ABSTRACT The second in a series of bibliographies lists approximately 350 instructional materials for use in mental health education. It is noted that all of the materials listed were suggested by teachers after careful screening, including evaluation with handicapped children. Materials are grouped according to the following media forms: books (the major portion of the document), articles, book/record combinations, films, filmstrips, periodicals, photographs, records, study prints, and transparencies. Each entry contains the following information: title, length, producer/distributor, recommended chronological and mental age range, date, a brief abstract, and reading level (when appropriate).
Materials span a variety of topics and ability levels ranging from "Helping is a Good Thing" (a record for 4- to 8-year-olds) to "War Crimes and the American Conscience" (a book for 15- to 21-year-olds).
Names and addresses of distributors are appended. (LS)

PREFACE

The purpose of this Mediagraphy is to assist teachers in planning for instruction by providing information about a wide variety of instructional materials available in the areas of mental health education. The focus is primarily on instructional materials related to areas of personal health.

This Mediagraphy, the second in a series, is not intended to include all available materials, but rather, to suggest materials which have been used, evaluated and recommended by teachers.

It is hoped that users of this Mediagraphy find it useful and informative and that their classroom instruction is enhanced by a variety of stimulating and innovative instructional materials.

Special appreciation is extended to Mrs. Donna Scheuing, Martha Richardson and Cheryl Terwilliger for their assistance in compiling and preparing this volume.
INTRODUCTION

The materials listed in this Mediagraphy have been grouped around the concept of Mental Health. The materials are grouped according to media (e.g. books, films, charts).

Each item listed has been annotated and information concerning appropriate chronological and mental age ranges has been included. Wherever appropriate, the reading level of the material has also been included.

The name of the manufacturer or publisher of each item has been included in the main portion of the Mediagraphy. Their addresses can be found in the Appendix at the end of the Mediagraphy.

No attempt has been made to suggest how the material might be used with children. It is felt that the information included with each item will enable the teacher to determine the appropriateness of the material for use with a specific group or individual.

It should be noted that all of the materials included in this Mediagraphy have been suggested by teachers after careful screening, including evaluation with handicapped children.

However, since this is a selected list of materials, it is recommended that the user consider this a base on which he might build a more complete reference tool. He is encouraged to personalize and update the Mediagraphy by deletion and addition as more appropriate materials are found.

Discussion of a study which compared a group of patients in a mental hospital with a group of highly acclaimed artists. The author suggests that the difference between creative genius and "madness" may be largely the way in which the individual and society view certain personality characteristics, common to both groups, rather than differences in personality characteristics between the two groups.

A fascinating account of what happened when an Indian City was built to the specifications of western planners. The actual activities and use of space by the Indian inhabitants are contrasted with the activities and use of space by the planners, as the inhabitants inexorably reshape the city in their own image.

A telling counterpoint to those who would have us believe that violence and crime in the streets, drug problems, widespread venereal disease, traffic congestion, and youth rebellion are recent phenomena. This article shows how historically American these and other social problems really are.

A discussion of how dreams can contribute to the creative and problem solving processes in the waking state. Examples are drawn from the dream experience of the naturalist Louis Agasiz, Robert Louis Stevenson, Niels Bohr and others.

Conveys the basic message that creative activity is enhanced by a simple technique—reward for behavior that is different from previous behavior. The two porpoises in this study became so creative in their behaviors that the project finally had to be abandoned when the resulting complexity of the animals' activities so confused the experimenters that they could not accurately document what was happening.

An examination of the main themes of Utopian and Dystopian Science Fiction Works, largely from 1960 onward. Included is a Bibliography of many of the major writings in the field.
African Art has traditionally been functional, relating to man's clothing, household objects, religious practices, wars, economic needs and entertainment. Here in a broad comparative survey of art in "Black Africa" is shown the relationship of Art to man's everyday life. A useful survey written in direct, earnest style and accompanied by Black and White photographs with one section of photographs in color. Fills in an important gap. (C Bro-Dart, 1971)

The author reasons that the crucial split between parallel cultures, the advancing sciences and the retreating humanities is the root factor in such cultural revolts as we witness today - Black Power, The New Left, The Sex Revolution, The Drug Subculture, The Youthful Yearning toward Eastern Mysticism. Enroute to an eloquently stated plea for a possible synthesis, not compromise, between the seemingly opposed lines of human growth, he offers some boldly intuitive as well as sharply informed analyses of technology in its manifold forms - biological, political, economic, social and the human responses technology's excesses have given rise to. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Some psychological terms used in this book, p. 135. This book explains 'how your personality develops, how your brain works, why you believe as you do, how mind and body work together'. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

An account of a pre-literate tribe, the Senoi, who had, at the time of this study, virtually no crime, mental illness or serious conflict within their society. The author contends this unusual condition was the result of their highly sophisticated form of psychology, centered largely around dream analysis and dream education which he describes in this article. He explains how the Senoi psychology, while quite different from Western psychology as ordinarily practiced, is compatible with Western thought.
ALTERED STATES OF CONSCIOUSNESS - A BOOK OF READINGS
575 pages
Charles T. Tart
John Wiley & Sons, Inc.
An exceptionally expansive collection of articles on various states of consciousness, the implications of these states for maximizing human consciousness, the implications of these states for maximizing human potential and the means by which these states are achieved. Included are subjective accounts as well as sophisticated experiments on altered states of consciousness induced by such wide-ranging conditions as dreams, meditation, hypnosis and drugs. Eastern and Western approaches to this field are both considered.

AMERICA IN CRISIS
192 pages/Ilus.
Holt
Purchase $12.95
The photographers of Magnum, an international cooperative of photojournalists, have come up with a collection of pictures that show all too clearly and poignantly the crisis that confronts America today. Their cameras have caught the depression of urban slums and dingy ghettos, the deep-rooted insidious poverty of Appalachia, the deprived and destitute children of the Kentucky Hills, the sorrowing of the nation over the assassination of three leaders within five years, the country's outcry for peace, the devastation of the Vietnam War, bloody Chicago, the Hippies and Yippies, student revolt, racial disorders, violence and confrontation. The causes and effects of these events, the trends leading to this crucial period in American History have been succinctly identified and admirably summarized in a brief text written by a 'New York Times Magazine Editor'. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

AMERICA IS ALSO ITALIAN
126 Pages/Ilus.
Jerre Mangione
Putnam
Purchase $3.49
Tells the story of the millions of men and women who left their homes in Italy to come to the United States to find a better way of life. Explains why they left their own country, the attitudes and values they brought with them and the prejudices they met here. Describes the way they lived, the work that they did in helping to build America, the contributions they have made to the art, music, government, science, literature, education and economy of the United States. Only the best readers will be able to read this book without the help and direction of a teacher. (G Bro-Dart 1971)

THE AMERICAN HERITAGE SONGBOOK
223 pages/Ilus/Music Boards
American Heritage
Purchase $7.95
In this useful, interesting collection of American songs, each song is accompanied by a short historical note and illustrated diagram or etching. Of special interest is the section dealing with songs of the American Negro. The editors have attempted to portray the songs in their original form without altering lyrics or music. Arrangements for piano and guitar are included, but trying without benefit of musical background is also entertaining and enlightening. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)
American Indian Fairy Tales
Margaret Compton
Head Dodd
Purchase, $2.65
The authentic Indian legends within these pages were collected long ago, at a time before many of the tribes were confined to reservations. The amazing similarities found in these tales make the reader wonder: if perhaps in the dim, long ago when the flanks of continents were joined and a land bridge united east and west, the ancestral family of all mankind sat in the shade of trees and spun the original yarns.
(C Bro-Dart 1971)

American Manners & Morals
Mary Cable
American Heritage
Purchase, $18.00
A history of the manners, customs, and morals of our country from the days of the Pilgrim Fathers to contemporary youth whose 'Hippie' garb and rebellious ways seem, in the light of all their early American forefathers did and were, hardly outlandish at all. In more than one way a book such as this throws highlights on certain facets of our history that one never thinks about. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

American Violence
Richard Maxwell Brown
Prentice Hall
Purchase, $5.95
This survey of urban, racial, labor and agrarian violence in the United States contains eyewitness accounts and official reports of major outbreaks from the seventeenth century to the present day. This collection of documents provides a thoughtful and provocative summary of the role of violence in the American tradition.
(H. W. Wilson - 1972)

