The handbooks in the Office of Education State Educational Records and Reports series have been designed to facilitate the collection and maintenance of data for decision-making at the local level and the reporting of educational information to others. Described first in this publication is a program structure for a local education agency which combines with the information in the handbook series to form the basis for development of the program aspects of an educational information system. The author then considers some of the general factors involved in organizing and using a staff information subsystem, and provides a list of data elements about staff members, organized into a detailed classification structure. Definitions for these data elements are provided in a subsequent section. The closing chapter defines some useful staff measures and suggests examples of ratios, rates, and quantitative units. FOREWORD

The revision of Handbook IV, Staff Accounting Classifications and Standard Terminology for Local and State School Systems, is the result of the cooperative effort of the U.S. Office of Education (OE), a national advisory committee, and regional conference participants throughout the Nation. These groups working together have produced classifications, definitions, and coding schemes for the data elements about staff members necessary to assist, administrative decisionmaking. The revision of Handbook IV places special emphasis upon the uses of staff information in local education agencies and, in particular, upon the relationship of the staff file to the system files in the other handbooks of this series.

Chapter 1
OVERVIEW OF HANDBOOK IV

The purpose of this chapter is to acquaint the LEA administrator with the purpose, scope, structure, and usefulness of this handbook. It is a macroscopic view of the contents. More specific details are presented in the following chapter.

The design is to move the reader sequentially from this overview to a more detailed discussion of the uses of staff information and then to the actual classification of data elements—developing along the way an understanding of the processes involved. This progression should (1) conserve the reader's time by directing attention to those areas which meet his or her needs, and (2) enhance the usefulness and comprehensibility of the handbook.

The handbook identifies, defines, and organizes pertinent staff data into a classification structure and explains how the classification structure can be used for administrative decisionmaking in the local education agency (LEA).\(^1\) The handbook covers information about staff members in both public and nonpublic educational institutions, including elementary, middle/junior high, and high schools, vocational-technical schools, and special education and adult/continuing education learning centers.

INFORMATION NEEDS OF THE LOCAL EDUCATION AGENCY

Information about staff is a primary educational resource basic to the management of LEA's and to education throughout the country. Since data should be organized to be usable, the administrator and other LEA officials must have a basis for developing a system to accumulate data about staff members, their characteristics, activities, assignments, and services. This requires standardized and up-to-date terminology, classified and codified to fit into a modern information system. The data also must be comparable to data from other LEA's if administrators expect to communicate among themselves and fulfill State and Federal reporting requirements.

Figure 1 depicts the importance of staff information to the LEA in terms of its needs and its management challenges. In addition to the reporting and management planning needs already mentioned, an administrator is confronted with requests from community and local governmental groups for various types of information, such as pupil-teacher ratios and racial balances. He has the obligation to maintain personnel data for tax and retirement purposes as well as for transfers, promotions, and references. In order to compute manpower and fiscal requirements for the coming years, an administrator must have current and accurate data on the numbers and various competencies of staff members employed by the LEA. Requests from employee organizations for salary, contract, and related employment data are increasing, along with demands from concerned citizens to know exactly where and how education dollars are being spent. These and numerous other demands placed upon the LEA administrator necessitate a large volume of data on all aspects of the LEA, especially on staff.

The basic purpose of Handbook IV is to provide a means and a framework for the accumulation of necessary data about staff members. The handbook is intended only as a guide; the ultimate decisions regarding to what extent staff data should be collected, how the collected data should be maintained, and how many of the suggested processes should be implemented rest with local officials.

The revision of Handbook IV should be of greater use to school officials than its predecessor. In addition to serving, as did the original version, as a means for improving standard terminology for reporting, the revision is designed to assist LEA's in accumulating data elements in a manner suitable for administrative decisionmaking.

\(^1\)Handbook IV deals only with staff members of the LEA; State education agency staff data are dealt with in Handbook VII, The State Education Agency.

Chapter 2 - The Interrelationships Among the Handbooks in the Series

The handbooks in the Office of Education State Educational Records and Reports series (identified in the foreword) have been designed to facilitate the collection and maintenance of data for decisionmaking at the local level and the reporting of educational information to other users. Chapter 2 describes a program structure for a local education agency which combines with the information in the handbook series to form the basis for development of the program aspects of an educational information system. The interrelationships among the handbooks also provide common terms and descriptions for use among educational agencies involved in the planning, operation, and evaluation of educational programs.

The classification of staff data in Handbook IV is an integral part of the interface among the handbooks; this interface is developed according to the LEA program structure.

Chapter 3 - Description of Handbook IV

Chapter 3 considers some of the general factors involved in organizing and using a staff information subsystem.

The staff handbook is structured to provide (1) for the accumulation and accession of items of information about staff in two or three interrelated files (permanent, assignment, and payroll) and (2) a categorized and coded list of data items for reference purposes. In order to obtain meaningful information from these individual data elements, it is necessary to interrelate elements from the following nine data dimensions:

- Personal and Health Information
- Education and Experience
- Job Classification and Activity Assignment
- Function and Program Assignment
- Subject Matter Area
- Conditions of Current Assignment
- Current Employment
- Career Development
- Separation

To make use of the staff data described in the handbook, an LEA must accumulate the data and develop some sort of easily accessible file or information storage system. One possible system for staff files is suggested in chapter 3; it includes three types of files for each staff member:

- Permanent File. For staff data that seldom or never change;
- Permanent File (Short Form). A brief synopsis of data which is kept after it is no longer necessary to maintain all the data in the Permanent File;
- Current Operating Files. For data which are likely to change. Among the files falling into this category would be the Payroll File (for data necessary to support the payroll system and to generate related reports) and the Assignment File (for data relative to the staff member's current assignment).

The functioning of the staff files is illustrated through three examples of administrative processes: promotion and internal transfer, employment, and separation due to resignation.

Finally, the use of the files in the reporting process is demonstrated through the generation of several sample staffing reports from the LEA administration to the local board of education and the State education agency (SEA).

Chapter 4 - Classification of Staff Data

Chapter 4 contains the list of data elements about staff members, organized into a detailed classification structure. The interrelationship of the data elements within the nine major dimensions produces the information necessary for reporting and staff administration processes. In addition, the standardized terminology is the basis for interrelating data from the other handbooks into a program structure.

Chapter 5 - Definitions of Data Elements in the Classification Structure

Chapter 5 provides the same classification structure as chapter 4 but includes definitions for the data elements.

Chapter 6 - Units of Measure

This chapter defines some useful staff measures and suggests examples of ratios, rates, and quantitative units.

Appendixes

Appendix A contains references for coding degrees, higher education institutions, and other elements relating to staff. Sample criteria for evaluating staff member's job performances are included in appendix B. Appendix C contains a glossary of the most prominent terms in the handbook plus others in the handbook series having relevance for staff administration. Appendix D describes the development of the handbook and appendix E acknowledges most of the individuals who contributed to its production.

Educators have long recognized that two fundamental elements essential to meaningful evaluation of the education process are a common language and a basis on which to develop a system to communicate information. Handbook IV, in conjunction with the other handbooks in the SERR series, attempts to provide these fundamental elements. However, it is only with cooperation and action by State, local, and Federal education agency administrators and officials that such a system can be established and used to the greatest advantage.
Chapter 2
THE INTERRELATIONSHIPS AMONG THE HANDBOOKS IN THE SERIES

RATIONALE OF THE HANDBOOK SERIES

The data elements in the OE State Educational Records and Reports (SERR) series are identified and classified according to the LEA program structure illustrated in figure 2. This structure represents the hierarchical organization of program elements within the LEA; it is, therefore, a logical framework for planning, reporting, and management decisionmaking.

In total, the program structure should be a graphic picture of how an LEA operates with prototype groupings of activities, functions, and programs. At the top of the pyramid is the LEA with its responsibility to provide education to the community. The basic educational function is divided into “Instruction,” the “Supporting Services” necessary to provide this instruction, and “Community Services,” such as recreation and library facilities.

In developing the program structure further, the “Instructional Services” function is divided into three major categories: “Regular Programs,” “Special Programs” (for pupils with exceptionalities), and “Adult/Continuing Education Programs” (for adults and young people who have accepted adult roles in life).

The “Regular Program” area is the one into which most of the instructional functions of the LEA are directed, since the majority of students fall into this category. “Regular Program” instruction typically is divided into three groups of programs: “Elementary Programs,” “Middle/Junior High Programs,” and “High School Programs,” which correspond to the three basic organizational levels of education. These three basic levels may be further divided into broad goals and objectives such as “Intellectual Skills Development,” “Understanding the Environment,” “Personal Development,” and “Exploratory Studies.” These may be subdivided further into subject matter areas (e.g., “Science”), and then into courses and units, such as “Chemistry,” “Physics,” “Biology,” etc.

Figure 2 represents only the first few levels possible in the program structure. Under each major dimension of the structure there are several program areas; each program area can be divided into more specialized areas or programs. The overall program structure, then, pyramids all types of information about the LEA, starting with the broadest dimensions and ending with a vast number of possible subclassifications for service projects and specific courses of instruction.

