to French readers for primary schools: an annotated bibliography by J. W. Naylor, Nuffield Foundation, Leeds, 1966, and to the list of teaching materials compiled by Mrs. S. M. Stoker in The Modern Language Centre: Bulletin, ILEA, autumn 1971. The bibliographical section of Le français dans le monde is also a useful source of information.

Before placing orders teachers should examine specimens and listen to associated tapes to decide whether they are suitable for particular classes. Selections and examples are available for examination in the audio-visual section of the Language-Teaching Library at the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research and at an increasing number of teachers’ centres. Inspection material is also usually available to teachers from the publisher or distributor on request.

Courses and books shown here are available in the United Kingdom. Material published abroad has been included only if there are agencies in the United Kingdom able to supply it. Details of price are subject to change; it is advisable to check with the publisher or distributor before an order is placed.

Suggestions for improvements to, or new entries in, this list will be welcome and should be addressed to the Director, CILT.

2. Bon voyage! A three year course for primary school beginners in French
   Mary Glasgow, Stuart Ingram and Penrose Colyer.
   Mary Glasgow Publications Ltd, 140 Kensington
   Church Street, London W8. Audio-visual materials distributed by Rank Audio-Visual, PO Box 7C,
   G.W.R. Brentford, Middlesex

   A three-year course for eight- to eleven-year-old pupils. There are illustrated work books for the pupils, teacher’s notes and disc or tape recordings, with an optional set of posters for the first year.

   There are thirty lessons for each of the three years and the materials are divided into sets of ten lessons and are thus convenient for termly use.

   The working scripts for the first year are obtainable with or without printed text, but only scripts with printed texts are supplied for the second and third year.

   The discs contain the full text of all the lessons and an extra practice record is provided with each set of five. This contains additional questions and answers and phrases for repetition which do not appear in the main body of the lessons. The tapes are an alternative to the discs. This version of the course can be used without projection facilities.

   The audio-visual version is the same as the course described above, but has more elaborate tapes based on filmstrips prepared by the Rank Organisation. The filmstrips are available separately but the tapes for them are not suitable for use on their own.

7. Children speak French: an introductory audio-visual French course for 8-year-old children
Prepared by Durham County Local Education Authority. 1966. Pergamon Press Ltd, Headington Hill Hall, Oxford OX3 0BW

An introductory audio-visual course lasting one and a half terms, in fifteen lesson units. It is designed to prepare eight-year-old children for more advanced work. Maximum assistance is given to the non-specialist teacher and a minimum of structures and vocabularies are brought in. Dialogues, games, songs and activities are provided on the tapes and the filmstrip illustrations, in colour, have been drawn in the style of drawings of eight-year-old children.

The course is essentially preparatory to any one of the other full-scale courses listed in this bibliography.

8. Documentation audio-visuelle: l’expression orale à l’école primaire: vocabulaire-élocution
Editions Pedagogiques Diapofilm, Paris, UK distributor: European Schoolbooks Ltd, 100 Great Russell Street, London WC1 *

Each of the 11 sets contains six colour slides showing details of various facets of daily life in France. They lend themselves to comments about differences in customs between England and France and to extending the French vocabulary of pupils. The accompanying leaflets are written in French and make fairly full suggestions as to how the slides could be used in French schools. In so doing they provide a useful guide to the contents of each slide.

Printed Material
8.1 Leaflets to accompany each set of slides (free on purchase of slides)

Visual Material
8.2 Set 1: ‘Le Paris du Parisien.’
Set 2: ‘Flaneries et courses dans Paris.’
Set 3: ‘Boutiques et magasins.’
Set 4: ‘Une rue commerçante.’
Set 5: ‘Un grand magasin.’
Set 6: ‘Dans les rues de la ville.’
Set 7: ‘La ville.’
Set 8: ‘La toilette.’
Set 9: ‘La colonie de vacances.’
Set 10: ‘Le camping.’
Set 11: ‘Le village.’

9. En avant

A five-year course designed for children starting French at eight. Stages 1, 2, 3 and 4 together cover five years’ work and are described below. Subsequent material for children between the ages of thirteen and sixteen years is in preparation. Details can be obtained in due course from the Project at Mr. ... e, York. Present indications are that it will comprise (a) Core materials, using filmstrips, tapes, magazine-type materials with associated grammar booklets and (b) Auxiliary materials which might include suggestions for role playing, project work, language laboratory exercises and readers.

Stage 1 lasts four terms and lays the foundations of aural oral skills. It is provided in two kits for convenience in handling.

*See footnote to no. 4

Many of the titles and themes are common to both sets of readers, but the vocabulary and sentence structure of set 1 have been simplified to suit pupils of below average reading ability.
10. A first French kit
A. Sloan. 1965. Wm. Collins, Sons and Co. Ltd, 144 Cathed, Street, Glasgow
A two-year primary course which could also be used for secondary beginners. It is divided into two sections, each consisting of twelve lesson-units and corresponding roughly to one year’s work.