American Violence - A Documentary History
Richard Hofstadter
Knopf
Purchase, $10.00
This major study is outstanding for its comprehensiveness and scholarly objectivity. Describe and document, frequently through eye-witness accounts, some hundred-odd separate instances of major violence in our past, placing them within the contexts of such categories as political, economic, terrorism, police violence and violence in the name of 'law, order and morality' scant. Though the documents are intelligently selected and many of them are hard to come by, the particular interest of this work lies in Mr. Hofstadter's long introductory essay. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

Anansi, the Spider Man
Sir Philip M. Sherlock
Crowell
Purchase, $2.65
Anansi, the trickster, is a man when things are going well, but becomes a spider hanging in a ceiling web when events go against him. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
How animals use their senses to regulate their lives and relate to their environment is explained and the sense organs of a variety of species are described. In the discussion of animal senses, including both the familiar five and the temperature sense, detection of electrical fields, animal solar systems, and orientation and migration mechanisms, the problems and limitations of experimenting with animals are emphasized and the gaps in current knowledge concerning their sense organs are pointed out. Illustrations include photographs and diagrams, and a bibliography of scientific material is appended. (H. W. Wilson-1972)

This is a survey of the social behaviour of insects, with emphasis on bees, and higher animals including birds and such mammals as the gorilla. The author's thesis, developed in some detail, is that a colony of group is best considered as a whole organism, not a collection of organisms. He examines the concepts of territoriality, communication, migration and hierarchy from the viewpoint of the evolutionary scientist. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Designed by Gerald Nook
Headaddresses and masks, statues of kings, a royal leopard carved from 5 elephant tusks, brass figures used to measure gold dust, carved stools and musical instruments are some of the examples of African Art chosen by Miss Glubor for this book. Fine photography accompanied by brief and interesting text. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

From first attempts to answer whether loving is an art form. He then discusses love between parents and children and the different love objects we have. He turns to a more sociological view and considers the disintegration of love in contemporary western society and finally reviews the practice of love.
AT HOME: A VISIT IN FOUR LANGUAGES

Esther Hautzig
Aliki MacMillan

Purchase-$3.32

Text in French, Spanish, Russian and English. This brightly illustrated book shows an American family in Chicago, a French family in Marseilles, a Spanish family in Barcelona and a Russian family in Leningrad engaged in the same everyday activities, getting ready for company and serving and entertaining their guest. The names of the people and objects pictured are given in each of the four languages, with pronunciation guide below each word. An additional list of words and a pronunciation guide to the Russian Alphabet are appended. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

AUSTRALIAN ABORIGINES

Eleanor Z. Baker

Purchase-$3.09

The cultural life of the primitive aborigines of Australia is covered in this volume in addition to material on their land, daily life, myths and ceremonies. Handsome photographs show the people in action and their distinctive art work. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

AWAKING MINORITIES - AMERICAN INDIANS, MEXICAN AMERICANS, PUERTO RICANS

John R. Howard

Purchase-$5.95

BEAVER POND

Color/Illus. by Roger Duvoisin

Purchase-$4.14

The life story of a pond-its birth, its years of maturity and its final transformation. "A quiet poetic text and lovely colored illustrations show the gradual change of environment and the interdependence of the animals that live in and around the pond". A simple introduction to Ecology. Helpful in class discussions as well as individual reading. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
In this volume, the author has selected thirty-four essays he likes best from his nature writings of the past two decades. In them and his introduction, he discusses what our relationship is and what it ought to be to natural world, particularly to those living creatures that inhabit the world with us. (H. W. Wilson-1971)

Skinner proposes that the concept freedom is essentially meaningless and dignity too can be seen as something not so essential as is unusually thought. He discusses punishment and its alternatives, values, the evolution and design of a culture, and finally considers the nature of man.

A real treasure-house of folk-lore, especially valuable if used by teacher or librarian or storyteller. A student of folk-lore and languages has retold stories from many lands, grouping together those with similar themes of topics. "For anyone who likes to see how, with each age, old-time stories take new forms, this book is a find.

"G is for Chetto/a place where we can be at home/loved and free."
Each letter and rhyme is followed by a paragraph of further explanation and history of Black People in the United States and Africa. Written by a poet and illustrated with stunning paintings in tempera.

The artists whose works appear in this volume are from every region of the United States. Their paintings represent a wide variety of styles and themes which in turn reflect every major trend in modern American Art. Yet the diversity of style, theme, and locale presented in this collection is unified by one immutable link - each artist is Black and living in 20th-century America. Each, too, is acutely aware of the various qualities which define the American experience among them: violence, conflict, and racism.

(H. W. Wilson - 1972)
BLACK VAN IN AMERICA 1619-1790
Florence Jackson
P. Watts
83 Pages/Illus.
1970
Purchase-$2.81
Detailed presentation of the history of the Black people in America from the arrival of the first twenty Africans in Jamestown to the formation of the new United States Government. Discusses indentured servitude, the slave trade and slavery in the northern and southern colonies, the training of the Africans for plantation work, the opposition to slavery by both Blacks and Whites and the contribution of Black men to American culture and freedom. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

BLACK NATIONALISM IN AMERICA
Merrill Bobbs
512 pages
Purchase -$8.50
The editors have gathered considerable long-neglected material in their anthology, the first collection of original writings devoted entirely to Black Nationalism. The book is divided into five main sections, covering the origins, maturation, flowering, eclipse, and revival of Black Nationalism from the late 1700s to the Revolutionary Action Movement and the Black Panthers. Its seventy-seven documents are drawn from speeches, manifestos, letters, leaflets, poems, books, Negro newspapers, and the proceedings of colored people's conversations. (H. W. Wilson-1972)

BLACK STRUGGLE
Bryan Fulks
340 Pages
1969
Recounts the history of the blacks from their early beginnings in Africa to their ongoing efforts to achieve complete equality in all phases of America's public life. Emphasizes the resistance of Blacks to slavery, the heroism of Black soldiers in all of America's wars and the courage of the civil-rights workers. Concluded with an evaluation of the condition of present-day Black Americans educationally, socially, economically, and politically since 1965.

Purchase-$4.29
The tales and myths in this book have been gathered from Eskimo oral literature of the Eastern and Western Arctic, and Subarctic. These are stories that were and are used in Eskimo families to entertain the children and to acquaint them with life patterns. Intro.-The illustrations represent work done by craftsmen in Alaska and Cape Dorset. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
THE BODY HAS A HEAD
799 Pages
Harper 1970
Purchase-$12.50
Gustav Eckstein
The author seeks to give the reader a better understanding of himself. He begins with brief biographies of sixteen philosophers and medical investigators including Homer, Thales, Democritus, Hippocrates, Luke, Clalen, Leonardo, Harvey and Descartes. He then describes general biology, physiology, development and evolution, the basics of functions of the body, and finally discusses mind and brain, function and dysfunction. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

BODY LANGUAGE.
192 Pages
Julius Fast
N. Evans & Co. 1970
According to certain recent studies, only about 35 per cent of what we wish to say is expressed in words. The rest is communicated through 'body language'. The author of this book tells what researchers have discovered about non-verbal communications - how the body is used to send out psychological danger signals, to express emotions, to signal a member of the opposite sex, to contradict verbal communications. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

BOYS AND SEX
157 Pages
Wardell B. Pomeroy
Delacorte Press 1968
Purchase-$4.00
The co-author of the "Kinsey Reports" provides extremely candid information about the psychological, sociological, and physiological aspects of sexuality and straightforward suggestions for accepting and fulfilling oneself as a sexual being. An especially refreshing aspect of the no-nonsense book is that the material presented is based on more than 7,000 sexual histories. While the book is intended primarily for boys, girls and parents will find it worthwhile reading as well.