This complex branching of information expands to encompass data on school finance, pupils, facilities, curriculum, community programs, and many other LEA-related areas. It is at this point that the OE handbook series interfaces with the LEA program structure (figure 2).

INTERRELATIONSHIPS AMONG THE HANDBOOKS

Educators are aware that school administrators need information about property, school finance, pupils, curriculum, and staff to carry out their planning and decisionmaking responsibilities. They have recognized also the usefulness of this LEA program structure in collecting and classifying these data elements. The handbooks have therefore been developed to help administrators collect and organize such essential information about LEA’s. The ordering of this information into a uniform classification structure is made possible by combining, through the medium of the handbooks, the different types of data collected.
Figure 2.—Program structure of a local education agency (as set forth in Handbook II, Revised)
The diagram below illustrates the interrelationships among the handbooks which, in turn, support the goal of the program structure: organized, consistent management information.

Handbooks:

II. FINANCIAL ACCTG.

III. PROPERTY ACCTG.

IV. STAFF ACCTG.

V. PUPIL ACCTG.

VI. CURRICULUM and INSTRUCTION

Each handbook contains specific data elements required for management effectiveness and accountability within an LEA as well as for evaluation of the entire educational process in elementary and secondary schools. Major linkages can be developed among the handbooks where the LEA has implemented handbook guidelines for information processes.

Figure 3 shows how some of the data of the various handbooks can be matched to develop information important to the administration of an LEA. The single most important bond is the common dimension of "Function and Program Assignment" (the D series in this handbook) shared by Handbooks II, IV, V, and VI. Pupil, cost, and staff data all merge in the program area. The function of "Instruction" (D1000), is the point at which data on pupils receiving instruction, the cost of providing the instruction, the staff members who instruct, and the curriculum in which pupils are involved merge into information about the way the LEA provides instruction. Such information is the beginning of systems development for the LEA.

Expanding upon this function/program base, the local administrator can develop other data linkages between other common dimensions of the handbooks. Each staff member whose current activity assignment involves instruction is categorized into one or more of the broad goals and objectives of the 22 subject matter areas (e.g., "Agriculture," "Science") or cocurricular activities delineated in chapter 5 of Handbook VI. Therefore, this same series in Handbook IV forms a bond between staff data and curriculum data. Salary data, as part of the Current Employment dimension of this handbook, ties into the overall salary category under Object of Expense in Handbook II. The physical location of an assignment is generally identified in Handbook IV, and more specifically in Handbook III, in terms of the building and room in which the assignment is performed. If carried to a greater degree of detail, these common location elements can couple staff data to property accounting data and subsequently link the staff member to a group of learners in a space or classroom.

The function of the OE handbooks in establishing, through data linkages, a basis for an LEA management information system is one of many uses of the series. Equally important to the LEA administrator are the guidelines for data collection, reporting, and decision-making which each handbook provides. Chapter 3 provides a discussion of how staff data should be collected and organized and how the data can be used in practical, day-to-day staff administrative processes and reporting.

DESCRIPTION OF HANDBOOK IV

Some of the factors involved in the development and use of staff information are considered in this chapter. It includes discussion of the need for staff information, a description of the way this handbook is organized, and a discussion of the handbook's use in relation to staff files, decisionmaking, and reporting.

Educators have long recognized the need for a common language to be used in the planning, operation, and evaluation of educational programs. In addition, it is essential that educational organizations be aware of the status of their resources. Staff, the primary resource of an educational system, cannot be quantified or evaluated accurately using an inadequate or underdeveloped system of data elements, especially with the emergence of progressively more complex and sophisticated LEA’s.

ORGANIZATION OF THE HANDBOOK

This handbook has been organized around nine broad data dimensions which form a classification structure for the accumulation of data about staff members and their employment relationship with the LEA. These dimensions (which are listed in chapter 4 and defined in chapter 5) include:

A. Personal and Health Information

The A series provides a reference source from which detailed data pertaining to a staff member’s address, health, and vital statistics can be extracted. Data of this type provide fairly permanent information which does not vary significantly from year to year.

B. Education and Experience

The data in the B series describe the staff member’s formal education, credentials, inservice and other training, prior employment, and other experiences related to his or her job qualifications. The categories on education, credentials, and training are designed to be cumulative as the staff member continues his or her education or completes additional training; however, the data on prior work experience would not change.

C. Job Classification and Activity Assignment

The C series provides two types of data concerning the nature of the job assigned to the staff member:

1. Classification of the staff member’s assignment into a job class requiring any of the following types of skills:
   - “Official/Administrative”
   - “Professional-Educational”
   - “Professional-Other”
   - “Technical”
   - “Office/Clerical”
   - “Crafts and Trades”
   - “Operative”
   - “Laborer”
   - “Service Work”

2. Classification of the staff member’s assignment to the specific tasks and activities commensurate with assigned responsibilities. This is referred to as an “activity assignment”; examples of activity assignments are “Accounting,” “Evaluating,” “Teaching,” etc. (Activity assignments always refer to the staff member’s assigned job and not to the individual’s personal qualifications.

D. Function and Program Assignment

The D series (taken from Handbook II) provides detailed data regarding the nature of the function and program or support service to which the staff member has been assigned. The data in this section, unlike those in “Personal and Health Information,” can vary with changes in assignment and thus may change significantly for a staff member from year to year or over a shorter time interval.

E. Subject Matter Area

The E series identifies the 22 major subject matter areas (taken from Handbook VI) into which the "Instructional" function can be categorized. Staff members with "Teaching" assignments can be grouped under one or more of these subject areas.

F. Conditions of Current Assignment

The F series provides several types of data describing the staff member's current assignment in relation to the organizational structure of the LEA. These data include the work location and actual scheduled hours of the staff member's assignment. The data also indicate the scope of the staff member's assignment (e.g., systemwide or within a single school) and the duration of the assignment in relation to the number of school terms in the school year.

G. Current Employment

The G series describes the conditions pertaining to the employment relationship between the staff member and the LEA. It includes data on probationary, temporary, or tenure status, contractual status, conditions of employment, salary, insurance, means of introduction to the LEA, retirement, leaves of absence, and full-time/part-time status.

H. Career Development

The H series provides data pertaining to the staff member's performance evaluation, potential for advancement, and career development needs. These data give the administrator a reasonably substantial foundation of information for an objective appraisal of performance; they should also assist the administrator in selecting programs and activities to enhance the staff member's development.

I. Separation

The I series describes the conditions and circumstances under which the staff member and the LEA sever their employment relationship. Although separation is generally designated as "voluntary" or "involuntary," subclassifications are useful in determining overall patterns in staff turnover and, hence, in planning.

The separation action also contains information as to whether the staff member is eligible for reemployment by the LEA.

Assembly of Data into Information

In order for information to be usable to an LEA administrator, the data elements in the classification structure cannot be regarded as isolated units; data from two or more dimensions must be combined into a relationship. For example, it is necessary to combine the C and D series to identify the staff member's current assignment—what job he or she performs and in what program. Both data components are essential to produce information since the C series is a grouping of generic activities performed within an LEA, and the D series deals with specific functions and programs to which these activities must be related. It is not sufficient to know that a staff member has a "Foreman" assignment (C1006) in the "Official/Administrative" job classification, without knowing whether (in this example) he or she works in "Building Acquisition, Construction, and Improvement Services" (D2535) or "Care and Upkeep of Grounds Services" (D2643). Conversely, data which show only that a staff member is in "Public Information Services" (D2633) would not reveal if he or she is serving as a "Public Relations Expert" (C3020), a "Clerk" (C5002), or a "Graphic Artist" (C4004). The combination of single data elements from the two series results in information about the staff member's assignment.

"Scope of Assignment" (F1100) is a necessary third dimension in pinpointing a staff member's assignment, since it reveals not only the LEA level and location at which each assignment is performed but, in some cases, the level of responsibility and timing of activities. For example, scope will identify whether a staff member with a "Supervising/Managing/Directing" assignment (C1010) in "Fiscal Services" (D2520) has responsibility for a single school or for the entire LEA. In addition, the scope dimension records itinerant assignments (e.g., an audiologist or psychometrist), where the staff member works on a regular basis in more than one school, and also records the number of pupils served per day and per week.

Another basic data relationship is that between "Subject Matter Area" (E series) and the "Instruction" function (D1000). When combined with those activity assignments related to teaching (e.g., "Teaching," "Teaching Intern," "Student-Teaching," "Teaching Aide," and "Teaching Assistant" assignments), these data elements provide information about the specific subject(s) a staff member teaches or helps to teach.

These elementary relationships provide ways of relating staff data, ranging from a simple system in which duplicate records are placed in separate files, to a sophisticated electronic system capable of sorting through, choosing, and assembling many individual elements. Given these dimensions, therefore, it is possible for an administrator to combine the data elements in as many different ways as are needed. It is possible, for example, to obtain the number of staff members in the job classifications of "Official/Administrative" through "Professional/Other" (C1000-C3000) who are not eligible for the retirement program, or the salary ranges of staff members broken down by ethnic group, or a list (for planning purposes) of all staff members who are certificated to teach in more than one subject matter area but who currently teach in only one. The classification structure in this handbook provides the means for collecting and organizing individual data elements which when combined into functional relationships, produce staff information for decisionmaking.

