Four-year Jewish Hebrew teachers college for men and women.

Undergraduates: 57 men, 92 women. Calendar: Semester, summer session. Location: Metropolitan area. Special features: College is primarily a Hebrew teachers college, with courses in Hebrew and Judaica only.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Jewish religious education (early childhood, elementary, secondary, music, art and media—all related to the Jewish school). Bible studies. Hebrew language and literature. Jewish history. Jewish philosophy, Rabbinic thought and literature, religious studies (Judaism). Sociology (sociology of Jewish communities). Special programs: Accelerated program, independent study, study abroad (junior year in Israel). Required freshman courses: Hebrew language. Hebrew literature, introduction to Jewish religious education, Jewish history. Rabbinics, and Bible studies. Academic regulations: Freshmen are expected to pass all required freshman courses successfully to be admitted to the sophomore year. Students ending the year with grades of Incomplete or D are given until fall registration to make up deficiencies; the course is then either passed or failed. If failed, the student must retake the course for credit. 90% of freshmen complete year in good academic standing. Additional information: College prepares teachers for Jewish religious schools, and Hebrew teachers for public junior and senior high schools. Also conducts a School of Observation and Practice, a Hebrew high school department, normal and Isaac Mayer Wise departments for the preparation of teachers for one-day-a-week Jewish religious schools, and a continuing education program for graduates of the college and other adults.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 23 men applied, 16 were accepted; 54 women applied, 48 were accepted. Admissions requirements: SAT. Gratz College Entrance Examination. Graduation from public high school and Yona Yide Hebrew high school. Interview required. Basis for selection: All graduates of Hebrew high school programs eligible for admission, subject to placement score on the Gratz College Entrance Examination. a health form sent by college must be returned before student enrolls. Seton Hill continues to encourage prospective applicants whose achievement is believed to have been hampered as result of educational, social, or economic disadvantage. These students chosen individually on basis of high motivation and academic potential, as determined by interview and responsible recommendations. Seton Hill has special program to encourage applicants who are continuing education after age of 21. In lieu of regular admissions requirements, these applicants may take 16 credits at Seton Hill as full-time or part-time students before matriculating for degree; they will be considered for admission on basis of achievement in courses taken. Applicants to continuing education program with previous education and equivalent experience evaluated by director of continuing education. All other degree requirements as stated in catalog must be met, but courses may be taken on part-time basis or in Saturday or evening sessions, some sessions or during regular college year. Usually at least 50% of total credits, including substantial portion of work in major field, should be taken at Seton Hill College. Application fee: $10, may be waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications July 1, applicants notified of decisions within 3 weeks after college has received all information. CRDA. Transfer applicants: About 80 apply annually, and 65 are accepted. Apply by July 1 for full term. Secondary school record, official transcript including statement of honorable dismissal, and copy of catalog of institution attended. All transfer students who have an associate degree will have all credits accepted and counted toward graduation. Credits received from 4-year colleges will be accepted if the courses represented by those credits are equivalent to courses in Seton Hill's curriculum. At least 2 years' attendance is required of a candidate for a degree, and it is expected that at least half of the required major credit will be taken at Seton Hill College. Prospective art majors are asked to present a portfolio and music majors to have an audition in order that they may receive appropriate counseling in choosing their courses.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 230 women, 75% from Pennsylvania, 80% live on campus, 20% commute, 5% from minority backgrounds. FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL. 896. CWS. 167 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; all of these were offered aid; 117 of these were offered the full amounts they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Financial aid decisions for incoming students reached by financial aid committee, which consists of financial aid, admissions, and counseling personnel. Financial need ranks first in importance in allocation of aid; secondary consideration given to academic potential based on predicted grade average computed on basis of class rank and SAT scores. Grades carefully considered. There is more institutional aid available to out-of-state students. Minority and poverty-level students receive special consideration in aid program fund allocation. Application procedures: Closing date for applications June 1, applicants notified of decisions between December 15 and June 15, recipients of aid offers must reply May 1 to June 30. PC required. Transfer students: Transfer students treated on equal basis with other new students applying for aid. Those whose applications do not reach the office by June 1 are less likely to have full amount of aid covered than those who apply before that date. Every effort made to meet financial need of advanced-standing students. Additional information: Seton Hill offers several endowed scholarships and special competitive awards in music and mathematics. Higher grants available to out-of-state, needy students ineligible for state grants.