BRER RABBIT (Stories from Uncle Remus) 132 Pages/Ilus.
Joel Chandler Harris
Harper & Row 1941
Purchase-$2.92
Adapted by Margaret Wise Brown, with the A. B. Frost Pictures redrawn for Reproductions by Victor Dowling.
Brer Rabbit's wit generally keeps him from punishment in his tricky businesses, but then, sometimes he stretches his luck and wit fails him. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
To put it quickly and plainly, this is nothing less than a thirty-year crime story, a blow-by-blow account of the destruction, between 1860 and 1890 of the culture and civilization of the Indian of the American West. It opens with the butchery of the Navahoes in the Southwest and closes with the massacre of the Sioux at Wounded Knee in South Dakota. To be sure, much has been written about this terrible record, but seldom from the Indian point of view. What distinguished Mr. Brown's excellent work is that the Indian's voice, seldom heard in American history enters these pages through excerpts from the records of treaty councils and other meetings. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

CARL RODGERS ON ENCOUNTER GROUPS. 172 Pages
Carl R. Rogers
Harper
Purchase-$5.95
The author first traces the History of Encounter Groups; then turns to the experiences of groups in which he has participated. His account is filled with illustrative scenes from actual groups, so that the reader can sample the flavor of group life and understand why so many different individuals find encounter groups meaningful. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

THE CASE FOR COMPULSORY BIRTH CONTROL 230 Pages
Edgar R. Chasteen
Prentice-Hall
Purchase-$5.95
The primary focus of this book rests on the facts that people cause pollution. That a greater number of people means a reduction in the standard of living for all people and that the world can no longer afford people the "right" to have unlimited numbers of children. From these facts comes the conclusion that compulsory birth control, with absolute limitations placed on reproduction, is needed for the sake of the future. The book has a bias, but it is also interesting, informative, and logically presented, with the opposing positions recognized and their arguments included. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

CHALLENGE FOR SURVIVAL 235 Pages/Illus.
Pierre Dansereau
Columbia University Press
Purchase-$7.95
In a collection of articles presented in 1968 at a symposium sponsored by the New York Botanical Gardens, ecological problems of the urban environment are discussed from the viewpoints of science, government, and industry. The value of such green areas as parks, gardens, and forest preserves located in or near cities, to the air and water supply as well as to athletics and recreation is pointed out and in some cases practical solutions to problems are suggested. While the essays vary in technical content, and are readable, each is followed by an authoritative commentary and a bibliography. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

<td>This book concerns children in trouble, not only those involved in crime, but the homeless, neglected and abused. It is a detailed report on what happens when they become the pawns of 'justice'. Visiting some 44 states, the author looked at institutions and agencies, courts, jails, reform schools, public schools, welfare offices, and police stations. He talked to administrators, workers in the field, and the children themselves. Case history after case history reveals that 'no community in America is doing enough for children in trouble'. This is a shocking indictment of the inadequacies and failures of our method of handling juvenile problems. It is an alert to the American public of the urgent need for improving the system. (H. W. Hal Hellman
Evans, M. & Co.
Purchase-$4.95
The book tells how Scientists and Engineers must plan to accommodate-in housing, schools, transportation, public health, and recreation-a world population that is expected to double in the next thirty years. It describes where new cities will have to be built and how, as well as the kinds of cities required. The many photographs, drawings, and diagrams enhance the text, and an extensive bibliography adds to the usefulness of the book. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Discusses major changes in the form and material of clothing throughout the development of Western civilization, pointing out innovations in the original basic draped garment worn by men and women and the emergence, late in the fourteenth century of fashion in the form of fitted clothing. Effectively combining text and illustrations, Laver shows the reflection in costume and fashion of economic and political conditions noting the characteristics of contemporary styles and predicting further innovations in clothing fashion due to social and cultural changes. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

CULTURE AND CONSCIENCE

113 Pages 1970
Margaret Mead
Doubleday
Purchase-$6.95
In this collection of essays, originally lectures at the Museum of Natural History, Margaret Mead uses anthropological methods to analyze the relations between generations. She demonstrates that the world today has moved away from early cultures wherein children learned primarily from their forebears and both children and adults learned from their peers. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

CULTURE IS OUR BUSINESS

336 Pages/Illus. 1970
Marshall McLuhan
McGraw
Purchase-$10.00
This book examines our civilization as it manifests itself through the century's art form, advertising. The author has clipped dozens of full-page magazine ads - The Cave Art of the Twentieth Century. On each right-hand page of coated paper a different product or service ad is reproduced. They are handsome, mouthwatering collection. The facing page, in alternate paragraphs of bold and light type, carries McLuhan's comments. These may be his own or C. K. Chesterton's or T. S. Elliot's or a sentence from Finnegans Wake. Sometimes print and picture interrelate, sometimes the juxtaposing seems entirely arbitrary. The form of the book is as interesting as the content. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

Vine Deloria,
Macmillan
Purchase-$5.95
The author, a young standing rock Sioux Indian, calls for a new Indian program which would acknowledge the right of Indians to live in peace, free of harassment. Highly critical of America's treatment of the Indian people and its failure to keep treaties, Mr. Deloria pinpoints constructive action which he believes this nation should take. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

"Most Afro-Americans who now live in the United States and in Latin America can trace their origins to Western Nigeria. Here, then, can be found some of the tales which are a rightful part of the heritage of our own population." The tales are of animals and humans who often outsmart themselves, in their attempts to fool their fellows. The tales are humorous as well as instructive. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

The author writes with profound perspective about the tyranny of words. What is said is topical, lucid, and of tremendous importance for the young reader. The reasoned arguments are spiced with humor and flavored with quite subjective and impassioned opinions about the wasteland of television, the madness of war, etc. The author discusses human speech and semantics, techniques of improving communications in human dialogue, communications in the learning process, facts and opinions, group therapy, and many ancillary topics. An excellent annotated bibliography and an index are appended. (H. W. Wilson-1971)

Jonathan Kozol  1967
Houghton  Purchase-$5.95

The author writes of a year spent in a predominantly Negro school in Boston, where the children were subjected to fear, humiliation and discrimination, thus killing both mind and spirit. The author attempted to impart learning and pride of being, but was defeated by the unwritten yet clearly defined anti-Negro policies of the local school board. A moving indictment of segregation. Northern style. The finest moments in this book are those in which the author quite openly examines his own, ordinary willingness to go along with the rest, to submit to the very mean and stupid practices he so clearly recognized. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Paintings, sculpture, friezes, masks, manuscripts, tapestries, and jewelry from around the world through history. Each represents the fantastic creatures conjured up by man out of fear, hatred, piety or love. Clear explanatory text discusses means of the artist's workmanship in addition to presenting an historical survey. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
Ian L. McHarg

McHarg is a city and regional planner with the ecological outlook. We must design our cities and suburban area with nature, taking advantage of the values of the natural landscape. Its geology, watershed, shores, forests, wildlife, we must leave open spaces for replenishment of the water table and nourishment of the soul. Only in this way can we hope to avoid additional urban blight and ugliness and eventual destruction of our landscape. McHarg shows how intelligent ecological planning can provide us with living areas that are a joy rather than a disaster. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

Julius Horowitz

Purportedly the diary of a bright fifteen-year-old Black girl this compelling, impactful narrative spans two and a half years in the lives of a family of welfare recipients living in the New York Ghetto. At the beginning of the account the family – mother, A. N., thirteen-year-old Harriet, twelve-year-old Charles, and Baby Edgar – has just moved from a cold three rooms to a rat-ridden one room. By the end of the book Charles, who has been living with a white homosexual, is dead from an overdose of drugs, Harriet, also on drugs, has had a series of lovers and aborts a pregnancy, the mother seems resigned to her life on welfare, but A. N. graduates from high school and has a college scholarship. The biting indictment of the welfare system and the way of life it forces on recipients is based on Coward-McCann’s eight years experience as a welfare caseworker. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

S. G. F. Brandon

With its short, signed articles prepared by the faculty of British Universities, packs in a tremendous amount of information on the beliefs, ritual, important figures, schools, councils, sacred books, and many other aspects of the world’s religions, both living and dead. Extensive use of abbreviations, both in the text and in the bibliographies; and the use of many "see" references helps to produce a compact volume. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

George E. Stuart

Text and numerous photographs follow the mysterious Nomad Hunters through the mists of prehistory as they cross from Siberia to Alaska to become the first Americans. The author traces the footsteps of early man from the Frigid Arctic to the scorching deserts of South America. They recreate the flowering of New World Civilizations such as the Maya, the Aztec, and the Inca. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)
DISSENT IN AMERICA

Robert Liston

The author analyzes the nature of dissent in America focusing on the past and present-day methods employed by dissenters - revolution, lawlessness, disorder, demonstrations, separatism, boycotts, influencing the media, the ballot box, and the courts. Excellent discussion is included to show the great strides being made in solving the problems of control, of removing the middle element of violent repression and replacing it with forward-looking, knowledgeable organized protective legality. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