Definition of a Staff Member

The term staff member is defined, for the purposes of this handbook, as a person whose relationship with the local education agency meets the following criteria:

- The person, under the direction of the LEA, performs activities or provides services for the LEA.
- The person is either compensated for such services by the LEA and is considered an employee for the purpose of workmen's compensation coverage, the Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA), and wage or salary tax withholdings; or the person performs such services on a volunteer, uncompensated basis. (The LEA should collect the same data—depending upon the assignment—about every employee, whether paid or unpaid.)

Personnel who do not meet the above criteria occasionally must be included in reports to governmental agencies and departments. These are usually persons who are performing services for the LEA while maintaining an employment relationship with a third party, such as a building contractor or a food service contractor. Normally, reports should specify whether persons in this latter category are to be included in the report responses. In addition, depending upon State and Federal regulations, the LEA may have the responsibility to see that the third party maintains data on its employees similar to staff data collected by the LEA.

USE OF THE HANDBOOK

In order to use effectively the classification structure of data elements described in this handbook, an LEA must develop some sort of file or information maintenance system. Although this system may vary in form and may involve a variety of mechanical devices or equipment, it should be designed and operated to conform to at least the general criteria listed below. Local education agencies should attempt, wherever possible, to further refine or to supplement the following criteria in accordance with their own particular needs and constraints:

1. The staff files should be designed to provide information for use in both:
   - the daily personnel administration process, including identification of candidates for staff needs, and
   - reporting and data summarization.

   The LEA should avoid duplicate files, wherever possible, for each of the above purposes.

2. The staff files should be designed to store only enough information for a reasonable anticipation of operating and reporting needs. A common tendency is to design the files to store an excessive amount of minutiae which will require more than a reasonable amount of maintenance. On the other hand, the files should have a sufficiently broad data base to avoid unnecessary and costly gathering of data from sources other than the staff files.

3. The staff files should be designed to facilitate their own maintenance and updating, regardless of their form. Forms and records which permit easy deletion of outdated data and easy addition of current data are preferable to forms and records which must be replaced each time a change takes place.

(4) Specific responsibility should be assigned for maintenance of the staff files, and a fairly rigid schedule of maintenance should be established.

(5) Guidelines should be established, in writing, detailing the conditions under which information from the files may be used (i.e., who may extract and use information, what may be extracted, when, and to what purpose). The guidelines should outline specifically what information can be obtained with or without the superintendent’s approval and with or without the staff member’s approval. The guidelines should also cover reproduction of file information. It is extremely important that these guidelines be established in accordance with local, State, and Federal laws and court decisions pertaining to information confidentiality.

Use of Staff Files

One method of developing staff files is described below for a hypothetical LEA (with approximately 450 staff members) using a manually recorded system. The system consists of the following basic, interrelated files for each staff member. (The data elements shown within each file are only suggested; in actual use, they should be expanded or reduced to fit the needs of the local administrator.)

- Permanent File—This file records and maintains the permanent and updated data about the staff member during his employment. The kinds of data found in the Permanent File are illustrated in figure 4; the code numbers refer to the data element classification structure in chapter 4.

  The file for this hypothetical LEA was designed around the nine data dimensions previously described, allowing for flexibility in its format so that an expandable number of entries might be made under each category. In addition, as any of the staff member’s assignments, qualifications, or performance evaluations change or are updated, the old data are transferred from the Assignment File to the Permanent File to give a cumulative history of the staff member’s employment.

- Payroll File—This file maintains all the data sizes the few most basic elements of data regarding the staff member and retains these data indefinitely. Examples of such data include:

  - Legal Name (A1110)
  - Employment Date (G1200)
  - Social Security Number (A1130)
  - Address at Separation (A3110)
  - Last Activity Assignment (C Series)
  - Last Function and Program Assignment (D Series)
  - Type of Separation (I1000)
  - Eligibility for Reemployment (I3000)
  - Date of Separation (I4000)
  - Final Salary (G2100)

- Current Operating Files—These files contain data which are likely to change. Because changes will relate most often to the staff member’s assignments and because assignments constitute a great proportion of the data reported to local, State, and Federal agencies, current operating files are the basic resource available to the superintendent in making decisions and preparing such reports. The Assignment File and the Payroll File represent two examples of frequently used current operating files.

- Assignment File—Since this file (figure 5) is essentially "assignment oriented," it maintains some of the same data on the staff member’s qualifications as the Permanent File. In addition, the Assignment File itself may be maintained in more than one place; a copy may be kept by the staff member’s immediate supervisor as well as in the central office with all other files. This maintenance of data in more than one place is justified because qualifications data, in particular, are useful to supervisors in management. It not only is invaluable as a resource providing data and information for reporting purposes, but also provides succinct data for evaluating staff member’s qualifications and performance in light of present and future staff requirements. The file also serves as a locator since it includes specific data on each staff member’s work location.

  The Assignment File is designed to maximize flexibility and to reduce the effort required for its maintenance. As elements become outdated or change, they are transferred to the Permanent File. Also, the Assignment File normally should be used to update a staff member’s Permanent File at the time of his separation.

necessary to prepare the staff member's paycheck or voucher each payroll period and also provides data for reports and summaries. The Payroll File combines both permanent and current data and is designed, as much as possible, around the nine data dimensions in the classification structure. Because of the relationship of this particular file to payroll operations, however, it contains certain additional quantitative data not required within the nine dimensions of data, such as cumulative deductions and earnings and amount of leave accrued.

SAMPLE STAFF ADMINISTRATIVE PROCESSES

This section of the chapter is concerned with (1) how the staff files just discussed are used in daily administrative processes, and (2) how data flow into the files and are extracted when needed. (A later section of this chapter discusses how these files help to generate information for staffing reports.)

The following common administrative processes are given as examples of the uses of the staff files:

- the promotion and internal transfer process
- the teacher employment process
- separation due to resignation

The basic steps of each administrative process are flowcharted in figures 7, 8, and 9. The figures illustrate the flow of both action and information and the persons or organizations involved in the processes. When data elements are either collected or stored in a file during a process, the key elements are listed below the appropriate step. The position in which the decision is made in a sample process does not necessarily represent the hierarchical structure of decision-making in each LEA. In many LEAs, the person who makes staff decisions is the superintendent; in others, it is the principal or personnel officer; and in some LEAs, these administrators form a team in making staff decisions.

Sample Teacher Employment Process.—Figure 8 illustrates the employment process for a teaching position within the same hypothetical LEA. The assumption is made that the process described above already has been completed, and no current staff members are interested in and/or qualified for the teaching position. As in the promotion and internal transfer process, the principal forwards a request for an additional staff member through the personnel officer to the superintendent for approval. In making his decision, the superintendent may consider anticipated growth in student enrollment, the need for development of additional programs and services, and the capability of present staff members to absorb this additional assignment within the constraints of their present workloads.

The LEA, through the personnel officer in this example, notifies all potential sources of candidates for the position, with particular emphasis on teacher education institutions and teachers’ associations. The notice includes the skills required and the program description of vacancy which are defined in the data elements from the “Job Classification” and “Activity Assignment” series and “Function and Program Assignment” series. As a result of this notification, the LEA receives applications from several candidates who are interested in and qualified for the opening. They are screened to five who, in turn, are interviewed.

As a result of the interviews, the personnel officer chooses the top three candidates, and requests a certification verification as well as a reference check on each of them. The personnel officer forwards the appropriate forms to the State education agency for certification verification, while each of the past employers of the candidates receives a request for work references. These references and verifications are received by the personnel officer who evaluates them.

The decision is made ultimately to hire one of the candidates. Upon the candidate’s acceptance of the job offer, the superintendent recommends a candidate to the board of education and notifies several key persons, including the personnel officer and the principal to whom the new staff member will be assigned for employment. Prior to the new staff member’s first day of work, the personnel officer notifies the employee’s supervisor and the accounting/payroll office (among other pertinent staff) and supplies them with appropriate data to originate an Assignment File and a Payroll File.

Sample Separation Process.—Although not involved heavily with information flow, separation of staff members due to voluntary resignation (see figure 8) is a common process and, therefore, is a good example of staff personnel administration.

The process begins when the staff member notifies the LEA that he or she intends to leave its employment. Frequently, local education agencies require that a notification of resignation be submitted in written form. In such cases, this notice should become part of the staff member’s Permanent File.

An exit interview is usually conducted when the staff member leaves to find out the reason for separation, the staff member’s evaluation of the employer, and eligibility for reemployment. The staff member often modifies insurance or benefit coverage at this point.

Each action is recorded and communicated to the appropriate persons or organizations within the LEA. As indicated, these new data should be added to the staff member’s files prior to their transfer to the Permanent File.

In the final step, the employment process may begin again, with the principal or supervisor responsible for the separating employee forwarding a request to the superintendent to fill the vacant position.

