This annotated bibliography relating to white ethnic studies is intended to assist teachers of English and social sciences in high schools and colleges in improving the self-image of students who have immigrant parents and grandparents. Most references are concerned primarily with America and the American scene, writers whose primary language is not English have been included only if their works have been translated. The bibliography has been divided first to list anthologies dealing with the white ethnic experience, then to list fiction, drama, poetry, biography, history, and criticism dealing with European ethnic groups in America (Dutch, German, Greek, Hungarian, Armenian, Irish, Italian, Jewish, Scandinavian, and Slavic). Whether or not a book is in print or available in paper is indicated. In many cases, titles of books no longer in print have been included because of their importance in presenting some aspect of the immigrant experience and their value to researchers and scholars. A key is also included to identify some important subject or subjects with which each work concerns itself. (WR)

INTRODUCTION

In May, 1972, the National Project on Ethnic America issued a bibliography on ETHNICITY IN AMERICAN GROUP LIFE, in conjunction with a meeting in Chicago of educators and community leaders titled The Illinois Consultation on Ethnicity in Education. The Consultation was part of an ongoing effort by the National Project, in cooperation with community-based and community-serving agencies, to develop multi-cultural policy and strategy approaches to problem solving and coalition building in the area of education.

That bibliography, while necessarily selective, proved to be very popular with educators and community leaders. It was not, however, targeted at high school and college literary courses, nor was it as comprehensive as this most recent bibliography prepared by Babette Inglehart and Anthony Roy Mangione for the Conference on Multi-Ethnic Literature at Chicago State University.

Their bibliography, like its predecessor, is a response to the demand for educational material which helps us understand the growing phenomenon of group identity in America. Coupled with this new awareness of diversity is the willingness of community groups, variously described as ethnics, minorities, women, senior citizens and working class Americans, to act upon their identities by demanding that human services, including educational services, be delivered in a manner that is sensitive to, and supportive of, group lifestyles and value systems.

In an age when the opportunities for group conflict are so numerous, it is necessary for our schools to build a learning environment in which students can achieve a healthy sense of their own identities as well as those of others. And because the history of America is largely the history of the migration and interaction of peoples from around the world, and from one region of this country to another, it is especially important for our schools to provide students with accurate, comparative information about (1) the various ways in which groups have adjusted (and are continuing to adjust) to the complexities of life in their new environment; and (2), the impact of that environment, interacting with the heritage of the migrant or ethnic group, on identity formation, family structure, political involvement, learning, social and economic mobility, the formation of institutions, etc.

Doctors Inglehart and Mangione have done an excellent job of fulfilling these needs in their useful annotated bibliography on European ethnic groups; and as they suggest in their preface, the bibliography should be used along with the many fine resource materials available on Black, Latino and Native American Studies.

We are indebted to Doctors Inglehart and Mangione for their perseverance and to Chicago State University for both hosting the Conference on Multi-Ethnic Literature and acting in a bridge-building role between scholars, authors, educators and community leaders on a subject of concern to all of us.

PREFACE

In recent years the "melting pot" ideal that all cultures in America would be, and should be, merged into one homogeneous American culture has proved invalid. Instead, we have come to recognize that our American society in one of cultural diversity and rich multi-ethnic traditions, which ought to be encouraged and sustained.

Traditionally, however, literature courses in high schools and colleges have paid little attention to works outside the Anglo-Saxon heritage, the frontier, and the Puritan experiences. Literary historians and scholars have, until recently, bypassed the contributions of most minority and immigrant writers. Literature about the ethnic experience in America is all too often absent from anthologies, curriculum guides, and book lists.

To meet this deficiency, we have prepared an annotated bibliography relating to white ethnic studies. We have limited our work to the documentation of European ethnic groups in order to avoid duplication of many fine resource materials that have already been developed in Black, Latino, and Native American Studies. It is our hope that teachers, made aware of the need to improve the self-image of ethnic-American students, will read widely from among the books that follow and will use representative works as an integral part of their teaching. In this way, teachers will be telling a story that has not been told -- without condescension or pity, free from stereotype, sentimentality, or hyperbole.

The immigrant story can be told without using material that exploits differences, fans ethnic discontent, or blinds students to their common aspirations. Ethnic studies, handled properly, can increase students' self-perception and understanding of others; it should not be used as a pretext to pull people apart.

This bibliography is necessarily selective, since the immigrant story has generated more good material than can reasonably be included, not only in the form of fiction and drama, but in autobiographies, memoirs, folk songs and ballads, letters and journals. Since this work has been prepared to assist teachers of English and Social Sciences in high schools and colleges in improving the self-image of students who have immigrant parents and grandparents, most references are concerned primarily with America and the American scene. Writers whose primary language is not English have been included only if their works have been translated.

The bibliography has been divided as follows: anthologies dealing with the white ethnic experience; literature of 10 European ethnic groups in America; history, autobiography, and criticism. Each entry is starred once or twice, indicating *in print or in paper, according to the latest editions of Books in Print and Paperbound Books in Print. For the addresses of publishers and the latest prices, readers should refer to these volumes.

In many cases, titles of books no longer in print have been included because of their importance in presenting some aspect of the immigrant experience and their value to researchers and scholars. It is also hoped that publishers will be encouraged to reprint works of importance and value which have long been unavailable to the general reader.

We have also included a key to some important subject or subjects with which each work concerns itself. While recognizing that works of literature are not textbooks "about" topics like acculturation, family breakdown, or inter-ethnic relations, nevertheless we know that they can provide valuable first-hand documentation of these processes. The purpose of this key is to aid educators and researchers who are interested in comparative ethnic studies to find common topics treated along ethnic lines. Anthologies Dealing with the White Ethnic Experience

Stories, essays, and poems about minority groups by America's leading writers. Anthology includes material by Willa Cather (on the Bohemians); Stephen V. Benét (on the Irish); Donn Byrne (on the Italians); Bernard Malamud (on the Jews); and William Saroyan (on the Armenians).

Although this anthology stresses literature on the Afro-American experience, it includes the analogous experiences of white and brown ghettoes. Focus throughout is on the problems of separation and alienation.

Faderman, William and Bradshaw, Barbara. (ed.) Speaking for Ourselves. New York: Scott, Foresman, 1969.

Wide range of selections, although only 200-odd pages out of 600 pages are devoted to the white ethnic experience. Includes discussion questions and short introductions on the writers and their works. Selections included: Jewish-American, Italian-American, Greek-American, Polish-American, Armenian-American, Irish-American, Scandinavian-American, Russian-American. There are also references to other works by the authors whose material is included, dates of publication, and allied literature.

A structured anthology based on the premise of inevitable merger of ethnic groups into the mainstream. Includes, among others, Mario Puzo, William Saroyan, Jo Pagano, Max Lerner, Philip Roth, John Logan, and Ole Rolvaag.

Similar to the anthologies listed above, although the material included merely touches on the white ethnic experience.

One of a series designed to be text materials for urban schools. The focus is on the old and new immigrants who people the American cities, and their interaction. Includes photographs and selected readings about most of the major ethnic groups. Recounts the effect of immigrants on the city, and the city on the immigrants.

A thoughtful rendering of the contributions of five major ethnic groups, including Irish (Stephen Crane, James T. Farrell), Italian (Panunzio, Corsi, Di Donato, Fante, De Capite) and Jewish (Michael Gold, Anzia Yezierska, Henry Roth, Yuri Suhl). An excellent introduction offers a critical, historical, and social description of the immigrant experience.

An anthology of essays and articles by novelists, journalists, historians and sociologists addressing themselves to "the strains experienced by the various peoples who comprise the American nation." Includes views of ethnic groups by "outsiders" - James Fenimore Cooper, Henry James, and John Steinbeck - as well as by "insiders" - Jerre Mangione, James T. Farrell, Piri Thomas, Richard Wright, and Vine Deloria, Jr.