DON'T SHOOT -- WE ARE YOUR CHILDREN

J. Anthony Lukas

The author examines the lives of 10 young Americans and their families and finds that the cliche "generation gap" masks far more complex relationships. Included are a wealthy businessman's daughter and an ex-gang leader found murdered in New York's Greenwich Village, a Harvard SDS Leader, a White Southern Civil Rights Activist, a leader of the Brandeis Afro-American Organization, and a founder of the Yippies. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

DREAMS

Larry Kettelkamp

A simple, clear introduction to theories and studies concerned with the process and importance of dreaming. Briefly discusses ancient beliefs, study of dreams, sleep research, psychic dreams, theories of Freud and Jung, modern research by Kleitman, Aserinsky, Berger, Dement, Fisher, Hernandez-Peon, Ullman and Krippner and suggestions for recording and investigating one's own dreams. Illustrated with drawings, diagrams, and photographs. Index. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

THE EAST INDIANS AND THE PAKISTANS IN AMERICA

Ledna Bagai

The historical background of the East Indians and the conditions which led to their emigration to the United States will be little more than another instance of the sad conditions in much of Asia. However, this frank discussion of the problems faced by Hindus, Sikhs, and Muslims in adjusting to American ways and especially their struggle to obtain citizenship in United States may come as a rude surprise. Included are brief background biographical sketches of East Indians and Pakistanis who are prominent in science, industry, medicine, the arts and education.
The author traces the history of Easter Island and the attempts by such men as Captain Cook and Thor Heyerdahl to solve the mystery of the highly advanced civilization which flourished and perished there, leaving as its sole visible trace a number of gigantic statues. He also describes his own visit to the island. His book is at once a personal expression of his own enthusiasm and an excellent piece of adventure reading about a fabled place.

A collection of ecologically oriented writings with one basic purpose—to awaken the public to the fact that man must reestablish his sense of values if this society is not to undergo an 'ecological suicide'. It emphasizes the conscious human values of man's past failures.

A study of living things in relation to their environment and to each other with a careful analysis of what is meant by environment and by coexistence. Describes nature's many realms and why living things are where they are. Explains what equips living things to survive, and the role man plays as master.

The author with her husband and three children were a White Anglo-Saxon Protestant family living in Omaha in 1961. When they tried to help some Black friends find a home in their community, they paid the price in a series of personal disasters. Mrs. Stalvey has written a remarkable story. She exposes the naive beliefs that she held about the Negroes at the beginning of this story and the views she gained through personal experience throughout the years. Hers is no hearsay evidence. She lived it. The book is a giant step in the education of Americans so that racial justice can be achieved in the United States.
THE END OF THE ROARING TWENTIES

Bill Severn

Beginning with the early colonists’ approval of liquor in moderation, this well-organized work describes early temperance movements, their successes and failures, and the swift passage of the 13th amendment in the aftermath of World War I. The author shows how national enthusiasm for the amendment became increasingly difficult when enormous profits led to ‘organized’ crime. Repeal was advocated as a means of ending the great depression, but when put into effect, it only slightly alleviated the financial crisis. Mr. Severn indicates that when prohibition died, it left a heritage of both national cynicism toward legal restraints of all kinds, and a strong, criminal underworld. An interesting, unbiased overview. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

ESP, S filler S PSYHICS

Vilbourne Christopher

A survey of the techniques and tactics used by Fortune-Tellers and Spiritualists of all sorts. The book is illustrated with handbills or photographs of famous seers and psychics of the past, and all those who achieve fame for ESP, Clairvoyance, Mediumistic Manifestations, Table Tilting, Fire Walking, and Living Burial as being less than magic. This is a useful revelation of the methods used by those who have seduced many otherwise rational people away from realism. Informally, Mr. Christopher provides a means of bringing those who seek magic back to evidential science. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

EVERDAY LIFE IN EARLY INDIA

Michael Edwards

A detailed look at life in early India and its background from roughly the third century B.C. to the eighth-century A.D. Drawing on Indian literature as well as the discoveries of archaeologists, epigraphers, and social anthropologists, Edwards pieces together the history of the period and the daily life in a civilization he characterizes as refined, brilliant, lusty, and incomparable rather than gloomy, depressed by a rigid caste system, and conditioned into accepting unhappiness. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

FAIRY TALES FROM VIETNAM

Dorothy Lewis Robertson

The stories in this book were sent in letters from a young war refugee in Saigon to his foster mother in the United States. They include tales of talking animals, a contest between the spirit of the sea and the spirit of the mountain and a visit to fairyland. There is very little Vietnamese Folklore available to English-speaking children. These eight tales reflect the beliefs, hopes and troubled history of the Vietnamese people. In her introduction the author gives the literary or historic significance of the tales. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
FAMILIES LIVE TOGETHER
Esther K. Necks
Eolet.
The first in a series designed for the family life education program. Photographs serve as the primary means of presenting the concept of a "family" and the fact that many kinds of animals live together in families and are dependent upon each other. The pleasure of playing and working together is emphasized through the portrayal of several familiar situations and activities. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

<td>These nine essays are vaguely related to a central theme—change is the cause, rather than the result of revolution. This thesis is defended by appeals to incidental illustrations arbitrarily selected from man's history—past, present, and envisioned future. The American madhouse of change is described as involving the Latin Americanization of the universities, the Americanization of the big cities, the decline of efficiency in manufacturing and service, the incapacity to maintain the social plant in good repair, the tax-cheating rich and the swaggering intelligentsia. According to the author FUTURE SHOCK is the dizzying disorientation brought on by the premature arrival of the future. Whether we are all victims of a technological jar and doomed to a massive adaptational breakdown is something sociologists are debating. Toffler's aim is to spell out the nature of the problem we face and to suggest how we might learn to cope. Technology within the past several decades has fed on itself and brought about an accelerating thrust of progress that has already, in many ways, projected us into the future. We can anticipate cataclysmic changes in every facet of human experience. Toffler outlines some interesting strategies for survival, writing in a clear popular style. (W. W. Wilson - 1972)

The co-author of the "Kinsey Reports" provides extremely candid information about psychological, sociological, and physiological aspects of sexuality and straightforward suggestions for accepting and fulfilling oneself as a sexual being. An especially refreshing aspect of this no-nonsense book is that the material presented is based on more than 7,000 histories. While the book is intended primarily for girls, boys and parents will find it worthwhile reading as well.
At the time the sun ruled the sky a good llama led a man and his wife and all the animals of the country, high into the mountains. The sun had quarreled with the earth and earth's tears were so many that they created a flood to drown the sun. From their high, safe place the animals watched the sun slip into the flood and reluctantly promise to share each day with the moon. (C. Bro-Dart 1971)

From an essay by Quaker John Woolman of colonial days to a contemporary piece by Lordi Jones, this anthology of familiar and unfamiliar significant writings, some first fully published here, reflects black-white attitudes and interactions over the years and mirrors from different points of view the experiences and hopes of Americans who happen to be Black and whose history is a valid if suppressed part of American History. The Black viewpoint and Black destiny are underscored in the general introduction and in editorial observations preface each piece in a volume intent on placing Black History trends and movements in their rightful American History context. The author analyzes the youth culture which is changing America and predicts a revolution of the new generation, a revolution of consciousness that would offer a new way of life that is nothing less than a new vision of human existence—freedom, creativity, humor, love, community—made possible and necessary by technology. This book is full of insights as to the future. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)
A non-technical compendium of material from the human potential movement, also known as "humanistic psychology", designed to help basically healthy and functional people improve their lives, rather than for use by professional therapists for treating people with serious personality problems. Over two hundred activities are included, both verbal and non-verbal, which have been drawn from such diverse disciplines as Far Eastern Philosophy, Gestalt Dream Analysis and Bioenergetics, to facilitate communication, increase self-awareness, enhance creativity, reduce muscular tension and lessen internal conflict. Appendices contain a list of major centers of humanistic psychology in the United States and other countries, an annotated bibliography of 55 references, and sources of further information.

Thomas A. Harris
1969
Harper & Row
Purchase-$5.95
A detailed description, written for the lay public, of a fairly recently developed and increasing popular, approach to group therapy, Transactional Analysis. The major portion of the book deals with the parent-adult-child personality construct which is the heart of Transactional Analysis. But the author, himself a psychiatrist using this approach, also provides some provocative information on the neurobiology of man, in an attempt to link the workings of the human nervous system, with the personality theory presented.

