INTRODUCTION

This Guide contains descriptions of thirty-nine programs providing federal financial support for research, training, and technical assistance in physical education and/or recreation for impaired, disabled, and handicapped persons. Each program was checked with appropriate officials and is described in terms of specific types of assistance provided, purposes for which assistance is available, who can apply, how to apply, and federal offices to contact for additional information about the program. Since many changes have occurred during the past six months in funding programs and procedures, information contained in this Guide is subject to change. However, programs discontinued as of June, 1973 have not been included.

Many federal programs are channeled through state or local governments. For example, categorical programs, particularly those of the Education for the Handicapped Act and the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, are administered through state offices of education. Furthermore, the present administration and Congress have initiated the first of a series of revenue sharing programs to distribute federal funds directly to state and local political jurisdictions without reference to support categories; two revenue sharing programs are now in operation.

The Administration's Revenue Sharing Act was passed by both Houses of Congress in October, 1972; the President signed the bill shortly thereafter. This bill authorizes return of 30.1 billion dollars of federal revenue to states and localities over a five year period. Retroactive to January 1, 1972, the bill has an estimated first year expenditure of 5.3 billion dollars, increasing annually to 6.4 billion dollars by 1976.

The principal trend in manpower activities in fiscal 1974 is developing comprehensive manpower delivery systems at the local level. These new delivery models bring existing manpower programs and delivery systems under local direction and control by combining most programs operating in an area into a single grant under sponsorship of the mayor, county executive, or other elected officials. Planning and consolidation activities that must precede execution of such unified grants will take place through fiscal 1974, with the majority of labor markets operating in the revenue sharing configuration by the end of the year.

Persons wishing to pursue revenue sharing are advised to approach local, city, or state officials. Since the trend toward funding is at the local level, interpretation and communication of the need for physical education and recreation services to local groups and individuals are very important. This does not imply or suggest that proposals should not be developed for federal funds. On the contrary, where funds exist, only persons who are persistent and work hard at grantsmanship secure these
In many cases physical education and recreation programs for persons with handicapping conditions have received low priority. Therefore, it is up to you to demonstrate the importance of these services, secure support of parents and concerned groups, and initiate action programs.

In the event that additional support is still needed, the following steps are suggested to persons seeking assistance from federal and/or state sources:

1. Communicate with governmental officials—preferably in person—before substantial commitments of time and funds are expended to develop a grant proposal. Valuable guidelines, examples of successful proposals, and a prognosis of fund availability make this procedure an essential first step. This also provides an opportunity to describe resources of your organization or school and your ability to carry out the proposed project—don't assume the official has ever heard of your institution!

2. Prepare a tentative but complete project application with full documentation. Documentation should include specific and supporting information on project goals and objectives, needs and expected results, local support, and coordination with related local activities. Public agency personnel generally do not know your community or what type of project is required; they largely rely on documented evidence that the community and its leaders know what they need, how they are going to operate and finance their needs, and why they need federal and/or state financial assistance. A well documented and accurate application is the best evidence officials have that public funds are going to be invested wisely. Many agencies pre-review grant applications and make recommendations on changes that are necessary to obtain final approval.

3. Be sure a proposal is consistent with accepted scientific research and evaluation methodology. You do not have to be an expert in research design and statistical analysis; however, this type of expertise should be involved in problem identification and project design phases of developing a proposal. If your institution does not have a research office, help of this type can usually be obtained from local colleges/universities, Office of Education funded research and development centers, state offices of education, or in some cases, the potential funding agency. Many proposals deal with relevant and researchable problems but are not funded because they lack acceptable research design.
4. Mobilize all appropriate support for the project. Especially important to many grants is active support of local political leaders, professional persons, educators, and representatives of special interest groups. It may be advisable to organize a local citizens' advisory group for large scale or potentially controversial projects.

5. Write a formal application and submit it with all supporting data to the appropriate state, regional, or federal office. While formulating an application, remember that objectives and work programs should be capable of practical fulfillment, and adequate funds must be provided in the budget to implement the project successfully. Often, the reality of putting written work programs into operation causes consternation and subsequent grant revisions that could be avoided by careful administrative review and evaluation. If you can't write clearly and persuasively, get someone who can. Unfortunately too many professionals and administrators are not prepared for effective proposal writing. However, the key to the good proposal is a sound idea addressing itself to a real need to which the writer is truly committed.

6. Notify all appropriate congressional or state representatives that you have submitted a grant application. Such communications should be brief and include a description of the project and a summary of local support.

