The 4-H intern report organizes concepts and materials to aid the extension worker in his role as coordinator and trainer of 4-H volunteer staff. A 10-item task analysis of the extension worker--4-H and youth--as volunteer leader coordinator is presented. The importance of managing a volunteer staff is touched upon, and models for job descriptions are illustrated for the 4-H organizational leader and the 4-H project leader. A volunteer agreement form is included, which can be useful from both the extension agency and volunteer viewpoints. A form for a volunteer personnel inventory itemizes pertinent personnel information. An annotated bibliography of resources provides the extension worker with materials for assistance in training and supporting volunteers. Appended materials expand upon the manager role by providing check lists, a coding system for resources, role-task identification for volunteers, and background information for planning. (AG)

This project was made possible through the cooperation of the Cooperative Extension Service of the State of Maryland, Extension Service, USDA, and the National 4-H Foundation, supported by a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.
AN EXTENSION WORKER - 4-H & YOUTH - HAS AS HIS PRIMARY ROLE
THAT OF COORDINATOR AND TRAINER OF VOLUNTEER STAFF

Extension 4-H and Youth has had volunteer leaders staff since the program's beginning. The usual source for recruitment has been the parents of 4-H members. The parents assumed leadership as their children reach 4-H age. Until now this source has proved adequate.

With the introduction of 4-H programs into urban areas and of new projects requiring special expertise a new image of the 4-H volunteer leader is developing. Volunteer leaders need to be recognized as an extension of the paid professional staff of the Cooperative Extension Service and the Extension workers 4-H & Youth recognized as a coordinator and trainer of volunteer staff.
TASK ANALYSIS OF THE EXTENSION WORKER 4-H & YOUTH AS VOlUNTEER LEADER COORDINATOR

Tasks:

1. Work with Council to plan recruitment program.
2. Determine where 4-H volunteer leaders are needed.
3. Write job descriptions for each volunteer leader role.
4. Seek new sources for volunteer leader recruitment.
5. Prepare or obtain 4-H literature describing volunteer tasks.
6. Interview, select and place qualified applicants.
7. Plan and implement volunteer training programs.
8. Keep records of volunteer leader service.

Adapted from Pell, Arthur, "Recruiting, Training, & Motivating Volunteer Workers" Pilot Books, New York 1972
MANAGING VOLUNTEER STAFF

Today agencies and organizations are in competition in the recruitment of volunteers to serve as an extension of their paid professional staff. Volunteers are being sought to serve in executive planning and decision making roles and in the implementation agency programs. The effectiveness with which an agency uses its volunteers is dependent on how well the agency has prepared itself to include the volunteer as part of its staff. Basic to this success is the training of those responsible for the volunteers or the agency and the establishment of a system of management.

As an agency is organized it identifies the paid professional staff and support necessary for the operation of the agency. One major constraint as to size of staff is budgetary. With a volunteer (unpaid) staff the major constraint lies in the ability of the agency to recruit and keep the volunteer. Inherent in this success is a system of management which includes:

1. Establishing the volunteer as a recognized staff member.
2. Identifying tasks which the volunteer can perform.
3. Preparing a job description for each role.
4. Determining training needs.
5. Identifying resources for implementation of training.
Volunteer Classification

The job description, clearly defined, accords the volunteer a more visible place on the agency staff. Each agency needed to identify its own volunteer staff roles and to prepare its own job descriptions. Cooperative Extension 4-H & Youth has been involving volunteer leaders in its program since its beginning. 4-H job descriptions (figure 1) show how tasks are identified. The analysis of the job description includes:

1. Job Title
2. Tasks Assigned
3. Skill Level Required
4. Training Recommendations
5. Resources for Teaching

Task as used in this paper is defined as a single activity which is performed by the volunteer.

1. A 5 x 8 card system is recommended. Cards could be color coded. I.E. Yellow - Job Descriptions; White - Agreements, etc.

2. Training needs should be decided in an agency-volunteer leader conference and tailored to the skill level of the individual volunteer. See Appendix A "Check Lists for Leader Training Needs".

3. A coding system referring to materials in an office file for ease of recording resources is recommended. See Appendix A for Coding System.
II. Model for Agreement

As a volunteer is recruited his first interest is in what kind of job he will be doing and what the benefits of his time and help will be. A discussion of what will be expected of the volunteer should be included in the first interview and when volunteer agrees to work for the agency, a written agreement can provide a sense of security for both the volunteer and the agency and can be useful in evaluation of performance of both (see figure 2).

