Descriptions of 2,863 colleges make up the College Handbook. These are all the undergraduate institutions listed in the 1973-74 edition of Education Directory - Higher Education, published by the United States Office of Education, as well as some colleges that qualified early in the year for listing in the 1974-75 edition of that directory. Most of the descriptions are quite detailed. The descriptions follow a common outline to make it easy to find a particular item of information in any description and to compare one college with another in respect to a particular characteristic. Each statement begins with a few items of general information, followed by sections on curriculum admissions, student life, annual expenses, financial aid, and where to write for more information. The general information at the beginning makes it possible to classify the college quickly according to certain major characteristics—-that is, whether it is a two-year or a four-year college, public or private, church-affiliated or not, and for men or women or both. In addition, this section gives the number of undergraduates enrolled in graduate study; information about its academic calendar, including the availability of summer session; and a description of the nature and location of its community. Colleges could, if they chose to, identify themselves as predominantly black, and they could also describe special features or other information not called for in other sections of the statement. College Entrance Examination Board
New York, 1975
The College Entrance Examination Board is a nonprofit membership organization that provides tests and other educational services for students, schools, and colleges. The membership is composed of more than 2,000 colleges, schools, school systems, and education associations. Representatives of the members serve on the Board of Trustees and advisory councils and committees that consider the Board's programs and participate in the determination of its policies and activities.

What are the best colleges in the country? Ask that question of a counselor, a teacher, a college admissions officer — any of the people who every day help students like you in their choices of colleges — and the chances are they will answer you with another question. Best for what? Or best for whom? Colleges are different from each other in many ways and for many reasons. The biggest reason, though, is that they have different aims and try to serve different students in different ways. As a result, you and other students who plan to go to college in the United States are faced with a wider range of choices than students anywhere else in the world. Specifically, there are about 2,800 colleges in this country — almost all of them for both men and women — and no two are alike. You will find them large and small, nearby and distant, free and expensive, selective and wide open, diverse in curricula and highly specialized, and sectarian and nonsectarian, to mention just a few of the ways they differ from each other.

How do you decide?

The choice of a college is an important decision every student must make for himself. It can make the difference between success and failure, between a good time and a bad one, between personal progress and aimless floundering. It is no wonder so many students spend so much time trying to answer the important question of where to go to college.

What is a good decision?

It is easy to look back and recognize decisions you are glad you made. You think they were good decisions because they turned out the way you wanted them to. You can probably also remember decisions you now consider bad ones because they did not turn out well. But it is not usually so easy to look ahead and tell how some decisions you make today will turn out in the future.

Choosing a college is that kind of decision. You can't be sure how it will turn out. For one thing, you are a changing person, and what seems important to you now may seem less important when you get to college and acquire new outlooks, new interests, and new friends. Colleges change too, and the college you decide to go to may be a somewhat different place by the time you get there. Finally, it is rarely possible to predict with much certainty what will happen when a particular person and a particular college act on each other — or even when a certain kind of person goes to a certain kind of college.

In such a situation, when you are making a decision about your future, the best decision is the one that gives you the best chance of getting the results you want most. When the decision involves selecting a college, try to choose the college where you are most likely to achieve whatever important purposes you have in going to college.

How to judge the prospects at different colleges

There are three essential ingredients in a decision about college. First, you need to think about your purpose — why you are planning to go to college; what you want to get out of it. Most people have several purposes, immediate and long-range, so you also need to think about which ones are most important to you and which ones you can do without if you can't find everything you want in any one college.

Another ingredient is recognizing and considering all the choices or options available to you. One common mistake students make is to overlook colleges that might be excellent choices for them. You can avoid this mistake by considering all the colleges in the country as possible choices initially and then, step by step, eliminating those that would not serve your purposes. For example, you might start with the 2,863 colleges listed in this Handbook and then eliminate those that are located in states or regions that you do not wish to consider further, and then eliminate those that do not offer the educational program you want, and then eliminate those that take only students of the opposite sex, and so on, always keeping alive all the options you can. The important thing is not to "lose" any of the good possibilities by simply never thinking about them because your system for identifying the options is haphazard rather than systematic.

The third ingredient in the decision is your estimate... of the chances of attaining your objectives if you chose, in turn, each of the colleges you are considering. To do this, you need information about each of the colleges—the particular information that helps you judge the chances of getting what you want. For example, if your main purpose is to find opportunities to explore three or four fields of study and career fields you are interested in, you need to know if the colleges you are considering offer courses in those fields. If your main purpose is to qualify for admission to medical school, you need information about the availability of the college courses generally required for admission to medical schools and perhaps about the experience of each college’s previous applicants to medical schools. If you are uncertain about your ability to succeed in the programs or colleges you are considering, you want information about the success of previous students in these programs and colleges whose academic qualifications were similar to yours.

To sum up, if you make a thoughtful decision about what you want to get out of college, consider all the colleges where you might achieve your purpose, and use all the available information to judge which of the possible colleges offer you the best chances of achieving your purpose; you will make the best decision that is possible under the circumstances. There is no guarantee your experience at college will turn out just as you want, but you will have given yourself the best chance that it will—a far-better chance than if you had made your decision hurriedly or based it solely on the advice of someone else.

The information in The College Handbook was selected and arranged to contribute directly to two of the ingredients of a good decision—identifying the options and judging them in the light of your own purposes and goals.

Three of the sections in the full descriptions of colleges in the Handbook are important to students choosing colleges are those on curriculum, admissions, and student life. By using the information in the curriculum sections to eliminate colleges that do not offer programs in which you are interested, you can begin to narrow your choices down. There are, however, many more questions that a prospective college student might ask about colleges’ curriculums than can be answered by reading this section of even the most detailed descriptive statements in the Handbook. After making a preliminary identification of likely colleges, you will want to go on to examine their catalogs for more detailed information about courses, faculties, requirements, and other aspects of curriculum that interest you.

One purpose of the admissions section in the Handbook statements is to help you judge whether or not you might reasonably hope to be admitted to a particular college if you applied. In some cases the information in the colleges’ statements is sufficient to make this judgment. However, the admissions decisions of some colleges are not so predictable, and the best you can do is estimate the chances of being admitted. In such a case, it would be a mistake to rule out an otherwise appropriate college from further consideration just because you estimated that your chances of being admitted were poor. Such an estimate is important in your planning—it would be most unwise, for example, to apply only to colleges where your chances of admission were slim—but you should probably never eliminate any college that you really want to attend just because you doubt that you will be accepted. In fact, if you want to go to a particular college very much, you will probably want to apply even if you estimate that your chances of admission are extremely remote.

The importance of the information provided by colleges on student life in the colleges’ statements depends on what you consider your important purposes in going to college. Many students attach great importance to the kind of life experience they will have during their college years, and they search thoughtfully for clues to what the college’s students are like, what opportunities exist for personal and social growth, how the college regulates and supervises its students’ non-academic lives, if at all, and other aspects of life at the college. Other students consider these matters less important than, say, the curriculum, and they may find the information on student life less significant—useful, perhaps, in deciding between two otherwise equally appropriate colleges but not essential in selecting colleges that meet their basic requirements.

The Handbook can’t help you decide what your goals are. That is a task for you, and one in which you will probably want to get ideas, advice, and other kinds of help from your parents, your friends, your teachers, and your school counselor. (It would be a mistake, though, to think that you need a definite plan for your career and your education before choosing a college. In fact, one of your objectives might be to gain further time, experience, and assistance at college planning for your future.) When you have at least done some preliminary thinking about goals, though, you are ready to use the information in the Handbook to identify and evaluate colleges that might suit you.
Getting into college

Many students wonder how many colleges they should apply to, and they hear conflicting advice about this from friends and family and even from their counselors and college admissions officers. Perhaps that is because there is no certain number of applications that is the right number for everyone. You may have decided that the college you most want to attend is one to which you can be very certain of being admitted, knowing as a matter of policy the college admits all applicants who meet certain requirements you have met. In such cases, if you do not need financial aid to attend this college, it would be hard to think of any good reason to apply to any other college.

On the other hand, your first choice of college might be one you could not be sure of admission to, or perhaps one where you could be quite sure of admission but not very sure of the financial aid you would need in order to enroll there. Moreover, this may be a college that doesn't notify its applicants of its decisions on admission and financial aid until late in the year—too late for you to apply to the college that would be your second choice. In that case, you would certainly want to consider applying to your second choice as well as your first in order to protect your option of enrolling at the second in case you were unable to go to the first. Now, if your second choice of college were one to which you could be sure of admission and where you would need no financial aid, these two applications would be enough, and it would be hard to justify the expense of applying to any other college.

However, your second choice, like your first, might be unpredictable as to your admission or financial aid or both, and its announcements of such decisions might be made too late in the year for you to initiate new applications to your next choice of college, in which case you would probably need to file a third application—and perhaps a fourth and a fifth. In sum, you should file as many applications as you need to—but only as many as you need to—to give yourself the best chance of being able to go to the college you would prefer after eliminating those that did not admit you or offer you necessary financial aid. That may be one application or it may be several, depending entirely on your own preferences and needs and on the admission and financial aid practices of the colleges you prefer.

The College Board Early Decision Plans (EDP) that some colleges follow, defined in the Glossary, may enable you to minimize the number of applications you file, at least temporarily, without reducing your chances of admission or financial aid at any of the colleges to which you would otherwise apply. The participating colleges have adopted these plans in order to make it unnecessary for well-qualified applicants to apply to more than one college if they can identify their first choices somewhat earlier than usual.

Applying for admission

The procedures for applying for admission vary from one college to another, but the usual first step is to get an application form and instructions for applying from the college. Thereafter it is just a matter of following the instructions received from the college. You can obtain the necessary forms and instructions by writing to the address at the end of the college's descriptive statement.

The letter can be quite simple, stating only when you plan to enter college, requesting information on admission and, if you need it, financial aid. If you are already attending or have attended college, you should also tell where and for how long.

Typically you will receive from the college an application form asking for information about your background, previous education, and college plans. You may also receive a school record form to give to the proper person at your high school—your counselor or principal will tell you who that is—for the school to complete with a transcript of your courses and final marks, test scores, and possibly other information and observations about you that the college might use in deciding whether to offer you admission or in counseling you later about choices in your college program. Some colleges send this form directly to your school after receiving your completed application.

Your instructions from the college will also tell you when to apply, what the application fee is if there is one, what admissions tests you should take if any, and when you should take them. As a general rule you should apply as early as possible in the period specified by the college—that is, early in your senior year for most colleges, except for applicants under Early Decision Plans, who may apply late in the junior year or during the following summer. Colleges may state a closing date or deadline for applying, but this is often no more than a guideline, and a college may actually cut off applications earlier than its final date if it fills its class before then, or it may continue to accept applications beyond that date if it still has room for more students. If you decide you want to apply to a college whose final date has passed, telephone or write to find out if applications are still being accepted.

Most colleges charge an application fee, usually not refundable even if your application is rejected. Many will waive this fee for applicants from low-income families such as those who are eligible for public assistance. Most four-year colleges and some two-year colleges now require all their applicants to take one or more admissions tests as part of their application procedure. The most common practice is for the college to specify a particular test or combination of tests and to specify the latest date by which they should be taken. For example, a college may ask you to take the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and three Achievement Tests (ACH) by January of the senior year. The major national programs of admissions tests are described in the Glossary.

Applying for financial aid

If the cost of attending an otherwise suitable college is more than you and your family can pay, you can apply to the college for financial aid to make up the difference. The procedures for such applications, like those in applying for admission, vary from college to college. The best advice on this subject, therefore, is to get your instructions from the college itself and follow them carefully. You can write a brief letter to request the necessary materials to the college’s director of financial aid. If you are writing to the director of admissions for other application materials, you may simply include in that letter another paragraph requesting materials on financial aid.

The usual procedure will include your completing and returning to the college a financial aid application form. In addition, most colleges will require that your parents submit a completed form such as the Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) explaining their financial circumstances, to be used by the college in estimating how much financial aid you need to bridge the gap between what it would cost you to attend and what you and your parents can pay. The most widely used forms are described in the Glossary.

As a general rule, colleges make their decisions about your admission without regard to your need, if any, for financial aid. If you are wondering whether or not applying for aid might reduce your chances of being admitted, the answer is probably not; although some colleges say they do not offer admission to an applicant who needs a large amount of financial aid unless they can also offer him that aid.

When you hear from the colleges

Even after you have decided where to apply for admission and for financial aid, you may still face some other decisions before your planning for college is completed. It may help you to know about some of the most common problems that can arise after you submit applications to your chosen colleges.

If you apply for admission to more than one college, you may be admitted by more than one, and you will still have to decide which one to go to. If you have already determined your order of preference, and if financial considerations are not a factor in your choice (either because you do not need aid or because you received adequate offers or aid along with your offers of admission), your final decision may be relatively simple. However, if you have not already determined your order of preference or if financial or other factors cause you to reconsider that order, you may need to go through the process of deciding again. Can you specify your main objectives more clearly now than when you began choosing colleges? Can you get more information now than you had, or more than you used, when you first identified certain colleges for serious consideration? What other information would enable you to make better estimates of your chances of meeting your objectives? Perhaps your counselor can suggest where you might get that information. You should not be surprised or distressed, however, if all your efforts at deciding result in a field of two or more colleges which, as far as you can determine, offer you equal “prospects of achieving your purposes. It is tempting to believe that for every student there is some college that would be his best choice, but it is probably closer to the truth that there are several colleges, as far as anyone can judge in advance, equally suitable for any particular student. If you find two or three that seem equally suitable for you, and if you have done a good job of searching and studying, it probably makes little difference which one of them you choose to enter.

Your problem may be more complicated if you are offered admission by your second choice of college and are asked to reply to that offer, perhaps with a substantial first payment on your tuition fee or dormitory charge, before you have received the admission decision from your first choice of college. This does not happen when the colleges you apply to are all participants in the Candidates Reply Date Agreement (CRDA), because these colleges agree not to require you to reply before May 1, ensuring that you will have the decisions of all the colleges you applied to before you have to reply to any of them. However, some colleges are not subscribers to that agreement, so you may face a difficult choice. Should you accept the earlier offer of admission from your second choice before hearing from your first choice, or should you risk the loss of your second-choice admission while you wait to hear from your first choice? Some students solve this problem by making the required first payment to the second-choice college, considering it a kind of insurance premium to cover the possibility of rejection by the first-choice college. Others have sometimes been able to get a preliminary, if unofficial, decision or other helpful advice from the first-choice college by writing or telephoning and explaining the problem to its director of admissions. If you are faced with this problem, your counselor may be able to help you decide on a course of action.