7. Document in writing all communications--personal, telephone, telegram--with public officials. Send contract revisions and legal documents by registered or certified mail as protection against possible difficulties and misunderstandings with public officials over grant agreements. Do not substantially change a proposal to satisfy a public official unless the change is warranted--if you feel you are right, stick to your guns.

8. Approximately sixty days after submitting an application, make a written request for a status report from state, regional, or federal agency processing the grant application. In addition, make spot checks by letter or telephone every thirty days. Keep local offices and advisory groups informed of progress and status of the application.

Persons seeking public funds should be aware that both grants and contracts are available. Grants are usually made for unsolicited proposals. Increasingly, governmental agencies at federal, state, and local levels are using a competitive bidding process by issuing Requests for Proposals (RFP) or Requests for Quotations (RFQ). Those who wish to secure support for research and development projects should be prepared to compete for these funds in the future.
Program support does not remain static. Conditions change; new priorities are set; legislation is enacted; funds are authorized but not appropriated; guidelines are issued; application deadlines are set, and so on. To help each person stay current in this area, several appendices are important parts of this Guide. Appendix I includes a listing of information sources that provide current information about program support. Appendix II includes an illustrative listing of key projects, examples of how others have used federal funds, and key persons to contact for information about certain programs. Appendix III is a checklist to help evaluate proposals and make realistic appraisals of chances of success. Examples of special state recreation programs are included in Appendix IV.

Please keep the Information and Research Utilization Center in Physical Education and Recreation for the Handicapped informed of your successes, failures, and of programs not listed in this Guide. Only by cooperative assistance and sharing of grant experience can physical education, recreation, and related areas receive support levels they need and deserve.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE

Advisory Services and Counseling; Training.

OBJECTIVES

To provide professional consultation, technical advice, guidance and counseling to school systems, government agencies, employee organizations, industrial organizations, etc., who wish to introduce or to improve physical fitness programs. Further, to help design programs which respond to specialized physical fitness requirements, e.g., police, firemen.

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS

The limitations are fundamentally those imposed by the comparatively small size of the professional staff of the Council; in addition, the Council does not render this service to organizations for whom physical fitness is a commercial interest. The consultation includes analysis of requirements, fitness program design, advice as to facilities needs, knowledge of appropriate equipment, including quality, and certain limited in-service training of the personnel through institutes and physical fitness clinics.

WHO MAY APPLY

Schools, Government agencies, employee organizations, and industrial organizations with non-commercial objectives.

HOW TO APPLY

No formal method of application for Council assistance in program development is used. Written inquiry to the Council outlining the nature of assistance desired is all that is required.

Other Considerations

- Total school programs which often include physical education and/or recreation activities are funded under special programs for children with specific learning disabilities at Federal, State, and Local levels.

- A number of Title I and Title III projects under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act have included components dealing with physical education and/or recreation for impaired, disabled, and/or handicapped children. For example, over a period of several years, Title I, ESEA appropriated approximately 2 million dollars for physical education and recreation programs.

- Science Information Exchange, Smithsonian Institute, 209 Madison National Bank Building, 1730 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, is an information exchange that serves as a registry for research tasks and projects at the publication stage so as to minimize unwarranted duplication of research efforts.
Appendix III

CHECKLIST FOR PROJECTS

Rate proposed project outstanding (2), good (1), or poor (0) in answering each of the following questions. The higher the total score, the better the chance of a project being funded. Exceptional innovation in a few areas may make certain projects fundable if they are in the right place at the right time.

RATING

_____ DOES IT MATCH THE PURPOSE OF THE ACT (LEGISLATIVE AUTHORIZATION)?
   The proposal should be made to the appropriate sponsoring group according to interpretations of the Act. Currently efforts are being made to encourage and permit transfer of proposals from one agency to more appropriate ones.

_____ DOES IT ATTACK A GENERAL PROBLEM?
   Projects which deal with universal problems are given more attention and priority than these focusing on local or specific problems.

_____ WHAT RESULTS CAN LOGICALLY BE ANTICIPATED?
   Anticipated results should be of such nature to influence, promote, and bring about significant change and improvement in physical education and/or recreation services for impaired, disabled, and/or handicapped persons.

_____ WHAT WILL THE GENERAL IMPACT BE ON PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND/OR RECREATION PROGRAMS FOR IMPAIRED, DISABLED, AND/OR HANDICAPPED PARTICIPANTS?
   Project results need to have a chance for wide acceptance and applicability in many communities, situations, and circumstances if they prove beneficial.

_____ WHAT IS RELATIONSHIP OF THIS PROJECT TO OTHER FUNDED PROJECTS?
   General impact and operational efficiency are enhanced when a project is related to other projects.

_____ WAS THE PROPOSAL DEVELOPED BY AN EXISTING GROUP?
   This implies interest in an area beyond requested funds; a sound administrative base is probable.

