The Rural Manpower Service's objective is to provide the State's rural people "equity of access" to all programs administered by the North Dakota Employment Security Bureau. It provides services to agriculture, business, government, and workers in meeting their employment and manpower needs. Functional supervision and direction to the program are provided by the State Chief of Rural Manpower Services. Each local office is assigned at least one person to perform rural outreach services and assure that rural applicants and employers receive "equity of access" to local office services. This 1973 annual report gives information on the Rural Manpower Service's accomplishments during the year and some of its future plans. Topics covered are: economic developments, employment and unemployment trends, services to rural people, public relations and community development activities, and youth employment in sugar beets and potatoes. Tabular data are given for youth employment and earnings in sugar beets, farm placement operations, composition of interstate farm migrant groups, and interstate seasonal agricultural clearance activities. A listing of the Volunteer Rural Manpower representatives by office and copies of the "Farm Labor and Rural Manpower Bulletin" are also given. (NQ)

NORTH DAKOTA EMPLOYMENT SECURITY BUREAU

RURAL MANPOWER REPORT

The objective of the Rural Manpower Service is to provide "equity of access" to all programs administered by the North Dakota Employment Security Bureau to rural people wherever they may be located in North Dakota. This includes services to agriculture, business, government, and workers in meeting their employment and manpower needs.

We feel we have made significant advances in realization of this goal during 1973. This report will provide you with information on what has been accomplished and some of the plans for the future.

On behalf of our local offices, and particularly the Rural Outreach Staff, we extend our sincere thanks and acknowledgment of assistance to county and city officials, social agencies, agricultural agencies, law enforcement officials, school officials, farm groups, the Press, Radio and Television stations, and in particular, to the network of Volunteer Rural Manpower Representatives and Job Information Center Volunteers who assisted us in extending our services to rural areas.

We are looking forward to working with them again in 1974.
No basic changes in the organization of the program were made during the year. The State Chief of Rural Manpower Services provided functional supervision and direction to the program and each local office was assigned at least one individual either on a full-time or part-time basis to perform rural outreach services and assure that rural applicants and employers received "equity of access" to local office services.

Because there is a need for rural outreach staff and other individuals working in rural areas to have a good comprehensive knowledge of all agency programs available, training has been provided at the local office level. This provides an opportunity for each program supervisor to conduct training to outreach staff and offer day to day guidance, as necessary.

Rural outreach staff have participated in statewide formal training sessions in Job Corps recruitment.

During 1973 a Rural Manpower Study Committee was established and made the following recommendations to the Agency's Executive Director:

1. Increase coordination between agency divisions to improve the image of the Employment Security Bureau as THE MANPOWER AGENCY in rural North Dakota.

2. Create a network of 66 Job Information Centers in communities selected at the local office level.

3. Create a network of 23 Job Opportunity Centers to serve as mini-placement offices.

4. Centralize major management functions to the regional level to increase production time at the smaller rural offices.

5. Develop a rural Public Relations Program.

6. Establish a Rural Manpower Advisory Committee.

7. Install reporting procedures for activities performed by rural volunteers.

8. Conduct Management Analysis studies in selected areas.

9. Develop self-application or self-order forms for use by rural applicants and employers.
10. Increase distribution of Job Bank Index to rural areas.

11. Establish a statewide, toll-free telephone number for rural applicants and employers to make direct contact with Job Bank.

12. Prepare a Handbook of Services and Programs offered by the Employment Security Bureau for staff use, particularly when working in rural areas.

Our planning in the area of services to migrants and minorities encompassed carrying out the directives of the Secretary of Labor’s 13 Point Program. Services to all farm employers and workers were integrated at the local level into the total placement function. Procedures were established to handle worker complaints and all staff was advised to provide a full-range of agency services to all applicants including complete job classification based on experience, training and applicant potential.

Local office staff was informed on laws relating to non-discrimination, civil rights, and wage and hour laws and instructed to be alert to any violations.