Anthology based on historical development of ethnic writing; heavy emphasis on Black and Jewish writers; some Armenians and Irish.

Autobiographical memoirs of the ethnic experience include Irish (William Alfred), Italian (Mario Puzo), Norwegian (Eugene Boe), Jewish (Harry Roskolenko, and Polish (Czeslaw Milosz).
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE ARMENIAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction and Drama

A collection of short stories about an Armenian family living in Massachusetts. Portrays attitudes of the first generation and the bewilderment of the offspring as the two groups come into conflict. G

A novel of immigrant life set in Revere, Massachusetts. Portrays a totally unlovable mother who professes tenderness toward her children. They, in turn, cross national boundaries in their friendship for Mario and Elinor Cataldo, Italian neighbors. FS; IE

A large collection of Armenian folktales gathered in Detroit, many of which comment directly upon problems of acculturation and all of which are useful in understanding the conflict of the old and new, foreign and domestic, in American life. Foreword sketches the history of Armenia and Armenian immigrants in the United States. MM

Humorous novel, episodically framed, depicting the various members of an unpredictable Armenian-American family of irrepressible optimists. Its principal center of activity is Uncle Pousant's restaurant in New York City. FS

Series of stories, largely autobiographical, told by a master story-teller and uncle of William Saroyan.

Set in the California town of Ithaca. Story of the Macauley children and their mother, who must also be a father to them. FS

Collection of fourteen short stories and sketches. They all deal with the boyhood of Aram, in the Armenian colony of Fresno, California. Ch

Three plays in the lyrical, unconventional Saroyan style—without plot or sustained story line: "Love's Old Sweet Song," "My Hart's in the Highlands," and "The Time of Your Life."

Three generations of an Armenian-American family are depicted. One of the grandsons of the third generation becomes a successful architect. FS

A biographical account of the massacre of the Armenians at the hands of the Turks. The childhood and early sorrow of a young Armenian writer who is uprooted from his native Armenia during the massacres, wanders through Turkey and Russia, and makes his way to the United States. OW; NW

A short story on Armenian-American life.

B. Criticism

An extremely useful account of the many literary contributions of Armenian-American authors, including annotated bibliographies, biographical sketches, and literary criticism of Armenian-American works.
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE DUTCH-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A regional-historical novel of Dutch settlement in the Catskill region of New York.

Chronicle of a Dutch emigrant family which settled in Michigan sixty years ago. In the course of time, the family becomes completely Americanized, except for Harmen Idema, who eventually returns to Holland. NW;MM

Ferber, Edna. So Big. New York: Doubleday, Doran, 1924.

An account of a Dutch settlement near Chicago, where a schoolteacher who eventually marries a Dutch farmer goes to live. Story of Selina and her son, So Big, whom she raises alone after her husband's death early in their marriage. In this novel, Dutch and non-Dutch mores come into sharp conflict. EC;I-E

Set in a small Dutch settlement, in Michigan. Young Charles Van Wheeler, minister, comes to a provincial, rural community, Harlem, where customs and traditions brought over from the old country have been zealously maintained. EC;CL. Other novels about the Michigan Dutch community include Bram of the Five Corners (1915) and The Outbound Road (1919).

Autobiographical account by a slow-witted, inarticulate Dutch farmer, Jacob Vandermark, of the history of a township in Iowa. The novel describes his first love, his marriage, and his rise from obscurity to conspicuous local character. EC

Family chronicle covering three hundred years in the lives of ten generations of the Van Kampe family, from old Adriaen (1577-1648) down to the youngest generation: Adrian, Dirk and Betty (1933-). The growth of Manhattan is a significant historic background to the tale. FS

White, Georgia. Free as the Wind. New York: Liveright, 1942.

Chronicle novel of a family of Hollander who settle in Michigan during the middle of the 19th Century. The story follows the family fortunes down to the first year of World War II. FS
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE GERMAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction

From a log cabin in Iowa, the trail for Abbie Deal leads to Nebraska, where she brings up her family with all the courage of the pioneer mother. Especially good for junior high school students.

A story of family life in a midwestern German-American home, during the years 1905-1920. The widow Kraemer, with her family of six children, is the central figure. Similar in type to Forbes' Mama's Bank Account. FS

One of a series of local history novels of pioneering in Wisconsin's Sac Prairie. Shows the lives of French and German immigrants from 1812-50. In this novel, German immigrants slowly change into Americans. Plot involves the psychological study of a German immigrant chasing the man who killed his brother. NW

* * * * *

Child of pious German immigrants, Jennie nevertheless falls prey to the pleasure-loving son of an enterprising Irishman. G

August Kreitzer, a German-American, marries an Irish-American girl. The story depicts the crosscurrents of the Old World and the New, and the efforts of August, who works in a steel mill, to develop a successful farm. I-E; W

An account of the conflict within an immigrant German father who is unwilling to give up his loyalty to his native country and to adapt himself wholeheartedly to America. His dilemma is reflected in the divided loyalties of his wife and children. I-CL

Set in Norwold, Long Island. A chronicle of German immigrant life from the coming of the railroad in 1846.

First 18 years of a boy born into a large Austrian family in the United States. Presents family gradually adjusting to American life. MM

A romantic historical novel about Baron Stiegel, the German immigrant who became famous as an early American glass-maker. Set in 18th Century Pennsylvania.

Novel of the Pennsylvania Dutch country. Story of Jacob and his meek wife, Emma, against whom he directs his violent temper. Because Emma forgets to bring two dollars' worth of schnitz to the Reading Market, Jacob vows never to speak to her again. And he never does.

Folllows the fortunes of a Bavarian family, the Willmarcks, from the middle of the last century to World War I. Frieda, the central character, comes to America at 18, determined to live her life in a country where there is peace and no conscription. The family is materially successful, but Frieda dies a broken woman, realizing that her adopted country would enter the War. NW; FS

Depicts the rise and fall of a Chicago meat-packing family, from 1905 to 1950. Story of Adolf Konrad, who accumulated millions, but not without ruthlessness and brutality. FS; W

Family chronicle of three generations, from 1845 to 1942. The Multschers, German brewers, came to America, where their father founded a brewery. For years the family remained as German as their product, but the third generation was American to the core. MM; FS

An excellent account of a German immigrant boy's life in America, before, during, and after the Revolutionary War. Story relates his years as an indentured servant, soldier against the British, and "free" man. Written with the same sensitivity as Richter's Light in the Forest, an account of Indian-white relationships. Ch

Bill Owen, German-American adolescent, comes into conflict with his German uncle, and with the people of a small Illinois town at the time of the first World War. G

Set in Allentown, Pa., at the turn of the century; the novel depicts a family of Pennsylvania Germans, the Hummers. Describes three eventful years in the life of Jesse Hummer, who aspires to become a writer. Vivid portrayal of the family's dialect, folklore, and Lutheran beliefs. FS; R; CL

A three-generation study, contrasting the ideals of Viennese-born Lisa with those of her daughter, Kathi, and of Kathi's five children. At seventy, Lisa still clings to foreign ways, but her grandchildren are now fully Americanized. CL; MM

A family chronicle of pioneer hardships encountered by a group of German-Americans who settled in Iowa in the 1850's. The novel traces three generations of a family whose material side grows, while its spiritual side becomes barren. FS, NW

Presents the Schwieterts, German immigrant family, undergoing the painful process of Americanization in a small Iowa town. FS; MM

The first in a trilogy of novels. In this story, Peter's life is described during his first three years in America, to which he emigrated from Austria after World War I. At seventeen, he goes to work in the Pittsburgh steel industry; at twenty, at the novel's end, he is about to begin a career with Hearn Radio Laboratories. NW; W

B. Biography and History

Nine biographies showing the variety and importance of contributions made by German immigrants -- John Zenger, printer; Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben, soldier; Charles Follen, teacher; John Jacob Astor, merchant; Carl Schurz, statesman; John A. Roebling, engineer; Thomas Nast, cartoonist; Ottmar Mergenthaler, inventor; Werner von Braun, scientist. Grades 6-8.