Another common dilemma is to be accepted for admission without being offered the financial aid you need. A variation of this problem is to be accepted for admission by two or more colleges but to be offered aid in amounts that differ in the extent to which they bridge the gaps between costs and your resources. In either situation you need to determine whether there are other resources you might tap for additional financial support so that you might in fact be able to attend a college whose offer of aid is less than you need. If you can arrange for additional aid, you might still, in the second kind of situation, have to decide whether the additional financial burden you would have to assume to attend a preferred college is warranted by the strength of your preference for that college over another one whose financial aid offer to you is more nearly adequate. In such a dilemma, it would probably be very difficult for you to put a dollar value on your preference for one college over another, but if your choice comes down to this factor it will surely be preferable that you be the judge of value rather than someone else.

These are only a few of the most common problems you may encounter as you go through the processes of choosing colleges, applying for admission, applying for financial aid if you need it, and finally enrolling in the college you decide to attend. There are countless others, as you can imagine, with every college setting its own admissions requirements and procedures. Most of them can be solved, however, if you keep a cool head, keep your own purposes clearly in mind, study carefully the catalogs and other literature from colleges in which you are interested, and ask for help from your counselor and perhaps from the officers of the colleges themselves.

Finally it may help you to remember that most students develop strong attachments to the colleges they attend, even when the colleges were not their first choices at the time they applied for admission. You will probably discover features in your college that are disappointing—almost everyone does—but there’s a better than even chance that you will like your college more than you thought you would. On the other hand, you should also recognize that if things do not work for you—and there is always at least the small possibility that you and your college will prove to be badly mismatched—you can learn from the experience and go on to make another, and better, choice for your second year. Your decisions about college are important, and you should make them thoughtfully to give yourself the best chance of making a good choice.
Descriptions of 2,863 colleges make up The College Handbook. These are all the undergraduate institutions listed in the 1973-1974 edition of Education Directory: Higher Education, published by the United States Office of Education, as well as some colleges that qualified early in the year for listing in the 1974-75 edition of that directory. You will find that most of the descriptions—1,662 of them—are quite detailed. These descriptions were made up from questionnaires filled out by the colleges themselves. Brief descriptions are supplied for all colleges that chose not to supply a full description by filling out the questionnaire. The information for these brief descriptions was taken from the most recent publications of the United States Office of Education and the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education.

To be more specific about the basis for eligibility for inclusion in The College Handbook, there are two criteria that any college must meet. One criterion is that the college be listed in the Education Directory: Higher Education, which includes colleges accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or approved by a state department of education or a state university, colleges that have attained preaccredited status with a nationally recognized accrediting agency, and colleges whose credits have been accepted as if coming from an accredited institution by at least three accredited institutions. The other criterion for inclusion in The College Handbook is that the college offer some undergraduate programs; institutions offering graduate-level curriculums only have been excluded. Each college's description can be found within the section for the state in which it is located. Within each state section, all colleges are listed alphabetically by their official names, including branches of complex institutions and units of state systems. If you do not know the state in which the college is located, the Index beginning on page 1239 lists all the colleges in the Handbook and shows in what state each is located.

The full descriptions

The full descriptions follow a common outline to make it easy to find a particular item of information in any description and to compare one college with another in respect to a particular characteristic. Each statement begins with a few items of general information, followed by sections on curriculum, admissions, student life, annual expenses, financial aid; and where to write for more information.

The general information at the beginning makes it possible to classify the college quickly according to certain major characteristics—that is, whether it is a two-year or a four-year college, public or private, church-affiliated or not, and for men or women or both. In addition, this section gives the number of undergraduates enrolled in the college, customarily including both full-time and part-time students; number of students enrolled in graduate study; information about its academic calendar (see the Glossary beginning on page xvii for explanation of unfamiliar terms); including the availability of a summer session; and a description of the nature and location of its community. Colleges could, if they chose to, identify themselves as predominantly black in this section, and they could also describe special features or other information not called for in other sections of the statement. The "R" that usually appears at the end of this section signifies that the college is accredited by its regional association of schools and colleges. This information was taken from Accredited Institutions of Higher Education, 1974-1975, published for the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education. This is the only piece of information in these full-descriptions that does not come from the colleges themselves.

Curriculum

The first major heading in each full statement introduces the information on courses of study offered by the college. The first subhead, "Undergraduate degrees offered," is usually followed by "associate," or "bachelor," or both. Associate's degrees are usually awarded on the completion of a two-year program in a community college, a junior college, or a two-year division of a university. Bachelor's degrees are usually awarded on the completion of a four-year program, although there are a few programs leading to the bachelor's degree in three years and others that require five years to complete. Some colleges also reported that they award certificates or diplomas on completion of certain programs. Their own catalogs will provide more information about these programs.

The next subhead, "Fields of study," is followed by a list of the major fields of study in which undergraduates can specialize at the college. These are grouped into broad fields so that closely related subjects will usually be found together in the statement. Colleges were asked to report their curriculums by checking a standard list, even though their own titles for some of the programs—and possibly the contents of the programs as well—might not exactly fit the titles on the list. However, colleges could and did also add the names of other curriculums. Two-year colleges have sometimes listed curriculums that normally require four years or more to complete, such as engineering and education. Such programs in two-year colleges are called "transfer" or "university-parallel" curriculums, and the program in the two-year college is like the first two years of similar programs in four-year colleges. Students interested in any of these curriculums have the option of beginning it in a two-year college and then transferring to a four-year college to complete it.

Next under Curriculum is the subhead, "Special programs," under which a college could indicate that it offers any or all of the following: accelerated program, such as completion of a bachelor's degree program in three years instead of the usual four; cooperative education, consisting of alternating terms (or shorter periods) of on-campus study and off-campus employment in jobs related to a student's major field; honors program, which means some kind of special arrangement for enriching or accelerating the education of exceptionally capable students; independent study, an arrangement in which students pursue the study of some topic (or set of topics) on their own instead of attending classes and undertaking regular assignments; study abroad, under any one of several plans that lets you complete part of the college program—a year or a semester or summer session—studying in some other country; 3-2 liberal arts and engineering combination, a cooperative arrangement between a liberal arts college and a college of engineering that makes it possible to obtain degrees from both after three years of liberal arts study and two of engineering; and other special or unusual programs.

The next subhead that may appear, "Programs for students from minorities or low-income families," is followed by such designations as special counselor, pre-admission summer program, tutoring, remedial instruction, and reduced course load.

Under the subhead, "Military training," a college may have designated the availability of Air Force ROTC, Army flight training, Army ROTC, or Navy ROTC.

"Required freshman courses" is the subhead under which a college specifies any subjects in which courses are generally required of all freshmen.

Under "Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit" may be found a statement of the college's policy on the use of certain national and local programs of tests that many colleges use to determine what courses or course sections a student should be placed in, to counsel a student regarding his choice of subjects, and to grant college credit for what he already knows. More information about the most frequently used testing programs is given in the Glossary.

Colleges were asked to state, under "Academic regulations," what requirements freshmen must meet in order to continue in good academic standing. A college might say, for example: "Freshmen must obtain an average of C or 2.0 to enter their sophomore year in good standing, although students with lower averages may continue on probation for one year during which their work must improve or they will be asked to withdraw from the college." Many colleges have also given information about the percentage of freshmen who usually satisfy their requirements for good academic standing.

Under "Graduate programs" colleges were asked to designate only broad fields to give prospective undergraduates an additional clue to the interests and emphases of the faculty and student body. A student trying to decide where to enroll for graduate study might find this information useful initially but would need more detailed information from the colleges themselves before making a decision.

Admissions

This section of each statement provides useful information about both the procedures for seeking admission to the college and the likelihood of being admitted if you apply.

"Applications in 1974" gives the number of students of each sex who applied and the number accepted. This gives a very rough measure of the chances that you or any other applicant will be accepted. A college might report that 325 men applied and 325 men were accepted, giving a clear indication that this college offers admission to all who apply. Another college might report that 3,946 applied and 1,215 were accepted; fewer than half who applied were accepted, but you would need to read the college's statement further for more information about how the college had selected those who were offered admission.

"Admissions requirements" lists both the tests and high school subjects generally required of most applicants. Most colleges will waive or modify these requirements in the case of an applicant for whom they are impractical or otherwise inappropriate. If you do not meet all the requirements stated by a college in which you are interested, do not assume that the college would not accept you. But, instead, write to the college about your deficiency, giving any other evidence of your qualifications that you might offer in its place. In the case of a college requiring "ACT or SAT" the order of listing is alphabetic and does not imply the college's order of preference.

Under "Basis for selection" colleges have given information about the relative importance they attach to various admissions criteria such as school achievement, test scores, interviews, activities, and recommendations. They may also have reported any minimum qualifications required, such as rank in the top half of one's class, and any special consideration given to particular groups of applicants, such as children of alumni, foreign students, out-of-state applicants, and others. The significance of test scores in admissions may be further revealed in some statements by a report here of the SAT scores or ACT scores of the middle 50% of the applicants accepted for admission. You can compare your own scores with such a statement to determine how you compare with the student body as to this qualification.

Some colleges use the term "open door" to describe their admissions policy of generally accepting all high school graduates and other adults without regard to their school record or other qualifications.

In the section on "Application procedures," closing dates customarily refer to applications for admission to the fall term. Some colleges indicated here that they follow special admissions procedures known as the Early Decision Plan (EDP) and the Candidates Reply Date Agreement (CRDA). These are defined in the Glossary. Under "Transfer applicants" colleges were given the opportunity to report the number of transfer students that usually apply each year and the number accepted, as well as any requirements or procedures that differ from those for applicants from high school.

Student life

This section begins by describing certain characteristics of the freshman class—how many students of each sex there are, what percentage of freshmen is from the state in which the college is located, what percentage lives on campus (in dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses, and other college-affiliated housing), what percentage commutes, what percentage is from minority backgrounds, and so forth. (If the percentage of freshmen living on campus and the percentage commuting do not add up to 100%, the remainder may be living off campus in private housing other than their families' homes.)

For "Programs undergraduates choose" colleges were asked to supply the approximate percentages of undergraduates that major in various general fields. "Postgraduate studies" indicates what proportion of the students in a college continue their education after graduating.

The lists under "Student activities" and "Athletics" will tell you whether or not particular ones that interest you are available at various colleges. They may also be read as another indication of the interests and values of students attending these colleges, although such interpretations should be made cautiously because the listing of an activity here means only that it exists at the college and says nothing of its quality or importance there. Both intramural and intercollegiate sports are listed. In the descriptions of coeducational colleges, each sport is available to both men and women unless it is followed by the letter M, meaning it is available only to men, or the letter W, meaning it is available only to women, or unless some other explanation is offered.

Other information in this section may include a listing of services for students, campus regulations, and other aspects of student life.

Annual expenses

Figures for most of the major items of student costs, were reported by the colleges for the year 1974-75 or 1975-76. Because this information, more than any other, is subject to sudden and significant change, use the figures here only for preliminary planning and get the latest cost figures directly from colleges you seriously consider applying to.

"Tuition and fees" may be stated separately from "Room and board" or they may be quoted as a single amount called a "Comprehensive fee." Where, the fees for residents of the state in which the college is located are different from the fees for nonresidents, a separate figure is reported for students from out of state. Occasionally separate figures are reported for students from within and without a specified district.

"Other expenses" are defined as including typical costs for books, supplies, laundry, recreation, and so forth. The one major item that is not shown here is the cost of travel to and from the college—an item that can vary greatly even from one student to another in the same college.

Do not let the costs at a particular college deter you from considering it as one of your options if in other respects it is the kind of college you are interested in.
Some colleges are now able, as they report, in the financial aid section of their descriptions, to offer enough financial aid to make up the full amount of the difference between your costs and what you and your family can pay.

Financial aid

This section gives information about the financial aid available at a college, how to apply for aid, and how it is awarded. The financial aid programs of most colleges are now designed to minimize the effect of costs as a factor in your choice of college. Colleges do this, if they can, by offering a student as much financial aid as is needed to make up the difference between what the student can pay, and the cost of attending college. Many of the colleges have reported how many of their recent applicants who had financial need were offered the full amounts that they were estimated to need.

The financial aid administered by colleges consists principally of three types: grants (sometimes called gifts or scholarships), that do not require repayment; loans, which you are required to repay as a general rule, although certain loan programs waive the repayment for students who enter certain service occupations after graduation; and jobs, which, ideally, are related to each student’s intended field of study and career. Students in need of large amounts of aid are likely to receive awards that combine two or all three types to make up the needed amounts. For example, if $2,200 is needed, a grant of $900, a loan of $600, and a part-time job that paid $700 might be offered.

The financial aid that colleges describe in their statements is only what they administer themselves. You might also qualify for aid from other sources, such as state and community scholarship and loan programs, employers or labor unions (either your own or a parent’s), and other kinds of public and private financial aid programs. Investigate all possible sources.

Correspondence

The last item in each statement is the name or office and address to use in corresponding with the college for further information and in applying for admission, financial aid, or both. In some statements, different addresses are indicated for admission and financial aid, and in some a different address is provided for students interested in admissions and financial aid programs for minorities and low-income applicants.

The brief descriptions

Brief descriptions are provided for all eligible institutions that did not complete questionnaires. Although most of these colleges are local institutions that lack accommodations and funds for students from outside their own communities, not all the colleges that did not supply full descriptions are uninterested in applicants from communities other than their own. Since there is no way of knowing why a particular college did not return the required questionnaire, you should seek further information about the college if you have reason to believe it might be right for you. This information is best found in the college’s own publications or some other reference, such as one of those listed under “Other books about college,” beginning on page xxi.

Some of the information in these brief descriptions — whether the college is a two-year or four-year institution, whether it is public or private, whether it is for men or women or both, and its enrollment — was gathered from the most recent publications of the United States Office of Education. The source of information for determining whether or not a college is accredited by its regional association of schools and colleges is Accredited Institutions of Higher Education, 1974-1975, published for the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education. The college’s zip code is also provided in each brief description so you can write for more information.
The definitions given here of terms commonly used by colleges to describe their programs, admissions procedures, and financial aid policies are necessarily general. Students should consult the college catalogs of specific institutions in order to get more detailed and up-to-date descriptions of the procedures, programs, and practices discussed.

Accelerated program. A college program of study completed in less than the time usually required, most often by attending in summer or by carrying extra courses during the regular academic terms. Completion of a bachelor’s degree program in three years is an example of acceleration.

ACH. See Achievement Tests.

