Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs
DEPARTMENT OF STATE
INTRODUCTION

This is the sixth edition of the "Directory of Contacts", a listing of the private and governmental agencies active in the conduct of international exchange-of-persons programs.

We conducted a recent survey in order to learn how we could better serve our subscribers. It was suggested that we include information on the activities and interests of the organizations appearing in the Directory. You will find this idea has been incorporated in sections 3 and 4 (Inter-Governmental Agencies and Private Agencies and Organizations). The information included in the Directory was provided by the organizations.

We are interested in your response to this innovation and welcome your frank comments. This information should be sent to Mrs. Anna L. Pringle, CU/OPP, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520.

Richard L. Roth
Director of Policy and Plans

AFRICAN-AMERICAN INSTITUTE—Continued

The African-American Institute, the major American private organization concerned exclusively with Africa, was founded in 1953 to help further African development, to foster African-American understanding and to help inform Americans about Africa. Most development work has consisted of high-level manpower training programs under which thousands of Africans have received university-level training in the U.S. New thrusts have included research in nonformal education and rural development. Information activities include publication of a bi-monthly magazine, African Report, services targeted to general and educational audiences, and exhibits of African art at AAI’s New York City headquarters. Services to educators include in-service teacher training and production and evaluation of materials. AAI also offers low-cost charter flights to Africa.

Jorge Perez Ponce, Director, International Project ........................................... (202) 293-7050

The AACJC's Office of International Programs (OIP) represents the international interests of the Association's member colleges, approximately 1,000. It promotes, assists and coordinates programs of exchange, educational cooperation and technical assistance with foreign institutions and/or governments. It assists also in defining the international implications of AACJC's mission to provide national leadership in community-based performance-oriented post secondary education. The OIP is the central contact and contract point through which educators and educational institutions abroad may gain access to U.S. community, junior and technical colleges. It is also the organization through which AACJC's member institutions may gain information and/or access to their foreign counterparts.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF MUSEUMS
2233 Wisc. sin Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007

Kyran M. McGrath, Director ................................................................. (202) 338-5300

The AAM represents the museum profession on a national level. Founded in 1906, the AAM is a nonprofit, service organization charged with the responsibility of representing museums of art, history and science, museum professionals and individuals and institutions interested in museums. Its purpose is to promote the goals of museums as cultural, educational and scientific centers in the U.S. and Canada and to foster continued improvement of the museum profession. Its publications include Museum News Magazine, AAM Bulletin, and the 1975 Official Museum Directory. The AAM also offers a Professional Placement Service, educational seminars, an accreditation program, an international program, and representation on the Federal level.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF STATE COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES
One Dupont Circle, N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20036

Allan W. Ostar, Executive Director ................................................................. (202) 293-7070
The American Association of State Colleges and Universities, through its Office of International Programs, assists its 313 member institutions in the introduction and further development of the intercultural and international emphases into their educational programs. Student contact with intercultural and international components is attempted on three basic levels: student life, student interaction with faculty, and the broad curriculum.

The Association sponsors five international study programs abroad: in Italy, Canada, Mexico, India, and Brazil. The purpose is to give undergraduate students in AASCU institutions the opportunity to live and learn abroad at a cost not substantially more than the residence campus. The office also publishes a catalog of programs offered by individual member institutions open to students at all AASCU campuses.

The Association works to develop faculty exchanges, as well as providing college and university presidents and other administrators with the opportunity of developing unique relationships with universities abroad which have similar programmatic interests.

The Association encourages the development of an international/intercultural component in curricula whether the program be economics, sociology, American history or education. The Association cooperates with a consortia of predominantly black institutions which provides opportunities for teachers to study in Africa and to develop curricula for elementary and secondary education departments.

The International Education Project (IEP) of the American Council on Education was established in 1973 with a three-year grant from the Ford Foundation. The IEP mandate involves two objectives: to serve as an interface to improve communication between Government and academe vis-a-vis international education; and to broaden the diversity, base, and resources for international education. This mandate includes reconceptualizing what is meant by "international education"; advocating a strengthened international education dimension, both programmatically and fiscally; advising legislative and executive branch personnel on relevant policy matters; and providing an information service which includes a monthly newsletter, International Interaction, Federal agency summaries, and occasional papers.

AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION

211 East Chicago Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60611

Marian F. Driscoll, Secretary, Council on International Relations (312) 944-6730

Washington Office:
1101 17th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Hal M. Christensen, Director (202) 833-3036

The American Dental Association is the national voluntary organization for the dental profession in the United States. Its membership exceeds 122,000, including some 600 dentists in other countries. Its objectives abroad, as in the U.S., are to encourage the improvement of the health of the public and to promote the art and science of dentistry. These objectives are attained through the continuing collection and dissemination of information by the Association's Council on International Relations, which serves as a clearinghouse of information and as a coordinating agency; through participation in international scientific meetings; and through cooperation with other appropriate national and international organizations and government agencies.

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE INTERNATIONAL SCHOLARSHIPS

313 East 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017

Stephen H. Rhinesmith, President (212) 689-1780
William P. Orrick, Vice President (212) 689-1780
Eric F. L. Backer, Treasurer (212) 689-1780
Alice Gerlach, Director, U.S. Operations (212) 689-1780
Robert Applewhite, Secretary (212) 689-1780
Curtis Weeden, Director, Communications and Development (212) 689-1780
Jennifer Froistad, Director, International Programs (212) 689-1780

American Field Service (AFS) International Scholarships bring students from 60 nations to the United States for a year and enable American students to travel to 50 countries abroad. Students live with families, usually attend school and take part in community activities. Annually, approximately 5,000 students take part in AFS. Scholarship money—contributions received at the national and local levels—is provided to students who demonstrate need. The AFS is now in its 28th year. AFS objectives include leadership development, stimulating international awareness and strengthening community concerns for education.
AFME is a private, non-profit organization, founded in 1951 and dedicated to furthering understanding between the peoples of the Middle East/North Africa and the United States through education and information programs. Its five field offices and headquarters provide counseling and placement services for Middle East/North African students. Under contracts it administers U.S. study programs for area nationals sponsored by governments, institutions and companies. It also offers programming of area visitors to the U.S. and U.S. visitors to the area. AFME distributes low-cost educational materials on the Middle East/North Africa to U.S. students, teachers, schools, libraries, and it publishes the quarterly AFME Report, which focuses on educational development in the Middle East/North Africa.

The American Friends Service Committee operates the multi-purpose Washington Public Affairs Program. The Program conducts off-the-record seminars for executives of the U.S. Government and foreign embassy officials to discuss foreign and domestic policy problems. It also provides AFSC staff reports on programs at home and abroad. Davis House, Washington office of the American Friends Service Committee, provides guest accommodations for international visitors in Washington for study purposes or en route to other parts of the United States.

American Institute for Foreign Study specializes in encouraging the understanding of foreign countries through educational programs abroad for students and teachers. Its objectives are: to give its students the broadest possible personal contact with the culture and people of the countries which they are visiting; to increase significantly the foreign language fluency of students so that they will benefit maximally from their experience abroad; and to develop the maturity and potential of students by giving them an opportunity for responsibility and self-discipline. AIFS aims to bring its students in touch with the culture of foreign countries in as many different ways as possible: by studying the history, art, architecture, music, customs, contemporary problems and sports of the country being visited through the medium of classroom lectures given by indigenous professors; by visiting places of historical interest, museums, art galleries, theaters, sports contests, and markets; and by person-to-person contact with the citizens of the host country.
The American Language Institute provides instruction in English as a second language to overseas students whose English is not adequate to meet the needs of their academic or technical-training programs in the United States. Classes are held continuously throughout the year without reference to the regular University calendar, and students continue their intensive English program (5 hours daily) until they have attained the requisite level of proficiency. The ALI operates under contract with the Agency for International Development and the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the Department of State. The majority of its students accordingly are participants in the educational exchange or technical training programs sponsored by these agencies.

The American Library Association's purpose is to promote library service of excellent quality, freely available to all, by supporting: improvement of the services of state, public school, and academic libraries, and special libraries serving government, the armed services, commerce and industry, hospitals and other institutions; coordination of all library resources for research; establishment of library services for special groups, such as the aging, disadvantaged youth, and others; effective use of libraries in the education of adults, young people and children; improvement of professional library standards through better professional education, working conditions, salaries and certification; stimulation of the production and distribution of books and other library materials to meet the needs of the people; and freedom of the individual to have access to any books and other materials he chooses to use without fear of censorship.

American Management Associations, in cooperation with The Experiment in International Living and the University of Massachusetts, offers young executives from all over the world an opportunity to learn about the latest in American management theories and techniques. The programs are supported by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the Department of State.