A social history of one of America's largest immigrant groups - their contributions to education, religion, the arts, labor, and industry. Many anecdotes lighten the presentation.
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE GREEK-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction and Drama

Set in the Greek community of Newport, Rhode Island during the Depression. The young boy who is protagonist must cope with a drunken father and excitable mother. Old world values under pressure.

John Pantellis, immigrant from Greece, makes a Greek world for himself in America. Through the years, however, his children rebel against him; and although they love him, he cannot subdue them. Eventually, he returns to his homeland only to find that the very Greek culture he has worked so hard to preserve in America no longer exists. G:CL Collection of short stories about Greeks in Macedonia and immigrant Greeks in Boston. The author, a sculptor as well as a writer, was born in Macedonia, but came to the United States as an adolescent.

Covering a time span from 1919 to 1954, this story traces three generations of a Greek-American family, Kostas and Katerina Volakis and their children, through humble achievement and bitter tragedy. Set in Crete, initially; later, in the Greek community of Chicago. OW;NW;FS

Collection of short stories as seen through Greek-American eyes. Title story tells of an old Greek vendor with a pushcart of hot dogs and peanuts, a defiant old man burning with pride in his heritage, who teaches that pride to a group of storekeepers exploited by a landlord they are fearful of challenging. Stories included, beside title story: "Courtship of the Blue Widow," "The Legacy of Leontis," "The Eyes of Love," "Matsoukas," and "The Prison." EC

Set in Chicago, where Leonidas Matsoukas operates the Pindar Counseling Service (solutions provided for all problems of life and love) and supplements his winnings at gambling. Matsoukas believes that he can amass enough money to take his retarded, dying son back to Greece, where the sun will rejuvenate him. The story deals with Matsoukas' affair with a widow and his efforts at cheating in gambling, culminating in his return to Greece with his son, who has suffered a series of relapses in health. EC

A collection of short stories on the Greek-American experience. The title novella is about one week in the despairing life of an aging Greek priest. Other subjects dealt with in the collection: Greek widows, lunchroom owners, the weakening of blood lines, father-son conflicts. EC

Set largely in Chicago. Series of autobiographical sketches about the Petrakis family, originally from Crete, through the eyes of one of their sons. FS

Story of young love is told in turn by each of the three principals: Miri, the orphaned Greek girl brought to America by her wealthy, domineering uncle; Lexy, her cousin, who rebels against his Greek family background; and Josh Bigelow, Lexy's roommate at college. NW; I

Reminiscences of a Greek-American childhood spent in St. Louis, where the author's father was the Greek consul. The octagonal heart refers to the octagonal house, owned by her uncle in Webster Groves, St. Louis, where the two families spent happy summers together. Ch

The story of the migration of a company of Greek peasants from the island of Crete to a Massachusetts mill town. The colorful Greek customs are woven into the story of the Americanization of George Vardas and his countrymen. OW; NW; EC

B. Biography, History and Criticism

A modest autobiography of the author who came to America from Macedonia as a boy of seventeen. Christowe recounts his early years as a factory worker and railroad laborer, his attempts to learn English, the loss of his father—and his growing love for the new land.

A comprehensive guide, including a listing of Greek-American authors and their works of fiction. Very useful.

A short monograph on the Greek-American experience for the beginning student. Suggested readings and field trips. Topics discussed include: Early Years of Greek Immigration; Community Life; Between Two Wars, World War II and the Aftermath; A Quarter Century of Progress.

A comprehensive history of Greek-American life, including an excellent account of Greek-American contributions and a bibliography. The book is organized chronologically and includes: The Hellas of the Immigrant; The Greek Orthodox Church; Greek-Americans and the Great Idea; Military Obligations and the Mother Country; The Erosion of Hellenic Sentiment; Greeks in Business; The Second Generation; The Era of Respectability.

An account of the life of Michael Anagnos, born Michael Anagnostopoulos, Greek patriot and philanthropist, who was director of the Perkins Institution, Boston, and head of the Massachusetts School for the Blind for thirty years. Written by his lifelong friend.
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE HUNGARIAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction and Poetry

Account of a group of Hungarian farmers who emigrate to America, specifically the story of Arpad Romer and his grandson, Stephen. Both yearn for the Golden Village, an American town said to have been founded years before by Hungarians from their hometown; they find only a heterogeneous community, bereft of its native Hungarian ways, absorbed in struggles of Americanization.

Bell, Thomas. Out of This Furnace. Boston: Little, Brown, 1941.

An account of Hungarian-Americans through five decades (1881-1930). Their association with the Homestead, Pennsylvania steel industry and the CIO is the backdrop for conflict between George Krachas and his grandson, John Dobrejcan.

Story of Count Brogmar, an Hungarian exile, who settles in the Middle West and raises grapes for wine. His own exuberant nature carries him through life; but his wife never forgets that she was once a princess, and accustomed to gentle ways of living. Last in the series of three novels on the saga of Sac Prairie. Others are: Still Is the Summer Night (1937) and Wind over Wisconsin (1938).

A novel about Gaspar Broadway, an Americanized Hungarian, and his New York City adventures.

B. Biography, History, and Criticism

Biography of the distinguished Hungarian-American journalist and newspaper magnate, covering his Civil War experiences, his journalistic beginnings in St. Louis, the public service oruses of his New York World newspapers, and his tragic illness.

Story of Hungarian participants in the Missouri Campaign of the American Civil War.

Review of American-Hungarian authors of the last 100 years and selections from their writings. Authors who wrote or are writing in Hungarian and English are included. Most of the material written about the Hungarian-American experience was written in Hungarian and remains to be translated.

Useful guide to the successive waves of emigration from Hungary. Includes short bibliography, unannotated, of American-Hungarian authors.

Biography of John Xantus, Hungarian explorer, cartographer, and naturalist who, in 1856, surveyed Kansas for the American government and later charted the course of the Arkansas River.
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE IRISH-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction and Drama

Story of an Italian-American family in a New England town dominated by Irish politicians from the 1930's to the 1950's. FS

A play, set in Brooklyn in 1890. Matthew Stanton, ward leader, is caught up in a web of duplicity, adultery, and conspiracy that eventually undermines his marriage and his bid for the mayoralty of Brooklyn. Fear of becoming Hogan's goat, the dupe of a lower class woman and the butt of community gossip, only seals his destruction. P

Set on New York City's lower East Side, in the early 1900's. Story of a Jewish family, the Wolfs, and their counterpart, the Catholic family of Mary McCarthy. FS

The story of an Irish-American girl, Annie Hargan, living on the Lower East Side, and her growing awareness of the social issues of her day. Her working experience includes the Circle Waist Company, actually the Triangle Shirtwaist Co., scene of a fire that killed over one hundred immigrant girls in 1911. W; I-E

The story of an Irish woman raising a family in the New York slums. FS

Tale of New York City life before the turn of the century. Account of the immigrant poor Johnsons, of Maggie in particular, who commits suicide after fate dooms her to be "a girl of the streets." The Fawcett paperback includes Crane's George's Mother, another story of slum life. SP

A nostalgic record of an Irish-American childhood spent in a New England mill town. Story of the conflicts that arise out of the differences between lower class and middle class Irish families. Ch;FS

Historical novel about Irish immigrants in New York, beginning with those who landed in 1848. Story follows the fortunes of four of them through the Civil War. NW

Several generations of a clannish Irish family in a midwestern city. FS

A fast, short narrative about a shrewd Irish immigrant girl who becomes a rich woman and a political power in "Boyinston" (Boston), where "modernity fought stubbornly against antiquity." The time: 1896-1930's. P

A story of the Irish Catholics of Buffalo, during the early twentieth century. Rose Shanahan is the young protagonist.