Achievement Tests (ACH). College Entrance Examination Board tests in specific secondary school subjects, given at test centers in the United States and other countries on specified dates throughout the year. Colleges that require these tests of applicants may specify the subjects and dates. Used by colleges not only in deciding about admissions but also in course placement and exemption of enrolled freshmen.

ACT. See American College Test Assessment.

Admissions Testing Progam (ATP). A program of the College Board that provides college entrance tests and services for students planning to go to college. Included are the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Achievement Tests, and the Student Descriptive Questionnaire.

Admissions tests. See Scholastic Aptitude Test, Achievement Tests, and American College Test Assessment.

Advanced placement. Admission or assignment of a freshman to an advanced course in a certain subject on the basis of evidence that the student has already completed the equivalent of the college’s freshman course in that subject. In some cases the college may also grant academic credit for the college-level work that has been completed. See also Advanced Placement Program.

Advanced Placement Program (APP). A service of the College Entrance Examination Board that provides high schools with course descriptions in college subjects and Advanced Placement Examinations in those subjects. High schools administer the examinations to qualified students, and several hundred participating colleges offer advanced placement, college credit, or both to students who obtain satisfactory grades. See also Advanced placement.

American College Test (ACT) Assessment. Test battery of the American College Testing Program, given at test centers in the United States and other countries on specified dates throughout the year. It includes tests in English usage, mathematics usage, social studies reading, and natural sciences reading. The composite score referred to in some colleges’ descriptions is the average of a student’s scores on these four tests.

APP. See Advanced Placement Program.

Associate’s degree. The degree given for completing college programs of at least two but less than four years of study, usually in a two-year institution such as a junior college or community college.

Bachelor’s degree. The degree given for completing undergraduate college programs that normally take four years. Also called the baccalaureate degree.

Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG). A federally sponsored and administered program that provides grants based on need for amounts up to $1,400 for each undergraduate year. Students must apply directly to the federal government.

BEOG. See Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

Calendar. The system by which an institution divides its year into shorter periods for instruction and awarding credit. The most common calendars are those based on semesters, trimesters, and quarters.

Candidates Reply Date Agreement (CRDA). A college subscribing to this agreement will not require any applicant offered admission as a freshman to notify it of his decision to attend (or to accept an offer of financial aid) before May 1. The purpose of the agreement is to give applicants time to hear from all the colleges they have applied to before they have to make a commitment to any one of them.

Certificate. An award for completing a particular program or course of study, sometimes given by two-year colleges instead of, or in addition to, associate’s degrees.

CGP. See Comparative Guidance and Placement Program.
Class rank. The approximate position of a student in his graduating class, figured according to his grade average. It may be stated as a particular position, such as 75th (from the top) in a class of 350 students, or as some fraction of the class that he ranks in, such as the top third or the second fifth of the class.

CLEP. College-Level Examination Program.

College-Level Examination Program (CLEP). A service of the College Board that provides examinations in undergraduate college subjects and courses so that students and other adults may show college-level achievement for which they have not previously received college credit. The examinations are used by colleges to evaluate the status of adult applicants who have not attended college (or not done so recently), students transferring from other colleges, and entering freshmen. They are also used by businesses, industries, government agencies, and professional groups to satisfy educational requirements for advancement, licensing, admission to further training, and other purposes.

College Scholarship Service (CSS). A service of the College Board that assists postsecondary institutions, state scholarship programs, and other organizations in the equitable distribution of student financial aid funds. By measuring a family's financial strength and analyzing its ability to contribute to college costs, CSS need analysis services offer a standardized method of determining a student's need. See also Parents' Confidential Statement and Students' Financial Statement.

College Work-Study Program (CWSP). A federally sponsored program that provides jobs for students with demonstrated financial need. The average amount earned by students under this program is about $600 per year, and the jobs are available through colleges as well as public and private nonprofit agencies.

Comparative Guidance and Placement Program (CGP). A system of information gathering and interpretation designed by the College Board to help students in self-evaluation and in academic and career planning, to assist educators in the placement and counseling of those students, and to provide institutions with summary data for planning and research purposes. The CGP uses a combination of questionnaires and tests including a biographical inventory, an interest index, and measures in reading, mathematics, and sentences.

Cooperative education. A college program in which a student alternates between semesters (or other periods) of full-time study and full-time employment in related work. The student is paid for his work at the prevailing rate. Typically, five years are required to complete a bachelor's degree program under the cooperative plan, but the graduate has the advantage of having completed about a year's practical experience in addition to his studies.

CRDA. See Candidates Reply Date Agreement.

css. See College Scholarship Service.

CWSP. See College Work-Study Program.

Early admission. The practice of some colleges of admitting certain students who have not completed high school—usually students of exceptional ability who have completed their junior year. See also Early decision, which should not be confused with early admission.

Early decision. Early decision plans are offered for applicants who are sure of the college they want to attend and are likely to be accepted by that college. An early decision application is initiated by the student and he is notified of the college's decision earlier than he would be notified on its usual notification schedule—usually by December 1 of his senior year.

Early Decision Plan (EDP-F, EDP-S). Colleges that subscribe to this plan, which is sponsored by the College Board, agree to follow a common schedule for early decision applicants. Colleges may offer either a single-choice plan (EDP-S) or a first choice plan (EDP-F). If a student applies under a first-choice plan, as soon as he is notified of acceptance by his first-choice college he must notify all other colleges to which he has applied that he is withdrawing his application. If he applies under a single-choice plan, he may apply to no other institutions until a decision has been reached on his application. If a college follows the Early Decision Plan, applications (including financial aid applications) must be received by a specified date no later than November 1, and the college agrees to notify the applicant by a specified date no later than December 1.

EDP-F, EDP-S. See Early Decision Plan.

Family Financial Statement (FFS). A financial information form of the American College Testing Program's Financial Aid Services used to estimate how much a financial aid applicant's family can pay toward college costs and how much financial aid, if any, would be needed to meet the costs at the particular colleges the applicant designates.

FFS. See Family Financial Statement.

GED. See General Educational Development tests.

General Educational Development (GED) tests. A series of five tests that adults who did not complete high school may take through their state educational system to qualify for a high school equivalency certificate or diploma. The tests are also administered at centers outside the United States (for information write to Commission on Accreditation of Service Experiences, American Council on Education, 1 Dupont Circle, Washington, D.C. 20036) and to members of the armed services through the United States Armed Forces Institute. The tests cover correctness and effectiveness of expression, interpretation of reading materials in the social studies, interpretation of reading materials in the natural sciences, interpretation of literary materials, and general mathematical ability. Many colleges accept satisfactory GED test results in lieu of high school graduation.
Grade-point average or ratio. A system used by many colleges for evaluating the overall scholastic performance of students. It is found by first determining the number of grade points a student has earned in each course he completed and then by dividing the sum of all his grade points by the number of points of hours of course work he carried. His grade points for a course are found by multiplying the number of points of hours given for the course by his grade in the course. The most common system of numerical values for grades is: A = 4, B = 3, C = 2, D = 1, and E or F = 0.

Honors program. Any special program for very able students offering the opportunity for educational enrichment, independent study, acceleration, or some combination of these.

Independent study. Any arrangement by which a student is allowed to complete some of his college program by studying independently instead of attending scheduled classes and completing group assignments. Typically the student plans his program of study in consultation with a faculty adviser or committee, to whom he may report periodically and submit his final report for evaluation.

National Direct Student Loan Program (NDSL). A federally funded program that provides loans of up to $2,500 for the first two years and up to $3,000 for the total undergraduate program. Repayment need not begin until completion of the student's education and any military service or service with the Peace Corps or VISTA. Repayment terms are favorable, and repayment may be partially or wholly waived for certain kinds of employment.

Open admissions. The college admissions policy of admitting high school graduates and other adults generally without regard to conventional academic qualifications, such as high school subjects; high school grades, and admission test scores. Virtually all applicants accepted.

Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS). A form for families of financial aid applicants to use in supplying information about their income, assets, expenses, and liabilities to the College Scholarship Service for use in estimating how much money a family is able to pay toward a student's college costs.

Pass-fail grading system. The practice of some colleges of rating students' quality of performance in their courses as either passing or failing instead of giving grades to indicate various levels of passing work.

Pre-admission summer program. Special program in which a student attends college during the summer preceding the freshman year. The summer program may consist of remedial studies to strengthen preparation for freshman courses, one or more of the regular freshman courses to enable the student to carry a light schedule in the freshman year, or both.

Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT). A shorter version of the College Board's Scholastic Aptitude Test administered by high schools each year in October. The PSAT/NMSQT aids high schools in the early guidance of students planning for college and serves as the qualifying test for scholarships awarded by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

Quality-point average or ratio. See Grade-point average or ratio.

Quarter. An academic calendar period of about 11 weeks. Four quarters make up an academic year. At colleges using the quarter calendar, a student makes normal progress by attending three quarters each year. In some colleges a student can accelerate his program by attending all four quarters in one or more years. See also Calendar, Semester, and Trimester.

Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC). Reserve Officers' Training Corps programs conducted by certain colleges in cooperation with the United States Air Force, Army, and Navy. Local recruiting offices of the services themselves can supply detailed information about these programs, as can participating colleges.

Rolling admissions. The procedure some colleges follow of considering each student's application as soon as all the required credentials, such as school record and test scores, have been received and of notifying the applicant of its decision without delay. Colleges that follow this practice may make and announce their admissions decisions continuously over several months, in contrast to the practice of other colleges of accumulating their applications until late in the year and announcing all their decisions at the same time.

SAT. See Scholastic Aptitude Test.

SFS. See Student Financial Statement.

Student Descriptive Questionnaire (SDQ). A questionnaire which can be completed by students when they register for the Scholastic Aptitude Test or Achievement Tests. The SDQ gives students an opportunity to provide information about their educational objectives, extracurricular activities, self-perceived skills, and areas in which counseling may be needed. The SDQ is sent, along with Scholastic Aptitude Test and Achievement Test scores, to each student's high school and designated colleges and scholarship sponsors. For those students who give their permission, the SDQ is also used by the Student Search Service.
Student Financial Statement (SFS). A financial aid application form of the College Scholarship Service. The SFS is used by institutions for students who are self-supporting or receiving limited financial support from their parents, as well as for married and graduate students. This form is also used for students who are financially dependent on their parents, especially upperclassmen. Available only through colleges and scholarships agencies.

Student Search Service (SSS). A College Board program designed to help colleges identify potential applicants with the particular academic or personal characteristics they are seeking. The search also provides students with an opportunity to learn about colleges with programs and characteristics the student wants. Information is gathered about students, with their permission, through the Student Descriptive Questionnaire. The College Board then supplies each participating college with the names and addresses of students who have the particular characteristics they specify.

Study abroad. Any arrangement by which a student completes part of the college program—typically the junior year but sometimes only a semester or a summer—studying in another country. A college may operate a campus abroad or it may have a cooperative agreement with some other American college or an institution of the other country.

Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG). A federal program administered by colleges that provides assistance for students on the basis of need. Grants range from $200 to $1,500 a year and do not exceed a total of $4,000 for four years. The amount of each grant may not exceed 50 percent of a student's need. Students must apply to the financial aid office of the college they plan to attend.

Terminal program. An educational program designed to prepare students for immediate employment. Terminal programs usually take less than four years beyond high school to complete and are available in many junior colleges, community colleges, and vocational-technical institutes.

Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). This test, sponsored cooperatively by the College Board and Educational Testing Service, helps foreign students demonstrate their English-language proficiency at the advanced level required for study in colleges and universities in the United States. Many colleges require their foreign applicants to take the test as part of their admissions requirements.

3-2 liberal arts and engineering combination. A program in which a student completes three years of study in a liberal arts college followed by two years in an engineering college, at the end of which he is awarded the bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees, respectively, from the two institutions.

TOEFL. See Test of English as a Foreign Language.

Transfer program. An educational program in a two-year college that is offered primarily for students who plan to continue their studies in a four-year college or university. See also University-parallel program.

Trimester. An academic calendar period of about 15 weeks. Three trimesters make up one year. Students make normal progress by attending two of the trimesters each year, and some colleges can accelerate their programs by attending all three trimesters in one or more years. See also Calendar, Quarter, and Semester.

University-parallel program. An educational program in a two-year college that is equivalent to the first two years of a similar program in a four-year college or university. The university-parallel program is designed to qualify a student for entrance to the third year of the four-year program with full credit for the two years already completed. See also Transfer program.

Upper-division college. An institution offering bachelor's degree programs that begin with the junior year. Entering students must have completed the freshman and sophomore years at other institutions.
Other books about college.

Bowler, Adele S., ed., College Programs for High School Students: Summer 1975. Hillsdale, N.J.: Directory Publishers Company, 160 pp. $10. Updated each year, this is an extensive listing of college programs available to high school students each summer on campuses across the country. Information about each program’s scope and content, calendar, costs, and eligibility requirements is provided.

College Placement and Credit by Examination, 1975: Advanced Placement Program and College-Level Examination Program. New York: College Entrance Examination Board, 1975. $3.50. A list of Advanced Placement and CLEP policies of colleges throughout the country. Included for each college are the lowest grades and scores normally accepted for advanced placement or credit or both in each of the Advanced Placement and CLEP subjects, any explanatory notes provided by the college, and the name of the person to whom inquiries may be directed.

American Universities and Colleges, 11th edition. Washington, D.C.: American Council on Education, 1973. 1,894 pp. $42. This directory gives descriptions of 1,450 four-year colleges and universities accredited by regional accrediting associations, with information about their enrollment, fees, degrees offered, student aid, and admissions requirements for entering freshmen. Aspects of student life and the college community are presented, including social and cultural opportunities, participation in fraternities and sororities, and affiliation with religious organizations.

New Guide to Study Abroad, 1974-75. New York: Harper & Row, Publishers, 1974, 422 pp. $2.95. A directory of summer and academic year study opportunities in other countries for high school students, college students, and teachers. In addition to the descriptions of individual programs, it includes a section of general information and advice on planning and preparing for study abroad.

Graduate Record Examination's Board and the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States, Graduate Programs and Admissions Manual. Princeton, N.J.: Educational Testing Service, 1974, 4 volumes. $3.50 per volume. Tabular information supplied by more than 500 graduate institutions about enrollment, numbers of master's and doctor's degrees awarded, application fee, calendar, tuition and other fees, financial aid deadline, and programs of graduate study offered. Additional tables present information about individual departments and programs, including the degrees offered, numbers of master's and doctor's degrees awarded, number of faculty, number of students, departmental prerequisites, financial aid, and foreign language requirements. Different fields of study are covered by each of the four volumes: Biological Sciences, Health Sciences, and Related Fields; Arts and Humanities; Physical Sciences, Mathematics, and Engineering; and Social Sciences and Education.