SAMPLE STAFFING REPORTS

One of the most important functions of the staff files, and the classification structure as a whole, is their use in generating staffing reports from the individual school or other operational unit to higher administrative levels such as the district or LEA, the State education agency, and Federal agencies. The entire process, from collection of the data outlined in the classification structure to maintenance of the staff files to development of the reporting formats, is based on the principle that data should be collected only once, then arranged in whatever ways suit the various users’ needs.

The following three staffing reports illustrate one means of using data generated originally from the Assignment Files produced at the individual school or unit (e.g., maintenance, warehouse, transportation) level. Each report presents essentially similar staffing data; the second and third reports are basically compilations of the first.

Individual School or Unit Staffing Reports.—For each school or unit in the LEA, an individual school or unit report on staff (sample shown in figure 10) could be prepared by the LEA superintendent or personnel officer from the staff members’ Assignment Files, and then forwarded to the principals and supervisors of individual units (Elm Tree High School, in this example) for confirmation and/or correction of the numbers. The sample report lists Elm Tree High School staff according to their job classifications, as described in the C series, and their function and program assignments, as described in the D series. If the LEA requires breakdowns into more individual activity 1The business and central support services (D2500-D2800) have been grouped under a single heading for these reports. Four distinct groups of activities could be shown if desired (2300 - “General Administration,” D2400 - “School Administration,” D2500 - “Business,” and D2800 - “Central”).

assignments (e.g., separate categories for “Teaching Assistant,” “Student-Teaching,” and “Teaching Intern” assignments under the block marked “Technical,” or for the “Vehicle Operating” assignment under “Operative”), additional columns may be added to any report. All data for reporting should be calculated in terms of full-time equivalency of assignments. For a discussion of this method of calculation, see chapter 6, page 87.

LEA Staffing Reports.—An LEA report on staff by job classification and function/program (figure 11) could be prepared annually, or more often as needed, by the LEA superintendent or personnel officer for both the local board of education and the State education agency. Using the same data dimensions as the individual school and unit reports and summarizing them for all the units in the LEA, this report provides a breakdown on the systemwide staffing population by the staff members’ job classifications and the functions and programs to which they are assigned.

A variation of this report is the LEA report on staff by job classification and school or unit (figure 12), which also could go from the superintendent to the local board of education and the State education agency. The report is a systematic summary of the staffing totals by job classification from each of the individual school reports (the totals from Elm Tree High School, shown in figure 10, appear as part of this report) plus any other LEA operational unit, such as the central office.

Depending upon the needs of the LEA, many other types of staffing reports could be generated using other dimensions of the classification structure. Staff data by subject matter area and school and by ethnic origin and job classification are combinations of dimensions frequently used for local, State, and Federal reporting.

Federal Staffing Reports.—Reports on staffing to various Federal agencies can be generated either in summary form by the State educational agency or in detailed form from individual LEA reports forwarded through the State to the Federal agency. All source data used in these Federal reports should be available to the LEA superintendent either from the staff members’ current operating files or from the superintendent’s own reports to the local board of education.

The data elements which comprise the staff files and which are used for the staff administration and reporting purposes described above are listed and categorized by data dimension in the next chapter.

Chapter 4

CLASSIFICATION OF STAFF DATA

This chapter contains a classification structure for data elements about staff members. (Definitions of these data elements follow in chapter 5.) The numbering scheme in both chapters 4 and 5 is used merely to reference location within the classification structure, which contains nine major dimensions:

A - Personal and Health Information
B - Education and Experience
C - Job Classification and Activity Assignment
D - Function and Program Assignment
E - Subject Matter Area
F - Conditions of Current Assignment
G - Current Employment
H - Career Development
I - Separation

(NOTE: The LEA administrator should be aware of applicable Federal, State, and local regulations which delineate or limit the collection of staff data.)

Chapter 5
DEFINITIONS OF DATA ELEMENTS
IN THE CLASSIFICATION STRUCTURE

This chapter defines the data elements which are identified and classified in chapter 4. The classification and numbering system in this chapter is identical to that in chapter 4. Many of the definitions have been synopsized or modified from definitions in other OE handbooks. In cases where only a partial definition is given, there is a reference to a more complete definition in another handbook in the State Educational Records and Reports Series; e.g., H-VI, p. 61 refers to Handbook VI, page 61. The LEA administrator should be aware of applicable Federal, State, and local regulations which delineate or limit the collection of staff data.

A.—PERSONAL AND HEALTH INFORMATION

Personal and health data serve to identify the staff member and provide information on his health, marital status, and dependents.

A1000 PERSONAL DATA

Data which provide individual characteristics of staff members.

A1100 Identification. Data items which determine the uniqueness of a staff member.

A1110 Legal Name. The full name of the staff member authorized by law.

A1120 Other or Maiden Name. Any other name, including the name previous to marriage, by which the staff member is known.

A1130 Social Security Number. The number assigned to the staff member by the Social Security Administration.

A1140 Other Identification Numbers. The numbers assigned to the staff member by the LEA or State agency for identification and record-keeping purposes. These include such numbers as payroll number, employee number, health plan number, and retirement number.

A1150 Sex. Designation as to whether the staff member is male or female.

A1160 Racial/Ethnic Background. The racial/ethnic origin of the staff member according to the following five classifications used by the School Reporting Committee, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission: White, Black, Spanish Surnamed, American Indian, Asian American, and other. (Modifications are under study.)

A1170 Date of Birth. The month, day, and year of the staff member's birth.

A1180 Place of Birth. The local governmental unit (e.g., city, county, township) and State, U.S. Possession, or foreign country in which the staff member was born.

A1200 Military Service Status. The nature of previous and current service of the staff member in the Armed Forces, including type of discharge or separation, date of active service, veteran's privileges, and current military status, if any.

A1210 Military Service. The branch (e.g., U.S. Army, U.S. Air Force) of the Armed Forces and the inclusive dates of military service of the staff member.

A1220 Type of Discharge. The type of discharge (e.g., honorable, general, dishonorable) that the staff member was granted upon leaving the Armed Forces.
A. PERSONAL AND HEALTH INFORMATION

A1230 Reserve or National Guard Status. The current Armed Forces reserve or National Guard status, if any, of the staff member and the date on which this obligation ends.

A1240 Draft Classification. The current draft classification (e.g., 4-F, 1-H), if any, issued to the staff member by the Selective Service System.

A1300 Citizenship Status. The nature of the staff member’s citizenship status within the United States.

A1310 U.S. Citizen. Entry indicating that the staff member is a citizen of the United States whether by birth or by naturalization.

A1311 U.S. Citizen by Birth.

A2000 TAX INFORMATION

Data necessary to comply with applicable Federal, State, and local income and wage tax withholding regulations.

A2100 Federal Income Tax. Data necessary to comply with required Federal income tax withholding regulations of the Internal Revenue Service. These data, which are usually completed by the staff member on his W-4 form, include marital status, number of dependents and exemptions, and the amount of any additional withholding.

A2110 Marital Status. Entry indicating whether the staff member is currently single or married, based on Internal Revenue Service definitions.

A2111 Single. Entry indicating that the staff member is not married. The staff member may have never been married or, having been married, is now widowed or divorced. A staff member who is married but legally separated or whose spouse is a nonresident alien also is considered single.

A2112 Married. Entry indicating that the staff member is not single.

A2120 Dependents. The number of dependents claimed by the staff member, as defined by the Internal Revenue Service. (See IRS Form W-4.)

A2130 Number of Exemptions Claimed. The total number of exemptions and allowances claimed by the staff member for Federal income tax purposes, in accordance with Internal Revenue Service definitions and rules. (See IRS Form W-4.)

A2140 Amount of Additional Withholding Per Pay Period. The dollar amount (if any) per pay period of additional withholding from the staff member’s paycheck or voucher for Federal income tax purposes. Any such withholding must be made under agreement with the employing agency.

A2200 State Income or Wage Tax. This category can be used in those States having an income or wage tax where the staff member wants to declare tax withholdings or exemptions which differ from those on his Federal W-4 form. The category can be subdivided in the same way as A2100, Federal Income Tax, if necessary. However, only those data elements with responses which are different from the entries under A2110 through A2140 should be included. If there is a State income tax and the staff member is declaring the same with-holdings and exemptions for both Federal and State tax, only the data under A2130 need be completed.

A2300 Other Income or Wage Tax. This category should only be used by those agencies (e.g., counties, municipalities) having an income or wage tax where the staff member wants to declare tax withholdings which differ from those on his Federal W-4 or State form. Where the necessary data are already included in A2100 and A2200, this category is not used. The category can be subdivided in the same way as A2100, Federal Income Tax, if necessary. However, only those data elements with responses different from the entries under A2100 or A2200 should be included. Any other required data elements can also be added under this heading.

A3000 RESIDENCE

Data on the addresses and telephone numbers where the staff member may be reached for mailing and contact purposes.

A3100 Addresses. Permanent and temporary places of abode.

A3110 Current Home Address. The house number, hotel name and room number, or apartment house name and apartment number; name of the street, subdivision, or RFD number; city; State; and zip code where the staff member currently lives.