Plan B places its emphasis on a broader investigation of the content of specific disciplines.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 610 men applied, 450 were accepted; 1,400 women applied, 1,100 were accepted. Admissions requirements: SAT by April of senior year. ACH English Composition Test and one other of the candidate's choice by May of senior year. High school English 3 units, social studies 1, foreign language 2, mathematics 2, science 1, electives 6. Basis for selection: Admissions decisions are based on the student's overall record rather than on any single factor. The admissions committee attaches greatest weight, however, to factors of academic performance, specifically the academic content of applicant's high-school program, the level or degree of competition, school grade average, and class rank. Interview, references, and College Board test scores are other factors which influence the decision. Special programs (Upward Bound, Talent Search, Preparatory Enrollment Program, and Student Development) exist within the college to identify, recruit, and select minority, bilingual and disadvantaged candidates. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission had SAT-verbal scores between 400 and 500 and SAT-mathematical scores between 425 and 525. Application fee: $10. Application procedures: Closing date for applications May 1. Applicants notified of decisions on rolling admissions basis, accepted applicants must reply by May 1. CRDA. Transfer applicants: About 1,000 apply annually, and 700 are accepted. Apply by June 1 for fall term. Junior college graduates should present 2.50 grade-point average in a liberal arts program. Transfer applicants from four-year colleges must be in good standing. High school records must be submitted along with college transcripts. Course work for transfers purposes is valid for a ten-year period; providing the candidate earned a minimum grade of C and the courses taken are similar to offerings at Rhode Island College.

Rhosde Island College: Residential Life. Freshman class: 300 men, 700 women. 88% from Rhode Island, 30% live on campus, 70% commute, 5% from minority backgrounds. Median SAT-verbal score of enrolled freshmen is 495, and median SAT-mathematical score of enrolled freshmen is 510. 75% of enrolled freshmen rank in the top 40% of their high school class. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 30%, education 24%, fine arts 3%, health services 21%. Postgraduate studies: 89% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (Board of Governors, student parliament, student/faculty committees, Panhellenic Council, residence hall council), student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, television, student handbook, fine arts and distinguished film series committees, religious organizations (Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, and Eastern Orthodox), drama, musical theater, dance, symphony orchestra, concert band, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, Hārambe, Tri-lingual Society, Lusaphile Society. Two-years public; for men and women. Enrollment 400. Zip code 05601.