A thoroughly unhappy biography of the author's father, Big Flurry, an Irish emigrant to America who settles on a farm in Kansas. Big Flurry eventually rises out of poverty, only to be "sent back" to Ireland by rebellious sons and daughters. G

The story of an Irish immigrant in Philadelphia, early in this century. John Fury loses his first wife, the gentle, loving Mamie. His second marriage, to Bridget, is unhappy, his life becomes more and more sordid, and finally he dies in disgrace. FS

Just one in a series of titles by Dunne, featuring the unforgettable Mr. Dooley, satirist and voice of sentiments about the Irish community, and Hennesy, as the ever willing foil.

Mr. Dooley's observations deal with such modern topics as short marriage contracts, automobiles, the Irish question, oats as food, gambling, and the comforts of travel.

The author's first novel, a study of a boy's adolescent years in the Chicago streets. This story of Studs Lonigan's young manhood extends from 1917--while he is still in high school--to 1929, and depicts his gradual disintegration and moral collapse. The second book in the trilogy on growing up white, Irish, and deprived in urban America is The Young Manhood of Studs Lonigan (1934). Judgment Day (1935) completes the trilogy. Ch;SP;I-E

The Danny O'Neill saga: a series of novels about an Irish boy growing up in Chicago and his growing alienation from family and community. Danny is the persona of Farrell himself. A World I Never Made (1936)--some of the characters of the Studs Lonigan trilogy appear here; No Star Is Lost (1938)--sequel to A World I Never Made, continuing the story of young Danny O'Neill; Father and Son (1940)--third novel in the Danny O'Neill series, tracing the hero from age eleven to nineteen; My Days of Anger (1943)--fourth novel in the tetralogy, showing the hero attending college. Ch;Ed;I

Stories that treat the same material found in Farrell's trilogy on Studs Lonigan: the frustrations of the urban poor, the vernacular of South Chicago's streets, and the poor themselves--Irish, Hungarians, Greeks and Blacks. SP; I-E

Autobiographical novel filled with the reminiscences of a well-to-do Irish family living in New York City in the early 1900's. The charming grandfather, pious grandmother, volcanic Uncle George, and the cook's dumb nephew are some of the characters depicted. FS

Marchand, Margaret.  Pilgrims on the Earth. New York: Crowell, 1940

The portrayal of Irish-Americans in a steel town near Pittsburgh at the end of the last century with emphasis on labor strife, religious conflicts, and domestic quarrels. W; R

A series of sketches of immigrant life, Irish among others, in the late nineteenth century. The tone is condescending: a Columbia professor blithely manifests an interest in how the other half lives.

Inter-ethnic conflict between the Corrigans and the Principatos. A book of humor, pathos, and understanding in which divergent views about life, death, and the Catholic Church are expressed by two immigrant Catholic groups. I-E; R

Life in the Irish section of Providence, Rhode Island, in the early 1900's. Willie's maturation is seen against the Catholic Church's anti-Socialist, anti-Jewish, and anti-Italian sentiments. I-E; Ch

The story of the final defeat of Frank Skeffington, Irish mayor and ward politician. Supposedly a thinly disguised account of the life of James M. Curley, long-time mayor of Boston, who governed Boston from prison during those last years. P

Set in a decaying parish, perhaps meant to be Boston. Depicts world of tight, family-centered second and third generation Irish. Father Kennedy, reformed alcoholic, struggles against loneliness, alcoholism, and doubts as to his duty. FS; R

Just one of a number of plays by O'Neill that touch on, reflect upon, or re-create the Irish-American experience. In this play, Anna Christie, a prostitute, turns toward a clean life and unsullied love, only to be beaten down by the two men closest to her. SP

Story of Park Leary, crusader for Irish immigrants and an Irish-born editor, who is killed by those who oppose his efforts to transplant urban slum dwellers to the Red River Valley, in western Canada. SP

Story of Mary Burke, class-conscious strike leader and latter-day Irish Joan of Arc. She falls in love with Hal Warner, known as Joe Smith, a rich boy of twenty-one who takes part in the coal miners' fight to form a union. In the tradition of Sinclair's The Jungle. W

story about a poor Irish family living in Brooklyn early in this century. FS.

The setting is 19th century New York City's Irish slums. A study of power politics: Tom Casey's climb from gang fighter to vote repeater, to alderman, to board of supervisors, finally to "boss of the city." When he gains the top, he suffers the loss of friends and family. Good portrayal of immigrant Irish in the city. P;MM

LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE ITALIAN-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction, Drama, and Poetry

Story of an Italian-American family in a New England town dominated by Irish politicians, 1930's - 1950's; first-second-third-generation Italian-Americans in fusion and in conflict. FS; G

Play in three acts with obvious allusions to the Sacco-Vanzetti case of the 1920's.

Set in Bleecker Street, New York City. An account of the early years of Nino, actually the author, in America. This novel-biography shows the gradual adaptation of the customs and traditions of Valenti Angelo's home country to American ways. Recommended for junior high school. Ch; MM

Set in San Francisco, this story recounts the experiences of Ricco Santo--his friends and family--as he lives the daily joys and sorrows of Telegraph Hill, the "hill of little miracles." Recommended for junior high school. FS

Play in two acts. An account of the Casales, an immigrant family. Father Casale, self-made, rich and self-centered, rules his family with a will of iron, but because he is their father and they see him subjectively, the sons and daughters of Angelo Casale submit to his patriarchal ways from both habit and custom--until, one day, Anna and Joey realize the self-destructiveness of his tyranny. At this point the conflict that is the basis of the play emerges. G; FS

Nostalgic story of poor Italian people. Set in Philadelphia. W

Giunio Bruno, seminarian, is ordained in Italy. He emigrates to America, where he marries a Polish Jew. Story told from the son's viewpoint, in flashback. Father recounts the story of a priest—presumably Calitri's own father—who chafes under the constraints of the Catholic Church, rebels, and finally leaves the priesthood. OW; R

Rickey Talbot, unable to remember the crime of which he is accused, finds release from torment only after reliving the incident. Meanwhile, a prejudiced press and public prosecutor have marked him for execution as a public menace. Set in Lowery, Mass. SP

Autobiographical novel about Romualdo Sinisi, immigrant schoolteacher, who finds beauty and art in America. E

Play about an Italian-American bachelor, long past marrying age, who eventually marries a schoolteacher.

Comedy in Three Acts. Warm, familial account of the Morellos and the Baccolinis, friends and neighbors on Mulberry Street in Little Italy. Filippo Morello's conflict with himself and with his family is explored as are European and American mores in conflict. FS; CL

An autobiography in which Pascal D'Angelo tells the story of how he left his pick and shovel and became a poet. Introduction by Carl Van Doren. Includes some of D'Angelo's poetry as well: "Fantasio," "Night Scene," "Accident in the Coal Dump," and "Song of Light." Written in a lyrical style.

Anthology of poems about a variety of experiences. Includes the following titles: "American Song," "WPA Man's Baby Dies," and "Prospect Park Poems."