This Anthology of 71 myths and legends retold in modern English brings together the themes common to all of Polynesia. The succinct introduction is one of the best keys ever written as an aid to the understanding of Polynesian Society. The renderings leave intact the horror, comedy, and above all, the sense of the marvelous which constituted the ways of Polynesian life. The illustrations are perfect foils for the stories which deal with every aspect of man in nature, and the notes are interesting. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Lippincott

Purchase-$3.39

That Leprechauns are plentiful in Ireland is delightfully proven in this book. They are full of tricks which they play on humans who mistreat them. A tramp finds himself with shoes that won't stop walking, a tailor sees a jacket with up-side down sleeves, a peeping-tom has magic sight which turns cats into tigers, and many more. The author is a native of Ireland and writes lovingly and humorously about the wee people. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Discusses the various kinds of life on earth and the average length of life of various plants and animals. Describes the process of aging and tells what happens to the human body when it dies and how death is recognized. Deals with the burial laws that are generally observed in the United States and with the burial customs of several North American Indian Tribes, The Natives, The Hindus, and Pygmies. Concludes with a discussion of the beliefs of people of different cultures in life after death. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

THE LION ON THE PATH
127 Pages/Illus. by Eric Byrd/Music
Hugh Tracey
Praeger
Music transcribed by Andrew Tracey
Rabbit, snake, and lion are among the characters in these twenty-five tales mainly from Southern Africa in the area of the Zamezi and Limpopo Rivers. But the stories are much more subtle and complex than many others now available from Africa and some show startling parallels with European folk-themes. Author's introductory notes are very informative and state that these stories have not been put into print before. Chants with music and a translation are included in many of the tales. In short, a fine source for the right story teller. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

THE LIVING CLOCKS
385 Pages/Illus./Maps
Ritchie R. Ward
Knopf
The author discusses the "Biological Clocks" that govern the behavior of all life from the barnacle to man. He explains how these living clocks account for the sleep of leaves, the difference between a rose at noon and at midnight, and altered human reactions after a prolonged sojourn underground. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

LIVING THINGS

THE MAGIC OF MUSIC

Simple songs to sing with children and easy arrangements of classical music, with suggestions for creative activities, presented in a very useful combination. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

THE MAGIC OF THE SENSES

The author reports on the latest scientific discoveries regarding the senses of animals and humans. He gives us, in non-technical language an insight into the psychology and physiology of the senses and the marvellous feats of perception of which many animals are capable, including such little-know subjects as magnetic and electrical orientation, animal luminescence, insect and bird navigation. The numerous drawings and diagrams are clear and helpful in understanding the text, while the photographs show many of the animals discussed. This book is up to date and covers both American and European Literature. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

THE MAGIC OF WORDS

Introduction to the various means of communication which man uses to express his ideas and feelings. Explains briefly the origin of written and spoken language, codes, signals and numbers. (C Bro-Dart)
In this book, the author elaborates the vices of our technocratic society and its ability to reduce everything to order, and humans to objects. Second, he discusses the emergence of the counter-culture as a reaction to the thoughts of Marcuse, Brown, Ginsburg, Watts and Goodman, especially in the context of the source of man’s thoughts and humanity, and as a criticism of the rational-scientific explanations. Last, he pleads for the abandonment of the objective consciousness of science and the adoption of human consciousness of the visionary, the shaman. Roszak offers a concise interpretation and summary of the youth movement today. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

Mazel, Good Luck, and Shlimazel, Bad Luck, make a set one day. Whatever good Mazel can do, in a year, Shlimazel will undo in a second and win a barrel of the wine of forgetfulness. Mazel helps Tam, an impoverished boy, gain the confidence of the king and the love of the princess. But when Tam gets some Lioness' milk to cure the ailing king, Shlimazel takes control of Tam's tongue when he presents the milk and it seems that Shlimazel has won. However, Shlimazel, drunk with wine, forgets Tam, and Mazel again offers help. (C Brookt-Bart 1971)

The children whose writing appears in this book live in the slums. Their ages range from seven to eighteen and most of them are Black or Puerto Rican. This anthology resulted from my growing awareness that the children I had been teaching were something special. All children are. It became important to me to make other people aware of this. This book is primarily for them and for the children and teachers whom I hope it will encourage to be freer in their writing and teaching. The book is divided into four sections. One containing pieces on self, family, friends, and school. Another on the ghetto, neighborhood, the third on the world outside the ghetto, and the last on ideas about death, sleep, love, science, sex, and God.

There are a number of variations in the patterns of menstruation which come within the bounds of normality, but have attendant discomfort and suffering, both physical and mental. These variations are rarely to be found in any textbook but have a considerable sociological impact on society. They and their consequences are the subject of this book. It is my hope that by opening up this subject to a wider audience I may induce women to appreciate that there is an answer to much of today's unnecessary suffering, that men may gain a sympathetic understanding of the problems of the opposite sex. THE MIND OF MAN RDG 9-12 CA 14-21 MA 14-20
288 pages/Col/Illus. 1970
Nigel Calder Viking Purchase-$8.95
An investigation into current research on the brain and human nature. Magnificently illustrated with photos and two-tone drawings and diagrams, the volume is a prime example of excellent scientific writing for the general reader. In its three parts Calder explains the brain as an enormously subtle electric machine in its relation to human functions and passions, studies what experts have learned and are now learning of the intricate 'maze' of the mind through brain-damaged victims and finally examines in depth the many subtle aspects of the human brain in its development from infancy to creative intellect. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)
The entries are from the closely related fields of psychology, social psychology, anthropology, and statistics. Economics and political science are also represented with terms that are frequently used by sociologists. The definitions explain as well as define the more complex terms. There are also discussions of the present standing in the profession of many controversial or outmoded terms. Whenever appropriate the entries specify the origins of the terms and cite their sources. However brief, every entry is long enough to assure that even a layman or neophyte can understand the explanation, and specific enough to distinguish among various meanings of the same or similar terms as between legend and myth, or two senses of historicism, or the many concepts of family. The authors define but do not defend jargon. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

This survey is so gracefully written and its information so enormously exciting that it could have a wide general readership. Dr. Southern covers everything from the first Black music in the colonies, during the revolution, slave festivals and gatherings, plantation entertainment, the anonymous slave composers, the ballad writers of the gay nineties, jazzman of the 20th century, down to today's symphonic composers. There is a combination bibliography and discography that is alone worth the price of the book for its careful choice of pieces of music to be listened to and understood. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

The author interviews 32 young people asking them to explain why as privileged, middle class youth, they reject with such vehemence so much of what their parents and society offers them. These young people disapprove of the hypocrisy in most marriages, government, laws regarding drugs, the war, their churches and religion, the educational system, and the sexual mores of the adult society. They all have either tried drugs or had the chance to and have had a variety of sexual experiences in their adolescent years. They do not feel any fidelity to the ostensible sexual mores of their parents' generation and also point out that cigarettes and alcohol are self-destructive, whereas the drug scene is less harmful. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

In this Historical Survey of the development of man from prehistoric times through the Space Age the author explores the forces that have shaped technology, taking life itself to be the primary phenomenon, and creativity, rather than the conquest of nature, as the ultimate criterion of man's biological and cultural success. This work is not an attack on modern technology per se, but rather on its misuses. Mumford is concerned with saving what is valuable from the irrational obsessions and compulsions that characterize the prevailing applications of science and technology. As in the past, Mumford's work is most illuminating. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)
How to make something out of nothing is recounted here in a version reminiscent of "Stone Soup" which is set in France. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

THE NEGRO PILGRIMAGE IN AMERICA
C. Eric Lincoln
Praeger
1969
Purchase-$5.95
This book begins with the Black Americans in 1600 and ends with the present conditions of the race. There is a span of 400 years, years that depict suffering, loneliness, and deep problems, but these conditions are always fortified by an undaunted spirit of courage. C. Eric Lincoln provides information that early historians were loath to relate; E.G. it was a Negro who navigated the first ship to land in the New World, there were 30 Negroes with Balboa when he discovered the Pacific Ocean. There are many other facts covering the achievements of Black American which should be brought to the attention of all young people. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