Goddard College, Plainfield, Vermont

Four-year private nonsectarian liberal arts college for men and women. Undergraduates: 800 men and women. Graduates: 150 men and women. Calendar: Semester. Location: Rural community 10 miles from Montpelier, Vermont. Special features: Experimental college founded in 1938. Transcripts consist of narrative evaluations, not grades. Students plan their own programs with the assistance of a faculty counselor. No required courses. 2 semesters must be, and 3 may be, nonresident work-study semesters.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor, Fields of study: Architecture, biological sciences, communications, ecology, education, ethnic studies, foreign languages, forestry and conservation, health and medical professions, history and cultures, literature and creative writing, mathematics, music, philosophy and religion, physical sciences, psychology, social sciences, theater arts, visual arts. Special programs: Cooperative education, independent study, self-designed major, study abroad anywhere. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CFW General and Subject Examinations. Academic regulations: Freshmen are expected to demonstrate their ability to plan and carry out serious college study in a relatively unstructured setting, making appropriate use of college resources. Students unable to do so are counseled to withdraw. Graduate programs: City planning, education, humanities, philosophy, religion, social sciences, social change projects. Additional information: Curriculum is defined as the activities a student plans and carries out to learn what he needs to learn: activities involve taking/courses offered by the faculty, independent study, and activities undertaken during nonresident terms. Appointments, internships, independent study, and attendance at other institutions, enrollment in institutes and workshops are included.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 410 men and women applied; 316 were accepted. Admissions requirements: SAT. No specific high school units required, but graduation from high school with evidence of ability and motivation expected. Nearly all applicants come from the top half of their high school classes. Interview recommended. Basis for selection: Two fundamental criteria—the student should know himself well enough to be able to evaluate his ability to do serious and independent college-level study, and he should know the college well enough to be able to visualize himself as a student in it and plan the ways in which he will use it. Record of previous activities important, 2 letters of recommendation required, and a third is optional. SAT medians are about 500. Application fee: $20, may be waived for applicants with extreme financial need. Application procedures: Deadline for February entrance November 1, February 1 for June or September entrance. EDP-F. CRDA. Transfer applicants: About 300 apply annually, and 200 are accepted. Deadline for February entrance November 1, March 1 for June or September entrance, late applications considered whenever possible. Admissions criteria same as for freshmen. 1 semester of advance standing is given for every 15 semester hours of study carrying grades of C or above, up to a maximum of 75 semester hours.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 65 men, 73 women. 20% from Vermont, 95% live on campus, 1% commute, 5% from minority backgrounds. Entering students have scored high on tests of independence of outlook, intellectual and esthetic interests, and flexibility. They appear to have chosen Goddard deliberately for what they understand to be its support for these qualities. They have generally done well in high school, are highly creative, and are well above average in measurable intellectual capacity. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 40%, education 10%, fine arts 45%. Postgraduate studies: 60% of graduates enter graduate professional programs. Student activities: Community government, student newspaper, magazine, film, drama, music, theater, dance, popular music, political organizations, ethnic organizations, social service organizations (off-campus service program). Athletics: Informal and not organized. Student services: Counseling, health services, non-resident semester placement, Regulations: No pets permitted; fire arms must be registered; new students must live in dormitories; cars must be insured and registered with college. Additional Information: Student life centered in small residences (15-30 students) that also house class meeting places and faculty offices. In half of them, stu-
students cooperate in purchasing food and preparing meals. In all of them, students are responsible for the order and cleanliness of the buildings. A fraction of the comprehensive fee supports a program of films, concerts, dance recitals, art exhibits, and lectures planned by a student-faculty committee.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Comprehensive fee: $2,300 per resident semester. Other expenses: Average $500 yearly.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, NDSL, SEOG, CWSF.

121 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; all 121 of these were offered aid in the full amounts they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Need is the only criterion; PCs required.

Transfer students: Same requirements and procedures as for freshmen.

Additional information: The college offers all students a cost-sharing plan, which permits monthly payment of bills; it subsidizes the interest for financial aid students and pays all the interest for the neediest students. The first $1,300 of financial aid granted a student for an academic year must be borrowed, usually under a state guaranteed loan program.

All information is new in this edition of The College Handbook, reflecting recent changes in eligibility requirements, costs, admissions policies, and academic programs.

In one volume, the Handbook contains information about 2,863 institutions of higher education, including 1,662 detailed descriptions supplied by the colleges themselves. An additional 1,201 institutions are described briefly with information from the United States Office of Education.

The typical detailed description tells about a college’s
- size
- location
- calendar,
- curriculums
- admissions and transfer requirements and procedures
- student life
- expenses
- financial aid

All listings, whether detailed or brief, tell
- the undergraduate enrollment
- whether the institution is for men, for women, or both
- whether it is a two-year or a four-year institution
- whether it is regionally accredited

Other features of The College Handbook include information on how to use the Handbook, a special guidance section with advice on choosing a college and on applying to colleges, and a list of additional books about applying to college and getting financial aid. For easy use, the Handbook contains a glossary and a complete alphabetical index of undergraduate institutions.