Central character, Maria, weathers slum life, sweatshops and two bad marriages to emerge triumphant, her integrity intact.
with the desire of making a better life for her daughter, Lucy. Her first husband, Dominic, cuts himself off from his ethnic tradition. In so doing, he loses naturalness and vitality, and the sense of cultural roots. More typical study of ghetto existence than DeCapite's No Bright Banner.

Paul Barrone, hero-persona, traces his experiences from the tough Cleveland neighborhood of his birth to an intellectual awakening at an Ohio college, to his life as a Bohemian, in Greenwich Village. Throughout, DeCapite explores many of the root social problems in American culture that continue to plague the nation, including racial bigotry.

This autobiographical novel deserves to become available once again, especially in paperback, having once been a Book-of-the-Month selection. An account of Geremio, an Italian construction worker, who is fatally injured on Good Friday by a collapsing building made unsafe by the greed of men. The effect on Geremio's family—their daily Calvairies—is poignantly described.

Second autobiographical novel in the tradition of Christ in Concrete. Examines the years leading up to Paolino di Alba's adolescence. Ends where the other novel began, with the father's death. Set in West Hoboken, New Jersey.

A one-act play, done in a light vein, based on the lives of the characters in DiDonato's Christ in Concrete.

Not a typical immigrant autobiography, which tends to be a "success" story, it has much more in common with Willa Cather's My Antonia and Ole Rolvaag's Giants in the Earth, which are fictional accounts of immigrant life. It is the story of Rosa, young wife and mother from Lombardy, who emigrated, in 1884, to Union, Missouri, where her husband found work in the mines. Written by a close associate, a Chicago settlement house worker.

Series of intimate family sketches about the Toscanas of Denver, Colorado—about their dreams and pains, successes and failures. Guido Toscanas search for self-identification. Sketches that create a positive sense of adolescent values and attitudes include: "The Odyssey of a Wop," "A Kidnapping in the Family," and "Home, Sweet Home." I; FS

Set in a small mountain town in Colorado, where the small Italian community is isolated by nationality and economic condition. Story revolves around the boy, Arturo, a sensitive protagonist, who feels the pangs of minority hatreds and fears. Recommended for adolescents. I; FS

Ferrini, Vincent.  No Smoke. Portland, Main: House of Falmouth, 1941.

Account of a prosperous Italian immigrant family living on the edge of the Hudson Palisades. Oreste and his father, old Demetrio who is slowly going blind, are wealthy contractors living in the Italian settlement where conflicts in values and beliefs exist. The novel implies that violence is an inevitable factor in assimilation. EC;GC;MM

Novel about an Italian immigrant family's struggle to resolve God and the devil. Daniele Faustino, the hero, lives a life of irresolution. His mother's saintliness and undying devotion to the church are contrasted with his father's rejection of God and acceptance of the devil. Set in small towns of Massachusetts. FS; R

Interethnic conflict between the Principatos and the Corrigans presented. A book of humor, pathos, and understanding, in which divergent views about life, death and the Catholic Church are expressed by two immigrant Catholic groups. I-E; R

Picture of an Italian family adjusting to a new land. Not really a novel but a book of memoirs, a well-ordered series of recollections of Mangione's Sicilian childhood in Rochester. NW, FS; Ch

A factual account of the Gandhi of Sicily, Danilo Dolci, who visited the United States in 1972.

Musical drama in three acts (five scenes) about Annina and Michele, the "saint" of Bleecker Street and the rebel, respectively, and about the tempestuous brother-sister relationship between them which impels them to tragedy.

A one-act play which is set near the New York City waterfront, Eddie Carbone, protagonist, endangers and, finally, loses his life. SP

A three-act play about a young Italian-American boy, Joe Bonaparte, who had some hope of becoming a great violinist before inordinate ambition led him to the prize ring, where his talent as a fighter cut him off from music forever. W

An excellent series of family sketches about the struggles, sorrows, and antics of several generations of Maccaluccis—all paesani. FS

Warm, intimate account of an Italian-American couple celebrating their golden wedding after a lifetime in America. FS

Play in three acts. Humorous account of what happens to Jimmy Potts when he gets a haircut and doesn't get hit by a truck. Set against the background of the LaGuardia administration. Fiorello, the man of the comic strips, is the inspiration for the play. P

Comedy in two acts in which Mama Caparuta, the power behind the throne, settles on some compromises to make peace with her Jewish daughter-in-law. I-E

This powerful and persuasive story of life in the Italian-American community of Chelsea, New York City, deals with the fortunes of the Angeluzzi-Corbos, a family dominated by the wife and mother, Lucia Santa. Lucia is seen against a vividly drawn background of Italian immigrant life, but it is the relationship with her four eldest children and the resulting conflicts between Italian and American values that form the core of the book. FS;G

Short play in five scenes in which the little flaw of Ernesto Lippi is exposed for what it is--no flaw at all. Domestic comedy.

Account of Granitetown, Vermont--of its Italian marble cutters and their Scottish wives, of the merging of the two cultures and religions. W; I-E

A book of recollections, warm and humorous, about an Italian immigrant and his family. Told by the immigrant's eldest son, Joseph, who affectionately recounts his father's dreams and successes, his fears and failures, in his adopted land. Joseph Vergara stresses the simple, wholesome things of life--the "love and pasta" of their Calabrian-American heritage. FS;NW

A musical about the popular former mayor of New York City, the "little flower." Lyrics by Sheldon Harnick. Libretto by Jerry Bock. -24-

Set along the Gulf coast, somewhere between New Orleans and Mobile, Alabama, in a village populated mostly by Sicilian-Americans. Account of Seraphina and her glorified dream of "lost love," symbolized by her departed husband, Rosario's, rose tattoo, which remains fixed in her memory, disorients her toward life, and allows her to love another only after she admits Rosario's lack of fidelity to her during his lifetime. EC; PS

B. History, Biography, and Criticism

A series of chronologically connected essays beginning with the activities of Columbus, Vespucci, and other Italian explorers of the New World. Explores the immigrant generation that clung to old loyalties and identities, and the second generation that accepted Americanization, but with pain. A popular history.

An excellent source of reports, texts, critical studies, and related materials on the Italian-American. Useful section on literary contributions as well.

History of Ellis Island during the years of heavy immigration. Told by an immigrant, Edward Corsi, former United States Commissioner, Immigration and Naturalization, New York district.

Autobiography of Leonard Covello's decades of experience as principal of Benjamin Franklin High School, New York City, where he pioneered the community school concept. The story is also told by Leonard Covello (with Guido D'Agostino) in The Heart Is the Teacher, McGraw-Hill, 1958.

Biography of the Italian-American nun who was elevated to sainthood for her work in American slums, the only American Catholic to be so honored.

The latest account of the Sacco-Vanzetti case written by the junior counsel for the defense during the last two years of the case. The author re-examines all the testimony, and changes in testimony, and shows how ideological and political factors brought about a temporary breakdown of the legal process.

Entertaining, informal, and informative biography of one of the foremost theoretical and experimental physicists of the twentieth century. Written by Enrico Fermi's wife, Laura Capon. This biography explores Fermi's work in developing the atomic bomb, and portrays the life of a sensitive human being who was also a Nobel Prize winner, Congressional Medal for Merit recipient, and first man to achieve a nuclear chain reaction.

Italian-Americans, over twenty million in population, are frequently depicted by the media as hard-hat, pop singer, mafioso, or just plain buffoon. Here, Richard Gambino examines the Italian-American psyche, beginning with its roots in Italy's Mezzogiorno (its South) and continuing in the cities and suburbs of America. He uses anecdotes from his own Brooklyn childhood as well as recent literature and current events to give us an immensely readable book that sweeps away the distortions for all time.

Chronological analysis of the fiction of Americans of Italian ancestry. The novels discussed record the interaction of the Italian immigrant culture with the established American culture.

