1. VISUAL AIDS SPECIFICALLY DESIGNED FOR ENGLISH-LANGUAGE TEACHING

This list includes titles which will be familiar to many teachers as courses, and it is important to remember that the materials from these courses which we have abstracted as 'visual aids' were designed as part of an integrated set of teaching materials. This does not mean that the audio-visual materials of different courses are not interchangeable and cannot be used in different combinations to meet different group or individual needs and different learning situations.

The crucial factor in adapting various materials to the requirements of a specific syllabus is the maintenance of meaningful and systematic connections between the content and difficulty of whatever multi media components may be adapted. Consider, for instance, the excellent filmstrips which accompany some of the courses in this list. If their companion tapes are unsuitable for a particular purpose, they can be fitted to home made dialogue or narrative tapes, or cut into slides to be linked to a tape in a tape/slide programme.

Annotations for the following courses do not always mention audio-tapes or readers. A fuller description will be found in publishers' catalogues or in Recorded Materials for Teaching English (ETIC, British Council).

2. MOTHER TONGUE EDUCATIONAL MATERIALS WHICH COULD BE APPLIED TO ENGLISH-LANGUAGE TEACHING

The items in this list have largely been drawn from the field of elementary mother-tongue English teaching.

Current approaches to language teaching in the primary school share many of the linguistic principles that apply to foreign and second language teaching. The use of activity and play techniques in schools to involve young pupils in classroom procedures and to exploit natural learning behaviour is well known to most teachers. What may not be so familiar is the range of materials designed to develop particular language skills in a carefully graded and systematic way. For instance, games that practise phonic skills or word/letter recognition skills may be highly relevant to EFL/ESL syllabi in countries where English is introduced at an early stage in the curriculum. Other games may be equally valid for older beginners but are unsuitable because of their infantile appearance. In this case it is the principle of the game that must be matched with a more sophisticated format. Some games, such as word-lotto, present single object illustrations which are stylistically neutral and this compatibility problem does not occur.

Many of the wallcharts and picture-friezes, however, would be restricted to young foreign students because of the child characters they depict or the childish activities they illustrate. The words 'young children' in the annotation indicate this restriction.

Although the bias in this section of the catalogue is, again, towards visual aids, some recorded materials have been included if only because there is no other context at the moment in which they could appear.

It may seem anomalous to include such self-contained and extensive courses as Scope, Concept 7-9, and Breakthrough to Literacy in a survey of essentially supplementary material. However, these courses represent innovative concepts of teachers' and pupils' materials which could enrich and extend EFL/ESL teaching. They also exemplify an imaginative approach to the design of multi-media instructional materials which allow for group and individual learning activities.

AESOP'S FABLES

THE TRAVELLERS AND THE THIEVES
Eothen International Ltd

A free adaptation of 2 West African folk stories, using cartoon animation. 16mm or 8mm super with magnetic sound-track (also available: Pre-striped mute for self-recording)

VALUES IN ACTION
Ealing Scientific Ltd

These films are designed to provoke discussion amongst teenagers of moral issues in conduct by presenting a problem situation involving children at school or in the community where a decision must be made. The film-loop shows 3 alternative ways of acting, none of which effectively resolve the situation. This open-ended narrative format has a language-teaching potential at different levels of complexity (eg as a context for narrative presentation or practice or as the contextualisation of a self-made story tape). Titles: The Damaged Book, A student, accidentally and unnoticed, damages a library book. The alternative actions explore deception and honesty. Also: The Borrowed Bicycle; Spray Paint; Rocks and Trains; Ganging Up; The Cheat; The Lost Baseball; The Cashier's Mistake; The Thief. Cartridge super 8mm cine-loop (set of 9): £30.00

VISIGRAPH
Thomas Hope Ltd

A language-practice kit for primary juniors which includes a tablestand, a storage and demonstration board, flannelgraph background sheets and shapes, figures and words on these topics: At Home; At School; On the Farm; At the Supermarket; At the Post Office; At the Airport; Man in Space; At the Seaside; Fun Together; Clothes We Wear.

VOCABULARY SHEETS
Remedial Supply Co

Designed as remedial language practice for older students, on lines used in early language development materials. Sheets of black-line drawings in student packs present a wide range of familiar and novel scenes and story sequences which can be used for oral or written group or individual practice.

WANDERLAND
James Galt and Co

A wallochart fantasy-land of woods, mountains, monsters and fairy-tale characters with paths for children to explore imaginatively.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?
Student Recordings

Intended as topics for debate arising from a dramatised incident, the tape presents points for and against the topic so as to provide a cued context for student self-expression. Topics: Hunting; Holidays; The Circus; The Tudor House. Audio-tape, open reel:

WHAT SHALL WE DO?
EP Ltd

Verbal patterns are practised through the illustration of a number of actions such as running, jumping, laughing and crying. Filmstrip, b & w:

4. AUDIO-VISUAL MATERIALS ON BRITISH LIFE AND INSTITUTIONS

This list recognises 2 categories of cultural background or civilisation material. The first comprises essentially decorative background visuals, at primary and secondary school level, which provide a pictorial context for language-learning and function as a referent for the cultural content of dialogues, comprehension texts, etc. This category of visual aids is also served by Section 5.

The second category of cultural background material comprises actual teaching or study materials (eg. Britain Today; Viewpoints) where English is learnt through a topic-based study of contemporary British society. Advanced students who are using authentic documents about Britain will also be served by Section 4.

The rather diffuse motivation of adult students, who are possibly travel-oriented, would also be boosted by enjoyable background material which is also informational and documentary.

A third category of background material which Section 4 does not include is the type of realia (tourist maps, menus, newspapers, postcards) which can make up information packs for individual project assignments. Regional tourist boards, travel agencies and the other agencies listed in Section 8 represent sources of such materials.

Some of the suppliers listed in this section would seem to bear little relationship to English language teaching, especially manufacturers who are promoting their product through 'educational publications'. Although such materials may be topically irrelevant they are a source of visuals for the production of wallcharts, magnet-board and flannel-board figures etc. Other addresses supply pictorial background material. Some of the entries have been included in the hope that they may assist unpredictable and diverse requirements for teaching materials.

Not all suppliers will be prepared to despatch material overseas. It would be wise to enquire about postage costs before requesting material and to demonstrate that you have made appropriate arrangements for payment.

ASSOCIATION OF AGRICULTURE, 78 Buckingham Gate, London SW1. Farm Study Scheme; sample studies of typical farms in Great Britain and the Commonwealth. Agricultural Advisory Service includes handbooks on Types of Farming in Britain (with coloured map 12" x 9"), Farm visits and bibliography of source material.

ATHENA REPRODUCTIONS LTD, PO Box 13, Bishops Stortford, Herts. Pictures can be seen at 7 viewing galleries in London - 01 437 1339. An attractive range of well produced visual material for general decorative purposes, but mostly very acceptable for educational work. An illustrated catalogue is available.

BANK EDUCATION SERVICE, 10 Lombard Street, London EC3 9AT. Study booklets and visual aids explaining, in simple terms, various aspects of money and banking. Specially designed for use by 14-year-olds and upwards. Visits by speakers also arranged. All services free of charge but only available to full-time teachers.