The programs are open to men and women aged about 25 to 40, who have had at least two years' experience. They include a period of study at the University of Massachusetts; a homestay during which groups of participants will visit business firms and plants; and a final week, normally in New York, for meetings with senior American business executives in various fields. After the conclusion of the programs, participants are eligible to remain in the United States for a short time for travel or personal business, or for up to an additional 18 months for a period of on-the-job training with an American firm.

AMERICAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION
1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Evron M. Kirkpatrick, Executive Director ......................... (202) 483-2512

The American Political Science Association is the major professional organization in the United States for those devoted to the study of political systems. Supported by more than 16,000 individual and institutional members and by grants from a growing number of foundations, the Association provides a variety of services to members, encourages research, conducts educational programs and generally brings together theory and practice in the broad fields of government, politics and public affairs. Since its founding in 1903, the Association has organized research in numerous undertakings involving broader participation than that of the individual scholar. On several occasions it has prepared reports on public issues at the request of the President of the United States. In the field of individual research, the Association annually recognizes—through cash awards and citations—outstanding books and theses in the field of political science.

The Association of Research Libraries is an organization of 93 of the major research libraries in the United States and Canada. Members include the larger university libraries, The National Agricultural Library, the National Library of Medicine, the Library of Congress, and a number of public and special libraries with substantial research collections. The association’s primary function is the identification and solution of the fundamental problems of the large research libraries, to the end that they may effectively serve the needs of the research community generally. The stated mission of the association is "to strengthen and extend the capacity of its member libraries to provide the recorded information needed, both now and in the future, by the research community."
The Brookings Institution is a private non-profit organization devoted to research, education, and publication in economics, government, foreign policy, and the social sciences generally. Its principal purpose is to bring knowledge to bear on the current and emerging public policy problems facing the American people. In its research, Brookings functions as an independent analyst and critic, committed to publishing its findings for the information of the public. In its conferences and other activities, it serves as a bridge between scholarship and public policy, bringing new knowledge to the attention of decision-makers and affording scholars a better insight into policy issues. Its activities are carried out through three research programs (Economic Studies, Governmental Studies, Foreign Policy Studies), a Social Science Computation Center, an Advanced Study Program and a Publications Program.

BCIU was conceived during the Eisenhower Administration and launched two of its most widely known ongoing programs in the fall of 1959. The BCIU Institute in Washington, D.C. has provided intensive brief courses for several thousand executives, their wives and children with emphasis on intercultural disciplines, comparative economic and social patterns and verbal/non-verbal communications. It is recognized as business' own "foreign service institute" and significantly contributes to the success of its graduates in their international responsibilities. A second program has brought about many thousands of consultations between Foreign Service Officers and foreign statesmen with top management in major U.S. cities, which have led to more effective use of embassies and much improved relations between business and government. BCIU is private, non-profit and independent, supported by eighty U.S. companies.

F. Richard Hsu, President ....................................................... (212) 744-181
Kuo-yen Ai, Program Director .................................................. (212) 744-8181
Betty Schenck, Director of Public Relations ............................ (212) 744-8181

China Institute in America is an educational and cultural organization founded in 1926 for the dual purpose of educating Americans in Chinese history, language and culture, and helping Chinese to adjust to American ways. A small art gallery holds exhibitions of classical Chinese art. A Chinese American Research and Action Program is investigating the problems of Chinese Americans in New York and other cities with the objective of serving as a consultation center for leaders in these communities. A series of films illustrating the history of Chinese civilization through art is in preparation for schools and television. There is an active youth program.
The College Entrance Examination Board co-sponsors, with the Graduate Record Examination Board, the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). The College Board's Admissions Testing Program is administered by Educational Testing Service (ETS) overseas and in all countries in which there are American students and foreign students planning to come to the United States. The Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) is also administered in a number of overseas schools having American student populations. On behalf of the National Liaison Committee on Foreign Student Admissions, the Board acts as agent for organizing and administering training programs for the personnel of U.S. Missions overseas engaged in counseling foreign students about study in the U.S. and in the same capacity provides assistance to American schools overseas from time to time. The Board has a standing (advisory) Committee on International Education.