Autobiography of the well-known, colorful mayor of New York City, focusing on the years from 1882-1919.
Up-to-date account of Italian-American life from the historical, social, political points of view. Excellent bibliography.

A slim volume dealing with the contributions of Italians to American life from earliest times.

A factual account of the Gandhi of Sicily, Danilo Dolci.

*Marinacci, Barbara. They Came from Italy. New York: Dodd, Mead, 1967.
Stories of famous Italian-Americans, including Henri de Tonti (explorer); Philip Mazzei (political philosopher) Constantino Brumidi (artist and painter of frescoes in the Capitol); Francesca Cabrini (missionary and saint); Arturo Toscanini (musician and conductor); Amadeo Giannini (banker and founder of the Bank of America); Enrico Fermi (physicist and Nobel Prize winner). Excellent bibliography.

An informal history of the contributions of Italians to American life.

Includes biographical accounts of Leonard Covello (educator), Angelo Pellegrini (teacher), Constantine Panunzio (minister), Edward Corsi (Commissioner of Immigration), and Pascal D'Angelo (poet and laborer). Especially useful for its inclusion of excerpts from the subjects' own writings.

A lyrically poignant autobiography of an Italian-American who became a minister.

Autobiography of Angelo Patri's years as a schoolteacher in New York City, and as the first Italo-American to head a New York City public school.

Biography of an immigrant whose family migrated to Washington... state, where Pellegrini became a teacher.

Excellent resource that includes an alphabetical indexing of Italian-American authors (until the late 1940's), complete with biographical accounts, critical commentaries, and bibliographical listings.

Traces Italian migration to the American West, where Italian immigrants, in substantial numbers, became agriculturists and nonurban settlers. These immigrants are pictured far differently from Oscar Handlin's urban immigrants from Italy, atomized and alienated, as described in The Uprooted.

Written by a professor of history whose approach is to unearth many of the unknown aspects of Italian emigration, demographic patterns and contributions. Interrelates the European and American historical and cultural underpinnings of Italian-American life.

Eloquent, compassionate account by the two well-known Italian-American anarchists. Highly recommended for a different perspective on that cause célèbre, the "Sacco-Vanzetti Case."

Biography of Enrico Fermi as a scientist. Written by a friend, disciple, and fellow scientist. More technical and with less human drama than Laura Fermi's Atoms in the Family.

A study of the rise and fall of the Bonanno organization. Talese concentrates less on gangland slayings and grotesque portraits of men with Runyonesque nicknames and more on how these men passed the idle hours, about the roles of their wives, about their relationships with their children. A successful effort to remove the veil of secrecy from one alleged Mafia family. Less sensational than Puzo's novels on the Mafia.

Scholarly articles, well-documented, with abundant bibliographies. Among the subjects: Italian emigration; role of the public school in the assimilation of the Italian immigrant child in New York City (1900-1914); the ethnic church and the integration of Italian immigrants in the United States.

An established Italo-American writer known for biographies of prominent figures in English and continental literature.
LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE JEWISH-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction, Drama and Poetry

A new collection, by the master of Jewish humor, contains 20 stories never before translated into English, including a group about Jewish life in America, where Sholom Aleichem spent the last years of his life.

Compassionate chronicle of Russian village Jews who emigrate to America, settling in Boston at the turn of the century. First volume in a trilogy on the Polonsky family. Much of the novel focuses on the conflict between the orthodox religion of the older generation and the modern views (Zionism especially) of the younger. OW, G

In volume two, young David Polonsky is followed through high school and his early job career -- during World War I. Personal conflicts within the family are depicted. CH, Ed

David is seen during four years at Harvard (1919-23) -- the conflict between European and American ways continues. CL

David works on newspapers in Boston, learns about American magazines and goes to New York to work on the American World (Mercury) with Harry Brandt (H.L. Mencken).

Polish Jews adjusting to America.

The first half of the novel depicts the hardships of the Zlotniks, a Jewish family, as it leaves its native Poland and strives to establish a footing on New York's East Side. The younger generation is seen breaking away from matriarchal traditions. The second part of the novel focuses on Jewish Bohemian life in New York, especially the uncouth sculptor, Bucholtz. FS, G

Concerns Jews in the United States who are well-established and Americanized. The question of intermarriage is treated sympathetically. Three generations are contrasted and their interrelationships described in detail. The conflict between Jews and Irish Catholics at the turn of the century is explored, as well as labor problems and the factory system.

Focuses on Americanized Jews in the United States. The protagonist, Grossman, had in his youth stolen a wallet from a Polish peasant, and its contents enabled him to start his climb to considerable wealth. In his old age he becomes eager to find the Pole and compensate him generously.

Having reached the age of 60, Khaim Lederer decides to retire from his flourishing shirt factory in order to return to the things of the spirit, but soon discovers that his early ideals have slipped from him beyond recovery. His attempts to recapture the past only alienate his family, who are steeped in bourgeois respectability and comfort.

A novel that raises questions about anti-Semitism, the relationship of Jews and Gentiles, and man's responsibility for his "brothers" -- whether Jews or Gentiles. One hot summer in New York, the hero, Asa Leventhal, is forced to confront his Jewish identity after a lifetime of avoidance and denial.

A picaresque novel centering on the rogue-hero, Augie March, a poor Jewish boy growing up in Chicago, who has to learn to live by his wits in order to survive during the Depression.

Story of Moses Herzog, a peripheral Jew, who never comes to grips with his Jewishness. The novel depicts his intellectual and emotional disintegration and the loss of the religious, family, and cultural ties to Judaism that might have given his life coherence.

An elderly German immigrant, Artur Sammler, refugee from the Nazi atrocities of World War II, tries to preserve peace and order in his later years, but finds only that New York assaults his mind and body. Novel's focus is on memories of the holocaust and attempts to come to terms with the meaning of Jewishness in modern urban America. NW;I;I-E

A powerfully-written novel of immigrant life in New York seen through the eyes of a young immigrant boy, David Scheerl. His violent-tempered father, Albert, and poetic, sensitive mother find the New World almost as perplexing and terrifying as does the boy. The novel is rooted in psychological understanding and profound sociological vision which raise it above most other portraits of this time and place.

Rosenfeld, Morris. Songs from the Ghetto. (translated from the Yiddish by Leo Wiener) Boston: Copeland and Day, 1898. Songs of Labor and Other Poems (Boston, 1914.)

Poems by a Polish Jew recording his bitter experiences in the sweatshops of New York. They are songs of the misery and oppression of working-class immigrants, rendered lyrically and with dramatic intensity.

Fifteen humorous sketches from The New Yorker about an Americanization class in a New York City night school. The Return of Hyman Kaplan (1959) is more of the same.

The title novella in this book by the author concerns itself with a summer love affair between Neil Klugman, a young man who works in the Newark public library, and Brenda Patinkin, a Radcliffe undergraduate, whose parents have moved up the economic ladder from Newark to a home in the suburbs. Discovery by the girl's mother terminates the affair. Short stories included deal largely with Jewish contemporary life: "The Conversion of the Jews," "Eli, the Fanatic," and "Defender of the Faith."

Autobiographical novel traces a man's life from the time he comes to America at age 6 until maturity. It is a hard, bitter, ugly life beset by oppressive forces, so degraded by filth and poverty and wretchedness as to force those who must submit to it almost below human levels.

The emotional problems of the children of Russian Jews who dwell in a wasteland between being immigrants and Americans.

Paperback: Manor Books

Novel about "a Harlem pawnbroker, Sol Nazerman, whose career as an instructor at the University of Crakow was cut short when he and his wife and their two small children were transported by the Nazis to a concentration camp...Now, bitter and haunted by dreams of the dead...it takes an act of violence to teach him why he has hung on to life."