The Governor’s Committee on Migratory Farm Labor took initial steps to develop a sound and workable Housing Standards Code for migrants with the aid of the North Dakota State Health Department and plan to put it in effect for the 1974 season. Implementation of these plans during 1973 was accomplished to the extent that staffing and budget limitations permitted.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENTS

During 1973, a considerable number of developments have taken place which will affect rural communities and individuals in the area of employment opportunities. Six of the eight regions established on the State level have now moved to a fully staffed regional planning and implementation organization under the Rural Area Development Program with a full-time Regional Planner. This is expected to have an impact on rural employment opportunities as well as improving the ecological and environmental quality of life in rural communities.

Although the Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Lines Coal Gasification Project has applied for sufficient water to support four gasification plants in North Dakota, no decision on approval of water rights has been made at this time. The State Water Commission has received recommendations to approve 68,000 acre-feet of water annually which is sufficient for four plants to be allocated on a one-plant at a time basis.

The State Water Commission has still to act on this recommendation. Should gasification plants be approved, this would increase employment considerably in some of our most rural counties in Western North Dakota. It is estimated that each plant when completed would increase direct employment by about 1,051 persons with a spin-off of about 900 other jobs per plant. Whatever the outcome of current negotiations may be, no major activity or employment is expected to develop within 1974.

Long range developments are taking place in rural North Dakota and the demand for skilled workmen, in particular, is expected to exceed supply and require new planning in vocational training.

In the agricultural segment, two new sugar beet processing plants will start operating in the fall of 1974, with a full-time staff of about 70 employees in each plant and 150 or more seasonal employees during the winter months. These plants are farmer cooperatives with new beet acreage in North Dakota and Minnesota totaling over 100,000 acres of which about 65,000 acres will be in North Dakota.

This is expected to increase the number of migrant workers in North Dakota by about 1,300 to 1,400 workers. Recruitment will be handled by the cooperatives through a contract with American Crystal Sugar Company staff. This, however, provides for new opportunities for recruitment and placement of youth crews in sugar beets, and should result in employment of another 500 to 700 youth during June and July.

EMPLOYMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT TRENDS

Rural Non-agricultural Employment Trends

Rural non-agricultural employment increased by 1,290 (1.8%) from 1972 to 1973. The Construction and Government industries decreased during the year. Construction declined due to a reduction of activity on the missile sites in the northeastern part of the State as work neared completion. Government decreased in the rural segment, however, this decrease was offset by an increase in urban government as a result of centralization of services in the urban areas.

All other industries showed increases in varying amounts. The Mining, Finance, Insurance and Real Estate and Service industries showed slight gains, whereas, significant gains occurred in the Manufacturing, Transportation, Communications and Public Utilities, and Trade industries.

Manufacturing increased due to expansion of firms manufacturing farm equipment. The Transportation, Communications and Public Utilities industries increased due to expansion in the Public Utilities segment as a result of additions in the production of electrical power.
EMPLOYMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT TRENDS

Unemployment Trends

The unemployment rate for the total workforce in North Dakota was 4.6% in 1972 and 4.8% in 1973. Total unemployment increased by .2%. In view of this slight increase in statewide unemployment and considering the increases in rural non-agricultural employment over the year, it would indicate that there have not been any significant changes in the rate of unemployment in rural areas as compared to urban areas.

SERVICES TO RURAL PEOPLE

Although the rural population in North Dakota comprises about 55.7% of the total population, only 29.5% of the Wage and Salary employment is in the rural counties. During 1973 approximately 32% of our applicant intake or about 19,500 was from the rural segment of our population and 48% of applicants placed on job training came from the rural areas. Individuals placed on jobs from the rural population comprised about 24% of our yearly total.

In addition to providing regularly scheduled outreach services to rural areas in 1973, we established 29 new Job Information Centers and had 199 Volunteer Rural Manpower Representatives working with us to provide services to rural applicants and employers. During the year, the VRMR’s placed 2,651 workers on jobs in general farming and small grain and 1,415 custom combine contractors in the small grain harvest. An additional 232 workers were placed in the potato harvest and harvesting of other specialty row crops.

Rural applicants receiving services included approximately 1,300 counseled, 1,700 tested, 400 placed in training and over 4,600 placed on jobs with total job placements of about 6,000.

Other rural programs included continuation of our Hitch Hike Project in cooperation with the North Dakota Cooperative Extension Service in Steele and Traill Counties. Under this program since its inception in October of 1972 and through July 31, 1973, 314 job placements have been made plus 180 individuals placed in training programs.