C.-JOB CLASSIFICATION AND ACTIVITY ASSIGNMENT

This series groups into general categories the kinds of work staff members perform within the LEA and divides these categories (or classifications) into activity assignments describing the major activities of each position. The job classifications, which are based upon the job categories defined and used by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Bureau of the Census, and the U.S. Department of Labor, are intended to identify the major skill levels needed in an LEA and to provide structure for LEA analysis, decisionmaking, and reporting to State and Federal agencies. Each general category may be subdivided by the local administrator into as many assignments as necessary, depending upon the size of the LEA and its own internal reporting needs.

The assignments identify the staff member by what he or she does rather than by his or her job title, education, or experience. A staff member with a Doctor of Philosophy degree who is working as a programer or teaching assistant would be classified under C4008 or C4012 respectively, even though these assignments are designated as “Technical.” However, a staff member who performs as a business manager would be placed under the “Supervising/Managing/Directing” assignment (C1010) in the “Official/Administrative” classification, even if he or she has less than a high school diploma and no prior business experience.

If a staff member has more than one activity assignment, the full-time equivalency of each assignment should be recorded. (See chapter 6, page 88.)

D.—FUNCTION AND PROGRAM ASSIGNMENT

The D series provides data on the nature of the function and program or support service to which the staff member is assigned. (If a staff member is assigned to more than one function and program area, the full-time equivalency of assignment to each area should be recorded.) Function, or purpose which the staff member serves, includes activities or actions performed to accomplish the objectives of the LEA.

The four main functions of the LEA—instruction, supporting services, community services, and debt services—are divided into subfunctions. Subfunctions are divided into programs (service areas) which are further divided into subprograms (areas of responsibility). Each of the subfunctions, service areas, and areas of responsibility consist of activities which have somewhat the same general operational objectives. Furthermore, categories of activities comprising each of these areas are grouped according to the principle that the activities should be combinable, comparable, relatable, and yet mutually exclusive. The following illustration is given to clarify the logical arrangement:

FUNCTION

1000 Instruction
2000 Supporting Services

SUBFUNCTION

1100 Regular Programs
2100 Supporting Services—Pupils

SERVICE AREA

AREA OF RESPONSIBILITY

The handbook is not intended to dictate how LEA administrative functions should be arranged into an organizational structure. However, the handbook does identify and define the data elements which can be arranged into any organizational structure according to the needs and objectives of the LEA.

It should be noted that the listing of data elements in this series corresponds exactly to the function dimension in Handbook II, thus providing one of the most important data linkages in the State Educational Records and Reports series.

E.—SUBJECT MATTER AREA

The E series identifies the subject matter areas in which the staff members with "Teaching" assignments function; the series is related programmatically to the various program areas in the "Instruction" function (D1000). Only an abbreviated definition is given for each subject matter area; the complete definition in Handbook VI is referenced. The related courses and units of subject matter listed under each subject area are summaries of the major divisions named under each area in Handbook VI.

In some cases, these subject matter areas may be subdivided further—for example, an administrator may want to classify the "Foreign Languages" element (E1006) into "Classical Languages," "Modern Foreign Languages," and "Humanities." Each of these, in turn, could be broken down into specific language studies with elements such as "Literature" and "Grammar" within each.

It should be noted that the last two digits in this series correspond to the listing of subject matter areas and cocurricular activities in Handbook VI. For a complete definition of each subject matter area and for more detailed subdivisions of individual courses or types of activities under each, see that handbook.

E1001 Agriculture. "Agriculture" comprises the group of related courses or units of subject matter which are organized for carrying on learning experiences concerned with preparation for, or upgrading in, occupations requiring knowledge and skills in agricultural subjects. The functions of agricultural production, agricultural supply, agricultural mechanization, agricultural products (processing), ornamental horticulture, forestry, agricultural resources, and the services related thereto, are emphasized in the instruction designed to provide opportunities for pupils to prepare for or improve their competencies in agricultural occupations. An agricultural occupation may include one or any combination of these functions. (See H-VI, p. 153.)

Learning experiences are concerned with the knowledges, skills, appreciations, attitudes, and behavioral characteristics which should be achieved by all pupils to the limits of their capacities during the elementary and secondary school years or grades. (See H-VI, p. 238.)

Learning experiences would include education for the general elementary years or grades, the middle school level, and general secondary years or grades.

E1019 Differentialized Curriculum for Handicapped Pupils. The "Differentialized Curriculum for Handicapped Pupils" reflects an increasing awareness today of the individual needs of children. Many children with various types of handicaps cannot benefit from basic subject matter without special education. Handicapped children have learning difficulties and sensory and motor impairments which require careful study for successful adaptation of instruction.

Teachers of exceptional children integrate professional information from psychology, education, and medicine for instructional and therapeutic services. Consequently, special education as applied to each type of handicapped child requires distinctive techniques and materials which distinguish it from regular classroom instruction. (See H-VI, p. 239.)

Areas of instruction would include communication skills, interpersonal and behavioral coping skills, motor skills, perceptual skills, vocational and avocational skills, and other differentiated curriculum for handicapped pupils.

E1020 Cocurricular Activities. "Cocurricular Activities" comprises the group of school-sponsored activities, conducted under the guidance or supervision of qualified adults, designed to provide opportunities for pupils to participate, on an individual basis or in small or large groups, in school events, public events, or a combination of these, for purposes such as motivation, enjoyment, and improvement of skills. In practice, participation usually is not required and credit usually is not given. When participation is required or credit is given the activity generally is considered to be a course. (See H-VI, p. 242.)

H9000 OTHER CAREER DEVELOPMENT INFORMATION

I.—SEPARATION

Separation involves the severance of the employment relationship between the staff member and the LEA. This dimension is used to detail the conditions under which the staff member and the LEA terminate their employment relationship. (In the case of discharge, it is extremely important that the local administrator comply with State and local regulations regarding procedures and documentation.) The categories of voluntary and involuntary separation are subdivided into specific reasons for termination which may provide valuable data for personnel administration. Data on the staff member’s eligibility for reemployment are also maintained for future planning purposes.

11000 TYPE OF SEPARATION

The basic types of separation which can occur in an LEA.

11100 Voluntary Separation (Resignation). Separation resulting from a decision made solely by the staff member. This class of separation is commonly referred to as “resignation.”

11200 Involuntary Separation. Separation resulting from a decision made solely by the LEA after due process.

11300 Separation by Mutual Agreement. Separation resulting from a decision arrived at jointly by both the staff member and the LEA.

11400 Separation by Death. Separation resulting from death of a staff member.

11500 Retirement. Separation resulting from a staff member leaving the LEA in accordance with the provision of a specific program allowing or requiring a staff member to leave upon reaching a certain age, a certain number of years of service, or upon sustaining a disability.

12000 REASON FOR SEPARATION

The reason for termination of the employment relationship. In the case of voluntary separation, the reason is usually supplied by the departing staff member. The local administrator should supply the appropriate data in case of involuntary separation. Details of retirement are usually maintained by the retirement agency generally an agent of the State.

12100 Voluntary Separation. This category may be subdivided and expanded as necessary at the discretion of the local administrator. The following are a few of the many possible elements in this category.
I. SEPARATION (Continued)

I2300 Involuntary Separation. The following are the possible reasons for a staff member’s termination on an involuntary basis. Others may be added as needed.

I2310 Layoff. Separation resulting from largely economic factors which no longer require the existence of the staff member’s position.
I2311 Budgetary Reduction.
I2312 Organizational Restructuring.
I2313 Decreased Workload.
I2320 Discharge. Separation resulting from the manner in which the staff member has conducted himself. There are many possible specific causes for discharge which could come under this element; the division into subelements is limited only the the detail to which the local administrator needs these data and the ability to collect, maintain, and use them. The following are a few of the many possible elements in this category.

I2321 Not Suited for Present Position.
I2322 Commission of Serious and/or Continuing Acts Involving Misconduct, Insubordination, Negligence, Infraction of Law or Regulation, or the Like.

The degree of satisfaction with staff member’s past performance.

I3100 Eligible for Reemployment. The LEA would have no reservations about reemploying the former staff member in a position for which he is qualified.
I3200 Not Eligible for Reemployment. The LEA would not rehire the former staff member.
I3300 Eligible for Reemployment on a Conditional Basis. The LEA would rehire the former staff member provided certain conditions could be met.

I4000 DATE OF SEPARATION

The month, day, and year on which the staff member’s employment terminates.
Chapter 6
UNITS OF MEASURE

Scientific management, for many major decisions, depends on quickly calculated ratios and measures as indicators of status and/or change. The U.S. Department of Commerce has such indexes as gross national product, cost of living, and balance of payments; in the field of agriculture, indexes include crop yield, commodity futures, and livestock production. In other fields there are similar ratios and measures.