Appendix III

WAS A PILOT STUDY COMPLETED?
A pilot study demonstrates interest in the actual problem, not just in obtaining funds; evidence that certain results may be obtained may also be presented.

ARE GOOD EVALUATION PROCEDURES PROPOSED?
An obvious requirement if anyone is to be convinced and make changes as a result of the project. Are good, already established instruments that measure objectives proposed?

IS IT AN INTERSCHOOL OR COUNTY COOPERATIVE PROJECT?
Greater impact and a better chance for a program to work are possible when it can be shown that various kinds of leadership are beneficial; greater resources are available under these conditions.

ARE RESEARCH CONSULTANTS INVOLVED?
Competent outside consultants reduce chances that mistakes will be made and/or overlooked and that local biases will prevail.

IS IT AN INTERDISCIPLINARY PROJECT?
An interdisciplinary approach results in a better chance of considering all aspects of a problem and increases probability of a project having greater impact on the education of all children.

ARE LARGE NUMBERS OF PERSONS INVOLVED?
Even if results are not statistically significant, the general intent of a program may positively influence many individuals if the program reaches a large enough number.

IS THERE A WIDE RANGE OF AGES AMONG SUBJECTS?
Chance of change in a community is greater when a wide range of ages is included. Experimentally it may be better to start on a limited base, but potential for expansion must be considered.

IS THIS REALLY AN INNOVATIVE IDEA?
It may appear to be worth a try—real progress is often made by trying an entirely different approach.

ARE CARRY OVER AND CONTINUATION ANTICIPATED AFTER FUNDS STOP?
This is an advantage of considering the recognized responsibility of state and local community for educating all children.

EXAMPLES OF STATE PROGRAMS

MASSACHUSETTS

RECREATIONAL PROGRAMS FOR PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED AND MENTALLY RETARDED PERSONS

The Massachusetts Board of Education for some 15 years has provided reimbursement of fifty percent of costs, including transportation, to communities offering approved summer and/or winter recreation programs for mentally retarded and physically handicapped persons. In addition, proportionate shares of salaries of supervisors of art, music, physical education, and audiovisual education are reimbursed for actual supervisory services rendered for speech handicapped, hard of hearing, partially seeing, or perceptually handicapped children. The Department also reimburses a city or town in which handicapped persons are residents by paying one-half the cost of the transportation of participants attending recreation programs at certain residential facilities. During 1969-70, 3,563 mentally retarded and physically handicapped individuals participated in these recreation programs in 137 communities throughout Massachusetts. In 1970-71, Department reimbursed over $287,000 to communities participating in this program; the figure rose to almost $400,000 in 1971-72. For additional information contact Director, Division of Special Education, Department of Education, 182 Tremont Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02111.

NEW JERSEY

HANDICAPPED CHILDREN'S RECREATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES ACT OF 19721

In 1972 the State of New Jersey established an act of legislation to encourage municipalities and counties to promote, plan, develop, implement, and maintain adequate recreational programs for handicapped children. Handicapped Children refers to and includes children between the ages of five and 20 who are mentally retarded, visually handicapped, auditorily handicapped, communication handicapped, neurologically or perceptually impaired, orthopedically handicapped, chronically ill, emotionally disturbed, socially maladjusted, or multiply handicapped. To establish a recreation project for handicapped children, municipalities or counties apply to the commissioner for approval of the project. Upon approval by the commissioner funds are apportioned and paid annually to each municipality or county operating and maintaining a program approved under the provisions of the act. For additional information contact Thomas Vodola, Township of Ocean School District, Ocean Township High School, Oakhurst, New Jersey 07755.

1As of the date of publishing this guide this act was still processing; all indications were that it would be authorized, funds appropriated, and programs implemented.
NSSRA stands for Northern Suburban Special Recreation Association. Its uniqueness comes from being the first, and until recently, the only organization of its kind. NSSRA provides recreation for special people — those with various handicapping conditions. Primarily NSSRA deals with school age children although involvement concerns those from childhood through adulthood.

In March of 1969, Illinois Senate Bills 745 and 746 were passed, permitting the association of park districts and/or municipalities of less than 500,000 population to provide recreational programs for the handicapped.

Within a year, the towns of Deerfield, Glencoe, Glenview, Highland Park, Highwood, Kenilworth, Northbrook, Wilmette and Winnetka joined together and these nine communities formed the NSSRA; in 1973 Northfield joined. By agreement the Association is renewed every three years.

The Board of Directors is comprised of representatives from each member district. Each district provides facilities, local publicity in their brochures, financial aid and many suggestions for various activities.
