This foreign language curriculum guide for secondary school French and Italian includes the instructional objectives and activities for each language learning level and its corresponding suggested school grade. For French, there is a further breakdown according to language skills, grammar, reading, structures, conversation, and culture and civilization. For each level there is an objective statement which specifies the behavior variable or the intended behavior of the student as a result of having participated in a set of instructional experiences. Following is a detailed list of activities that the student must engage in successfully in order to attain the stated objective. The value of such a guide is in helping the teacher to select appropriate learning experiences, in communicating to others what is expected, and in providing both the student and teacher with a standard for evaluating progress. Objectives should not be seen as limiting teacher innovation or what the student is expected to know. (HW)

PREFACE

The following levels consist of instructional objectives and activities for each course of study within every curriculum area. These materials were produced by a staff of teachers working on curriculum teams for Project PACESETTER. They are, therefore, the product of the experience of the professionals who will put them to use.

This curriculum guide provides each teacher with curriculum materials organized into behavioral objectives with a scope and sequence. The guide is intended to encourage feedback so that a fully classroom tested curriculum will eventually result from the participation and suggestions of all teachers in the secondary schools of Cranston.

OBJECTIVES IN TERMS OF LEARNING VARIABLES

Bloom and his colleagues devised a taxonomy of educational objectives designed to classify the behavior of students in three domains as a result of having participated in a series of instructional experiences. The three domains are the cognitive (intellectual), the affective (emotional), and the psychomotor (physical). Within each of these domains there is a hierarchy which denotes increasing complexity of learning which is shown below.

The objectives which appear in these Curriculum guides have been stated in behavioral or performance terms. In addition to the general technique of the behavioral statement, the authors were careful to differentiate the levels at which given behaviors could be expected of the student. Thus, in the cognitive domain, a student's performance in the display of knowledge of a concept is less complex than the student's performance when he applies the concept in a given situation. Similarly, in the affective domain, a response to a situation is not as complex as the display of a value toward a given situation.

In initial classroom trials of this curriculum teachers will evaluate the appropriateness of the objectives and make recommendations for revising, deleting, or adding to the objectives or activities.
LEVELS, OBJECTIVES, AND ACTIVITIES

The curriculum guides provided here are organized into behavioral objectives which generally include two major components. The first is the objective statement which specifies the behavioral variable—the intended behavior of the students as a result of having participated in a set of instructional experiences, the content or topic and the evaluative criterion which is sometimes implicit in the behavioral objective. Curriculum writers have made every effort to classify the intended behaviors in keeping with the work of Bloom and others. The objectives, then, are stated in terms of specific behaviors which range from the simple, such as memorizing or translating, to the most complex, such as synthesizing or evaluating. The second major component is comprised of activities which outline what the student should do to attain the objective. These activities are suggested and should be added to, deleted, or modified by the teacher according to the needs and characteristics of individual students and the teacher's own experience and knowledge.

It is important to note here that the objectives serve the purpose of helping each teacher select appropriate learning experiences, communicate to others what is expected, and provide both student and teacher with a standard for evaluating progress. Objectives should not be seen as limiting teacher innovation or what the student is expected to know.

Each of the curriculum areas is divided into major topics or "Levels." Each level begins with a level objective which is followed by numbered objectives subordinate to it. Suggested activities follow each of these specific objectives and are numbered consecutively throughout the level.

EVALUATIVE CRITERIA

Many of the evaluative statements included in the behavioral objectives are teacher oriented; final decisions on evaluation have traditionally been the prerogative of the teacher. As we move toward continuous progress and, eventually, individualized instruction, it is hoped that the evaluation component increasingly becomes the shared responsibility of both teacher and student.