In education, a common measure is the number of pupils or students to be served. Indicators of status or need are sometimes based on pupils per teacher or group of teachers, pupils per learning space, pupils per staff member (teaching or nonteaching), and pupils per school. In this handbook, the concern is optimum staffing of an LEA or a school. The problem is to maximize the process of matching the knowledge and skills needed with those possessed by staff employed. In other words, effective staff administration includes careful, systematic assignment of teachers to pupils, teacher aides to pupils, counselors to pupils, and should result in the proper ratios of teacher aides and teaching assistants to teachers, supporting services staff to teachers, and technological devices (equipment) to staff and pupils.

In addition to suggesting some sample pupil-to-staff and staff-to-staff ratios, this chapter describes some procedures for counting staff members, assignments, and equipment, and defines full-time equivalency, staff retention rate, staff separation rate, and resource mix of staff.

A measure related to school staff is any quantitative information concerning staff of an LEA or other reporting unit (e.g., a school, an intermediate administrative unit, or a State) which can be expressed in terms of its relation to other definable units such as equipment, pupils, cost, and time. Measures involving staff can be compared when they:

- Are based on standardized information
- Apply to comparable administrative units (e.g., schools, LEA's, intermediate administrative units, or States)
- Have the same time application
- Are related to the same definable units such as pupil membership or actual salaries paid
- Are computed by the same process

Some units of measure are defined below. Some examples are presented to suggest standard techniques for making decisions in staff analysis and staff accounting.

STAFF QUANTITATIVE UNITS

Some useful quantitative measures of staff include counting staff as individuals, counting assignments of staff members, enumerating the number of full-time equivalencies of staff, and determining the average length of service and the average salary of the various types of staff.

Staff Counts

When counting staff members for reporting or analysis, each staff member is counted as 1.0 individual. In this handbook, a staff member is never counted as a fraction of 1.0 regardless of the circumstances of his or her employment or assignment.

The following are examples of some of the different ways of counting staff members (each counted as 1.0 whether full-time or part-time):

- Number of staff members employed
- Number of staff members assigned to teach
- Number of staff members assigned to any other particular activity
- Number of full-time staff members
- Number of part-time staff members.
Assignment Counts

An assignment is the activity or group of activities which a staff member is required to perform. The most common types of assignments are listed and defined in chapters 4 and 5 of this handbook. An assignment is either full time or part time (less than full time). A full-time assignment is counted as 1.0 and a part-time assignment is counted as a fraction of 1.0 (usually in tenths) to indicate its equivalency to a full-time assignment.

Full-Time Equivalency of Assignments

A staff accounting system should provide not only for classifying the services performed by each staff member, but also for recording the amount of time normally required of a staff member to perform each assignment. Both these requirements can be met when the full-time equivalencies are recorded for each assignment made to a staff member. Full-time equivalencies are essential for evaluation of staff services, factual reporting about staff members, a better understanding of educational services, and comparison of staff information and measures.

Full-time equivalency of assignment is the amount of time normally required of a staff member to perform a part-time assignment in proportion to that normally required to perform the same assignment full time. (The number 1.0 represents one full-time assignment.) Full-time equivalency is derived by dividing the amount of time required in the part-time assignment by the amount of time required in a corresponding full-time assignment. This measure of time is usually expressed as a decimal fraction to the nearest tenth.

Information about the total employed time of a staff member, regardless of assignment, is obtained through entries under G8100, "Current Service Status." In addition, this handbook recommends that entries which show full-time equivalency of assignments be made under the appropriate data elements in which the assigned activities of the staff member are classified.

The following examples are given to illustrate selected assignment classifications in terms of full-time equivalency of assignments:

- Program (Service Area). A full-time staff member is assigned duties as a teacher aide one-half of the day and as a secretary to the superintendent of schools one-half of the day. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by program (service area) is 0.5 for "Executive Administration Services" (D2320) and 0.5 for "Instruction" (D1000).

- Subprogram (Area of Responsibility). A part-time staff member, employed for half days only throughout the regular school term, is assigned duties as a cook. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by subprogram (area of responsibility) is 0.5 for "Food Preparation and Dispensing Services" (D2562).

- Job Classification. A part-time staff member fully qualified as a teacher and employed half days during the entire regular school term, is assigned duties as a kindergarten teacher. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by job classification is 0.5 under the "Technical" category of "Assistant Teaching Assignment" (C4012).

- Activity Assignment. A full-time staff member is assigned duties as principal of a school 60 percent of the time and as a teacher 40 percent of the time. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by activity assignment is 0.6 for "Principal Assignment" (C1008) and 0.4 for "Teaching Assignment" (C2005).

- Scope of Assignment. A full-time staff member is assigned duties as a music teacher in a single school 50 percent of the time and as a systemwide music consultant 50 percent of the time. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by scope of assignment is 0.5 for "Single Operational Unit" (F1140) and 0.5 for "Systemwide" (F1120).

- Subject Matter Area. A full-time staff member is assigned duties teaching English 40 percent of the time and teaching social studies 60 percent of the time. An entry is made to show that the assignment of the staff member by subject matter area is 0.4 for "English Language Arts" (E1005) and 0.6 for "Social Studies/Social Sciences" (E1015).

In addition to determining full-time equivalency of assignments in the current assignment classifications illustrated above, the same determinations can be made to show full-time equivalency of staff assignments by "Location of Current Assignment" (F2200); by grade of pupils served, using that dimension in OE Handbook V; and by medium of instruction and instructional level, using those dimensions in OE Handbook VI.

The above examples illustrate how the full-time equivalency of each assignment to a staff member can be established according to classifications of the assigned activities. A recognition of the full-time equivalency of assignments is basic to many uses of staff information in staff evaluation and personnel management. Used in combination with other staff information, it can provide an accurate assessment of staff utilization. It permits valid applications of measures involving staff, and it can reflect in necessary detail the services provided by the staff members of the LEA.

When the full-time equivalency of each assignment to a staff member is determined, activities which are incidental to the full-time or part-time assignment should be considered as part of the assignment. A staff member, for example, who has assigned activities which clearly constitute a full-time classroom teaching assignment, may have occasional duties, such as supervising playground or lunchroom, which are incidental to the full-time classroom teaching assignment. To record such incidental activities on a full-time equivalency basis, thus reducing the classroom teaching duties to a part-time assignment, would defeat the purpose of determining the full-time equivalency of staff member assignments.

If, however, a staff member has duties which clearly reduce the time to be given to an assignment, such duties should be recognized as constituting a separate assignment for which a full-time equivalency is determined. For example, a staff member who has a part-time classroom teaching assignment in order to serve as a librarian has two part-time assignments—one as a classroom teacher and one as a librarian. Each assignment should be recorded according to its equivalency of a full-time assignment.

It is possible for a staff member as 1.0 individual to perform activities which, in total, clearly constitute more than 1.0 full-time assignment. It is also possible for total assignments in terms of full-time equivalency to exceed the count of staff members. For example, a staff member may have a full-time teaching assignment and, in addition, drive a school bus after regular school hours. The staff member is still counted as 1.0 individual, but in terms of counting full-time equivalency of assignments, he may be performing activities for the LEA which total 1.5. In such a case, the staff records should indicate that the staff member has a "Teaching Assignment" with a full-time equivalency of 1.0 and a "Vehicle Operating Assignment" with a full-time equivalency of 0.5. The staff accounting system will then accurately reflect the services performed by the staff member.

Average Length of Service

For any identified group of staff members currently employed, the average length of their service as staff members in the LEA is the sum of the total number of years each has been employed (see G1220, "Number of Years Employed in LEA") divided by the number of staff members in the identified group, each counted as 1.0.

Salary

Annual Salary. An employee's annual salary is the total amount of money paid by the employer for services performed over a 12-month period. When analyzing salary data, "contract salary" and "salary paid" must be taken into consideration. "Contract salary" is the amount specified in the employee's contract for identified duties or assignments and may be the total salary paid. "Salary paid," constituting the total money paid during the year, however, may not be the same as the contract salary. When the total salary paid differs from the contract salary, the employee usually receives additional pay not specified in the contract. As an example, a staff member is employed by contract as a teacher but has an additional duty of driving a school bus. In this case, the salary paid is the contract salary plus the salary for the extra duty.

Average Annual Contract Salary. This is the amount derived by dividing the sum of the annual contract salaries of an identified group of staff members by the number of staff members in the group (using the full-time equivalency if part-time staff members are involved).

Average Annual Salary Paid. This is the amount derived by dividing the sum of the total salaries paid to staff members in an identified group by the number of staff members in the group (using the full-time equivalency if part-time staff members are involved).

STAFF RATES

Two units of measure frequently used in staff accounting are "staff retention rate" and "staff separation rate.” “Staff retention rate” is the percentage of staff members who remain employed from one period of time to the next. The “staff separation rate” is the percentage of staff members leaving an LEA or a school during a period of time.

Staff Retention Rate

This rate is determined for an identified group of staff members by dividing the number of staff members remaining for the next successive period by the number of staff members at the beginning of the period, plus any staff members added for new positions, and minus any staff members lost by job abolishment. The result is expressed as a percent. The following formula may be used:

\[ R = \frac{r}{b + a - 1} \]

Where,

- \( R \) = retention rate, expressed as a percent
- \( r \) = the number of staff members remaining for the successive period
- \( b \) = the number of staff members at the beginning of the period
- \( a \) = the number of staff members added for new positions
- \( 1 \) = the number of staff members leaving for job abolishment

The retention rate may also be calculated by subtracting the separation rate from 100. If the retention rate is 80 percent, then the separation rate is 20 percent.