III. Model for Volunteer Personnel Inventory

The volunteer performs for satisfaction received, for self-actualization. The supervisor needs to know each volunteer — his strength, weakness, so that the level of tasks assigned will bring satisfaction and a desire to continue with the agency.

Volunteer personnel inventory records assignment, personnel data, special skills and serves as a record of training received, performance, recognition received.

Volunteerism - Summary of a National Survey

Nearly half the volunteer workers are between 24 and 44 years of age.

Most volunteers aged 25 to 44 are women. Almost two-thirds of the total women volunteers were not in the labor force at the time of the survey.

The bulk of volunteers was married.

Wives had significantly higher rates of volunteering than husbands.

The rate of volunteer activity is nearly twice as high among white-collar workers as it was among the rest of the labor force.

The more schooling a person has and, since income and occupation are highly correlated with education, the higher the income and the better the job (in terms of white-collar versus blue-collar services, or farmwork) the more likely a person is to engage in some volunteer service.

The BLS survey showed a volunteer participation rate of 9 percent for Negroes.

Most volunteers of this age group worked in education and other youth activities.

The most popular forms of volunteer activity are in education, social or welfare service or services to youth. Women are much more likely than men to change the kind of volunteering they do according to the stage of life cycle they are in; much seems to depend on number of children and their ages.

Volunteer work, in general, can be divided into three types: executive and policy-making, administrative, and direct service.

In a typical week, volunteers average 5.6 hours in one or more activities according to the BLS survey. A third of all volunteers worked nearly every week or every 2 weeks.

Nearly half the volunteers reported that they spent less than 25 hours a year in volunteer work. A third of the volunteers worked 25 to 99 hours, or the equivalent of an hour every 2 weeks to 2 hours a week.

While a majority (53 percent) of the regular and frequent volunteer worker put in 100 hours or more during the year, some apparently worked on an average of less than 1 hour each time.

Reasons for Volunteering:

1. Sense of duty - saw that the work had to be done, felt an obligation or duty to do it; believed in the work of the organization for which they are doing the work; and did the work because of membership in a particular organization.

2. Help people - wanted to help people, an organization or community.

3. Enjoy doing volunteer work - enjoy helping people, like or have interest in the organization, gain self-satisfaction, love to be of service to people or an organization.

4. Asked to do volunteer work - by a friend, relative or other person.

5. All other - including reasons such as desire to gain experience, help friends and relatives doing volunteer work, and help alleviate effects of tornado, flood, or other natural disaster.

Some business or professional men and women may be active in local fraternal or civil organizations because of potentialities for financial improvement through personal relationships; others may perform volunteer work to achieve prestige or to improve their status in the community.

The agencies are learning that it takes longer to recruit volunteers from the disadvantaged areas.

Most agencies accept high turnover as one of the "costs of doing business" and rely on training to keep an effective program going.

The ratio of staff to volunteers seems to run about 1 to 175-200.

Peace Corp and Vista incorporated a new concept - that of the "paid volunteer" in the traditional pattern of volunteering. This concept has been expanded in other Federal and voluntary agencies to make it possible for persons with low incomes to do work they could not otherwise afford to do and for the agencies to serve more clients at smaller cost.

It is predicted that a more affluent and better educated society is going to be disposed toward volunteer work even more than today's citizenry.

While on the one hand, increased leisure makes possible volunteer work, it has been found that those who have fewer responsibilities (the older and the younger) are less likely to volunteer. Those in the middle age groups seem to have the strongest motivation. Professional workers and managers work longer hours than clerical or blue-collar workers; yet they also volunteer more. The BLS survey showed that volunteer rates for persons employed during the survey week were not necessarily dictated by the number of hours worked on their regular jobs. Men who worked 40 hours or more had a volunteer rate of 6.5 percent, nearly twice that for men who worked fewer hours. Among women however, a greater proportion of those who usually worked part time than those who worked 40 hours or more were volunteer workers.

Considering the long-term trend toward increasing labor force participation of women, particularly mature women, and the increasing job opportunities in social welfare and other service-type activities, many women may choose employment over volunteering.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE VOLUNTEER

Concerns:

Agencies are faced with the constant challenge of securing manpower for administrative volunteer positions within the agency.