Can Be Anything: Careers and Colleges for Young Women. New York: College Entrance Examination Board, 1975, 272 pp. Paperbound $4.50, hardcover $6.50. A detailed guide to introduce high school and college-age women, their counselors, teachers, and parents to career opportunities open to today's women. For each career field, this book tells what educational background is required and which colleges award the most degrees to women in the field, as well as what the work is like, what salaries to expect, how many women currently work in the field and where they work, what the future prospects look like for women in the field, and where to get further information.

U.S. Department of Labor, Occupational Outlook Handbook. 1974-75 edition. Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1974, 842 pp. $8.70. Information about more than 800 occupations, including the nature of the work, earnings, job prospects through the mid-1980s, and education and training requirements. Additional sources of information are given for many of the occupations, including publications and organizations that supply the names of colleges offering preparation for the various fields of work.

U.S. Office of Education, Earned Degrees Conferred: 1970-71. Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1973, 722 pp. $9.55. Lists the colleges that awarded bachelor's and higher degrees to students who specialized in each of more than 200 major fields of study, and gives the numbers of such degrees given by each college in each field during the academic year 1970-71. It is an excellent source for identifying institutions that offer major programs in specific fields.
Alabama

Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical University
Normal, Alabama

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate, bachelors, fields of study: Agriculture (agronomy-field crops, animal science, dairy science, food science, horticulture, landscaping), architecture (urban development), art (art history, design, fashion design, interior decorating, printing), biological sciences (biochemistry, biology, botany, ecology, zoology), business and commerce (accounting, business management and administration, secretarial studies), communications (communications, radio and television), computer science and systems analysis (computer science, data processing, systems analysis), education (agricultural, art, business, child development and nursery education, education of exceptional children, education of the mentally retarded, elementary education, general education, health education, home economics education, industrial arts education, music education, physical education, recreation, secondary education, speech and hearing, vocational trade and industrial education), engineering (chemical engineering technology, civil engineering technology, drafting, electrical engineering technology, mechanical engineering technology), English and literature (English, literature, speech), foreign languages (French, German, Spanish), health and medical professions (health and safety, medical technology), history and cultures (American, area and regional, European), home economics (clothing and textiles, family relations, food and nutrition, infant and child care), library science, mathematics (statistics), military science (air science, military science-army); music (composition and theory, instrumental music, music history, voice), physical sciences (chemistry, earth sciences, physical sciences, physics), psychology (child, experimental, general, social), social sciences (economics, police science, political science, public administration, social work, sociology), theater arts (drama), trade and vocational (building construction). Special programs: Accelerated program, cooperative education, independent study. Programs for students from minority or low-income families: Special counselor, pre-admission summer program, tutoring, remedial instruction, reduced-course load. Military training: Army flight training. ROTC. Required freshman courses: English composition, history or social studies, mathematics, physical education, ROTC, science. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: ACT, SAT. Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP General and Subject Examinations. Academic regulations: Freshmen must have 1.8 grade-point average at the end of the year to continue in good standing. Sophomores must maintain 2.0 grade-point average. Graduate programs: Agriculture, business and commerce, city planning, education, English and journalism, home economics, library science, mathematics, psychology, social sciences.

ADMISSIONS. Applications In 1974: 490 men applied, 324 were accepted; 583 women applied, 460 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT or SAT. High school English 4 units, social studies 3, mathematics 2, science 2. Basis for selection: Application, transcript, and ACT or SAT profile. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took SAT had SAT-verbal scores between 300 and 500 and SAT-mathematical scores between 250 and 400. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took ACT had ACT composite scores between 8 and 20. Application fee: $10. Application procedures: No closing date for applications, applicants notified of decisions immediately, accepted applicants must reply within reasonable period of time. Transfer applicants: About 250 apply annually, and 200 are accepted. Apply by August 15 for fall term. Application, transcript, and a letter of good standing from institution previously attended required. Credit given for grade C or above. No credit given for courses in religion.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 300 men, 325 women. 95% from Alabama, 33% live on campus, 65% commute, 80% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen who took SAT have SAT-verbal scores between 300 and 500 and SAT-mathematical scores between 250 and 500. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen who took ACT have ACT composite scores between 10 and 20. Approximately 25% of freshman class in the upper 10% of their high school graduating class. Programs undergraduate: Liberal arts 10%, education 25%, business 20%, agriculture 8%, home economics 12%, technology 15%, arts and science 10%. Postgraduate studies: 80% of graduates of 2-year programs enter 4-year programs. 60% of graduates of 4-year programs enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student newspaper, yearbook, television, film, religious organizations (YMCA, YWCA), drama, opera and musical theater, marching band, concert band, fraternities, sororities. Athletics: Archery-M, baseball, basketball, cross-country, field hockey-W, football, golf, gymnastics-W, soccer-W, softball-W, swimming and diving-W, tennis, track and field. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduate, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Freshmen may bring automobiles on campus only with permission from Student Personnel.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $330, for out-of-state students $580. Room and board: $1,000. Other expenses: $250.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, CLASP, Law Enforcement Education Program. 90% accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; 70% of these were offered aid; 85% of these were offered the full amounts they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Primarily need. Preference is given to students with better grades. Same criteria used for in-state and out-of-state students. Middle 50% of applicants who were offered financial aid who took SAT had SAT-verbal scores between 350 and 600 and SAT-mathematical scores between 300 and 500. Middle 50% of applicants who were offered financial aid who took ACT had ACT composite scores between 10 and 20. Application procedures: Closing date for applications May 1, applicants notified of decisions by June 20, recipients of aid offers must reply by July 1. PCS or FFS required. ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $411, for out-of-state students $1,401. Room and board: $1,325. Other expenses: $1,124.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, SEOG, CWSP, Medical, Pharmacy, and Nursing Loans and Grants, Law Enforcement Education Program. 1,300 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; 962 of these were offered aid; all 962 of these were offered the full amounts they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: All financial aid awarded on basis of need except a few academic scholarships. A need analysis review is given each application. We use ACT need analysis system. Scholarship assistance is based on high school class rank and demonstrated need for entering freshmen. Continuing students are selected on academic performance and demonstrated need. Priorities are established based on total number of applications, relative need among these applicants, and funds available. In consideration for loans, no differentiation is made between resident and nonresident applicants. However, in awarding scholarships, in-state students are given a distinct preference. Application procedures: Closing date for applications May 15, applicants notified of decisions as soon as processed, recipients of aid offers must reply within 30 days of receipt. FFS required. Transfer students: Same procedures as for freshmen. Additional Information: We will not accept PCS in lieu of FFS. Students using the PCS are notified that we do not use this system and are mailed the FFS forms.

Arkansas Polytechnic College, Russellville, Arkansas

Four-year public school of arts and sciences, education, and systems science for men and women. Undergraduates: 1,338 men, 804 women. Calendar: Semester, summer session. Location: Large town 75 miles from Little Rock. Special features: Adult Continuing Education program provides adults with the opportunity to continue their education in the evenings, whether for degree purposes or simply for further education in a given field.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate, baccalaureate. Fields of study: Technical programs are offered in the School of Arts and Sciences, School of Education, and School of Systems Science. Bachelor degrees offered in the School of Arts and Sciences include art, education, biological science, biology, creative writing, chemistry, English, fisheries and wildlife management, geology, history and political science, journalism, medical records science, medical technology, music, music education, nursing, physical science, psychology, sociology, and speech. In the School of Systems Science bachelor degrees awarded include accounting, agricultural business, business administration, computer science, economics and finance, engineering, management science, mathematics, office management, and recreation and park administration. An associate degree is also offered in nursing and secretarial science. The School of Education offers bachelor degree programs in business, elementary, health and physical, and secondary education. Other programs include library science, educational media, military science, pre-professional (pre-dental, pre-medicine, pre-nursing, pre-pharmacy, pre-veterinary medicine, pre-forestry, pre-law), and social rehabilitation service. Special programs: Outstanding Juniors (high school juniors may earn 12 hours of college credit in the summer semesters; students who have completed the 11th grade with a B average are eligible to participate in the program upon recommendation of the high school counselor), High School Seniors Program (high school seniors may earn 6 hours college credit per semester by participating in regular college classes). Military training: Army ROTC. Required freshman courses: English composition, social studies, mathematics, physical education, science. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: ACT, SAT. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP General and Subject Examinations. Minimum of 30 semester hours of credit by examination may be counted toward degree. Academic regulations: Freshmen will be placed on academic probation when semester grade-point average is below 1.50 unless cumulative grade-point average is 2.00 or higher. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors are placed on academic probation when semester grade-point average falls below 2.00 unless cumulative grade-point average is 2.00 or higher. These criteria also apply to entering transfer students. Suspension will normally be automatic for a student who in a probationary semester fails to achieve a 1.25 semester grade-point average if he is a freshman; a 1.75 semester grade-point average if he is a sophomore, junior, or senior; or who fails to remove himself from probation within 3 successive semesters.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 484 men applied, 482 were accepted; 292 women applied, 292 were accepted. Although requirements: ACT preferred by July before fall enrollment. Although a specified number of units in each major subject area is not required for admission, the college strongly recommends that an entering freshman present high school English 4 units, mathematics 3, and 8 chosen from science, social studies, and foreign languages. Basis for selection: All graduates of accredited high schools in Arkansas and contiguous states are accepted upon submission of completed high school transcripts. Other students must submit class rank. A high school student who has not graduated but presents a transcript showing 15 academic units may be admitted on the recommendation of the superintendent or principal of his high school. Non-high school graduates 18 years of age or older who have not been enrolled in secondary schools during the 12-month period before applying may enter by passing a GED test or a comparable test administered by the college. When circumstances justify, adults who do not meet the normal admission requirements may be admitted on a conditional basis. 45% of applicants accepted for admission had ACT composite scores between 21 and 36. Application fee: None. Transfer applicants: About 200 apply annually, and 185 are accepted. Apply by August 15 for fall term. Transfer applicants must be in good standing at previous institutions and meet standards for admission of freshmen. Transfer credit is given for grades of C and above.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 404 men, 284 women. 98% from Arkansas, 75% live on campus, 25% commute, 3% from minority backgrounds. 45% of enrolled freshmen have ACT composite scores between 21 and 36. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 26%, fine arts 10%, education 18%, business and management 16%, agriculture and natural resources 9%, engineering 4%, computer science 2%, recreation and parks administration 8%, health services 6%. Student activities: Student newspaper, yearbook, religious organizations, drama, musical theater, dance, concert band, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, Association of Black Students, various social clubs and service organizations. Athletics: Baseball-M, basketball, bowling-M, cross-country-M, football-M, golf-M, swimming and diving-M, tennis-M, track and field-M, volleyball-W. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $410, for out-of-state students $760. Room and board: $808. Other expenses: $490.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, SEOG, CWSF. 162 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; all 162 of these were offered the full amounts of aid they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Awards usually based on financial need. When funds are limited, grades and test scores may be considered. Application procedures: Closing date for applications May 1, applicants notified of decisions by July 30, recipients of aid offers must reply by August 25. FAF required. Transfer students: Verification of aid previously received is required.

CORRESPONDENCE. Office of Admissions: Arkansas Polytechnic College, Russellville, Arkansas 72801.
ent study. Military training: Army ROTC. Required freshman courses: English composition, fine arts (visual and musical), history or social studies, literature, mathematics, science. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP General Examinations. Maximum of 30 semester hours of credit by examination may be counted toward degree. Academic regulations: As part of a new policy a freshman may repeat up to 18 hours of course work in which he originally received low grades. He must repeat a course in the semester immediately following the one in which he originally took it. Therefore, about 90% of freshmen complete year in good academic standing. Graduate programs: Agriculture, biological sciences, business and commerce, business education, counseling, education, English and journalism, fine and applied arts, mathematics, physical sciences, rehabilitation counseling, social sciences.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 1,123 men applied, 1,005 were accepted; 1,167 women applied, 1,022 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT by September before fall entrance. High school English 3 units, social studies 2, mathematics 1, science 1. These are recommended requirements. Basis for selection: All Arkansas high school graduates are admitted. Graduates from states bordering on Arkansas must have a minimum average of C. Applicants from other states must be in the top half of their graduating classes and must have C averages. The GED diploma will be accepted from applicants who are at least 20 years old. Applicants who are at least 21 years old and veterans of any age who have completed fewer than 15 units of high school work will be considered on the basis of their examination scores. Admission is sometimes considered for younger applicants with fewer than 15 high school units. Application fee: None. Transfer applicants: About 590 apply annually, and 507 are accepted. Students who are in good standing at accredited colleges and have grade-point averages of 2.00 or better will be admitted. Those with lower averages may also be admitted. Applicants with fewer than 15 hours of college credit must also meet qualifications for freshman admission. Credits earned with grades of C or better at accredited institutions will be transferred. Credits earned at nonaccredited institutions will be evaluated on the same basis as used by the state university of the state in which the institution is located.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 1,150 men, 1,000 women. 88% from Arkansas, 50% live on campus, 50% commute. ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 1,704 men applied, 1,534 were accepted; 1,756 women applied, 1,580 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT or SAT prior to registration. Freshmen who are California high school graduates must have a grade-point average and ACT or SAT test scores that place them among the top third of California high school graduates. Freshmen who are not residents of California must have an eligibility index which will place them in the top sixth of California high school graduates. The high school grade average is based on all high school work completed in grades 10 to 12, excluding physical education and military science courses.

Basis for selection: Special consideration for admission is given to students applying under the following programs or categories: Educational Opportunity Program, veterans, handicapped students, and special hardship cases. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took SAT have SAT-verbal scores between 440 and 500 and SAT-mathematical scores between 450 and 500. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took ACT had ACT composite scores between 18 and 24. Application fee: $20, may be waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications when appropriate class and program quotas are filled, applicants notified of decisions 2 weeks after receipt of final transcripts, test scores, and completed application. Transfer applicants: About 3,827 apply annually, and 3,050 are accepted. Other requirements and procedures: Lower-division transfer students with fewer than 56 semester units of credit who were eligible for admission to the university at the time of high school graduation may transfer at any time provided they have a 2.00 grade-point average and are in good standing at the last institution attended. Upper-division transfer students with 56 or more semester (84 quarter) units of baccalaureate level work must have a grade-point average of at least 2.00 (C) and be in good standing at the last college attended. The ACT or SAT is not required for admission purposes. Transfer credit is granted for all college-level (baccalaureate) courses completed at other accredited educational institutions. Additional information: Applicants who can be accommodated within category quotas will receive confirmation of space reservation. Although the space reservation is not a statement of admission, it is a commitment on the part of the campus to admit a student once eligibility has been established. When the student receives notice of the space reservation, he should initiate action to have transcripts of all college and high school work sent to the campus.