A family of European Jews leave Russia to find freedom and settle in Canada. Their rich and varied family life is central to the story. NW;FS

A detailed view of Jewish life in Cleveland in the 1920's. The marriage of an immigrant Jew and native American non-Jew is depicted. I-E

A collection of sketches about Polish-Jewish immigrants. Heroines are hungry for education to fulfill their dreams of America's promise. Anglo-Saxon Americans hold out promise and disappointment. The desire for beauty is the strongest "hunger," one that her heroines never lose. Sketches include "Wings," "Hunger," "The Miracle," and "The Fat of the Land."

Full of protest and disillusionment, the book contains an interview with the author, seven short stories, and three autobiographical articles. She depicts the problems that arise with immigrant parents clinging to the old ways and their children adopting Americanized customs. G;MM

A Jewish girl is unhappily married to a Gentile. She turns to dress designing and in the process is rediscovered by an old admirer.

A Jewish immigrant girl fighting her way from poverty through college and into teaching. Ed.

A girl from the tenements and her experience with organized charity. The experience turns out to be a bad one and she turns from the charity to find her own place in life.

The heroine, a Jewish immigrant girl, establishes herself as a writer after many rebuffs but never wins social acceptance in the WASP world. MM

A play by the English novelist who surveyed the New York Jewish slums in 1898, guided by Lincoln Steffens. This influenced him to write the play which pleads for reconciliation in the New World of the antagonisms and animosities that were rending the Old World apart. Well-received because critics called it "a play of the people."

The story of the first Jewish settlers who came from Brazil to settle in New Amsterdam in the days of Petor Stuyvesant. Levy is a historical character, often mentioned in historical documents, but the story is almost entirely fictional. It attempts to depict the spirit of the forlorn arrivals and to counteract the usual portrayal of the intellectual or commercial Jewish stereotype. NW

B. Collections

An anthology of poetry translated from Yiddish by the editors.

Translations from the Yiddish about life in America by such writers as Sholem Asch, Sholem Aleichem, Abraham Raisin, I.J. Singer, David Opotashu and others. Themes include "Getting Settled", "Making a Living", "Parents and Children", and "There's Laughter, Too."

An anthology of literature and documents that reconstruct the world of the old shtetl transplanted to a new country between the years 1881-1924.

C. Autobiography, Criticism, Journalism

Autobiography of a Russian immigrant, a woman still under thirty, who looks upon her American experience as a rebirth. The heroine of the story is the old self, the European self left behind in Russia. Recounts Mary Antin's years of human service in her adopted country. Minor classic of Jewish immigration. Her other works dealing with the immigrant experience include From Plotzk to Boston (1899) and They Who Knock At Our Gate (1914).

A study of Jewish American writers from the 1880's to the present, centering on the problem of identity and the conflict between tradition and assimilation as a continuing tension in Jewish-American literature.

A sympathetic and intelligent description of the Jewish community of New York written by a total outsider. Especially good at rendering the intellectual ferment and rich social and political currents of the turn-of-the-century immigrant community.

A nostalgic memoir by one of America's foremost literary critics about the anonymous immigrants to the Promised Land and the writer's own passage from the Brownsville (Brooklyn) of the immigrants to the great world beyond the ghetto. The memoir recounts his later return to the scenes of his youth and the memories evoked.

The image of the Jew as well as his role as author, from Colonial times to the present.

Chiefly accounts of Shapiro, Schwartz, Rosenfeld, Fiedler, Bellow, Malamud, and Roth, who are viewed as concerned with traditional concepts of the Jewish experience.

Useful survey from early times of Jewish figures in English and especially American drama.

Letters written by Jews who came to America between 1899 and 1914 and sent to a column in the Jewish Daily Forward called "A Bintel Brief" (a bundle of letters). They reveal many aspects of Jewish life in America: homesickness, illness, displacement, atheism, exploitation, the generation gap, unionism. Written by ordinary people, they are striking in language and in the realistic picture they portray of life as it really was.

Riis, Jacob. A reporter for the New York Evening Sun and himself a Danish immigrant, Riis recorded his observations of Lower East Side life of Jewish immigrants in works with sociological importance:

The Children of the Poor. New York: C. Scribner's Sons. 1892.

He portrays both the suffering and the hope of the American immigrant experience.

Photographs and chronicles depicting "the epic first America for millions of immigrants" -- an impressive recreation of Jewish immigrant life in New York through newspaper articles in the English and Yiddish press and photographs by Jacob Riis, et.al.

First volume of a trilogy which traces the migration of a band of settlers from Smaland, Sweden to America. This volume tells the story of one family, the Nilsons, of their life in Sweden, and of the long, arduous journey across the Atlantic in the summer of 1850. Ends with the family's arrival in New York City. OW;NW

In the sequel to The Emigrants the family travels from New York City on river boat, steam wagon, on foot and by ox-cart to a new home in the virgin forest of Minnesota territory where they struggle through their first winter. Parts 3 and 4 of the cycle are found in The Last Letter Home, published in 1956 (in Swedish) and translated into English in 1961, (Simon & Schuster), NW

Tells "the life story of Albert Carlson, who was born in Sweden and came alone to America as a very young boy. Now, at sixty-four, divorced, and more or less ignored by his two sons, Albert lives in a cheap hotel room in a prosperous little California town." His thoughts go back to his childhood. Excellent contrast of the rural Scandinavia of his past with the restless, prosperous surfaces of American urban life today. NW; G

Tale of a Norwegian-American farming community in Minnesota Settlement includes Icelandic, Finnish and Swedish farmers as well. Caleb Gare, a malevolent figure of greed and tyranny, dominates the story. He intimidates his household so cruelly that his wife becomes totally submissive to him; his daughter, refusing to submit, nevertheless harbors hatred that almost leads to murder. FS; G

The story of two pioneer families, one Irish and one Norwegian, who settle in the Red River Valley of Minnesota from 1870 through 1941. The book tries to define certain enduring conflicts in American social history. NW; G

Three generations of Swedish immigrants in the Midwest go from farming to banking, then to oil. W; FS

Classic autobiography of immigrant adjustment.

First volume of a trilogy. An heroic tale of Norwegian settlers on the plains of South Dakota in the late nineteenth century. Story with a double conflict: the first, between Per Hansa and the virgin soil from which he wrests a living; the second, between Per Hansa and Beret, whose hatred of pioneer life is matched only by her husband's love for her. Over the first struggle, Per Hansa triumphs. The second takes the heart out of him and leads, as Beret's obsession with religion grows, to the tragic last scene of the novel. NW; W; FS

Second volume of the trilogy in which a territory, South Dakota, is about to become a state. Novel carries on the theme begun in Giants, beginning with the son of Per Hansa and Beret, Peder Victorious.

Third volume in the trilogy carries the story into the twentieth century and deals with the conflicts which arise when Peder marries an Irish Catholic girl. MM;I-E.

A careful study into the mind of a young Norwegian boy, Nils Vaag, brought up in a lovely fisherman's home in Norway. He sets out for America in search of fame and fortune, never to be seen again by either of his parents. Recounts his struggles to get along in the United States. Book combines elements of the mystical folktale and the realistic novel. OW; NW

A novel dealing with life in a Wisconsin lumber town during the early decades of this century. The central theme is the conflict between two rapacious business men and a Swedish couple who have come to the wilderness to build a future.

A play in two acts, adapted from Kathryn Forbes' Mama's Bank Account.