The teacher’s manual describes in English the approach to the teaching of French to young children and indicates the pedagogical reasons for adopting certain procedures. It lists the equipment provided and the linguistic tasks set for each lesson, with teaching instructions, suggestions for games and play-acting which provide the necessary practice. No indication is given of the criteria for including vocabulary but it does not appear to depart markedly from Le français fondamental: premier degré.

The readers included in A first French bookshelf by the same author can be used as a follow-up to help develop pupils’ reading ability.

Printed Material

10.6 20 Reading cards (for use with the second section), 7½” x 10”

11. Le français élémentaire: méthode Mauger-Gougenheim
Based on the findings of the Commission du français élémentaire, these two books provide material for teaching children over a considerable age range. The principle aim is to teach the spoken word but writing and reading are introduced as an aid. The teacher’s book is available both in English and French. Through the medium of spoken French the pupil is encouraged to link details of his classroom surroundings, line drawings in the book and printed sentences, so that grammatical patterns are internalised rather than explained by rules. Tabular paradigms are made available for revision purposes. The entire course depends on line illustrations. Many black and white photographs offer opportunities for oral composition; their main function is to introduce to the child distinctive features of French life.

The recordings feature varying intonations as well as enunciation practice. They have male, female and children’s voices. There are many pauses for imitative practice.

12. French in the primary school

Designed for the 7-10 age group. Books 1 and 2 contain illustrations only. Books 3 and 4 are also illustrated but contain reading material, simple spelling and written exercises, crosswords and songs.

The teacher’s manual contains notes for each stage of the lessons and follows through the work set in the pupils’ books and on the discs. It is particularly useful for the non-specialist teacher.

Although the illustrations are deliberately not French in appearance the books introduce children to French life and customs, at home, in school and on holiday.

22. Thèmes de vie: pour nos petits
Editions Fernand Nathan, Paris. UK distributor: European Schoolbooks Ltd, 100 Great Russell Street, London WC1
Each of the 11 sets of colour filmstrips comprises twenty or more views arranged in a connected sequence which suits the subject matter displayed. The name of each view is listed opposite the frame number on an accompanying leaflet and is followed by a few words describing the items and activities portrayed. The teacher could make slides from the views if this should prove to be more convenient a method of display.

Printed Material

Recorded Material
23.2 1 Tape, 5” reel, 3 1/2 ips, single top track

Part B. Readers and workbooks

Originally published in the magazine Bonjour, these stories are presented in the form of a strip cartoon, with the written element restricted to dialogue in the relevant frame. They are graded for difficulty and supplemented with questions which can be answered by reference to the text and some of which encourage the extension of vocabulary. A French-English vocabulary of about 350 entries appears on the final pages.

25. Buckley, N. M.
A reader for ten- to twelve-year-olds in primary and secondary schools. It is closely tied to Bonjour Linié (see no.3 in Part A), but could be used with any course based on Le français fondamental: premier degré. A note to teachers appears on p.33. There are 10 songs.

26. Carré, A. L.
The text in simple French is given in large type in fairly short sentences. The drawings, in large format, appear on facing pages. They are ‘culturally’ neutral. There is a French-English end vocabulary of about 200 words.

27. Carter, G. D.
The story of the adventures of a space-dweller (who can be recreated by judicious adaptation of a table-tennis ball) told in simple French, aided by black and white drawings. Generously-sized typography, plenty of repetition. Children’s life background to the situations.

28. Ellis, D. L.
The story of the first year of a kitten's life. 437 words almost entirely chosen from Le français fondamental: premier degré. Strictly minimum grammar. Could be used as a class book or for individual reading. There are comprehension exercises.

29. Fice, R. H., and others

Workbooks with spaces for pupils to accomplish simple written tasks. Line drawings aid comprehension.

30. Hirst, Margaret Sandwell

See no. 23 in Part A above.

31. Jenkins, D. J.

'Jean à l'aéroport.'
'Les Martin et les bandits.'
'Gisèle et son poney.'
'Aimez-vous l'école?'
'Chauffeur de Vernez.'
'Chauffeur de taxi à Paris.'

Speech patterns and vocabulary broadly similar to En avant (see no.9 in Part A above); brightly coloured illustrations by French artists; authentic local colour; designed to be read for pleasure.

32. Lichet, Raymond

Page 1 in each booklet shows the Progression et table des matières. Black and white drawings and photographs of everyday scenes are accompanied by printed stimuli. Answers become progressively more complex but the first page of the first booklet calls only for the writing of oui or non. All based on Le français fondamental.

33. Matchett, Grace
En vacances; illustrated by Geoffrey S. Fletcher. Harrap, 1966. (30p.) (Le français fondamental: premier degré.)