Additional Information: World Campus Afloat is college's unique program in international education that employs a world-wide floating campus. It offers semesters of college work that combine classroom experiences with related field experiences in various ports around the world.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 510 men applied, 451 were accepted; 539 women applied, 477 were accepted. Admission requirements: ACT of SAT and ACT in English composition by spring or summer of junior year (early decision candidates), fall and winter of senior year (regular candidates). Students from foreign countries and students who have unusual backgrounds of study will be considered on the merits of their preparation and will be asked to furnish specific evidence of their ability to undertake study at college. Students from countries where English is not native language must either take Test of English as a Foreign Language, or enroll in English as a second language course at college or at recognized English language center. Freshman applicants must have taken college preparatory course of studies in high school. Basis for selection: Scholastic record, aptitudes, and personal qualifications are all factors of importance, as well as opinions of those who know the student well; personal interview may also be required before decision is made. No set list of criteria for admission. Adequate academic preparation, strong motivation to learn, intellectual inquisitiveness, and personal characteristics are fundamental criteria on which acceptance is based. Median SAT-verbal score for men applicants accepted for admission was 474, for women 480; median SAT-mathematical score for men was 520, for women 460. Application fee: None. Application procedures: Closing date for applications for fall term, August, for spring term, December 15, applicants notified of decisions upon evaluation of completed application on rolling acceptance basis, accepted applicants must reply by August 1. CRDA, EDP-F. Transfer applicants: About 475 apply annually, and 450 are accepted. Apply by August 1 for fall term. Other requirements and procedures: Official transcript required from high school and every institution of higher education attended (colleges, universities, service schools). 2.0 grade-point average on 4.0 scale required. 15 semester hours or equivalent of correspondence or extension work transferable. 70 semester hours or equivalent of community college or junior college work acceptable, indefinite hours of work from 4-year accredited institution, dependent on minimum grade criteria and pertinence to graduation requirements.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 130 men, 140 women. 75% from California, 75% live on campus, 25% commute, 15% from minority backgrounds. Freshman class has average SAT-verbal score of 477, SAT-mathematical score of 493. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 50%, engineering (pre-professional) 25%, business 20%, fine arts 15%, health services 16%, religion 10%. Postgraduate studies: 65% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Associated Student Body, student executive committee, student senate, associated men students, associated women students, student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, radio, Great Films Guild, Religion in Life committee, drama, musical theater, symphony orchestra, chamber orchestra, concert choir, ensemble vocal groups, Young Republicans, Young Democrats, Bsu, MECHA, social service organizations, fraternities, sororities. Athletics: Baseball, basketball, cross-country, football, golf, handball, soccer, tennis, track and field, volleyball. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni, testing (vocational, personality, intelligence). Regulations: Possession or use of alcoholic beverages or dangerous drugs on college property or at college events is prohibited. No firearms permitted.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $2,200. Room and board: $1,400. Other expenses: $400.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NSM, SEOG, CWS. 400 accepted applicants were judged to have need, 350 of these were offered aid. Basis for selection: No differentiation between California residents and out-of-state applicants. Financial aid decisions reached through inclusion of all pertinent factors, but based primarily on financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications April 1, applicants notified of decisions no later than April 15, recipients of aid offers must reply by May 1. P.S. or F.F.S required. Transfer students: Requirements and procedures same as those for freshman applicants.

Claremont Men's College, Claremont, California

Four-year private nonsectarian liberal arts college for men. Undergraduates: 800 men. Calendar: Semester. Location: Suburban community 35 miles from Los Angeles. Special features: One of the Claremont Colleges (which also include Claremont Graduate School, Harvey Mudd College, Pitzer College, Pomona College, and Scripps College) sharing use of library system (nearly 900,000 bound volumes; over 5,000 periodicals), 2,500-seat concert hall, theater, bookstore, computers, and other facilities of a size usually found only in a university. Students in Claremont Men's College may take courses in the others. Faculty-student ratio is 1 to 11.5.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Art (fine arts), biological sciences (biology), English and literature (literature, speech), foreign languages (French, German, Spanish), history, mathematics, philosophy and religion, physical sciences (chemistry, physics), psychology, social sciences (economics, accounting, political science), other (Asian studies). Special programs: Accelerated program, honors program, independent study, study abroad, public internships in Washington and Sacramento, business internships, 3-2 liberal arts and engineering combination (management-engineering with Stanford University). Programs for students from minorities or low-income families: Pre-admission summer program, tutoring, reduced course load. Courses available in black studies, Chicano studies, and urban studies are open to all students. Military training: Army ROTC optional. Required freshman courses: English composition, social studies, mathematics, physical education, science, humanities. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP Subject Examinations. Academic regulations: Anyone with a grade-point average below 2.0 is not in good standing, but only 1%-2% of all students fail each year.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 808 men applied, 579 were accepted. Applications requirements: SAT by March of senior year. ACT urged but not required. High school English 4 units (4 if possible), foreign language 2, mathematics 2 (3 for those interested in mathematics or science majors). Courses beyond these should be in the 5 college preparatory fields. Interview recommended. Basis for selection: The most important criterion for predicting a candidate's academic performance in college is his past academic performance. The majority of the college's entrants have stood in the top tenth of their high school classes and most were in the top fifth. However, a student who is attending a secondary school that is selective, a school which sends nearly all of its candidates on to college, might be accepted even if he has lower rank. The majority of the entrants have College Board scores in the 600s and 700s, but many score in the 500s, and usually about 10% score in the 400s or even the 300s. Leadership in school or community activities weighs strongly, since most, Claremont graduates eventually enter fields where leadership is important. The college seeks a diverse student population and gives special consideration to candidates who represent ethnic minorities or who have had unusual backgrounds or experiences. Application fee: $15, may be waived for applicants with unusual financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications: December 15; Transfer applicants: About 100 apply annually, and 60 are accepted. Preference is given to those who complete credentials by May 1. College transcript most important. B record usually required. Credit is given for any course taken at an accredited institution, if the course has a reasonable equivalent in the college's curriculum, and if the grade was C or better.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 240 men. 60% from California. 90% live on campus, 1% commute from home (9% live off campus, many of them married). 20% from minority backgrounds. Only 1%-2% of the entire college population fails academically each year. The freshman class grade-point average is usually about 2.7 (A = 4); the average for all students is slightly higher. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 100%. About half the students major in economics or political science, aiming toward careers in business, law, government, politics, and similar fields. Postgraduate studies: 60%-70% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (students manage many aspects of their conduct and activities and are members of nearly all faculty committees), student newspaper (3 issues per week), yearbook, radio, center for religious activities (all faiths served in nearby churches and temples), drama, symphony orchestra, pep band, concert choir; Young Republicans, Young Democrats, Black Students Union, Movimiento Estudiantil Chicoano de Aztlan, social service organizations (volunteer service), forensics. Athletics: Baseball, basketball, cross-country, football, golf, handball, lacrosse, rugby, sailing, skiing, soccer, softball, squash, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, water polo, wrestling. Student services: Counseling, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Any student must have permission to live off campus. Additional Information: Frequent varied events at Claremont Colleges (total student population of 5,000). 1 women's college and 3 coeducational colleges adjacent.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $3,144. Room and board: $1,450 (typical). Other expenses: $600.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, SEOG. 80%-90% of accepted freshman applicants with need were offered the aid they needed. Basis for selection: Both academic and nonacademic qualifications are considered. Application procedures: PCs should be received by March 1, applicants notified of decisions from April 1-5; recipients of aid offers must reply by early May. PCs required. Transfer students: Usually about 80% of accepted transfer candidates can be aid. PCs should be received by May 1. Additional Information: Grant amounts of $200-$1,200 are renewed if recipient earns satisfactory record.

Golden Gate University, San Francisco, California
Four-year private nonsectarian university of business and public administration for men and women. Undergraduates: 2,880 men, 439 women. Graduates: 3,628 men, 337 women. Calendar: Trimester, summer semester. Location: Large city. Special features: The college is a nonresident metropolitan college offering both day and evening schedules; nearly all students work either full time or part time. Programs are offered in Bay Area suburban locations, in Sacramento and in Monterey, and at 22 California and out-of-state military bases. R

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate, bachelor. Fields of study: Business (accounting, business management and administration, insurance, transportation); social sciences (economics, administration of justice, political science, public administration); Special programs: Accelerated program, cooperative education. Program for students from minorities or low-income families: Special counselor, tutoring. Required freshman courses: English composition, mathematics. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of Cler General and Subject Examinations. Other tests used for counseling and placement: School and College Ability Tests, Michigan English Language Test, Tests of English as a Foreign Language. Academic regulations: To remain in good academic standing, a student must maintain a grade-point average of 2.0. Graduate programs: Accounting, administration of justice, banking, business management, law, public administration, taxation, health services management.

ADMISSIONS. Applications: In 1974; 129 men applied, 89 were accepted; 22 women applied, 15 were accepted. Admissions requirements: School and College Ability Tests (form 1c) required of applicants not meeting requirements for admission without examination. No specific high school subjects required. Interview recommended. Basis for selection: 14 grades of A or B in academic subjects in the last 6 semesters of high school are required for admission without examination. Application fee: $15. Application procedures: Closing date for applications: 10 weeks before semester begins for foreign students, 4 weeks before semester begins for all others; applicants notified of decisions 2 weeks after completion of admission files. Transfer applicants: About 1,000 apply annually, and 750 are accepted. Apply by September 1 for fall term. Applicants must have a 2.0 grade-point average from an accredited college and submit official transcripts from all high schools and colleges previously attended. Credits accepted from accredited colleges. Additional information: The committee on admissions and standards may admit on probation some transfer students who show promise but lack the required 2.0 grade-point average.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 72 men, 11 women. 95% from California, 100% commute (there are no living quarters on campus), 15% from minority backgrounds. Very few freshmen are admitted. Most new students are transfer students. Programs for undergraduates: Business 70%, remainder choose economics, administration of justice, political science, and public administration. Postgraduate studies: 40% of graduates of 4-year programs enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government, student newspaper, International Club, Chi Pi Alpha (accounting association), management club, economic development club. Student services: Counseling, testing center, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni, foreign-student adviser. Additional information: Since almost all students also work, social activities are at a minimum but are available.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $41 per undergraduate semester unit.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, SEOG, CWSP, Law Enforcement Education Program. Basis for selection: Need and academic achievement. Application procedures: Closing date for applications: April 2; applicants notified of decisions in June. PCs, FFS, or SFS required.

Harvey Mudd College, Claremont, California
Four-year private nonsectarian college of engineering and physical science for men and women. Undergraduates: 400 men, 50 women. Calendar: Semester. Location: Suburban community 35 miles from Los Angeles. Special features: One of the Claremont Colleges (which include Claremont Graduate School, Claremont Men's College, Harvey Mudd College, Pitzer College, Pomona College, and Scripps College) sharing use of library system (nearly 900,000 bound volumes; over 5,000 periodicals), 2,500-seat concert hall, theater, bookstore, computers, and other facilities of a size usually found only in a university. Students in the college may take courses in the others. Faculty-student ratio of 1 to 9.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Chemistry, engineering, mathematics, physics, and interdisciplinary majors. Special programs: Honors program, independent study, biological sciences, computer science. Programs for students from minorities or low-income families: Pre-admission summer program, tutoring; courses in black studies, Chicano studies, urban studies open to all students. Military training: Army ROTC optional. Required freshman courses: Freshman year program for all students consists of mathematics, natural philosophy (chemistry and physics), and "Quest: the Meaning of America" (humanities and social sciences course). Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement will sometimes be given on basis of Advanced Placement Examinations. Academic regulations: Freshman grades are high pass, pass, and no credit. All may continue if they wish; those with no credits make them up. Finally, about 2% to 3% of the student body fails each year. Graduate programs: Engineers may take a fifth year of engineering and earn masters degree. All fifth-year students receive grants covering tuition, fees, room, and board. Additional information: One-third of every student's course work is in humanities and social sciences.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 429 men applied, 304 were accepted; 55 women applied, 36 were accepted. Admissions requirements: SAT by March of senior year; ACT (mathematics Level II) by March of senior year. High school English 3 units (4 if possible), foreign language 2, mathematics 4, science (chemistry or physics, but preferably both). Courses other than these should be in 5 college preparatory fields. Interview recommended. Basis for selection: No able student of sound character who has strong interest in mathematics and science should be discouraged from applying because of some statistical deficiency. The most important criterion for predicting academic performance in college is past academic performance; evidence of this is more important than test scores. Nearly all of the college's entrants have stood in the top tenth of their high school classes. They have always earned top grades in mathematics and science, and they have rarely, if ever, done badly even in other areas. Most score in the 600s and 700s on the SAT-mathematical section, although occasionally a candidate can be accepted with a score below 600. The majority score in the 600s and 700s in the SAT-verbal section as well, but many score in the 500s and a few in the 400s. Leadership in school or community activities/unusual accomplishment in a scientific area, a special talent, or exceptional drive in some constructive activity (a hobby, for example) may influence a decision favorably. The college also seeks a diverse student population and gives special consideration to candidates who represent ethnic minorities or who have had unusual backgrounds or experiences. Application fee:$15, may be waived for applicants with unusual financial need. Application procedure: Preference is given to those who apply by February 1 and complete credentials by March 1 applicants notified of decisions from April 10-15; accepted applicants must reply by early May. Early decision is offered to a candidate who completes credentials by December 15. Transfer applicants: About 35 apply annually, and 20 are accepted. Apply by May 1 for fall term. Other requirements and procedures: College transcript most important, A and B record usually required. Credit is given for any course taken at an accredited institution if the course has a reasonable equivalent in the college's curriculum and if the grade was C or better.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 128 men, 13 women. 60% from California; 40% live on campus; 1% commute from home. 9% live off campus, many of them married; 15% from minority backgrounds. Only 2%-3% of the entire college population fails academically each year. The grade-point average for all students is about 2.9; approximately half make the dean's list (3.0 or better). Programs undergraduates choose: Chemistry 19%, engineering 30%, mathematics 21%, physics 27%, interdisciplinary 3%. Postgraduate studies: 70%-80% of undergraduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government, student newspaper. 3 issues per week, yearbook, radio, center for religious activities (all faiths served in nearby churches and temples), drama, symphony orchestra, pep band, concert choir. Black Students Union, Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan, special service organizations (volunteer service), forensics. Athletics: Baseball, basketball, cross-country, football, golf, handball, lacrosse, rugby, sailing, skiing, soccer, softball, squash, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, water polo, wrestling. All sports listed are for men students only. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Students must have permission to live off campus. Additional information: Frequent varied events at Claremont Colleges (total student population of 5,000). 1 woman's college and 3 coeducational colleges adjacent.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $3,236. Room and board: $1,345 for men, $1,450 for women (estimate).