Presents the problems of the American City today - Inner City Slums with sprawling suburbs, Air and Water Pollution, and inadequate recreational and transportation facilities. Through text, photos, charts and architectural plans the author shows the kinds of city planning going on today to end these blights and explains what must be done in the future. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
The trickster herd of many of these tales is Ljapa, the tortoise. Like Anasi, the spider from Ashanti folklore and brother Terrapin from United States Negro Folklore, he is shrewd, conniving, quite an exhibitionist and almost totally unpredictable and preposterous. This collection, which comes mostly from the Yoruba people, also includes how and why tales and legends. The author's knowledgeable notes on each story are an excellent discussion of comparative folklore. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

POEMS OF WAR RESISTANCE FROM 2300 BC TO THE PRESENT
Scott Bates
Grossman
Purchase-$8.95
Running the gamut from poetry to doggerel and including folk songs, epigrams, maxims, and a few representative prose messages. This is an attractive though uneven collection of anti-war sentiment which, on the whole, effectively conveys the intended message. The book is divided into eight somewhat homogeneous sections, and the selections range widely in time but emphasize the more recent. Among the writers included are Lucretius, Buddha, Aristophanes, Issa, Leo Tolstoi, Thomas Hardy, Denise Levertov, Robert Lowell, Eve Merriam, Jacques Prevert, and Pete Seeger. Brief clarifying notes are scattered throughout. An author-title index is provided. (H, W. Wilson-1971)
The author speaks out in behalf of the waves of rebellion that are sweeping the nation and the entire world. Justice Douglas argues that young people are right to rise up against widespread poverty, segregation, inequitable laws, and inadequate education. They are right to protest the pollution of America. He points out that although violence has no constitutional sanction, it is often the only effective response when grievances keep mounting and most elected spokesmen represent the establishment. The book is a classic statement of the Civil Libertarian viewpoint and indeed of traditional American Liberalism grounded in the Bill of Rights, our revolutionary heritage, and the revolutionary spirit which overthrew George III.

(W. W. Wilson - 1971)

This is a collection of short reports on the oil industry, industrial water pollution, sewer-construction abuses and the games corporations play with government at the expense of the environment.

This is an introductory work wherein Laine discusses the concept of normality and challenges the assumptions which are frequently associated with the concept. Laine's topics include persons and experience, psycholotherapeutic experience, mystification experience, us and them, schizophrenic experience, transcendent experience, 10-day voyage, and bird of paradise.

Two boys on a fishing trip discover that a pond is more than just a body of water in which fish and plants are found. By watching the various animals they learn that some eat plants, others eat animals and few eat both. By means of this observation they become aware that animals and humans are part of a food chain. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Explores the effects of the fact that "you were born into a world crowded with people". Explores why population grows so fast, challenge of food problems, water and space, and the question of who will decide how many. A special workshop section (P. 49-56) suggests simple experiments that children can carry out to find out more about population. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
THE PORTABLE LUNG
Joseph Campbell
Viking Press

Campbell introduces the elementary terms and themes of analytical psychology. This book is designed to trace Jung's thought and include articles on stages of life, structure of the psyche, instinct and unconscious, phenomenology of the self, marriage, psychological types, transcendent function, analytical psychology and poetry, dream symbolism and alchemy, spiritual problems, eastern and western thinking, synchronicity and the biblical job.

PREHISTORIC MAN
Clifford D. Simak

In this survey of man's prehistoric rise to civilization the author deals with such subjects as the evolution of the human body, the origin and purposes of cave art, how men first learned to trust each other, how dogs may have domesticated man, the unique characteristics of flint, and prehistoric religions. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

PREJUDICE U.S.A.
Charles Y. Glock

The book consists of perceptive essays by Dore Schary, Saunders Redding, Seymour Lipset, Rodney Stark, M. Brewater Smith, Charles Silberman and Richard Petcher. Exploring prejudice in American political life, in the Blacks' struggle for equality, in churches, the mass media, schools and the marketplace. Professed ideals are in contrast to painful reality in every area discussed, but the book's context is dynamic and optimistic. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

THE PRIMAL SCREAM - REVOLUTIONARY CURE FOR NEUROSIS
Janov

This is Janov's approach to psychological thinking. Through case histories he demonstrates how his approach cures lifelong problems of those people who were under his direction. Janov covers pains, memory tension, defenses, nature of feeling, cure, the scream, relationship of his therapy to other therapies, dreams, love, fear and anger, drugs and addictions, psychogies and others.

THE PURSUIT OF LONELINESS
Philip Slater

In this discussion of American life, the author examines such aspects of our society as the creation of artificial needs by business, the violence and aggressiveness of our culture and the poverty we decry but accept even while professing belief in the equality of men. The challenging, constantly stimulating book asks vital questions about the assumptions and direction of American society. (H. W. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

This exploration of the problems racking over society examines our cities, education, race conflict, youth, the population crises and conservation as well as television and the roles of the free press.

The author argues that our nation's social policies are suitable only to our rural, nineteenth-century past, and are now outmoded. He urges that we remodel our social, economic, and political institutions to meet the human requirements of an irreversibly urban age. A fresh approach to a newer world, this volume is an appeal to develop our institutions of intelligence and resource development. Adding to this excellent account is an introduction on information pollution. Good index and appendix of quoted source materials.

According to the author the book is intended to be an introductory survey of the contributions, both factual and conceptual, various areas of biology have made to the study of race in man. The style is easy and the text flows and reads well. The seven chapters deal with the origin concepts, and definition of race and races, human variabilities and genetic traits.

The author discusses the present mood and social attitudes of the American people, and calls for a reassessment of our national priorities. What should our goals be as a nation. Why is it so hard to accomplish social change. Can we design a society capable of continuos renewal. What has happened to our confidence as a people. Can we regain it. It is to these considerations that I address myself.

Drawing largely on secondary historical sources and some of the arguments of W. E. B. Du Bois and Harold Cruse, the author brings together and analyzes a number of recurring themes in the history of American Black Nationalism. He also reviews its dilemmas, contradictions, failures, and occasional excesses.
The people studied include the Akans of Ghana and the Ivory Coast, the Yoruba of Nigeria, and some of the Nilotic groups of Uganda and the Southern Sudan. Certain key figures in African religions, the king, the earth priest, and the medicine man, are described. King notes that in these traditional African religions man had no unresolved conflicts, life had balance and meaning. (H.W. Wilson - 1971)

Based on the results of a summer 1969 Gallup poll taken for 'Newsweek' Magazine this is a concise, objective survey of Negro opinion on a variety of important issues including discrimination, Black leadership techniques in the civil rights movement, rioting, attitude toward Whites, and probably developments in the racial situation during the 1970's. Interspersed throughout are seven personal interviews with such Blacks influential in today's movement as Harry Edwards, Charles Evers, Jesse Jackson, and Bayard Rustin. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

Includes Mr. Josephy's paper with several dozen other documents bearing on the issues to which Red Power is addressing itself today, the Indian's right to a voice in the policies and decisions affecting the laws under which he lives, his right to better health measures and to an education that will serve him in an economy where he is largely an outsider. Is he on the way to these. In this symposium Mr. Josephy and his fellow contributors suggest that he may be. But new voices are being heard, speaking forcefully at gatherings like those of the National Indian Youth Council. Their words, and those of elders recalling the culture in which they were raised, are in these pages. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

This assessment of the nation's college scene discusses the college lottery - a cultural time bomb, why the problem has grown, the student the underachiever, the high school, where the problem often starts, college and the sellers' market, how to select a college, junior colleges, resurrecting a disastrous semester, the blessings of dropping or flunking out, shifting gears for college, and dealing with the draft board. The author discusses Biomedical Research and presents a prognosis of the benefits and dangers that may develop from its application. Among the anticipated immediate and long-range results are the saving and prolonging of life by means of organ transplants, artificial organs, tissue culture and cryobiology, prenatal treatment of congenital defects, control of sex and genetic surgery, and brain and personality control through manipulation of brain cell patterns. Rosenfeld explores the problems such practices would create, together with their legal, moral, ethical, and philosophical implications, and while admitting to science-fictional nature of some of the possibilities and recognizing their revolutionary aspects, he urges their serious, reasoned consideration. An extensive bibliography of both popular and scholarly material. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

SEX--TELLING IT STRAIGHT
96 Pages/Ilus.
Eric W. Johnson
Lippincott
Purchase-$3.95

The author writes primarily for boys and girls growing up in places where hardship is a fact of life and where children are exposed to sex at an early age. A word list gives slang expressions and the standard equivalents which the author uses to discuss many aspects of sex including such topics as birth control, masturbation and homosexuality. With this book, all heresay about sex will become knowledge and provide the young reader a position from which to make value judgements. This new knowledge will be bound to bring about a new sense of responsibility in the use of himself in what has heretofore been a nebulous area of learning for parents, teachers, and especially the child. This book should be made available to each student approaching puberty.