Staff Separation Rate

This rate is determined for an identified group of staff members for a period of time by dividing the number of staff members replaced before the beginning of the successive period by the number in the group at the beginning of the period, plus those added because of added assignments, minus the number leaving and not being replaced. The result is expressed as a percent. The following formula may be used in calculating the rate:

\[ S = \frac{r}{b + a - 1} \]

Where,

- \( S \) = separation rate
- \( r \) = number of staff members replaced before beginning of next period
- \( b \) = number of staff members at beginning of period
- \( a \) = number of staff members added because of added assignments
- \( 1 \) = number of staff members leaving the LEA without being replaced

The separation rate may also be calculated by subtracting the retention rate from 100. If the retention rate is 80 percent, then the separation rate is 20 percent.

STAFF RATIOS

Other units of measure important in staff analysis are staff ratios. A ratio is the number of a given type of staff member in relation to another type, in relation to equipment, or in relation to pupils. A ratio can encompass any relationship involved in the teaching process. Ratios described in this section include staff-to-staff ratios, staff-to-pupils ratios, and resource mix per pupil.

Staff-to-Staff Ratios

Staff-to-staff ratios are determined by dividing the full-time equivalency of staff members in an identified group by the full-time equivalency of staff members in another group. Examples of staff-to-staff ratios are:

- “Professional-Educational” staff (C2000) to “Technical” staff (C4000) assigned to “Instruction” (D1000)
- “Professional-Educational” staff (C2000) to “Professional-Other” staff (C3000)

- “Official/Administrative” staff (C1000) other than “Board of Education” (C1005) and “Tax...
Assessing/Collecting” (C1011) to all “Professional” staff (C2000 and C3000)

- “Professional-Educational” staff (C2000) of “Supporting Services-Pupils” (D2100) and “Instructional” staff (D2200) to “Professional-Other” staff of “Supporting Services-Pupils” (D2100) and “Supporting Services-Instructional Staff” (D2200)

- “Instructional” staff (assigned to D1000) to “Audiovisual Services” staff (D2223)
- “Instructional” staff (assigned to D1000) to “Educational Television Services” staff (D2224)
- “Instructional” staff (assigned to D1000) to “Computer-Assisted Instructional Services” staff (D2226)
- “Instructional” staff (assigned to D1000) to “Improvement of Instruction Services” staff (D2210)
- “Instructional” staff (assigned to D1000) to “Planning, Research, Development, and Evaluation Services” staff (D2820)

Staff-to-Pupils Ratios

Two types of pupil units are used in establishing staff-to-pupils ratios—average daily membership (ADM), and pupils in attendance for a particular day (APD). The APD unit is used for a staff-to-pupils ratio for a particular day and the ADM unit is used for a longer period of time, usually a term or year. These ratios are determined by dividing the number of staff members in an identified group by the number of pupils served by that group, using the appropriate pupil unit. Full-time equivalency is to be used for part-time staff members.

When calculating the ADM for kindergarten and nursery pupils attending half-day sessions, it is necessary to treat the attendance as half days. The ADM is determined by dividing the aggregate half days in membership for a period by the number of half days in the period.

Listed below are some examples of staff-to-pupils ratios:

- Teacher (“Teaching Assignment,” 2005)-to-pupils ratio
- Teacher assistant (“Teaching Assistant Assignment,” C4012)-to-pupils ratio
- Teacher aide (“Teaching Aide Assignment,” C5005)-to-pupils ratio
- Instructional staff (“Teaching Assignment,” C2005; “Teaching Assistant Assignment,” C4012; “Teaching Intern Assignment,” C4013; and “Teaching Aide Assignment,” C5005)-to-pupils ratio
- Counselor (“Counseling Assignment,” C2002)-to-pupils ratio
- Principal (“Principal Assignment,” C1008)-to-pupils ratio
- Media services (“Librarian/Media Assignment,” C2003)-to-pupils ratio
- Professional educational staff (“Professional-Educational” job classification, C2000)-to-pupils ratio
- All staff-to-pupils ratio
- Professional educational staff (“Professional-Educational” job classification, C2000) per 1,000 pupils ratio
Resource Mix Per Pupil

The state of the art of instruction today is such that there is a recognized need for a variety of skills and techniques to provide for challenging and exploratory learning experiences necessary to educate self-pacing pupils. No longer can a teacher alone provide this environment appropriately. A variety of staff-member skills accompanied by the technological techniques available today make it possible for the teacher to be left to make diagnostic and evaluative decisions regarding learners. Historically, phonographs, radio, motion pictures, and television have had significant effects on the art of instruction. Furthermore, the entrance of computers and individualized instructional equipment have further enhanced the combined staff and technological competencies constituting the resource mix.

The resource mix, then, can be defined as the combined skills of a team of staff members, with varying levels of skills, and technologies of equipment and supplies necessary to provide the learning environment required to accomplish the individual objectives of the learners involved. The average resource mix per pupil is derived by determining the sum of the cost of the staff members involved and the cost of the equipment and supplies used and dividing this sum by the number of pupils involved. The following formula may be used:

R = \frac{x + y + z + a + b + \ldots + n}{p}
\]

Where,
- \( R \) = resource mix
- \( x \) = annual cost of teacher(s)
- \( y \) = annual cost of teaching assistant(s)
- \( z \) = annual cost of teaching aide(s)
- \( a \) = annual cost of a particular type of equipment
- \( b \) = annual cost of another particular type of equipment
- \( n \) = annual cost of all other types of equipment
- \( p \) = number of pupils involved

The effectiveness of a resource mix is determined by dividing the increase in pupil achievement (usually quantified in average test scores) by the total cost per pupil (resource mix), and dividing the result by the total number of weeks. The effectiveness ratio formula is:

\]

Where,
- \( CR \) = cost effectiveness ratio
- \( S \) = average increase in scores
- \( R \) = resource mix cost
- \( T \) = time (number of weeks involved)

Appendix B

EXAMPLES OF CRITERIA FOR EVALUATION OF STAFF MEMBERS’ JOB PERFORMANCE

EXAMPLE 1

Performance Level 1

Performance is excellent. Results attained are of major importance to the achievement of the system’s goals and objectives. Staff member makes highly productive use of human, physical, and financial resources and time. Skill in managing or influencing the work of others is most effective. Accomplishments show a superior degree of creativity, initiative, and resourcefulness. Methods used indicate a high level of professional competence.

Performance Level 2

Performance is very acceptable. Results attained are of considerable importance to the achievement of the system’s goals and objectives. Staff member makes clearly productive use of human, physical, and financial resources and time. Skill in managing or influencing the work of others is generally effective. Accomplishments show a better than normal degree of creativity, initiative, and resourcefulness. Methods used indicate an above average level of professional competence.

Performance Level 3

Performance is satisfactory. Results attained are necessary to the achievement of the system’s goals and objectives. Staff member makes moderately productive use of available human, physical, and financial resources and time. Skill in managing or influencing the work of others is of variable effectiveness. Accomplishments show a normal degree of creativity, initiative, and resourcefulness. Methods used indicate an average level of professional competence.

Performance Level 4

Performance is marginal. Results attained have not contributed significantly to the achievement of the system’s objectives. Staff member makes less than average use of available human, physical, and financial resources and time. Ability and skill in managing or influencing the work of others lack effectiveness. Accomplishments show a limited degree of creativity, initiative, and resourcefulness. Methods used indicate a below average level of professional competence.

Performance Level 5

Overall performance is unsatisfactory.

EXAMPLE 2

For each of the characteristics listed below, the staff member could be rated as “outstanding,” “very high,” “above normal,” “normal,” “below normal,” “very low,” “unsatisfactory,” or “not applicable.”

A. Performance Traits

1. Quantity—Volume, speed, output.
2. Quality—Accuracy, thoroughness, effectiveness.
3. Knowledge of Position—Extent of information and understanding possessed by staff member in his particular field.
4. Initiative—Extent to which staff member is a “self-starter” in attaining work objectives.
5. Adaptability—Ability to learn new duties and adjust to new situations.

B. Personal Traits

1. Dependability—Extent to which staff member can be depended upon to report on time, stay on job, carry out instructions.

2. Attitude—Behavior regarding total work situation, including interest, enthusiasm, cooperation given others, tactfulness, loyalty, ability to get along with coworkers and superiors.