Middle-class children holidaying in Normandy. Double-spread water-colour drawings give bright, authentic local colour. Below these the left-hand page has the story and the right hand page French-English word-lists.

34. Popescu, Julian

Book 1: 'Le train.'
Book 2: 'La famille de Jean.'

Book 3: 'L'agent de police.'
Book 4: 'À la ferme.'
Book 5: 'Une visite à Paris.'
Book 6: 'Le café du lac.'
Book 7: 'Sur la plage.'
Book 8: 'Le château fort.'
Book 9: 'Le jardin zoologique.'

Brief statements on the left-hand pages, pen and crayon wash illustrations on the right-hand pages. A page of comprehension questions in English and a French-English vocabulary grouped according to page numbers. Local colour.

Originally published in the magazine, Bonjour. Presented in the same manner as Les aventures d'Auguste (see no.24 above).

36. Richardson, G., and M. M. Lord

An introduction to written French for pupils who have followed a preliminary oral course. Copious crayon and ink drawings, a map and songs. The pupils can refer to a vocabulary which uses pictures to define meaning - hence no English words.

37. Watson, John, adaptor

'Trois petits cochons.'
'La boîte à soleil.'
'Histoire du bébé lion.'
'Drôles de bêtes.'
'La belle robe neuve d'Anne Catherine.'
'La grise et la poulette.'

Selected titles from the Père Castor series retain the original pictures and present the story in French. This has been modified to suit English children in primary schools who have started an introductory audio-visual course. The inside covers carry complete French-English word-lists referring to each page of text in turn.

38. Young, Gale, and Joan G. Robinson

A carefully compiled book which could be used for class presentation or for individual study. It includes much French atmosphere in the illustrations. A prominent rôle is assigned to smoky chimneys and steam locomotives, but the material is lively and the language well-graded.

Though many of the courses covered in Part A of Primary school French contain a variety of printed, recorded and visual elements from which teachers can make their choice, additional material to aid comprehension and practice may be useful. Listed in this Supplement are various types of such additional material, grouped in three sections:

1. Some books for individual and group work
2. Visual teaching material, games and other 'interest material'
3. Discs.

A list of this type can never be exhaustive, but it is realised that this supplementary list could be expanded and suggestions from teachers will gladly be considered.

1. SOME BOOKS FOR INDIVIDUAL OR GROUP WORK

Suitable for first and second year of French. For 3-30 players.
Price: £0.35

Coulthard, Margaret, editor

A series of eleven readers arranged in four stages, with two books for the first stage and three for each subsequent stage, for the first two or three years of French. Each short chapter has comprehension questions in French and there is a French-English vocabulary at the end of each book. There is no indication of the grading criteria. Price: £0.58 per reader.

Gauthier, René

Grayson, Denis

Lion cahier.  Ginn, 1964. 52p. illus.

An informal workbook, with illustrations by Sempé. Useful for the start of the writing stage, it includes information about French life. Price: £0.11.

Sloan, A.

No criteria of selection are stated, but the stories are told in simple language with regular repetition of the commoner structures found in any preliminary course. May be used as follow-up reading for A first French kit (see no.10 in Primary school French). Price: £0.10 per reader.

When visiting bookshops in London, teachers may find it useful to call on: Paperbooks, 9 Harrington Road, London SW7 3ES. Paperbooks do not issue a catalogue but have a good range of French children's books, including Tintin, Bécassine, Astérix; books published in the Collection Odige-Gil (Mon premier dictionnaire; J'apprends à lire, etc.); the series École des Loisirs (Vite et lent; Chaud et froid, etc.); and lesser known titles.

2. VISUAL TEACHING MATERIAL, GAMES AND OTHER 'INTEREST MATERIAL'

DISCS FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

The following song discs have been mentioned in Le français dans le monde and could be obtained through the usual importers.

Bonjour, Madame La Tortue

Twelve animals 'en chansons et en comptines'. The 'comptines' alternate with the songs which have a guitar accompaniment. The comptines are probably the more useful component, the melodies of the songs being rather complicated. A leaflet supplies words and music. 17 cm, 45 rpm. Fernand Nathan, Paris, ref. 1520

Dixmoussadaine: nos. 1 and 3

Six songs on each disc sung by children and with a discreet orchestral accompaniment. After one performance of the song the orchestra plays alone to encourage listeners to sing to its accompaniment. A leaflet supplies words and music. 7", 45 rpm. Unidisc. refs. Ex 45308 and 45338

Jacques Douai chante pour les enfants: no. 5.

One record-book with nine songs by contemporary writers, Prévert, Desnos, Géraldy among others. Guitar accompaniment. Printed text of the lyrics is supplied. 17 cm, 45 rpm. BAH, ref. 674.

Perlin et Pimpin

Four discs, with four or five songs on each disc. An accompanying leaflet gives lyrics and music. 17 cm, 45 rpm. Unidisc.