This book traces the history of American Slavery from its beginnings in Africa to Latin America and then on to the American Colonies. The author traces the horrors of the slave trade and the treatment of slaves in the north as well as the south.

SO HUMAN AN ANIMAL
Rene Dubos
Scribner

The author, a microbiologist, discusses how man responds to his physical and social surroundings. He writes of the failure of science through its game of overpromise and stresses the need for harmony with nature. The author recommends conservation, and restraints on mechanization as essential checks on the ultimate decay of civilization. A nontechnical treatment, suitable for informed laymen and for students. (H. W. Wilson-1972)

SONGS THAT CHANGES THE WORLD
Wanda Wilson Whitman
Crown

Selecting universal expressions of musical protest from around the world, the editor presents 300 songs which have reflected or contributed to social change throughout history and provides melody lines and chords for each. She groups the songs by their themes of revolution, patriotism, war, work, hard times, escape, religion, politics, empire, peace, prejudice, social significance, and a changing world. Interestingly giving explanatory notes throughout and incorporating foreign language versions and contemporary verses. Indexes of song titles and first lines are included. (H. W. Wilson-1971)

SON OF RAVEN, SON OF DEER - FABLES OF THE TSE-SHIAHT PEOPLE
George Clutesi
Grays Pub.

Son of deer is curious and foolhardy, son of raven is greedy and thoughtless. From the amusing antics of these two, the Tse-Shat Indian children have learned to understand what is good and what is foolish. Other children find that what is good and what is foolish is the same in any people's folklore, but here the point is made in twelve tales with a distinctive Indian flavor. Anyone who visited the Indian Pavilion at Expo 67 will remember this artist's work which was there. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

SUBURBIA- CIVIC DENIAL

Robert Goldstein

MacMillan

By examining the development of suburbia within the megalopolitan area that stretches from Boston to Philadelphia its impact on cities, towns, and countryside, its life patterns, its future, the author presents a case for regional planning, a redefinition of land use and a recommitment to public rather than private well-being. This book comes across as a good workmanlike examination. It combines demographic, historic, economic, and sociologic detail into a melange that is readable, informative, and entertaining. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

SURVIVAL IN SPACE

Yuri Gagarin

Praeger

The book describes the problems man faces living in space. Although there is some discussion of life support - oxygen, food, temperature, and so on, the book deals primarily with the psychological problems such as the effects of prolonged isolation or weightlessness which space travelers must overcome. The emphasis, naturally, is upon Russian space flights and experiments. A considerable part of the book is devoted to describing man's reaction to stress and the unusual, and how these reactions are tested to determine if an applicant would be suitable as an astronaut. The limitations of machines are discussed as well as the frustrations and psychological effects they can produce when they do not perform as expected. There are many references to work done in the Nasa manned Space Flight Program and the authors show considerable knowledge of U. S. Literature. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

TALL TALES FROM THE HIGH HILLS, AND OTHER STORIES

Ellis Creole

Nelson

A trip to the Blue Right Mountains took the Creoles high to the top of a mountain where Hank Higgins lived. Hank's tall tales of "perambulatin pumpkins" and turnips large enough to feed 27 sheep were gathered into this volume. The humor of self-kicking machines and devils captured in jugs are timeless and young readers will chuckle over and over at these tales. (C'Bro-Dart 1971)
"Not every boy had a back door to his grandmother's pantry and his grandfather's stories." Frank's grandfather was one of the greatest tall-story tellers that ever there was. He told of sweat fish that swam backwards to keep sweat out of their eyes, hoop snakes that rolled around by holding their tails in their mouths and industrious bull-frogs who lived in cows so that butter could be produced at the source. The tales go on for many nights until the grandparents move to a new house, but the author has carefully recorded the tales so that we can slip through a back door and hear the tales.

(C Bro-Dart 1971)

This moving account of Negroes' struggle for equality begins with the arrival of first slave ship in 1619 and ends with assassination of Martin Luther King. Emphasis is on Modern Civil Rights Movement which began in 1906. Discusses NAACP, Urban League, Core, SNCC, Dr. Du Bois, Dr. King, sit-ins, freedom riders, march on Washington, Selma, Birmingham and rise of Black Power. Points out responsibility of White Americans in making promise of freedom a reality. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Good introduction to the elementary skills of observing, classifying, inferring and predicting. Items used for comparison are animals, flowers, leaves and toys. Adult guidance is necessary for full benefit. Worthwhile classroom discussion book. Children enjoy it after they understand the purpose of the text. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

"These tales told originally by famous Armenian storytellers, praise the goodness of the common people, make fun of their faults, and in many instances are very much like the well-known folktales which have come from other parts of the world." Introduction: A lazy man pretends to be dead until his wife fools him into believing that harder work awaits him in heaven. A very poor couple live in complete happiness until a king's gift of gold creates so many worries and cares that they lose the greater gift of peace and love. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

The report succinctly discusses the characteristics, causes, continued increase, and possible remedies for violent crime in today's U. S., making it explicit that nothing less than a restructuring of urban life will bring about genuine improvement. Moynihan's introduction—almost as long as the report itself, sets forth a ten-point national urban policy designed to coordinate and increase federal-local action on urban problems. Many Americans, accustomed to having their society's faults screamed at them have simply tuned out. Therefore, they may find the statements of this calm and deliberative report all the more alarming. Moynihan's essay is a useful and thought-provoking adjunct to the report. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

The final report of the National Commission on The Causes and Prevention of Violence. This report reviews the History of Violence in America, analyzes its various manifestations, discusses modern developments, and makes specific proposals. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

This report is concerned with our urban and rural environment crisis of blight, pollution, and shrinkage. It is really a manual for it contains innumerable examples of what individuals, groups, and government have done in specific situations of neighborhoods, metropolitan areas, downtown areas, waterways, and so on. It contains recommendations by the council, a valuable bibliography of books, periodicals, and films, and a list of local, state, federal and private groups that can help in solving the problems. (H. W. Wilson - 1971)

A variety of mutually helpful, parasitic, and harmful relationships are described for the young student of ecology. Showing how every living creature depends on its environment to survive, the author tells about the plover who cleans the crocodile's teeth, about the Africa tick birds that eat 'ticks on rhinoceroses' hides, and about one-sided relationships as well. WAR CRIMES AND THE AMERICAN CONSCIENCE

Erwin Knoll

Holt

1970

$5.95

Not until the accounts of the killing of hundreds of helpless men, women and children by G.I.'s at My Lai leaked out last year did numbers of the American people experience enough of a shock to search their individual consciences concerning their support of our government's role in Vietnam. In February of this year a notable conference of concerned legislators, churchmen, political scientists, lawyers, psychologists, biologists and others convened to discuss the profound moral, legal and social issues raised by what has become the most unpopular war in our history. This book is an edited transcript of the proceedings together with supplementary material. It is possibly the most valuable and important single-volume collection of relevant source material available on this crucial subject, and should be read soberly by Americans of every shade of conviction. (H. W. Wilson-1971)

WAYLORD OF THE GENJI

Dale Carlson

Atheneum

1970

$4.73

Yoshitsune, a Japanese hero of the Benji Clan, is, like King Arthur, a folk hero of long ago. The Genji Clan is outlawed, but three Genji brothers are left alive. Yoritomo, the eldest, is the most perfect, but he lacks emotion and feelings. Yoshitomo, the second brother, lacks Yorimoto's cold clear logic. He is emotional and a peerless battle leader. Noriyori, the third brother, has none of the talent and ability of the other two. The brothers respect but do not love each other, but they are bound together. A fascinating legend. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
This selection of Du Bois work is in excellent taste. Most of these works will be new to the followers of Du Bois, and this newness will provide greater understanding of the profound depth and scope of that great Black leader's philosophy. The readings cover the field, incorporating works dealing with Black manners, politics, race relations, and African Heritage, and a surprising criticism of the 'talented tenth' which Du Bois advocated at the turn of the century. While one might wonder why more attention was not given to Panafri- canism as a unit, the overall impression left by Weinberg's editing is favorable. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