Set in 1898 and the decade following. Story of Peter Grimsen, who had been a small farmer in Denmark, and his life in America, focusing on the conflict that arises between him and his sons; they want to remain in Nebraska, he wants to go back to Denmark. Describes the slow and painful process of Americanization. The sequel, Mortgage Your Heart (1937), depicts the family's experiences on a Nebraska farm as rent farmers, showing differences between father and his Americanized sons: 1906-1917. The last novel in the trilogy is This Passion Never Dies (1938), continuing the story of the family's struggles after the father's death and the personal conflicts of Americanized
Danish immigrants. NW; MM; G

LITERATURE DEALING WITH THE SLAVIC-AMERICAN EXPERIENCE

A. Fiction

Story of Anton Gale and his three grandsons. The theme of this novel, essentially an essay on America, is what America means to the Slovenian immigrant. His other novels of Slavic immigrants in America include From Many Lands (1940); Two-Way Passage (1941) and What's Your Name (1942).

Story of poverty and crime among the Poles of Chicago's West Side. The protagonist is Bruno Bicek, a young pugilist and near-gangster, whose poverty and code of "play straight with the gang" lead him into trouble: he is arrested for murder in the midst of his first successful prize fight. His girlfriend Steffi's story runs parallel to his: she is forced by Bruno's code to work in Mama Tomek's brothel.

In the process of Americanization, Stanislav Zabransky (later Stanley) loses none of the sturdy, practical idealism that had brought his father to America from Bohemia. From high school dropout to tobacco factory stripper, from secretary of the Cigar-makers' Union to Rutgers College as a student and then as a professor -- this is the story of American success through opportunity.

Wisconsin in the 1890's. Story of hearty, rollicking Czech, Uncle Jan, who made so much money in America that he sends for all his friends and relatives from Bohemia. The story, narrated by Jan's young nephew, describes the customs of the Czechs and their attempts at Americanization.

First novel of a tetralogy written in the stream of consciousness manner, this story recounts the rise and fall of a Polish immigrant family. The seven-day wake of Stanislaw Machek becomes the backdrop for the thoughts and memories of his family and neighbors.

Second novel of the tetralogy. Deals with a displaced Pole, Magda, who comes to New Jersey. She has been sponsored by Groszek, a local politician, at his nephew's request. Roman, the nephew, wants to marry Magda, even though she is twice his age. Magda disrupts the lives of those she comes into contact with, finally driving the book to its ending moment of tragedy and violent death.

Third novel of the tetralogy. Story of a young woman who impulsively marries a saintly old man but continues her relationship with her passionate but destructive lover. Like all novels of the tetralogy, this one focuses primarily on Polish-Americans living in Anderson, New Jersey. Fourth novel is The Pale Criminal (1967).

Portrays the conflict between impoverished New Englanders and Polish newcomers who buy up Yankee farms and work in the mills. Central to the story is Marilla Lamprey, a Pole, who comes to Lovell, New Hampshire, as a schoolteacher and eventually marries Seth Walton, owner of the mills. Marilla's personal experiences unfold against a background of ethnic tensions.

Set in Vermont, 1910-1936. The story of an atypical Polish immigrant family who till the unwilling soil. Specifically, an account of beautiful Marja Jaworaska and a tree -- a towering oak known as "Krupa's Oak". Legend has it that the first man to come to a girl standing beneath its shade will be her husband. Hero's Oak is also the story of Aleksander Krupa, the immigrant, of his victory over the land and of his defeat.

Set in America's western prairie. The story of Antonia, as told by one of her childhood friends, is an account of the daughter of immigrant Bohemian parents who wrest a living from the prairie. Antonia helps in this struggle while combating other vicissitudes--betrayal, desertion, pregnancy. Through everything, her spirit is unbroken by hardship. Antonia displays courage of heroic proportions.

The story of two Polish farm women in Massachusetts whose husbands are killed in a highway accident. The novel is based on an actual event. It is useful for its contrasts of life in Poland and in the U.S.

About a Serb immigrant and his successful attempts to adjust himself to his new American environment.

An unfinished novel by the author of The Trial and The Castle. Story concerns the adventures in America of a young man, Karl Rossman, who is driven out of his home in Prague by his parents after being seduced by a servant girl. Karl's America is a strange land; his adventures border on the fantastic or the farcical, but at the end there is a hint that Karl will find a happiness denied Kafka's other heroes. NW

A short story about Croatian culture in Pittsburgh.

About a colony of White Russians in Detroit. Prince Lucian, of the old aristocracy, proposes to return to Russia and offer his knowledge about factory management. Good on social life and ideas of this group. EC

This novel describes the (Croatians) Dalmatians in California's apple-growing region. The Dalmatians are from a province inside Croatia.

Set in the Slovak district of Gary, Indiana, and in Chicago during Prohibition. Story of Johnny Opalko, Ph. D., who returns to his Slovak home unemployed and in conflict: he cannot decide what to do about his love for Jean Howland, an upper-class girl from Cleveland's Shaker Heights, nor can he reconcile ethical values learned at home with those which his brother, a member of the syndicate, demonstrates. During Johnny's stay at home he makes his decision -- about life and marriage. I; CL

Set in a small, friendly town in the Pacific Northwest. Account of life in a closely-knit Bohemian-American family, told from the viewpoint of nine-year-old Lide. Story redolent of a succulent, middle-European tradition of good food and large-scale hospitality. FS;EC

Twenty episodes, many humorous, in the life of a Russian immigrant from the province of Georgia, describing his efforts to understand America and become a part of it. Joyous yarns in the author's own idiom as set down by his American-born wife. MM

A stark, hopeless tale by the author of Quo Vadis. Story of a poor Polish family's unending, futile search for bread in America. FS; SP

Set in one of Chicago's infamous meat-packing plants. Its hero is Jurgis Rudkus, a sturdy Lithuanian, who, with a small contingent of fellow countrymen, struggles in his adopted country. He is no match for the foremen's immoral practices, for the real estate sharks' trickery, or for the corrupt political machine. Jurgis's only salvation is to embrace socialism, Sinclair's panacea. NW; W; P

A novel about the life of a Croatian-American physician in California.

Story of Adam Wolak, Polish immigrant, and his family in a small American city. Adam had come to America dreaming of his own farm, but after eighteen years as a day laborer, the depression put the seal of defeat on his dream. W

A psychological study of a passive and unskilled Slovenian laborer. Jencic is an inarticulate giant whose only means of self-expression is in the strength it takes to shift bags of flour all day long. The girls at the bakery mock him, but Jencic plods along unheedingly until Teena gets herself into trouble and turns to Jencic for help. W

B. Biography, Autobiography, and History

Autobiography of a Yugoslavian who came to America in 1913. An unconventional story that focuses less on Adamic's self and more on his adopted country, the "jungle" of his title. It is Louis Adamic's contention that the United States is "more of a jungle than a civilization--a land of deep economic, social, spiritual, and intellectual chaos and distress--in which by far the most precious possession a sensitive and intelligent person can have is an active sense of humor."

Sympathetic biography of a famous inventor, an electrical wizard, who died in comparative poverty in 1943. Born in Yugoslavia in 1856, Tesla came to America as a young man, was associated for a time with Edison, and made a fortune by selling his alternating-current patents to George Westinghouse.

Pilarski, Laura. They Came from Poland. New York: Dodd, Mead, 1969.

The stories of famous Polish-Americans: Casimir Pulaski, Thaddeus Kosciuszko, Ignace Paderewski, Artur Rubinstein, and Edmund Muskie are included.

The first comprehensive book on the history of the life work, contributions and background of the Croatian immigrants. A most valuable book for Croatian-American literature and all aspects of the Croatian contribution to America.

The autobiography of the Serbian immigrant who became a famous physicist at Columbia. Especially for junior high school.

An autobiography of Louis Sanjek, a Croatian immigrant Lutheran minister.