Skilled persons with clout seem illusive.

Skilled persons are often very busy in many areas of community life.

People are moving more frequently today (by changing place of residence and occupation).

Positions on councils need to be changed to meet the time and interests of today's volunteers.

- kinds of jobs
- duration of job
- relationship to others in the council
- number of meetings - hours involved

Volunteers are demanding clearly defined jobs.

Agencies are wrestling with the dilemma of grouping volunteers such as policy-making group with the task-oriented/delivery group.

Grass roots are demanding to be a part of agency decision-making (geographic, minority, constituency, community representation, etc.).

Needs of agencies are changing - thus volunteers with different skills and backgrounds are needed.

Skilled persons who speak for and give leadership to special groups (such as the poor, minority groups, etc.) seem difficult to identify, recruit and support.

Concerns as listed on pages 24 - 28 identified at the 1971 Quadrangle Conference Camp Fire Girls, Inc.
Concerns:

There are many more opportunities for volunteering than in the past.

Women are going back to school in greater numbers.

More women are working more hours.

Volunteering for youth agencies is not in "vogue".

Recruiting leaders requires new sources of volunteers and different techniques.

Volunteers' tenure is decreasing as the mobility rate is increasing and as the diversity of volunteer opportunities is heightening.

Agencies are facing the challenge of finding and supporting leadership within the low income communities.

It is becoming increasingly important to recruit leadership with care and selectivity.

Agencies are examining the recruitment techniques in light of the first impact which is made on the prospective leader and the effect it has on her whole attitude about leadership, the program and its values.

Youth agencies are finding that they must reach outside of the parent group for leadership, using a variety of techniques and new sources of prospects.

Agencies are facing the challenge of finding, interesting and keeping leadership from the high-income communities.

Agencies are finding that leadership of special groups requires specialized personnel with special techniques and materials.

Agencies are not utilizing the skills and time of the retirement community.

Greater mobility requires increased support for groups with changing leaders, retiring leaders, new leaders, members who transfer, members who do not transfer, etc.
Concerns:

Attendance at traditional training courses does not result in increased tenure or improved quality of group program.

Volunteers seem to want to design their own learning experiences.

Volunteers are not interested in the extended courses involving sixteen hours over four weeks.

People have limited time to give.

Volunteers have a great variety of backgrounds and skills.

Volunteers want to learn while tackling their job - their needs seem to be task oriented.

Agencies seem to be facing the constant challenge of bringing new persons on board while continuing to support seasoned members of boards and committees.

Agencies are voicing concern about designing learning experiences for leaders to help them become comfortable with the new directions in programs.

Agencies are challenged by the need to design development programs which will help leaders deal with the needs of today's youth.

Training committees are asking how they can reach those who choose not to attend training sessions.

Diagnosing attendance trends, leader needs and desires related to training required in-depth analysis.
STAFF-VOLUNTEER RELATIONSHIPS

Concerns:

The role of a staff member and relationship to volunteer.

Volunteer expectations of the professional staff.

Deployment of staff to accomplish the greatest impact within the budget limitations.

Seeking of ways to improve the team efforts of volunteers and staff.

Finding staff who are willing to work overtime, evenings and weekends.

Utilization of persons who do not have college degrees who have much to contribute.

Complexities of communities requiring new and different kinds of positions, titles, and job descriptions for paid staff.

Today's life styles producing volunteers who are able to function for only a short duration and on an irregular basis.

Highly skilled volunteers demanding more of staff members.

Tenure of paid staff in any one position decreasing.
Concerns:

Agencies are struggling with means to organize for real growth.

Agencies are concerned about serving a large decentralized membership with the same personalized service as a small centralized membership.

Survival seems to demand growth and movement into all areas of the community.

It is more economical and also a sound program principle to have larger groups.

One group organization technique will not work in all communities and neighborhoods.

Growth will involve more funds and staff.

Existing staff is not always able to move out into new communities/neighborhoods.

Program opportunities are greatly enhanced when membership is composed of people from many minority groups and the full range of economic levels.

Different communities/neighborhoods have different needs and priorities.

Agencies are concerned about how to branch out into other than the traditional group programs so as to serve the needs of communities.

Participation is often lost not because of disinterest but because of loss of leadership, lack of transportation, lack of funds, lack of exciting program.