Serving reservation Indians is also part of the rural services program. Mainly through our reservation offices we work with from 2,000 to 2,200 Indian applicants a year and make about 800 job placements plus entering around 250 in various training programs. At the present time, the Northrup Corporation employs about 60 reservation Indians at New Town and the Brunswick Corporation is expected to employ from 200 to 250 workers at Fort Totten in 1974.
RURAL MANPOWER PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES FOR FARM WORKERS

Services to Farm Workers

Services to farmers and farm workers in the small grain areas was accomplished primarily through the use of volunteers (VRMR's) through distribution of daily and weekly bulletins (See samples of Farm Labor and Rural Manpower Bulletins), daily radio programs, and in some cases, registration of rural youth at school settings. In addition to the 2,883 worker placements and 1,415 custom operators placed by volunteers in 1973, the local offices made about 3,300 job placements in agriculture.

Our participation in migrant programs was primarily supportive and through active participation in the Governor's Committee on Migratory Farm Labor. We were not involved in recruitment or placement of migrants in beet work but did make some contracts in the field to determine if their employment needs were being met. The migrants that did contact our local offices were offered a full-range of Employment Services, registered for work, and referred and placed on local agricultural and non-agricultural jobs.

Only one order for interstate migrant workers was received from another State and three openings were filled.

Involvement with migrant workers will increase in 1974, with an additional 400 to 500 migrant families expected in the State during the June-July period. Our involvement and cooperation with other agencies will depend largely on staff and fund availability.

Sugar Beets and Potatoes

These are the principal labor using row crops with sugar beets using most of the migrant labor. Acreage in sugar beets is expected to increase by about 65,000 acres in 1974, with most of the increase being centered in Richland and Trail Counties. This is expected to bring in about 1,500 more migrant workers in family groups or about 400 to 500 families. Total migrant workers in 1974 are expected to approach 6,000. About 2,500 migrants were involved in 1973, in beet lifting and the potato harvest in September and October.

For the Youth in Sugar Beet Program, see Tables included in this report. During the 1974 season we expect to recruit and place an additional 500 to 600 youth in sugar beets and other row crop activities. No problems are foreseen in placement of youth who want to work in beets in the Red River Valley area as the demand in most areas is expected to exceed supply. Youth 14 years of age and over are eligible for such employment.
PUBLIC RELATIONS AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES

Local office rural manpower staff and local office managers have worked closely throughout the year with Rural Conservation and Development (RC&D) Committees and other planning groups on the county and regional level to promote projects and activities designed to increase rural employment.

Rural outreach staff has worked closely with county and city officials, Social Service agencies, agricultural agencies, law enforcement officials, school officials, rural volunteers, and farm groups, to bring a full-range of Employment Services to the rural population. This has also included use of daily radio programs, speeches before organizations and clubs, newspaper stories, and participation in various group meetings.

In the Hitch Hike special project area, special studies have been made, local planning and action groups organized, and local participation and planning developed primarily as input through the County Cooperative Extension representative on the project.

Rural area employers who employ workers are contacted and offered the services of the agency which includes placement and on-the-job training services. Job Information Centers are an extension of local office Employment Services as well as Public Relations outlets to the communities they serve.

OUTLOOK FOR 1974

In agriculture we can expect an increase in planted acreages in small grains as well as row crops. Shortages can be expected in new machinery, parts, fuel, fertilizers, chemicals and experienced farm labor.

Farm labor should be sufficient for sugar beet thinning and in the beet and potato harvest as an increased number of migrants are expected providing transportation does not become a problem.

In the small grain and general farming areas, any increase in available workers will result from the farming community taking actions which will provide more favorable compensation and fringe benefits to workers, more stability and tenure in employment, and training for young workers who are interested in developing skills in agricultural fields.

Within funding limitations, this Agency plans to establish additional Job Information Centers on the basis of at least one in each rural county, increase Public Relations and informational programs, and lend support and cooperative effort to all plans and projects designed to improve and expand rural employment.

We will also continue to support and cooperate with all rural projects designed to find jobs for local applicants such as the Heart of America Human Service Center at Rugby.