John E. Bowman, Executive Director ................................ (212) 661-0310
Irving Becker, Assistant Executive Director ......................... (212) 661-0310

The Council on International Educational Exchange is a non-profit organization with membership of 170 North American schools, colleges and national organizations which sponsor educational exchange programs. Its activities include: issuing International Student Identity Cards, which entitle eligible students to discounts and reductions in Europe; arranging low-cost transportation to and within Europe for educational groups and individual students; publishing the Whole World Handbook and Where to Stay in the U.S.A.; assisting in obtaining unskilled summer jobs in Britain; co-sponsoring exchange of secondary school students with schools in Britain, France, Germany and Japan; coordinating summer programs in the U.S. for students and teachers from abroad; and sponsoring conferences and workshops on educational exchange.
The Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates was established through the combination of the Educational Council for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG) and the Commission on Foreign Medical Graduates (CFMG). The combined ECFMG is a separate non-profit organization sponsored by the American Board of Medical Specialties, the American Hospital Association, the Association of American Medical Colleges, the Association for Hospital Medical Education, the Federation of State Medical Boards of the United States and the National Medical Association. Its purposes are: to provide information to foreign medical graduates (FMGs) regarding entry into graduate medical education and health care systems in the United States; to evaluate their qualifications for such entry; to identify FMGs' cultural and professional needs; to assist in the establishment of educational policies and programs to meet the above-identified cultural and professional needs of FMGs; to gather, maintain, and disseminate data concerning FMGs; and to assist, through cooperation and recommendation, other agencies concerned with FMGs. ECFMG evaluates the educational qualifications and verifies the credentials of foreign-trained physicians who desire to advance their education in the United States. It conducts examinations twice each year in more than 180 centers throughout the world to help assure that those physicians are properly qualified to assume responsibilities as interns or residents in the United States.

The International Council for Educational Development (ICED) is an international non-profit association of persons with a common concern for the future of education and its role in social and economic development. ICED's three major interests are strategies for educational development, the modernization and management of systems of higher education, and the international programs and responsibilities of higher education. In each area, ICED's purposes are to identify and analyze major educational problems shared by a number of countries, to generate policy recommendations, and to provide consultation, on request, to international and national organizations.
The purpose of ICP is to promote psychology as a science and as a profession throughout the world. Activities include the publication of a quarterly newsletter titled The International Psychologist and a journal of research papers; annual programs, both substantive and social, in connection with the annual convention of the American Psychological Association and around the world in connection with other international congresses, national conventions and regional conferences. ICP maintains liaison with a variety of governmental and international agencies and has committees concerned with the critical problems affecting human beings around the world. Members in 50 nations cooperate with agencies seeking research and service assistance from psychologists around the world.

The U.S. Center for IWY is non-political, non-partisan. It is a Center for distribution of information about IWY and correlation of efforts by governmental and non-governmental groups in the U.S. in observance of IWY. The Center was created in September, 1973, by a grant from the Department of State to a private foundation, Meridian House International. As it seeks to serve as a clearinghouse of information, the Center would appreciate receiving word of activities undertaken for IWY by organizations or groups or local communities. The Center will also send information, including UN documents as they become available, to organizations or groups which ask to be on the mailing list. The address is: U.S. Center for IWY 1975, 1630 Crescent Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.
Begun in 1957, the Japan-America Society of Washington is an association of Americans and Japanese who desire to bring the peoples of the United States and Japan closer together through increased appreciation and deeper understanding of each other's way of life. A private, non-profit, non-political organization with broad cultural objectives, the Society provides a forum for the exchange of ideas between Japanese visitors and its members. It sponsors lectures, films, exhibitions, an annual Bazaar and operates a Japanese language school. It also maintains a library of current books and periodicals on Japan and publishes a monthly bulletin featuring articles of interest and information on local activities related to Japan. It works closely with the Embassy of Japan and American Government organizations encouraging cultural exchanges and developing projects to promote broader understanding of Japan in this country. Traditionally, the Ambassador of Japan serves as Honorary President and the American Secretary of State is Honorary Trustee.

The Japan Society, founded in 1907 as a non-profit, non-political membership organization of individuals and corporations, both Japanese and American, is devoted to opening channels of communication through cultural, educational, public affairs and corporate programming and through exchanges, meetings and joint studies. The corporate services program sponsors meetings for leading Japanese and American businessmen on relevant aspects of the U.S.-Japan relationship. Public affairs meetings focus on this relationship in such areas as sociology, political science and economics. The performing arts program seeks to heighten cultural awareness by presenting traditional and contemporary Japanese music, dance, theater and cinema. The visual arts program presents exhibitions of traditional and contemporary Japanese art. The library contains periodicals in both languages as well as a wide variety of reference materials.