An Indian spokesman sees racial conflict, inflation, the ecological crisis, and power groups as symptoms rather than causes of the American malaise. His proposed solution to the legacy of genocide, imperialism, capitalism, feudalism, and liberalism centers around an Indian idea. That group identity and community development are a kind of neotribalism, and that the elements of American society are a collection of tribes - Indians, Chicanos, Blacks, Hippies, and others. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

This discussion of how communities grow, change and help each other, deals briefly with the need for laws, taxes, community helpers, schools, playgrounds, roads and streets. It also discusses what each member of the family can do to serve his community. (C. Bro-Dart 1971)

"It feels like squash to be a column, like bend to be a beam, like squeeze to be an arch." The basic principles of architecture and building construction are explained and shown graphically through comparisons to physical feelings in response to gravity. (C. Bro-Dart 1971)

This simple presentation of the origin of written language traces the development of writing from the time of the stone age man to the time of the Roman Empire. Shows how the name Richard might have been written in picture writing, idea writing, sound writing, and in Egyptian Hieroglyphics and by the Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans. (C. Bro-Dart-1971)

The photographer-poet's subjects range from peace symbolized by a dove in nocturnal flight to stacked wheat, to houses by the sea, with widowhood, lonely men, last season's leaves and his father's funeral. The color photographs, mostly haunting representations of romantic symbols, are exquisite revelations of the author's artistic vision. In reading his poetry, one begins to sense the fully visual character of his art. Even his words seem to be translated through a creative camera lens, and the rich pictorial imagery works well to conjure up each photograph even as it is being looked at. (H. W. Wilson - 1972)

The report favors open dissemination of information and materials regarding contraception, it also concludes that no woman should be forced to bear an unwanted child. On death control it poses more questions than it answers, but there is agreement that no life should be artificially prolonged when there is conclusive evidence that a patient has suffered irreversible brain damage. The laws of inheritance are presented in rhyming verse which has three themes. 1) "How Mendel's experiments with garden peas led to our modern theory of heredity". 2) "How Mendel cross-pollinated one pea plant with another") 3) "Mendel, the modest monk—a description of his life and work". (C Bro-Dart 1971)
After explaining that there are more than the five senses of touch, taste, sight, hearing and smell (e.g. ability to sense heat, cold, pressure, etc.) the five senses are reviewed one by one. The style is informal, illustrated material good, and the information well-handled for this age level. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Warriors and animals, the sun, the night, the stars--these themes have inspired art, poetry, and legend for centuries. How arts of different eras have interpreted these concepts according to their cultures and their own personal vision is explained and shown through 117 reproductions. An organized and cohesive text brings in related fables and mythology to enrich cultural backgrounds of artistic presentations. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Grass, sod, stone, snow, brick and steel are some of the materials which have been used to build homes, and this book tells how, why, and where. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

These 25 African folk songs selected by sincere Miriam Makeba are arranged for piano, guitar and percussion with brief notes that explain the meaning of each song and describe its rhythm pattern. Lyrics are provided in the authentic Africa Language and also in English. (H. W. Wilson 1972)

Fifty folktales make up this collection. All of the tales are pure nonsense and sure to tickle the funny bone of young readers. Many of the tales are short, only one page, making them easy to remember and share. All the stories are identified in a section of notes and comments, which highlights the author's scholarly selection of his tales. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
The world of the Rain Forest

Robert Silverberg
Meredith Press

The Rain Forest is "a silent world, a warm world, a green world, a wet world", and an intriguing world." Until the present time few men have studied the rain forest because of its dampness and heat. The curiosities of the rain forest, the buttressed trees, the sameness of the leaves on the various trees in the forest, and the billions of insect inhabitants stir the imaginations of scientists and the search is on to unravel the secrets of these forests which span the globe. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Writing

Murry McCain
Farrar, Straus

Points our relationship of alphabet to talking and writing, different ways and kinds of writing, and lists words that express seeing, hearing, knowing and feeling. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

The Writing on the Wall

Walter Lowenfels
Doubleday

An excellent anthology, diverse in style and form, echoing the tempo of our times. Some of the poets are of past generations but of contemporary vision, but most are the poets of today. The selections reflect the restlessness of youth and its rejection of ephemeral values, the protest against war and racial injustice, the isolation of man from fellow man. Among poets represented are Whitman, Dickinson, Pound, Cummings, Millay, Sandburg, Ginsberg, and Ferlinghetti. (H. W. Wilson -1971)

Your Changing City

Monroe Schere
Prentice-Hall

Urban planning as a career or as a necessity to our big cities is introduced in this book as one of our most crucial needs today. The discussion covers many aspects - transportation, water, food, fuel, electricity, pollution, wastes and people. The text explains what is behind changes in cities, how they are engineered and the problems they encounter. Should provide stimulating reading for the environment conscious generation. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Zomo, The Rabbit

Hugh Sturton
Atheneum

Drawings by Peter Wafner.
The tales recounted here are adopted by the author from his having heard the Hausa Tribes of Northern Nigeria tell them around the fireside. The hero, Zomo, is the same character who later became "Brer Rabbit" when transplanted to the American South. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Photographs

The Art of Ancient Peru

Shirley Glubok

Designed by Gerald Mook. Special photography by Alfred H. Tamarin.

Harper and Row

Purchase $84.11

The art of Ancient Peru dates back about 2,500 years before the fall of the Inca. Pottery, gold and silver mouth masks, buildings and statues of stone, embroidered, painted, and woven textiles for shirts and ponchos were decorated with animal and human figures -- cats, jaguars, fish, lizards, snakes, warriors and gods. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

The Art of the Eskimo

Shirley Glubok

Designed by Oscar Krauss. Special photography by Alfred H. Tamarin

Harper and Row

Purchase $5.49

The Eskimo is a skillful artist. He makes spirit masks that are jolly or fearsome, he carves walruses, seals, reindeer, hunters, and dancers from pieces of ivory, wood and bone. He decorates his tools, knives, hats, oarlocks and useful articles with designs. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

Rural Education Studies - Basic Album

8 Albums, 12 Photos each (18 x 18 inch) B/W

Purchase $98.99

Oversize photographs which will stand on desk or table present multi-ethnic views of a wide variety of aspects of rural life, from the typical middle class white farmer of the mid-Atlantic states to the migrant workers of California and the share croppers of the deep south. The photography is of excellent quality and the cardboard is coated to withstand much handling and pointing and fingerling. The lack of captions or identification in the albums themselves, provides the teacher with almost unlimited use regarding age or subject application. Identifications and valuable suggestions for their use are provided in the teacher's guide. The photographs deal with the concepts of individual growth, the family, the neighborhood, the rural community, work, to market operations, agriculture opportunities and conservation. By presenting rural life from all over the country, these albums become of value to almost any school child - rural, suburban and urban. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
Experimental materials, including carefully developed teacher's guide and sets of photographs, chosen to illustrate problems and attitudes toward living in big cities, represent a technique for improving human relations and skills in observation, discussion, and vocabulary.

Contents - Level D - a city is, Level E - work is, Level F - opportunity is Level G - recreation is, Level H - renewal is.

(C Bro-Dart 1971)

Major urban centers are presented as case studies in the teacher's search for materials to illustrate discussion and study of modern problems in typical American cities. Designed to be used with the basic albums in urban education studies, although the special city albums may be used individually. Contents - New York is, Washington, D. C. is, Detroit is, Denver is, Los Angeles is, San Francisco is, Tokyo is, Chicago is. (C Bro-Dart 1971)

DISCUSSION PICTURES FOR BEGINNING SOCIAL STUDIES

CA 5-15 MA 6-14
20 x 25 inch and 72 (20 x 20 inch) color
1967
Raymond D. Muessig
Harper and Row
Purchase-$45.00
Includes Teacher's Guide. Eighteen fundamental human themes are re-presented by the larger photographs and amplified by four supporting pictures for each theme. Many of the larger pictures are in full color. All are laminated for longer use, but are not sturdy enough to stand without support. Reflecting recent theories for teaching social studies, the themes support the concept that children must learn to see themselves as related to, dependent upon, and interdependent with, people near and far. Thus, the pictures have a broad representation of cultures, socio-economic backgrounds and area-climatic locates. Despite the title, creative teachers will find a wide application in age levels, and subject areas, as well as in the development of many skills and attitudes. (C Bro-Dart 1971)