FINANCIAL Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs, NSLSE, SEOG. Over 90% of accepted freshman applicants with need were offered the aid they needed. Application procedures: Closing date for applications: PPS should be received by March 1, applicants notified of decisions from April 10-15, recipients of aid notified by early May. PPS required. Transfer students: Nearly all who are accepted and have need are awarded the financial aid they need. PPS should be received by May 1. Additional information: Grant amounts of $2,000-$4,200 are renewed if recipient earns satisfactory record.

Pomona College, Claremont, California

Four-year private nonsectarian college of arts and science for men and women. Undergraduates: 700 men, 660 women. Calendar: Semester. Location: Suburban community 35 miles from Los Angeles. Special features: Pomona is founding member of the Claremont Colleges, 5 undergraduate colleges and 1 graduate school on a single campus. While a Pomona College student lives and works primarily in his home college, there are opportunities for enrollment in courses offered by the other colleges and for sharing in use of common facilities and in social and intellectual life of group as a whole.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Art (history, studio), biological sciences (biochemistry, biology, botany, zoology), computer science and systems analysis (computer science), English and literature (creative writing, literature), ethnic studies (black or Afro-American, Mexican American), foreign languages (Classical, languages, Eastern languages, French, German, Russian, Spanish), history and cultures (American, ancient area and regional, European), mathematics (statistics, military science (military science-army), music (composition and theory, instrumental, history, voice), philosophy and religion (philosophy, religion), physical sciences (astronomy, chemistry, geology, physics). Sociology, social sciences (anthropology, economics, international relations, political science, sociology), theater arts, other (Asian studies, the classics). Students may formulate their own interdisciplinary majors. Special programs: Independent study, study abroad (supervised tutorial work at Pomona "modular academies") located in Europe, Asia, and Africa each semester; "field tutorials," an integrated, interdisciplinary courses conducted by Pomona faculty overseas, independent study in one of approximately 30 countries. 3-2 liberal arts and engineering combination with California Institute of Technology, exchange programs with Fisk University, Swarthmore College, Colby College, and California Institute of Technology. Washington Semester, Programs for students from minority groups or low-income families: Special counselor, pre-enrollment, summer program, tutoring. Military training: Army ROTC. Required freshman courses: Physical education. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Academic regulations: Grade-point average of C or better and completion of a minimum of 6 courses required for freshmen to continue in good standing. 98% of freshmen complete year in good academic standing. Additional information: Interdisciplinary major, liberal arts major. Freshmen and sophomores limited to 3 pass/no credit courses per year. Limited cross-registration in other Claremont Colleges. Up to one-third of all courses over the 4 years. Program in Public Policy Studies. Variety of independent study options lead to over half the work of the junior and senior years taken independently. Early admissions (after the 11th year) and deferred admission possible.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 839 men applied, 433 were accepted; 716 women applied, 370 were accepted. Requirements: ACT or SAT by December of senior year. High school English 4 units, social studies 2, foreign language 3, mathematics 3, science 2. These units recommended, not required; exceptions to this pattern are not rare. Basis for selection: Academic achievement, test scores, and recommendations from the school most important. Special skills in music, art, drama, writing, and athletics also important. Personal strengths and evidence of leadership and motivation given weight. In considering applications of economically deprived or minority students, less weight may be placed on traditional measures of academic ability in favor of other evidence of potential more appropriate to candidates’ experience. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took SAT had SAT-verbal scores between 690 and 550 and SAT-mathematical scores between 740 and 600. Application fee: $20, may be waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications February 1, applicants notified of decisions by April 15, accepted applicants must reply by May 1. Transfer applicants: About 260 apply annually, and 125 are accepted. Apply by April 15 for fall term. Other requirements and procedures: SAT or ACT required. Most admitted transfers have B average in previous college. Transfer students must spend 4 semesters as Pomona students. Only arts and sciences courses with C grade or better are accepted for transfer. Additional information: Because considerable weight is placed on non quantitative evidence of intellectual and personal strength, each applicant should take care that his application materials fairly represent his interests and abilities. In recent years the principal factor leading to an offer of admission was nonacademic in about 4 cases out of 10. Another 3 of 10 admissions were considerably influenced by nonacademic factors.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 195 men, 168 women. 60% from California, 97% live on campus, 3% commute, 20% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen who took SAT have SAT-verbal scores between 690 and 550 and SAT-mathematical scores between 740 and 550. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 100% (one-third each in the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences). Postgraduate studies: 60% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Faculty-student committees, judiciary, college policy review council, student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, radio, college church, Campus Crusade, New Underground and denominational groups for Christian Scientists, Mormons, Catholics, and Jewish students, drama, dance, symphony orchestra, pep band, college choir, men’s and women’s glee clubs, chamber and rock groups. Concerned Women of Claremont, Outing Club, Ski Club, Claremont Union (debate). Students for Environmental Action, Zero Population Growth, Young Socialist Alliance, Model United Nations, Black Students Union. Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlán, volunteer service center (tutoring and hospital work). American Field Service, recording for the blind. Pomona Day School (run by Black Student Union), social organizations. Athletics: Badminton, baseball-M, basketball, cross-country-M, fencing, field hockey-W, football-M, golf-M, lacrosse-M, rugby-M, skiing, soccer-M, softball, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, volleyball; water polo-M, wrestling-M. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Freshmen must live on campus or at home. Other students can usually receive permission to live in non discriminatory off-campus lodgings. Autos must be registered with college. Additional information: Social regulations are minimal and set by each residence hall. Most residence halls are coeducational.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $3,094. Room and board: $1,100. Other expenses: $600.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, NSL, SSGI, CWSRA. About 274 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need, all of these were offered aid, all of these were offered the full amounts they were estimated to need (in combination of loan and grant). Basis for selection: Financial aid based exclusively on need. College has met need of all admitted students in recent years. Application procedures: Closing date for applications January 15, applicants notified of decisions by April 15, recipients of aid offers must reply by May 1. Early response required. Transfer students: College has been able in recent years to meet the need of the majority, but not all, accepted transfers with a combination of loan and grant.

Santa Barbara Art Institute, Santa Barbara, California

Four-year private nonsectarian college of art for men and women. Undergraduates: 29 men, 28 women. Graduates: 63 men, 26 women. Calendar: Trimester. Location: Suburban community 90 miles from Los Angeles. Special features: Santa Barbara Art Institute is located close to the beach and combines the best features of both an urban and suburban setting for an art school. It features small, intimately structured classes and moderate tuition.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Art (design, printing, studio art). Academic regulations: A freshman must maintain a 2.5 grade-point average or better in studio art courses in order to remain in good standing. 80% of freshmen do complete their freshman year in good academic standing.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 11 men applied and were accepted; 7 women applied and were accepted. Acceptance requirements: Portfolio and college transcripts. 24 units of academic credit at college level required (6 in history, 6 in English, 3 in psychology, 3 in sociology, 3 in speech, 3 elective, preferably in science or humanities). Interview recommended. Basis for selection: Admission is based on the portfolio requirement of 12 to 15 pieces of student's art work, plus college transcripts showing academic credit for the AFA degree. Students entering in the Certification of Completion program enter without the college academic requirement but must submit a portfolio and be high school graduates. Application fee: None. Registration fee of $20 payable after acceptance. Application procedures: Closing date for applications January 1, applicants notified of decisions immediately after portfolio review, accepted applicants must reply when decision is made. CRDA. Transfer applicants: About 80 apply annually, and 80 are accepted. Academic credits are automatically transferred. Studio art credits are transferred by petition with a grade of B or above. C grades may be allowed in certain cases.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 50 men, 50 women. 85% from California, 100% commute, 1% from minority backgrounds. Freshmen have average of C or C+ grades shown on transcripts of academic work and an average of B in art courses. Programs undergraduates choose: Fine arts 100%. Postgraduate studies: 75% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student services:
Counseling. Regulations: A student who enrolls assumes an obligation to conduct himself or herself in a manner compatible with the school’s function as an educational institution. The following are considered unacceptable: insolent or disrespectful conduct toward any faculty member; conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude; removal of any institute or student property from the buildings or grounds; willful destruction of school property or equipment; operating a vehicle in such a manner as to be of danger to persons or property on campus; failure to maintain the required standard of work; and unsatisfactory attendance, or evident lack of interest.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $1,550. Room and board: $1,300. Other expenses: $800.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, student employment in exchange for part of tuition. Basis for selection: Because we are a small school, privately operated, and dependent on tuition our financial aid is limited to offering some student assistantships in the form of work in exchange for some tuition. Application procedures: Closing date for applications 1 week before start of semester, applicants notified of decisions immediately after portfolio review.

United States Coast Guard Academy
New London, Connecticut
Four-year federal Armed Forces military academy for men. Undergraduates: 1,000 men. Calendar: Semester, 8-week summer professional program. Location: Small city 103 miles from Boston, 127 miles from New York City. Special features: This military service academy functions as a humanitarian arm of the Department of Transportation in time of peace and as a highly specialized segment of the United States Navy in time of war. The Coast Guard Academy graduate must serve a minimum of 5 years as a Coast Guard officer. However, 4 years at the Coast Guard Academy's 100-acre campus and subsequent commission as an ensign in the Coast Guard offer many satisfactions to young men who enjoy variety and excitement, are interested in technical and administrative work, and have an essentially idealistic and humanitarian outlook on life. r CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: The constantly updated Academy curriculum offers nine majors which include: electrical, civil, ocean, and marine engineering; marine science; mathematical sciences; physical science; management; and government. These areas of academic interest combined with the varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Special programs: Honors program, independent study, summer cruise to foreign ports for sophomores and seniors. Academy Scholars Program offers a special intellectual challenge to cadets in their fourth year who have demonstrated outstanding scholastic abilities. Those selected are given special recognition and academic privileges that enable them to pursue, under faculty guidance, individually selected projects and special research. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP Subject Examinations. California Psychological Inventory, Edwards Personal Preference Schedule, Minnesota Counseling Inventory, Strong Vocational Interest Blank, Survey of Interpersonal Values, Survey of Study Habits and Attitudes used for counseling. Academic regulations: Fourth classmen (freshmen) who fail to attain a grade-point average of 1.6 will be placed on academic probation. 96% of the freshman class completes the year in good academic standing. Graduate programs: Advanced programs offered: Advanced electronics technology, aerospace mechanical engineering, aircraft maintenance, air war college, armed forces staff college, aviation electronics engineering, aviation engineering administration, chemical engineering, civil engineering, communications engineering, electronic engineering, engineering physics, environmental management, financial management, humanities, law, management, management (data processing), management and industrial engineering, management (personnel administration), mathematics, merchant marine industry training, national war college, naval engineering, naval war college, nuclear engineering, oceanography, operation-analysis, public administration, science (chemistry or physics), systems analysis. Additional Information: Except for a few weeks' leave, the summer term is devoted to professional training. Training cruises visit many of the historic and beautiful ports of the world and permit cadets to obtain a thorough foundation in practical seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, small arms and communications. They participate in battle problems, search and rescue drills, and learn to control and fire all the primary weapons found on the cutters. They apply their theoretical knowledge of seamanship, handle small boats, and observe the handling of larger vessels. Upperclassmen navigate ships and, as Officer of the Deck, command the watch, applying theoretical knowledge from the professional studies classroom and practical seamanship on smaller craft. If not on the cruise, students receive professional training ashore at various service training centers and operating units that adds to general military knowledge and creates contacts with personnel of other branches of the Armed Forces.

Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission had SAT-verbal scores between 492 and 596 and SAT-mathematical scores between 585 and 677. Application fee: None. Application procedures: Closing date for applications December 15 of senior year. Applicants notified of final results by April 9, accepted applicants must reply by May 1. Transfer applicants: Very few applied and few accepted. All must begin as freshmen. Requirements are the same as for regular, first-time applicants.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 361 men, 4% from Connecticut, 100% live on campus. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen have SAT-verbal scores between 492 and 596 and SAT-mathematical scores between 585 and 677. Postgraduate studies: 60% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government, magazine, yearbook, radio, religious organizations (Christian Fellowship, Knights of Columbus, Christian Science Campus Organization, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, DeMolay, Inter-Academy Christian Fellows Group and the Lay Leaders Class meet for weekly vespers), drama, formal and informal dances, dance orchestra, marching band, concert band, choir, glee club, social sailing, concerts, lectures, professional demonstrations, science exhibits, toastmasters, football, baseball, basketball, bowling, cross-country, football, golf, gymnastics, handball, pistol, rifle, rowing, sailing, skiing, soccer, softball, squash, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, volleyball, wrestling, yacht racing. Student services: Counseling, health services, placement service for graduates and alumni (all graduates placed as career officers in the Coast Guard). Regulations: All cadets are required to live in dormitories (barracks). Only seniors are authorized to maintain automobiles. Cadets may not marry until they have graduated.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Deposit of $300 is required, one-third due upon acceptance of appointment, and the balance on arrival. A cadet receives more than $3,600 a year plus a daily food allowance. A cadet's pay is not a wage or salary; it is money furnished by the government for uniforms, equipment, textbooks, and other expenses. Interview recommended for applicants. Basis for selection: The competition for appointment as cadet is based on the candidate's high school rank, his performance on the SAT, and his leadership potential (as demonstrated by his participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs, or part-time employment). Most successful candidates rank in the top half of class and demonstrate a high degree of proficiency in the mathematical and scientific academic areas. The Coast Guard Academy is the only one of the Armed Forces service academies that tenders appointments solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition. There are no congressional appointments, as there are in the other academies, and no geographical quotas. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission had SAT-verbal scores between 492 and 596 and SAT-mathematical scores between 585 and 677. Application fee: None. Application procedures: Closing date for applications December 15 of senior year, applicants notified of final results by April 9, accepted applicants must reply by May 1. Transfer applicants: Very few applied and few accepted. All must begin as freshmen. Requirements are the same as for regular, first-time applicants.

