The directory surveys sources of vocational information in each of the 50 United States and the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, Saipan, and the Virgin Islands. For each of these, the directory provides the following information: the name, address, and phone number of the State Research Coordinating Unit Director; similar information for other persons in similar capacities; the address of the regional office of the Bureau of Occupational and Adult Education, and of the regional offices of the National Network for Curriculum Coordination in Vocational-Technical Education; the addresses of ERIC microfiche collections within each State, arranged alphabetically by city; and information regarding computer searching, including the location of computer search facilities, the name and phone number of the person to contact at each facility, and the type of service offered at each facility (availability, cost, kind of search performed). The material in this publication was prepared pursuant to a contract with the National Institute of Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Contractors undertaking such projects under government sponsorship are encouraged to express freely their judgment in professional and technical matters. Prior to publication, the manuscript was submitted to the State Research Coordinating Unit directors for verification and revision of the information pertaining to their states. However, data do not necessarily represent the official view of either the RCU directors or the National Institute of Education.
FOREWORD

Many persons ordinarily stand between an intuition that a file contains something they want and the file itself. ERIC, the Educational Resources Information Center, has numerous curricular, policy, and research documents and articles under bibliographic control. The ERIC file of citations, abstracts, and, in the case of documents, microfiche of the document itself provide a resource on whose individually defined shoulders any practitioner or researcher in education can stand when troubling to do so. Ordinarily, helpers prove useful in pulling off the feat of taking off from the work of others. This Directory of Vocational Information Resources in the United States is issued to give practitioners and researchers in education opportunity to locate helpers for such a feat near at hand.

The ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education is pleased to update this Directory which was initiated by its predecessor, the ERIC Clearinghouse in Vocational-Technical Education. ERIC/CICE exists to serve its audience in the field of vocational-technical education. The Clearinghouse feels that this simple Directory will prove of inestimable value to those in the field seeking bibliographic help when they want such help.

INTRODUCTION

As the literature of vocational education grows in ever-increasing dimensions, it becomes more and more difficult for the vocational education practitioner to stay informed about new developments of importance in the field. The major portion of this literature is not commercially available, is distributed informally and in small quantities. The role of ERIC and similar information disseminators in getting this literature into the hands of those who can use it becomes increasingly crucial. ERIC remains, as it was created, one of the easiest and most efficient means of keeping up-to-date in the field of vocational education.

However, because of the constantly increasing volume of literature, means to establish links in the information chain must be created. No one person or agency can be effective in responding to all information needs. The links implicit in the dissemination of information through ERIC can be described as those of wholesaler and retailer. The wholesaler deals in gross amounts, handling scores of documents and arranging them to make them accessible to the user; this is the role which ERIC and its clearinghouses most frequently choose to play. The retailer deals in finer quantities, choosing from the information sources available, whether print or human, those best suited to an individual need. Such a role is played by most of the agencies listed in this Directory. By means of these intermediary information links, ERIC is able to bring more information to more people.

The information contained in this directory has been obtained for the most part in a canvass of State Research Coordinating Unit directors. It is based upon a previous ERIC publication, considerably updated and enlarged. That earlier publication, Guide to State Information Resources, was last published in August 1973. The present Directory is as up-to-date as current information allows. With some reluctance, we admit that before this publication reaches user hands, some of the "facts" it contains will have changed. If the information is no longer accurate, it is, at the least, very recent history and still a good indication of where to start looking.

Throughout the Directory, parallel reporting for each state has been set up where possible, and additional information has been incorporated into the format when conditions warrant. The State RCU director is probably the person to whom most practitioners turn for assistance with vocational education problems, and that person's name, address, and phone number are therefore given first in each state. Other persons who serve in similar capacities, providing information to a state-wide audience of educators, are also listed.

Two Federal agencies of major importance to vocational educators have regional offices which vocational educators may wish to contact. The regional office of the Bureau of Occupational and Adult Education and the regional offices of the National Network for Curriculum Coordination in Vocational-Technical Education are listed next for each state.

The next item reports the sites of ERIC microfiche collections within each state. Arranged alphabetically by city name, they provide a quick index to the ERIC collections in each state. Most of these collections are available to the general public, and all of them are available to serious researchers.

Because the ERIC system is increasingly used through the medium of computers, information about computer searching is provided on a state-by-state basis. In addition to the location of computer searches, the name and phone number of the appropriate person to contact is given, along with some information on the type of services one might expect (who is served, the cost involved, the kind of search which can be provided). Such information should help direct the ERIC searcher to the nearest or most appropriate source of needed information.

It is hoped that this Directory will provide one of the necessary links between vocational education information wholesalers and retailers. It should be useful as a facilitator in bringing together the holders of information and the users of that information. We acknowledge with gratitude the cooperation already provided by the State RCU directors in assembling this information and look forward to continued cooperation in our efforts to bring usable resources to vocational educators throughout the United States.