LASPAU's objective is to improve the teaching and administrative staffs of Latin American Universities. The LASPAU program involves graduate level education to the master's degree for Latin American students in U.S. universities. LASPAU considers only those candidates who have been officially nominated by a sponsoring Latin American university and guaranteed a teaching position upon completion of their graduate studies in the U.S. LASPAU screens approximately 800 nominees per year, serves as a liaison between those selected by North American institutions and the scholars' home universities, assists U.S. university teaching and administrative personnel in dealing with its LASPAU students, and facilitates the reincorporation of the program's graduates into their home institutions' teaching staff upon their return.

Roy A. Whiteker, Executive Secretary, Council on International Exchange of Scholars .................................. (202) 389-6631

The National Academy of Sciences is an organization of distinguished scientists and engineers concerned with the furtherance of science and its use for human welfare. Although the Academy is not a government agency, it is called upon by its Congressional charter of 1863 to serve as an official adviser to the Federal Government in matters of science and technology. This responsibility is now shared with the National Academy of Engineering, organized in 1964 under the original NAS charter. The National Research Council, organized by the National Academy of Sciences in 1916 in order to provide for broader participation by American scientists and engineers, serves as an operating agency for both Academies.
The membership of NAFSA includes institutions enrolling foreign students, as well as private and business organizations, community groups, and government agencies with related interests. Through its five professional sections it represents the special concerns of foreign student advisors, teachers of English as a second language, foreign student admissions personnel, study-abroad advisors, and community groups. NAFSA conducts a year-round program of professional training and service through workshops, seminars, and regional and national conferences. It serves as a spokesman for international educational interchange and provides a guide to standards of performance and programs.

NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR INTERNATIONAL HEALTH
535 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60611

John S. Cowan, M.D., Executive Secretary .............................. (312) 527-1500

NCIH was formed in 1970 to study the problems of international health in broad terms and to assess the influence and potentials of assistance by American governmental and private organizations. Financial and organizational support was provided by the American Medical Association. A principal purpose of NCIH is to provide a means by which the problems of international health can be approached jointly by the various agencies and disciplines concerned with it; to achieve definition of common problems; and to seek rational and practical solutions to problems so defined. A second main purpose is to provide opportunities for regular meetings of a group of individuals of recognized competence in international health whereby composite judgment can be developed and consensus expressed; guidelines for policy can be developed by mutual agreement; objectives and priorities can be established; and planning and coordination of action can be undertaken jointly. Additional leading purposes are: to define a mechanism for the sharing of information; to identify more effective ways to use material and human resources; and to provide advice and guidance, upon request, concerning any subject within or related to international health.

The National Education Association (NEA) is a voluntary, independent organization of teachers, chartered in 1857. It has more than 1,500,000 members and state affiliates in each of the 50 states, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia, plus an Overseas Education Association. There are more than 9,600 local affiliated organizations. NEA's major goals are: an independent, united teaching organization; professional excellence; economic and professional security for all educators; significant legislative support for public education; human and civil rights in education; and leadership in solving social problems. The NEA maintains close relationships with teacher organizations all over the world, and works with national and international organizations concerned with international understanding and cooperation.

International 4-H programs bridge the gap between nations and peoples through exchange and cross-cultural projects. Exchanges for teenagers, young adults and professional staff make possible educational experiences in the United States and some 50 other countries. Exchangees live and study with host families sharing experiences and observing youth programs. Young adults from the United States spend fourteen months in developing countries helping organizations of the 4-H type grow and prosper. Young men from Korea, Turkey, the Philippines and the Republic of China learn skills to improve food production through the Agricultural Training Program, a two-year work study experience in the United States.

The National League of Cities (NLC) and the United States Conference of Mayors (USCM) maintain joint offices and supporting facilities to provide services to the nation's city governments, particularly their policy leaders. Some are joint services, such as an office of international affairs, library and information service, research, and training. Others are separate, such as annual conventions, legislative representation, NLC's monthly magazine Nation's Cities, and USCM's semi-monthly newsletter The Mayor. Cities of more than 30,000 people maintain membership in both organizations. In addition, NLC's membership includes 48 state leagues of cities and their nearly 15,000 member cities of all sizes.

The Office of International Affairs serves city governments and their officials as a focal point for information about international meetings, international programs of other organizations and federal agencies, and the work of the International Union of Local Authorities for whose biennial world congresses it organizes U.S. local government delegations. It encourages each state league of cities to establish a standing committee to undertake international programs, publishes for them a handbook, "International Municipal Cooperation," and publishes an occasional newsletter for cities and state leagues of cities to help keep them up-to-date on foreign visitors, travel-study opportunities, international meetings and major substantive developments in foreign cities.