FINANCIAL AID. Scholarships received by the applicants may be used towards the $300 deposit. All cadets receive a full 4-year scholarship.
waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications August 1, applicants notified of decisions on a rolling admissions basis, accepted applicants must reply within 2 weeks. Transfer applicants: About 1,200 apply annually, and 600 are accepted. Apply by August 1 for fall term. Official high school transcript, as well as an official transcript from previous colleges, is required. Students with at least a C average from regionally accredited institutions are normally admitted and receive appropriate credit for courses in which a C grade was earned. Additional Information: Transfer agreements have been established between the university and several local 2-year institutions.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 450 men, 525 women. 30% from Connecticut, 60% live on campus, 40% commute, 5% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen have SAT-verbal scores between 410 and 520 and SAT-mathematical scores between 430 and 530. Most enrolled freshmen graduate in the top 40% of their high school classes. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 33.2%, engineering 8.4%, education 10.0%, business 11.1%, fine arts 2%, health services 19.4%. Postgraduate studies: 30% of graduates of 2-year programs enter 4-year programs. 50% of graduates of 4-year programs enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (Student Council), student newspaper, yearbook, religious organizations (Newman Club, Hillel, Protestant Club), drama, symphony orchestra, marching band, concert band, jazz group, ethnic organizations, social service organizations, fraternities, sororities. Athletics: Archery, baseball-M, basketball, bowling-M, field hockey-W, football-M, golf, gymnastics-W, ice hockey-M, soccer-M, softball, swimming and diving-M, tennis, track and field, volleyball. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Freshmen dormitory students may not have automobiles. Students who do not live at home with their parents must live in a university residence hall unless released on the basis of age (21 years of age or older) or class standing (85 semester hours or more). Additional Information: Academic enrichment is the major purpose of the university, but the total educational experience extends beyond the classroom. Students living in dormitories learn to think of themselves as individuals, become involved in the life of a community, and share ideas and experiences with others. Extracurricular activities offer additional opportunities for group interaction and the development of social sensitivity. The university does not assume it is the students' "parent away from home."

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $2,400. Room and board: $1,400. Other expenses: $400.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs, NS&L, SEOG, CSWSP, Nursing Scholarship, Law Enforcement Education Program. Basis for selection: Financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications April 1, applicants notified of decisions within 2 weeks period if aid application is complete at time of acceptance for admission, recipients of aid offers must reply within 2 weeks after notice. Programs for students from minority backgrounds. Programs for students from minority backgrounds. Programs for students from low-income families: Tutoring. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will sometimes be given on basis of Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP, Subject Examinations. Academic regulations: Each freshman must complete at least 8 full courses during the first academic year. Over-all academic average must be 70 (C-) or higher. 97% of freshmen achieve sophomore standing. Wesleyan operates under an academic Honor System, the provisions of which bind entire community. Graduate programs: Anthropology, astronomy, astrophysics, biology, chemistry, music (ethnomusicology, world music), geology, mathematics, physics, psychology, religion. Additional information: It is possible for an individual student to arrange a course personally on a tutorial basis if a topic in which he or she is interested is not dealt with by a regularly scheduled course. In some years as many as 1,300 tutorials have been offered for full academic credit.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 1,800 men applied, 590 were accepted; 1,600 women applied, 520 were accepted. Admission requirements: SAT by January, senior year; English Composition Achievement Test plus any other two by January, senior year. The Achievement Tests are used for purposes of admissions only. Results of tests taken before the senior year are acceptable. No one test is more highly regarded than another. Entering freshmen expected to have had experience in scientific method, quantitative reasoning, historical analysis, linguistics, and very sound preparation in reading and writing. Interview strongly recommended. Basis for selection: Admissions decisions are based primarily on scholastic considerations. Any characteristic - whether conventional or unconventional - which would indicate that a person would be able both in aptitude and attitude to use Wesleyan fully would be predominant in an admissions decision. All persons seeking admission are considered in terms of their educational backgrounds. Personal strengths and character are of significant importance always. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission have SAT-verbal scores between 620 and 749 and SAT-mathematical scores between 635 and 745. Application fee: $20, may be waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications February 1, applicants notified of decisions third Saturday in April, ac-accepted applicants must reply two weeks after notification. CRDA, EdP-F. For early decision candidates, a policy of rolling admissions operates from September 1 through December 15. Transfer applicants: About 500 apply annually, and as many as 100 are accepted. Apply by May 1 for fall term. Other requirements and procedures: same as for freshman applicants except for difference in dates and fact that scholastic information comes from previous college rather than high school. The number of persons to be admitted each year by transfer depends on the availability of space. Credit is given for all courses in the liberal arts and sciences.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 285 men, 265 women. 13% from in-state, 90% live on campus, none commute. 12% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen have SAT scores between 620 and 749 and SAT-mathematical scores between 635 and 745. Programs: Undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 100%. Postgraduate studies: 65-75% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (students have control of all social functions, publications, and extracurricular activities; students also are represented on the University Senate and its committees), student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, radio, religious organizations (The University Ministry and Wesleyan Kavana), drama, dance, symphony orchestra, small musical groups, brass and string ensembles, choirs, glee clubs, and a jazz group. Ethnic organizations (Ujama for black students and Ajoa Compos for Latin students), social service organizations. Most all activities are part of Wesleyan Volunteers, whose activities include tutoring, breakfast programs, day care centers, summer camp, legal services and personal counseling, fraternities. Athletics: Baseball-M, basketball, cross-country-M, field hockey-W, football-M, golf, gymnastics-W, handball, ice hockey-M, lacrosse-M, rowing (crew), rugby-M, skiing, soccer-M, softball, squash, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, wrestling-M. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: Freshmen not receiving financial aid allowed to maintain automobiles on campus, parking facilities available. Freshmen must live in university residences. No curfews or parietal regulations. All social regulations determined by students. Additional information: Campus atmospheres and attitudes are informal and casual. Although the student body is very diverse, the general mood among students is one of mutual interest, goodwill, and tolerance. Social affairs are not structured or exclusive.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $3,300 plus $270. Room and board: Average is between $1,550 and $1,630. Other expenses: $700.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs (optional—a student is not required to accept an offer of a job in lieu of loan or grant aid). NSCL, SEOG, CESP. All accepted freshman applicants judged to have need receive full amounts necessary to meet that need. 184 members of the class of 1978 are currently receiving financial aid, with an average award of $2,350. Basis for selection: Financial aid awards are based on need. Computations of financial need do take note of particular circumstances of each student and his family. All estimates of financial need include student's personal as well as educational expenses while at Wesleyan. All financial aid applicants residing in states which sponsor scholarship programs are expected to apply for those state scholarships.

Application procedures: Closing date for applications February 1. Applicants notified of decisions third Saturday in April, recipients of aid offers must reply no earlier than May 1. PS required. A financial aid application is included as part of the application for admission. Transfer students: Financial aid is available to transfer students on basically the same basis as it is to freshmen. Additional information: Although jobs are not included in financial aid awards, they are plentifully available on campus. A student could reasonably expect to earn between $300 and $1,000 per year through campus employment, which would not impede his or her studies. Students with financial need are given priority in the assignment of campus jobs.

Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Bachelor. Fields of study: Art (history, commercial art, studio art), biological sciences (biology, zoology), business and commerce (accounting, business management and administration, finance), computer science and systems analysis (computer science, data processing), education (education of the deaf, physical education), English and literature, foreign languages (French, German, Russian, Spanish), history and cultures (American, European), home economics (clothing and textiles, family relations, food and nutrition), library science, mathematics, philosophy and religion, physical sciences (chemistry, physics), psychology (general), social sciences (economics, political science, social work, sociology), theater arts (dance, drama). Programs for students from minorities or low-income families: Pre-admission summer program, tutoring, remedial instruction, reduced course load. Required freshman courses: English composition, foreign language, history or social studies, physical education, science. Academic regulations: An average of at least 70 is required in all courses. Students with a grade average below 70 for any semester are placed on academic probation. 2 semesters on academic probation result in dismissal. Graduate programs: Audiology, education, education of the deaf, counseling. Additional information: In addition to the 4-year college curriculum, college provides remedial assistance in the form of a 1-year preparatory program. This is undertaken by most entering students.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 415 men applied, 236 were accepted; 395 women applied, 240 were accepted. Admissions requirements: College entrance examination, adequate SAT or ACT scores are accepted, but most applicants take college examination. Since most students spend 1 year in preparatory program, college does not require specific high school units. Basis for selection: Entrance examination scores are the only factor considered. Grades and rank in class are not weighed. Since many college admissions standards are quite flexible and substantially financial aid is available, a minority or low-income student with potential has little difficulty gaining admission. Application fee: None. Application procedures: Closing date for applications January 7, applicants notified of decisions by April 2, accepted applicants must reply by June 1. Transfer applicants:
About 70 apply annually, and 50 are accepted. If student's record is inadequate, he must submit acceptable SAT or ACT scores or demonstrate suitability by scores on college tests. Transfers admitted on same basis as first-time students; credit is given for courses equivalent to college's in which a grade of C or better is obtained. Additional information: Policy of the college is to screen applicants "in" not "out." Interested in providing an educational opportunity for any deaf student who has the potential to succeed.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 155 men, 145 women. Student body reflects a normal national distribution. Students from 18 foreign countries currently enrolled. 95% live on campus, 5% commute, 6% from minority backgrounds. Programs of the college's are broad-based. Liberal arts 60%, business 25%, home economics 8%, fine arts 3%, library science 2%, physical education 5%. Undergraduate studies: 20% of students enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (representation on decision-making bodies of college, some students on selection committees), student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, television, religious organizations (all major denominations), drama, dance, fraternities, sororities. Athletics: Archery, baseball-M, basketball, bowling, cross-country-M, field hockey-W, football-M, golf-M, gymnastics, soccer-M, softball-M, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field-M, wrestling-M. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: All students (except preparatory) may operate motor vehicles on campus. No alcoholic beverages or firearms permitted.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $725. Room and board: $1,440. Other expenses: $400.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs, need-based, basis for selection: All students are eligible for support from state vocational rehabilitation agencies. Most receive this in varying amounts. College provides supplementary grants-in-aid if vocational rehabilitation support is inadequate. These are based on need. Transfer students: Transfer students receive financial aid on the same basis as regular students.

George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

Four-year private nonsectarian university, for men and women. Undergraduates: 2,674 men, 2,115 women. Graduates: 5,353 men, 2,123 women. Calendar: Semester, summer sessions. Location: Metropolitan area. Special features: The atmosphere is very much one of interaction with Washington, D.C. Students realize that education also takes place in research, employment, and nonacademic pursuits outside of campus activities. 78% of the professors have their doctorate degrees, and virtually no courses are taught by teaching assistants. The relationship between students and professors is very good.

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate, bachelor. Fields of study: Art (history, design, graphic arts, photography, studio art), biological sciences (biology, botany, zoology), business and commerce (accounting, business management and administration, finance, marketing, transportation and commerce), communications (journalism), computer science and systems analysis (computer science, data processing), education (art, elementary, music, physical, secondary), engineering (civil, electrical, mechanical), English and literature (creative writing, English, literature, speech), foreign languages (Classical languages, Eastern languages, French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish), geography, health and medical professions (laboratory technology, medical assisting, medical technology, radiology and x-ray technology), history and cultures (American, ancient, area and regional, European), mathematics (statistics), music (composition and theory, instrumental music, music history, voice), philosophy and religion, physical sciences (chemistry, geology, oceanography, physics), psychology (general), social sciences (anthropology, economics, foreign service, international relations, political science, public administration, sociology), theater arts (dance, drama), classical archaeology and classics, classical humanities, speech pathology and audiology, geodetic and cartographic science, special education, environmental health, environmental engineering, environmental studies, Chinese studies, American studies, Latin American studies, Judaic studies, public affairs, urban affairs. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: ACH. Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Credit will generally be given on basis of CLEP General Examinations except in English composition. Must be out of school for at least three years. Credit will also generally be given on basis of CLEP Subject Examinations. Both examinations must be passed at 50th percentile or better. Maximum of 30 semester hours of credit by examination may be counted toward degree. Special examinations are offered by departments. Academic regulations: Two grades of "fail", in one semester place student on probation. 85% of freshmen complete year in good academic standing. Approximately 77% of freshmen return for sophomore year. Graduate programs: Biological sciences, business and commerce, city planning, computer science and systems analysis, education, engineering, English and journalism, fine and applied arts, foreign language and literature, geography, health professions, law, mathematics, philosophy, physical sciences, psychology, religion, social sciences, health care administration, medical school, forensic science, genetics, international affairs, linguistics, Sino-Soviet studies, public administration, management science, pharmacology, biochemistry, microbiology. American studies, pharmacy. Additional information: Students may select double majors or may create their own interdisciplinary majors from courses in any of the departments. Exceptional students may graduate with a BA or BS after 90 hours rather than attending the full 120 hours. The consortium allows George Washington students to take courses at Georgetown, American, Howard, and Catholic Universities and receive credit at George Washington.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 2,113 men applied, 1,780 were accepted; 1,442 women applied, 1,198 were accepted. Admissions requirements: SAT by February of senior year. English Composition ACH; mathematics ACH for engineering applicants. Prefer both tests by January of senior year. English Composition ACH used primarily for placement, may be taken as late as May of senior year. High school English 4 units, social studies 2, foreign language 2, mathematics 2, science 2, mathematics 3 for engineering applicants. Group information session with opportunity for individual interview with a counselor and applicant conducted twice daily at... the university. Basis for selection: In order of importance: school achievement record, test scores, recommendations, school and community activities. Admission requires strong academic program with above average grades, rank in top two-fifths of graduating class, and College Board test scores in mid to upper 500s. Admissions criteria and procedures are generally the same for all applicants. EOP offers academic and financial assistance to minority and poverty-level residents of Washington, D.C., whose record or test scores may not meet the usual criteria. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission had SAT-verbal scores between 500 and 550 and SAT-mathematical scores between 550 and 600. Application fee: $10, may be waived for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: Closing date for applications March 1, applicants notified of decisions on a rolling basis, accepted applicants must reply by May 1. CRDA. Transfer applicants: About 1,400 apply annually, and 900 are accepted. Apply by June 1 for fall term and by December 1 for spring term. Students with fewer than 30 semester hours must submit secondary school record and College Board test scores. CLEP scores may be required in some cases to support borderline credentials. C or better average in academic subjects In a balanced program taken at an accredited college required. Credit normally assigned for work at an accredited institution if completed with grades of C or better. Additional information: Each application is given individual evaluation; special attention is given to applicants who do not precisely meet the above requirements. In such cases additional testing, letters of explanation, or information from the high school may be required.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 575 men, 377 women. 27% from greater Washington area, 79% live on campus, 21% commute, 7% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of enrolled freshmen have SAT-verbal scores between 500 and 550 and SAT-mathematical scores between 550 and 600. Programs: Undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 72%; engineering 7%; education 5%; business 8%; public and international affairs 8%. Postgraduate studies: 50% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (145 organizations decentralized along functional lines, such as departmental advisory committees, student programming activities, and university administrative committees: there is no student government organization as such), student newspaper, magazines (literary and academic), yearbook, radio, student academic evaluation of professors, religious organizations (Hillel, Newman, Wesley, United Christian Campus Ministry), performing arts (drama, musical theater, dance, concert band, other performances, semiprofessional, and professional opportunities available in Washington, D.C.), debate, critical thinking program, inde-pendent study, study abroad (9 programs). Programs for students from minorities or low-income families: Special counselor, academic and financial assistance to minority and poverty-level residents of Washington, D.C. No differentia-tion based on race, religion, sex, or national origin. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Requirements: Because every student is given total responsibility for his social and academic life, there are virtually no rules on social behavior. However, there are advisers and services to aid students. Although students are permitted to have automobiles, their use is discouraged because available parking space is extremely limited. Additional information: Entering freshmen are encouraged to participate in the summer ad- vancement registration program. Each student is assigned a faculty ad- viser. Personal counseling is also available. There is a wide variety of on- and off-campus social, cultural, and political activities.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs, NDSL, SEOG, cooperative education program in naval logistics and operations for engineers. Honor scholarships of up to $1,000 for academic year based entirely upon academic achievement are available to incoming freshmen. 600 accepted freshman applicants were offered aid. Basis for selection: Except for applicants for honor scholarships, applicants must show financial need in order to receive any financial aid. Test scores are the basis for freshman awards. Grades are the basis for upperclassman awards. No differentiation between applicants from Washington, D.C., and other applicants. Tuition remis-sion grants under the University's EOP for low-income minority students are available only to residents of the District of Columbia. Middle 50% of applicants who were offered financial aid had SAT-verbal scores between 650 and 750 and SAT-mathematical scores between 650 and 750. Application procedures: Closing date for applications February 1, applicants notified of decisions by April 15, recipients of aid offers must reply no earlier than May 1. PCs re- quired for all aid other than honor scholarships. Transfer students: Loans are available for the first semester. Scholarship funds are limited and awarded only to students with superior averages for at least 3 semesters of full-time study. All other students must complete 15 semester hours at the university before being eligible for scholarships and grants.