3. Personal Effectiveness—Sustained effort, assumption of responsibility, telephone manner, ability to communicate.

4. Personal Appearance—Grooming and personal cleanliness, judgment and taste in clothing (if applicable).

C. Overall Rating of Staff Member in Present Level of Responsibility

D. Comments and Observations

1. Strong Points

2. Weak Points

EXAMPLE 3

In some LEA's, the tasks specified in staff members' assignments are expanded by establishing goals and objectives to be fulfilled. These objectives are formulated in measurable terms. That is, they show specific activities to be done or specific types of behavior or knowledge to be demonstrated by pupils, in designated time frames. Measurable objectives should be mutually developed by the supervisor and the person being supervised. Pupils can be involved in developing objectives for the instructional staff. These objectives become the bases on which performance is evaluated. The supervisor and the staff member agree at the end of the designated period on the extent to which the objectives have been fulfilled. This extent is recorded. Such performance ratings would bear the signatures of the staff member and the supervisor.

from the allocation of certain resources toward the achievement of alternate or competing objectives. (IIR)

Day in Session. A day on which the school is open and the pupils are under the guidance and direction of teachers in the teaching process. On some days the school plant itself may be closed and the student body as a whole engaged in school activities outside the school plant under the guidance and direction of teachers. Such days should be considered as days in session. Days on which school is closed for such reasons as holidays, teachers' institutes, and inclement weather should not be considered as days in session. (VII)

Day of Attendance. A day of attendance is one in which a pupil is present for the full day under the guidance and direction of a teacher while school is in session. When a pupil is present for only part of the day, it should be considered as a partial day of attendance in the same proportion that his time present at school bears to the total length of the school day. If overcrowded conditions make it necessary to hold two separate sessions with a different group of pupils in each session, a pupil attending for all of either session should be considered as having attended for the full day. An excused absence during examination periods or because of sickness, or for any other reason, should not be counted as a day of attendance. See also Day in Session. (VII)

Degree. A title conferred by a college or university as official recognition for the completion of a program of studies or for other attainment. (VII)

Employee Benefits. Compensation, in addition to regular salary, provided to an employee. This may include such benefits as health insurance, life insurance, annual leave, sick leave, retirement, and social security. (IIR)

Enrichment Program. Supplementary instructional experiences provided pupils according to their special needs, abilities, and interest. For preschool or preprimary culturally deprived children, this refers to experiences designed to aid in their transition from home to a school environment; emphasis is on language development in preparation for reading instruction; and, frequently, such programs are supplemented by counseling with parents and with home visits by school staff members. For other pupils, such as the gifted, talented, or college bound, this term refers to special instructional experiences provided in addition to instruction generally provided most pupils. (VI)

Equipment. Any instrument, machine, apparatus, or set of articles which (a) retains its original shape and appearance with use and (b) is nonexpendable; i.e., if the article is damaged or some of its parts are lost or worn out, it is usually more feasible to repair it than to replace it with an entirely new unit. (VII)

Evaluation. The process of ascertaining or judging the value or amount of an action or an outcome by careful appraisal of previously specified data in light of the particular situation and the goals and objectives previously established. (VII)

Exceptional Children. Children who, because of certain atypical characteristics, have been identified by professionally qualified personnel as requiring special educational planning and services, whether or not such services are available. In general, the term "exceptional children" considers exceptionality on the basis of (a) physical handicap, (b) emotional and/or social handicap, and (e) measurable exceptionality in mental ability; i.e., mentally gifted and mentally retarded. Some exceptional children have more than one type of exceptionality. (VI)

The person may or may not be certificated but has completed at least 2 years of formal education preparatory for teaching or the equivalent in experience or training.

Teaching Intern. A person who instructs students without having fulfilled all the requirements for a professional in the teaching field. This person usually has a professional level of competence in a field other than education and is allowed to teach while obtaining the necessary knowledge and skills in education and/or educational psychology.

The level of skill is attained through education and training usually including, at a minimum, the attainment of an associate degree (or its equivalent obtained through special study and/or experience).

Technical Staff Member. A staff member who possesses the knowledge and skills of a technician (technical level competencies) and performs activities for the LEA which require this level of expertise for satisfactory completion.

Technical Education. That body of knowledge organized in a planned sequence of classroom and laboratory experiences, usually at the postsecondary level, designed to prepare pupils for a cluster of job opportunities in a specialized field of technology. The program of instruction normally includes the study of the underlying sciences and supporting mathematics inherent in a technology, as well as the methods, skills, materials, and processes used and the services performed. Technical education prepares the student for the occupational area between the skilled crafts and the professions. (VIM)

Unit of Measure. A combination of statistical elements in education usually expressed in ratios, such as pupils per teacher, square feet per pupil, cost per pupil, cost effectiveness ratio.

Ungraded School. A school which has no grade designations or grade level standards. In such a school pupils are reclassified frequently according to individual progress. Aspects of subject matter taught are designed for the various abilities of individual pupils. Fre-research by pupils as well as for permissive self-selection of problems and materials. Achievement standards vary with the rate of learning for different pupils and pupil advancement can occur at any time.

(VR)

Unit of Instruction. A major subdivision of instruction within a course or within an aspect of subject-matter content provided for a group of pupils such as a self-contained class. Generally composed of several training in one or more skilled or semiskilled trades or occupations. Such a school may or may not receive Federal aid. Departments of other types of high economics, industrial arts, and other applied art courses would not be considered as separately organized vocational high schools. (II)

Vocational and/or Technical School. A school which is the taxing authority. (IIR)

Withholding Taxes. See Withholding.

Work Order. A written order authorizing and directing the performance of a certain task, issued to the person who is to direct the work. Among the types of informa-

This handbook has been developed through a cooperative process. The U.S. Office of Education, through a contract with a management consultant and accounting firm, has consulted with Federal, State, and local education managers and representatives of the educational community throughout the Nation in producing a staff handbook which will assist program managers in making day-to-day and long-range decisions. The first stage of preparation consisted of researching the literature on staff manuals and interviewing personnel in the Office of Education and other Federal agencies regarding information and data elements needed in making decisions about staff members.

Preliminary information and data elements were taken for review and counsel to State and local education managers and officials in conferences in several States. Conferences were held in State education agency offices with certification, accreditation, and systems officers, and with invited LEA superintendents and personnel administrators. LEA conferences were held with personnel administrators, systems managers, and school administrators. In each setting, the data elements in existence in each agency and those derived from preliminary research efforts were analyzed.

A more detailed analysis followed to review the results of these conferences in terms of a possible structure to meet the needs expressed without developing a specific data subsystem. This was in keeping with the objective of categorizing data elements for system building without specifically designating a system. Special emphasis was given to linkages to the other OE handbooks and their related subsystems.

A National Review Committee was created, composed of members designated by the executive secretaries of 12 national associations, listed in Appendix E, to represent their respective groups. (The associations had been chosen by the Office of Education to represent various segments of the educational community.) The first meeting was held on December 14, 1971 to review the purposes, philosophies, and structure of the handbook and to make recommendations for improvement. The basic structure, the general concept, and the proposed outline of the new handbook were approved at that meeting.

After changes and revisions were made, a substantially complete first draft was submitted to this same committee on March 22-23, 1972. During this meeting, the draft was reviewed page by page for any suggestions and improvements to the manual that the members might want to make by changing, adding, or deleting. A second draft was the result of this National Review Committee meeting.

The next step in the development of the handbook was a series of two-day conferences held in May and June 1972 in the 10 U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare regions. The conference selected to attend consisted of members of the 12 organizations which participated in the earlier stages of the handbook's revision. Each organization selected a delegate from each State. The National Review Committee members were also invited.

The regional conferences were conducted in Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco, Seattle, New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Dallas, and Atlanta, in this order.
third draft of the handbook resulted from the suggestions and changes made at these regional meetings. A third meeting of the National Review Committee was held on September 27-28, 1972, to review carefully all details of the third draft of the handbook.

Based upon this meeting of the National Review Committee, a fourth and final draft was prepared, incorporating all agreed-upon changes and improvements. This fourth draft, approved by the project monitor, was delivered to the Educational Data Standards Ranch, U.S. Office of Education, in December 1972.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The research and development for this handbook were carried out under contract number OEC-0-71-4731 by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. The project was directed by J. A. Perkins, Jr., assisted by the following consultants: E. Bruce Fischer, Robert D. Hoffman (project manager), Gail Gibson Hunt, and Thomas E. Richards. Four special outside consultants also assisted the contractor: Ernest W. Cabe, Assistant Superintendent, Austin Independent School District, Austin, Texas; Dr. James F. Jeffrey, Assistant Superintendent, Austin Independent School District, Austin, Texas; Dr. James E. Mitchell, Associate State Superintendent for Planning and Management Information, Des Moines, Iowa; and Dr. Robert E. Wilson, Education Administration, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio.

The development and acceptance of this handbook would have been much more difficult without the professional assistance of many people throughout the Nation in positions related to staff administration. Also received with gratitude was the assistance of the executive secretaries of the 12 national associations in selecting representatives of their associations for the National Review Committee and for the regional conferences. Participants of each regional conference are listed under the organizations they represented, with conferences identified by designations placed after the participants' names according to the following legend:

● Number 1 through 10 in parentheses designate which regional conference was attended; and

● NRC in parentheses designates the National Review Committee.

The conferences are numbered as follows:

1. Boston, Massachusetts

4. Atlanta, Georgia
5. Chicago, Illinois
6. Dallas, Texas
7. Kansas City, Missouri