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Chairman ........................................ (202) 234-8701
James P. Grant, President ......................................................... (202) 234-8701

The Overseas Development Council was formed in 1969 as an outgrowth of the concern for problems of the development process by a small group of leaders from business, the academic community and foundations. A publicly-sponsored, non-profit corporation, the Council seeks to gain understanding of the problems of less developed countries and of their relations with the U.S. through research studies, publications, discussions and seminars.

OEF's goal is to encourage and assist, within the framework of the cultures of other countries, active and responsible citizen participation in national and community development. In its organizational development work with selected overseas groups, OEF offers consultative services designed to move volunteers in organized associations into social action programs. OEF personnel share process and program planning techniques with foreign civic leaders interested in providing community services supportive of national development, such as day care and vocational training, through the vehicle of voluntary association.

Alice Malone, Homestay Coordinator .................................... (816) 421-6343
Mary Lynn Clark, Secretary and Assistant Treasurer ............... (816) 421-6343

People-to-People International was founded by President Eisenhower and is dedicated to creating international understanding in the world. The concept is implemented through exchanges of adults and students. There were 4,000 such exchanges in 1974. Twenty-one countries support their own People-to-People organizations. The United States has 70 chapters with 24,000 members. There are three basic programs: International Contact, Youth and Education, and Community Action. All promote the concept of a permanent peace through international understanding.

David L. Brigham, Executive Director .................................... (202) 223-4400
................................................................. 223-4451

The Committee's outreach is through exchanges of rehabilitation materials, the publication of booklets of Success Stories with inspirational achievement in a number of international areas as reported by those having an understanding of the People-to-People purpose and image. A part of the ongoing international effort has been limited direct assistance to individuals needing rehabilitation support, therapy and international transportation. The Committee publishes a Directory of Organizations Interested in the Handicapped, provides limited travel assistance and arranges person-to-person contact for handicapped travelers. Assistance in providing prosthetic devices and training information in their production has been a feature of the CFTH program. The committee maintains close liaison with other People-to-People programs, particularly in medicine, music, sports and the international "home stay" program.

Leonard Milton, M.D., President ...................... (516) 482-5158
Don Hull (Col. USA Retired), Executive Director .......... (516) 482-5158

The People-to-People Sports Committee program utilizes the universal interest in sports and the understanding of good sportsmanship as a base from which to begin. The committee cooperates with existing sports organizations. It encourages those which have no international exchange program to launch one. It stimulates those which have one to expand it. It provides funds and other types of assistance to them. It brings into the international sports exchange movement delegations drawn from schools, clubs, colleges, and universities, both amateur and professional. It cooperates closely with governmental agencies, both domestic and foreign.

Washington Office:
1755 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Dr. Robert Parke, Director ......................................................... (202) 667-8884

The Social Science Research Council is an association composed of and directed by social scientists. Its purpose is to provide a means for scholars in the separate disciplines which make up this field of knowledge to work together to advance social science research.

Most scientists who participate in Council activities are connected with universities, in the United States and increasingly in other countries. All who join Council projects, however, do so as individuals, voluntarily contributing their time and skills in whatever ways seem appropriate—exploring newly defined problems; identifying gaps and inadequacies in current knowledge; improving research methods, techniques and materials; and assisting the training of young social scientists.

The Council is an autonomous organization affiliated with seven professional associations of social scientists through its Board of Directors. Members of this body are designated by the American Anthropological Association, the American Economic Association, the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association, the American Sociological Association, and the American Statistical Association. In addition, members of other disciplines or professions adjacent to the social sciences often serve on the Board of Directors of the Council committees, among them educational researchers, demographers, geographers, legal scholars, linguists and psychiatrists.

Arthur J. Collingsworth, Vice President and Director of Public Affairs and Development ........................................ (313) 769-7800
Youth for Understanding is a tax exempt, non-profit, educational organization which makes it possible for approximately 5,000 students per year between the ages of 15 and 18 to have an overseas family living experience. More than 2,000 students, primarily from Europe, Asia and Africa, arrive for a year's home stay in August and attend local high schools throughout the United States, and approximately 1,500 Latin Americans arrive for a six month home stay in January. The American students go overseas to live with a family either for two months during the summer or a full year. In the latter case they attend a local school. Youth for Understanding was founded in 1951 and has exchanged more than 45,000 students from 50 countries. The organization seeks students and host families in this country and abroad who are interested in fostering greater international understanding through a family living experience.