Marymount College of Florida, Boca Raton, Florida

Two-year college for men and women offering liberal arts and business programs. Four-year programs are also offered on the campus through an affiliation with Wilmington College, Delaware. Wilmington conducts BA and BBA degree programs on the Marymount campus. Undergraduates: 220 men, 230 women. Calendar: Semester. Location: Metropolitan area. 15 miles from Fort Lauderdale, 15 from Palm Beach, 40 from Miami. 5 from Boca Raton, r

CURRICULUM. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate, bachelors. Fields of study: Art (art history: design, fashion design, graphic arts, interior decorating, printing, studio art), biological sciences (biology, botany), marine biology, zoology), business and commerce (accounting, advertising, finance, sales, and retailing, secretarial studies, fashion merchandising, aviation, and hotel/motel management), education (art, business, physical), English and literature (English, literature, speech), foreign languages (French, Spanish), history and cultures (American), home economics (clothing and textiles, family relations, infant and child care), mathematics, philosophy and religion (philosophy, religion, theology), physical sciences (chemistry, psychology (child, general), social sciences (economics, sociology), theater arts (dance, drama, theater arts). Special programs: Cooperative education, independent study. Programs for students from minority or low-income families: Special counselor, tutoring. Required freshman courses: English composition, history or social studies, mathematics, science. Tests used for counseling, placement, or credit: Placement, credit, or both will generally be given for grades of 3 and higher in Advanced Placement Examinations. Academic regulations: Students must maintain a 2.00 grade-point-average to remain in good academic standing. 85%-90% remain in good standing and complete their freshman year.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 210 men applied, 200 were accepted; 326 women applied, 300 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT or SAT. High school diploma or GED plus counselor's recommendation. Interview recommended. Basis for selection: The college welcomes students of differing aptitudes and interests, and for this reason does not establish cut-off points to automatically eliminate the student who has a certain class rank or test score. Acceptance is based primarily on evidence that an applicant has the capacity and the desire to grow and develop intellectually, spiritually, emotionally, socially, and morally at Marymount. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took the SAT had SAT-verbal scores between 350 and 400 and SAT-mathematical scores between 350 and 400. Middle 50% of applicants accepted for admission who took the ACT had ACT composite scores between 15

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. YDSL, SEOG, CWSR. 650 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; all 650 of these were offered the full amounts of aid they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Decisions are based primarily on need. Exceptions occur when the donor of the aid designates major field of study, place of residence, or outstanding achievement as the primary consideration. Class rank and test scores are important. Special program of financial aid for a limited number of minority students—blacks, American Indians, and Chicanos. Class rank is more of a determining factor than test scores. Application procedures: Closing date for applications March 14, applicants notified of decisions by June 15, recipients of aid offers must reply by July 1. FFS accepted. Transfer students: Same requirements and procedures as for entering freshmen.

ANNUAL EXPENSES. Tuition and fees: $2,480. Room and board: $1,100. Other expenses: $550.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. NDSL, SEOG. 29 accepted freshman applicants were judged to have need; all of these were offered the full amounts of aid they were estimated to need. Basis for selection: Financial need is determined through CSS need analysis. Normally, aid is awarded as a package—scholarship, work assignment, and loan. Past academic performance determines scholarship—high grades and SAT or ACT scores yield greater scholarship than loan. Application procedures: No closing date for applications, applicants notified of decisions as soon as admitted, recipients of aid offers must reply within 15 days of award, PCs required. Transfer students: Basically same requirements as for freshmen.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1976: 13,029 men and women applicated, 9,454 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT or SAT required, preferably taken in spring of junior year. Entrance examinations in high school subjects required only to remove specific entrance deficiencies for admission to specific curriculums. Test of competence in English required of all foreign students, except for-ign students who are citizens of country in which native language is English or those who have received degrees from schools in countries in which English is native language and instruction was given in English. Minimum of 15 high school units required, including 3 units of English and at least 1 unit each of algebra and plane gometry or equivalent in college preparatory mathematics. Additional specified subjects and special requirements vary according to curriculum desired. Remaining elective units necessary for admission may be selected from any high school subjects accepted by an accredited school toward its diploma. Audition required for dance and theater acting; interview required for theater directing and play-writing, theater technology and design, and occupational therapy majors, and for students wishing 2-year terminal curriculum in aircraft maintenance, and professional pilot training. Basis for selection:
Combination of rank in class and either ACT comprehensive score or SAT score. For certain curriculums, qualifying auditions, or interviews required. Nonresidents of Illinois must rank in top quarter of graduating class unless admission space is available. Certain admission requirements may be waived for disadvantaged youth from Illinois. Application fee: $20 (nonrefundable), may be waived for disadvantaged applicants with unusual financial need. Application procedures: Beginning freshmen should apply between September 25 and November 15 of senior year. Closing date for applications 2 weeks before registration but space rarely available at that date.
applicants notified of decisions beginning in January. accepted applicants must reply within approximately 3 weeks. Transfer applicants: About 4,000 apply annually, and 2,300 were accepted. Completed application should be on file by March 15 for fall term. Transfer applicants with less than 60 semester hours usually not admitted unless they cannot continue profitably at their present institution.
Selection made on best-qualified basis. Generally same high school subjects required as for freshman applicants. Transfer applicants considered for admission on basis of number of semester hours attested and cumulative grade-point average (exclusive of technical or vocational courses). Minimum acceptable transfer grade-point average is 3.25 (on 5.0 scale), but most curriculums require higher averages because number of qualified applicants exceeds number of spaces available. Additional information: Beginning freshmen required to remain in college to which they have been admitted for at least 2 semesters of full-time study.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 3,577 men, 2,646 women. 97% of students from Illinois, 95% live on campus in university-owned housing, approved private facilities, or student-family residences. Less than 1% commute, 8% from minority backgrounds. Middle 50% of 30 entering freshmen have ACT composite scores between 24 and 28. Ap-

Butler University, Indianapolis, Indiana

Four-year private nonsectarian university for men and women. Undergraduates: 1,172 men, 1,213 women. Graduates: 931 men, 1,087 women. Calendar: Semester, summer session. Location: Large city. Special features: Recent additions to the campus include a College of Music building, a library, and Clowes Memorial Hall where the Metropolitan Opera National Company, The American Opera Company, and the Harkness Ballet have all been in residence, and which is the permanent home of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. A new science complex, including a research institute and a science building was opened in September 1973. The Indianapolis Museum of Art is adjacent to the Butler campus.

CURRICULUM. The general education program that forms the basis for the major programs in liberal arts and sciences, education, business administration, pharmacy, and music is centered in the 2-year University College. Instruction even at the freshman level is handled almost exclusively by full-time faculty members, 70% of whom have doctoral degrees. Undergraduate degrees offered: Associate. bachelors. Fields of study: Biological sciences (biology, botany, marine biology, zoology), business and commerce (accounting, business management and administration, finance, industrial management, marketing, secretarial studies, transportation and commerce), communications (journalism, radio and television), computer science and systems analysis (Computer science), education (art, business, child development and nursery education of exceptional children, education of the mentally retarded, elementary, general, health, home economics, music, physical, recreation, secondary, speech and hearing), English and literature (creative writing, English, literature, speech), foreign languages (Classical languages, French, German, Russian, Spanish), forestry and conservation, geography, health and medical professions (medical technology, pre-optometry, pharmacy), history and cultures (American, ancient, European), home economics (clothing and textiles, food and nutrition), library science, mathematics (statistics), military science (air science), music (composition and theory, instrumental music, music history, voice), philosophy and religion (philosophy, religion), physical sciences (astronomy, chemistry, physical sciences, physics), psychology (general), social sciences (economics, political science, sociology), theater arts (dance, drama, theater arts). Special programs: Honors program, independent study, study abroad by arrangement. Military training: Air Force ROTC. Required freshman courses: English composition, history or social studies, literature, physical education (within the first 2 years). Requirements in foreign language, English composition, history or social studies, literature, physical education, and foreign language and literature, mathematics (statistics), psychology, religion, social sciences, pharmacy.

ADMISSIONS. Applications in 1974: 1,128 men and women applied, 1,024 were accepted. Admissions requirements: ACT of 57 or SAT by July, senior year. Although Butler operates on a rolling admissions basis and thus will consider admission credentials as late as July of the senior year, about 85% of applications for the freshman class are ordinarily received by January 15. High school English 4 units, social studies 2, foreign language 2, mathematics 2, science 2, electives 3. Applicants intending to major in science, pharmacy, or mathematics are urged to offer extra units in science and mathematics; those intending to major in business will do well to offer additional units in mathematics. Applicants of students otherwise well qualified but lacking units in any of the specified areas will be reviewed and given special consideration by the admissions committee. Interview recommended for counseling purposes, but not a requirement for acceptance. Basis for selection: In evaluating an applicant's qualifications, the university carefully considers each of the following: student's scholastic record in high school, cumulative test score including admissions tests, citizenship record in high school, recommendations of school officials, and ability of Butler to serve the needs and interests of the student. Application fee: $15, may be deferred for applicants with financial need. Application procedures: No closing date for applications, applicants notified of decisions within 3 weeks after all credentials have been received, accepted applicants must reply within 21 days of acceptance, EDP-F. Transfer applicants: About 275 apply annually, and 178 are accepted. Apply by August 15 for fall term. No less than a 2.00 (C) cumulative average in previous work, and only grades of C or better are accepted in transfer. Applicant must also have a good citizenship record in the college previously attended.

STUDENT LIFE. Freshman class: 285 men, 340 women. 45% from Indiana, 80% on campus, 20% commute, 4,5% from minority backgrounds. Programs undergraduates choose: Liberal arts 44%, education 20%, business 13%, music 16%, pharmacy 7%. Postgraduate studies: 72% of graduates enter graduate or professional programs. Student activities: Student government (student assembly, men's advisory board, women's advisory board, student publications board), student newspaper, magazine, yearbook, radio, religious organizations (Newman Club, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, Methodist Student Fellowship, Christian Science Organization, Fellowship of Religious Liberals, Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association), drama, opera or musical theater, dance, symphony orchestra, marching band, concert band, major choral groups, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, social organizations (fraternities, sororities, association of independent students). Athletics: Baseball-M, basketball, bowling, cross-country-M, field hockey-W, football-M, golf, softball, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field-M. Student services: Counseling, health services, student employment service for undergraduates, placement service for graduates and alumni. Regulations: No restrictions on students bringing cars to campus. Both men and women are required to live in university housing until they are 21 (unless they live at home with parents or have received permission to live with relatives). Drinking alcoholic beverages, using drugs, and gambling are not permitted on campus. Additional information: Students do not major in their way to help students and that students commonly share problems. The performing arts are given much attention, and many famous people are brought to the campus for lectures, concerts, and student discussions.

FINANCIAL AID. Aid offered: Grants, loans, jobs. Basis for selection: Applicants for academic scholarships are evaluated on the basis of the secondary school record and admissions test scores. Applicants for grants-in-aid in athletics and debate, or audition-grants in the performing arts, are evaluated on the basis of admissions credentials and special abilities in the respective areas. Service awards and work grants are distributed on the recommendation of the respective department heads involved. All students may apply to the student placement center for part-time employment. Application procedures: Students may not apply for financial aid until they have received an offer of admission. Financial aid applications are promptly sent to all qualified applicants upon request, and decisions from the committee on academic scholarships usually follow within a period of 10 days to 2 weeks. No closing date for applications, although in 1974 student aid funds were exhausted by January 12 for the class entering in September; recipients of aid offers must reply within 21 days from date of aid offer. Transfer students: Not eligible for academic scholarship consideration until they have completed 2 semesters of full-time study at Butler. However, candidates may apply for loans or part-time employment during the first semester. Additional information: Many Butler students have profited from using the federally approved loan program, United Student Aid Funds, Inc., The Tuition Plan, Inc., The College Aid Plan, Inc., the Indiana state scholarship and grant program, or scholarship and loan resources from other states that permit their use for out-of-state educational purposes.
