The American Indian, Then and Now
A Bibliography

"PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S.D., DEC. 29 - Big Foot's braves turned upon their captors this morning and a bloody fight ensued. The trouble came when the soldiers attempted to disarm the Indians, who had surrendered to Major White-side. This move on the part of the troops was resisted, and a bloody and desperate battle at close quarters followed..." (excerpt from the New York Times, Dec. 30, 1890). "Pine Ridge, S.D., Feb. 26 (U.P.I.) - Militant Indians holding 11 persons in the historic settlement of Wounded Knee exchanged gunfire with federal officers today... (excerpt from the Daily News, Thursday, March 1, 1973).

Once again a band of Indians has taken up arms against the U.S., demanding the restoration of lands and rights allegedly lost through the bad faith of white authorities.

The whole question of the American Indian and his treatment by the United States government stands as one of vital interest to anyone calling himself a U.S. citizen. In particular, the youth of our country should become acquainted with the origins, the culture, and this race called the American Indian.

This bibliography of books and selected articles available in our library is an attempt to acquaint the York College community with the American Indian. The scope of the bibliography is to include titles giving both a retrospective and a contemporary view.

It is hoped that this bibliography will stimulate your interest in one of the real problems of our contemporary society.

"If the Great Spirit had desired me to be a white man, he would have made me so in the first place. He put in your heart certain wishes and plans, in my heart he put other and different desires. Each man is good in his sight. It is not necessary for eagles to be crows." Sitting Bull (1834-1890)

Wounded Knee

By Michael J. Harner

Visit Wounded Knee

The billboard said:
Way back at the main highway,
And now half the world has got the message.

There are stars overhead
And a crescent moon,
Some of the Ghost Dance shirts
Had crescent moons, too, I believe,
But they’re all in museums now.
Like the treaties,
No one uses them anymore.

Tracer bullets speeding through the night,
Falling stars of Sioux spirits
Returning to the mesa grave
At Wounded Knee.

Custer is still around, too,
But no— he’s a town in the Black Hills
Where four burdened Presidents,
Heads of State,
Slave story-faced melt toward
Wounded Knee.

On a car radio,
A telephoned listener interview
"That thing down there
Is Communist-inspired—
The same people who were stirring up
The Negroes a few years ago
Are now doing the same thing
With those Indians."

Back in Pine Ridge
In a trailer ghetto
Other Indians down California
muscle
And play worn records
Of ancient Sioux songs
On a child’s phonograph.

"I was in Nam," one says,
"Three years—they got my buddy
—I told him not to light up
—but he wanted a smoke.
Next thing I knew there was a shot—
He fell back—
I thought he was joining
And I gobbled the back of his head
It was gone, nothing but wet—"
(He shows me his cupped hand)
"I cried," he says,
"Was he a white guy?" I ask.
"Yeah."

Behind him on the trailer wall
A crucifix and rosary hung.
"I’m neutral," he says,
And goes outside
To pulse up his wine-soaked guts.

Later, around dawn,
He plays "The Sioux National Anthem"
On the phonograph
And stands at attention
Not exactly
Solving Army style,
"You know," he says,
"When I was in the Army
I knew me
If I was a foreign language,
I used not, unhale."

At 9:30, the next day
The Indians hung down the U.S. flag.

At Wounded Knee the morning light Returns keened from on the hillside—
Armored personnel carriers
Replacing the vanished buffalo,
Ready to grace their way
Into the smaller gathering of humanity below.

Federal marshals
(Or are these FBI—
And does it matter?)
Looking like commandos
From a James Bond movie
Wear tight-fitting hooded Ahalki pants.

The other night
There M-16’s were aimed at us
When we approached the perimeter.
The Indians down there,
They mainly have .22’s
(And our AK-47—
No doubt COMMUNIST INFLUENCE)

A Phantom jet makes a fly-over,
Your ghosts against ours?
The Fris
Or somebody (something?)
Must sure be scared.
Is it of those few people
Down below,
Armed with women and children?

The Sioux say
Raging Bear
Got the Ghost Dance wrong
When he brought it home
From Wovoka in 1890.
That’s why it didn’t work
To bring back the buffalo
Or to stop the bullets
When the Seventh Cavalry
Openly up on them
At Wounded Knee.

But maybe
Just maybe
They’ve got it right this time.
